EFIK EBURUTU

ORIGINS, MIGRATION AND SETTLEMENT IN CALABAR
WHAT THE EFIK PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THEMSELVES

This brief history you are about to read is the summary of what the Efik people have said about themselves or as they say: "About us". This culture History with the origins of the present EFIK is so interesting as commented elsewhere. It is also the most intriguing, because it is perhaps the most documented in the whole of the Nigerian history books, nay in the continent of Africa. It is also unique. Efik people, according to their balladists and also as hinted by the early Scottish missionaries are said to have come from the Orient. The late Elder Chief Effiong Ukp?ng Aye Eyo Nsa in his book "The Efik People"[1] tried to demystify this "Orient" and pointed quite specifically and intelligently too that it was to Nubia, one of the ancient outgrowths of Egypt peopled occupied by the Falashas that this Orient actually refers. These Falashas have been identified by world historians as black Jews who, feeling disenchanted by the inhuman treatment of the Israelites by the Egyptians of the time, moved out to establish a kingdom of their own [2]. From Nubia, movement reached ancient Ethiopia which at some point in time became a world power. The birth, death and resurrection of Christ ushered in a new world view and a religion called Christianity ensued. The Ethiopians and Egyptians then went their separate ways. At a point in time another religion, Islam, was born in Arabia. This religion sought to take things by force. It swept through Egypt and conquered it, with a quite a number of deaths on its toll. When the Ethiopians (the Falashas) heard of the intention of the Muslims to invade Ethiopia, the majorrity of their ancestors pulled out and thus began the famous migration story of the Efik people. These migrations took them through Sudan to Lake Chad where the group became fragmented and went into different regions [3]. From these groups, the peoples now called Oron and Uruan went into Cameroun. Some went into Ghana while others went into Congo and Equatorial Guinea. Another group entered present day Nigeria through Adamawa plains while a few continued and settled in the Igbo country of the Aros in a village called Ututu. The majority of the moved to a place they named Gibbom now corrupted to "Ibom" a designation derived after their God Almighty. Here they placed their God basin and this was around the early 13th century AD. Here they told their hosts, when asked, that they were Hebrews. But the Igbos in reference to this Falasha fragment among them called them as "Hebrew Ututu". Thus from these two words the name "Eburutu" was derived as we have it today [4]. The tribal name was Eburutu and Iboku, its people [5].

MIGRATIONS - THE AROCHUKWU CONNECTION

History is not certain whether Iboku was the leader who brought his people into Nigeria or the one who actually led them out of Ethiopia. What is certain is that he was so important a personality that the group the majority of whom were his descendants, accepted him as their father. At least the first six Ndidem of the Eburutu tribe were named after him and his name adopted for the group[6]. Some claimants who wish to trace the origin of the Efik people to the Igbos have tried to create a meaning for this name as quarrelsome Igbos, but Efik is Efik. History gives the number of children derivable from this man to be two and we know for certain that he never lived in the Igbo country of the Aros, except of course, through his children. There was a son named Eno who settled at Gibbom or Ibom as we know it today, and was referred to as Eno Ibom, Ibom Eno or Ibom Iboku[7]. The alternative name, Ibom Iboku, was not his personal name as erroneously believed in most circles but referred to the Iboku group who lived at Gibbom. Edidem Ibom Eno or Iboku is regarded as the first Edidem of the Eburutu tribe. He had two children namely Abatim Ibom Eno and Atai Ibom Eno, known simply as Atai Iboku. The Efik talking drum reminisces their relationship as 'Idibi aman Abatim enye aman Efik, Efik Ete ndit? Atai Ibom En?': which means "the man that begat Abatim begat Efik". The Efik are descendants of Atai Ibom En?[8]. There was also ? tong, the leader of the group that settled in Ututu village. His children were Ikpoto, Ama and Ebughu. Ama was the father of ? tong Ama of the famous Amaku story for school children. Ikpoto and Ebughu became the ancestors of Efiat and Ebughu respectively, now domiciled in the Oron region of Akwa Ibom State [9], ? tong Ututu, popularly called ? tong Iboku was the second Edidem of the Iboku people [10].

Thereafter, disagreements over objects of worship caused a lot of problems between the Iboku people of the Eburutu tribe and their Igbo host and Iboku people left Igbo land in their families. Foremost on the migration list were the ? tong Iboku descendants - at least the ones who did not get themselves muddled up in marriages with their hosts. Secondly, they were the descendants of Abatim Ibom Eno who founded the various Eniong sub-clans including Asang, Obio-Usiere and Atan[11]. Thirdly, some older children of Atai Ibom Eno or Atai Iboku broke off from their father to found places like Itu which first settled at an Igbo village called Itu Mba-uzo a.k.a Itu Mbon-uso, hence the name Itu Mbauz?.[11] Traditional history posits that from Itu-Mba-uzo, some adventurous families sailed down to present day Itu Township and the surrounding towns of Obot-Etim, Akunakuna, Um?n and Ikot Ana[12]. Others include Ito and its offshoot like Idere; Eki and Ukwa. Finally, Edidem Atai Iboku, the third Edidem of the Iboku people, left the Igbo country for Uruan with two sons and a daughter namely Ema Atai, Ekpe Atai and Ekei Atai Iboku in the last quarter of the 13th century AD[13].

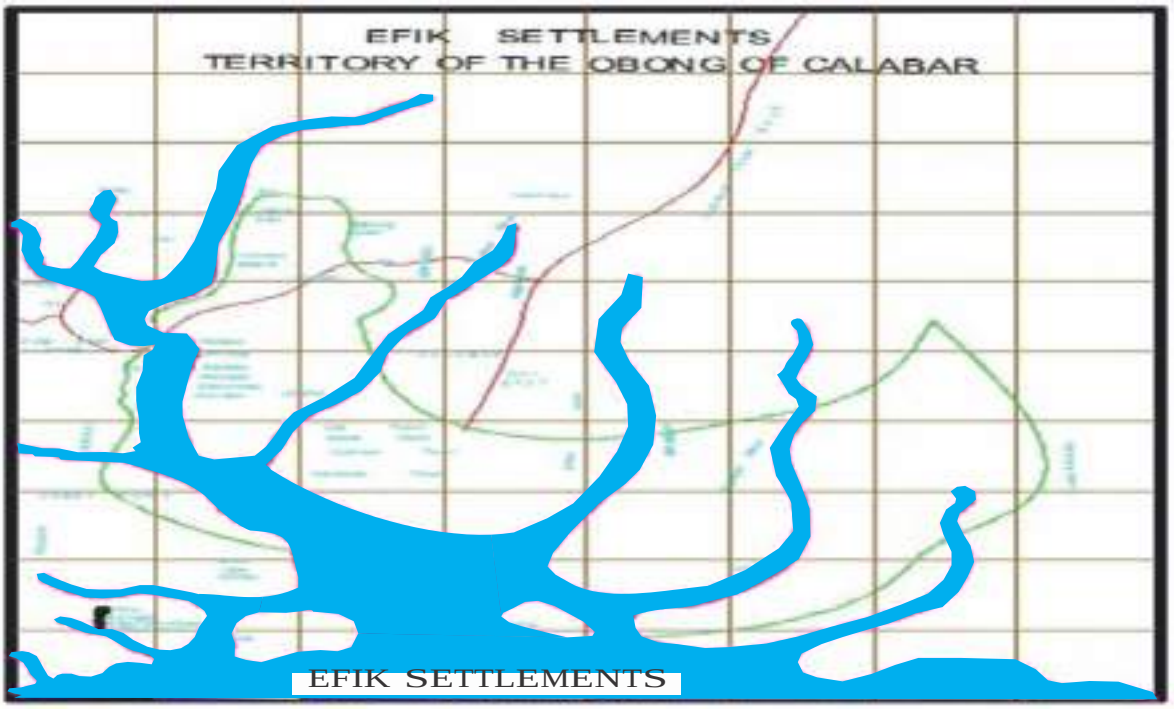
EFIK EBURUTU - URUAN CONNECTION

According to the story, in Uruan, an important event occurred viz. the entrance of a personality by name Efiom Ekpo into the history of the Iboku people. The story of his entry is laden with a lot of romance. Ekei Atai Iboku got married to an Uruan Chieftain by name Ibanga Nkenta and a son, Ekpo Ibanga was born out of the union[14]. His Efik contemporaries or cousins at the time were Odo Ema Atai, Atai Ema Atai and Inyang Ekpe Atai Iboku[15]. Ekpo Ibanga Nkanta married Ema Atari's daughter, Odo and fathered Efiom Ekpo by her[16]. This Efiom Ekpo became the 7th Edidem of the Iboku people[17]. His genealogical chart traces him to Iboku by maternal connections[18].

While Edidem Atai Ema Atai had four men namely Ukpong Atai Ema, Ema Atai Ema, Atai Ema and Adim Atai Ema [19], Edidem Inyang Ekpe Atai had Ekpe Inyang Ekpe, Ndem Inyang Ekpe and Osukp?ng Inyang Ekpe [20]. The summary of these events is that the two (2) males of Edidem Atai Iboku, namely Ema and Ekpe produced eight (8) grand children in Uruan; Ema Atai having five (5) and Ekpe Atai having three (3). These became the ancestors of the proverbial 'Esien Efik Itiaba' (seven Efik clans) in Uruan namely Iboku, Obutong, Adiabo, Mbiabo, Enwang, Abayen and Usukakpa[21]. Table 1 below simplifies the seven clans and their founding ancestors.

Table 1: The seven Efik Atai clans from Ema and Ekpe Atai Iboku

S/N	Major Lineage	Clan	Founding Ancestors
1	Ema Atai	Iboku	Eyo Ema Atai/Oku Atai Atai/Efiom Ekpo Efiom
2	Ema Atai	Obutong	Oso Ukpong Atai/Eso Adim Atai
3	Ema Atai	Adiab?	Ukpong Ukpong Atai
4	Ema Atai	Mbiabo	Et?n/Efiom/Edem Ukpong Atai
5	Ekpe Atai	Enwang	Anantigha/Esu Ekpe Inyang Ekpe Atai
6	Ekpe Atai	Abayen (Obomitiat)	Esien Ndem Inyang Ekpe Atai
7	Ekpe Atai	Usuk Akpa (Idua)	Ntekim Osukp?ng Inyang Ekpe Atai



The deductions to be made from the table above are that while Ema Atai Iboku descendants were responsible for the founding of four (4) Efik clans, Ekpe Atai, the younger brother was responsible for founding three (3), and that about three of the four Ema Atai clans were founded by descendants of Ukpong Atai Ema Atai Iboku.

EXODUS FROM URUAN, IKPA ENE AND NDODOGHI EVENTS

Disagreements and disenchantments in Uruan over objects of religious worship as in the country of the Igbos generated a lot of bad feelings between the Iboku people and their Uruan host which came to a head during the famous axe story [22]. There were skirmishes which led to a war and the Efik people had to leave Uruan in their clans led by Edidem Ukpong Atai Ema Atai Iboku in the second half of the 14th century AD. There are also several accounts from Uruan history confirmed by the Nsomms of Uruan and corroborated by Efik oral history as also in songs and talking drums concerning the marriage between an Uruan King and an Efik Princess which took place while the Efik Iboku people sojourned in Uruan about the 13th century AD[23]. From these accounts and specifically from the comments of the Obong of Calabar concerning the progenitor of URUAN/EFIK, Edidem Ekpo Efiom Ekpo Ibanga a grandchild of the marriage between the grandfather Edidem Ibanga Nkanta and Princess Ekei Atai Iboku who took sides with the Efik people during the Uruan-Efik war, the man has since been regarded as "the ancestor of a large group of the Efik people viz. the Henshaws, the Dukes, the Archibongs, the Ntieros, the Eyambas, the Honestys and the Ephraim Adams." These groups became popular in Efik History only from the 18th century when white slave traders started meddling in Efik Kingship Institution [24]. This is the only part of Uruan that the Efik people might be keeping. All seven clans went to Ikpa Ene from where Mbiab? left to establish on their own. So Mbiab? clan left from Ikpa Ene in two groups, one heading up and the other down. The one that headed up is Mbiab? Edere and the one that headed down is Mbiab? Usuk. The name Ik?t Offiong is a more recent name for the Mbiab? group who specifically derive from Ani Et?n Ukpong Atai Ema. While Et?n Ani Eton is reputed to have had many children notably Ukpong and Okinawan, Offiong Ani Et?n is said to have had none [23]. Out of courtesy, the children of Et?n Ani decided to name the colony after their great uncle, so that his name may be remembered for ever [25]. The grandson of Et?n Ani Et?n called Oku Ukpong Et?n Ani Et?n was Jean Barbot's 1698 William King Agbisherea of Mbiab? Ik?r?fi?ñg and the founder of Tom Curcock House in the 1690 Efik House system[26]. Efiom Ukpong Atai Ema had a grandson Añk?t (Ñk?t) Odo Efiom who had two children; Eniañg and Eseku. Eniañg Ñkot Odo had two sons (Ani and Añwadet) and a daughter. The daughter, Añwaret (Arit of today) was given in marriage to Etinyin Oku Abasi Oku Atai Atai Ema and the union produced a son (Ekpe Oku) and a daughter (Ib?k Oku). Eniañg Ñkot Odo's son, Ani Eniañg Ñkot Odo Efiom was Jean Barbot's 1698 slave trader for Mbiab? Ikoneto referred to as Robin King Agbisherea and the founder of Ik?t Ani and Robin Curcock House of the 1690's when the Efik people established the house system [26].

The other six clans moved out of Ikpa Ene to create some distance between them and their Ibibio and Uruan enemies. They got to Ndodoghi Island. At Ndodoghi, three unfortunate events occurred. The first was the great malaria epidemic which nearly wiped out the entire race. The second was a disaster that befell two of the three Ekpe Atai clans namely Abayen and Usuk Akpa. It is said that one day, at a meeting under a large cotton tree, a branch of the tree fell on the Abayen and Usuk Akpa clans and greatly depleted them [27]. Notable among the surviving children of those clans were Esien Ndem Inyang for Abayen (now Obomitiat) and Ntekim Osukp?ñg Inyang for Usuk Akpa (now Idua) [28]. The third disaster was the appearance of the Harley's comet 'Akpan Nta-nta Ofi?ñg' in 1378 AD which claimed the lives of Ema Atai Ema Atai and other nobles as recounted in the Efik ballad of 1910 by Princess Ebi Etim Añwa Añwa (Adiaha-Akpan) of Ikoneto [29].

SETTLEMENTS - THE FOUNDING OF CALABAR AND CREEK TOWN

As stated earlier, six Efik clans went to Ndodoghi and suffered a whole lot of mishap there. The Ekpe Atai clans of Enwang and their grossly depleted brothers in Abayen and Usuk-Akpa left the Ema Atai clans in Ndodoghi for Calabar and thus became the founders of the region called Calabar today in the 3rd quarter of the 14th century AD. They therefore did not witness the disaster of the Harley's comet of 1378 AD [30]. The Eñwañg clan spread out by reason of their numerical strength to live in two villages. Anantigha Ekpe Inyañg had obtained two deities from God-knows-where, a male and a female. He named the male after himself as Anantigha Eñwañg and the female after his only sister Anansa Ekpe Inyang. This man built a shrine for the male deity at Iyonde which is present day 'Esuk Anantigha' (Anantigha beach) and a similar shrine at Eñwañg spring head where Calcemco is today, his female deity, Anansa. He placed his nephew Esemin Esu Ekpe Inyang in charge of Anansa as her first priest and taught him the esoteric rituals, while he tended to his male deity at Iyonde [31]. The Abayen survivors (Obom-Itiat) stayed at Afia-Obom; a place named after their deity obtained by Esien Ndem Inyang Ekpe Atai Iboku. That place is the famous NPA cat-walk disaster or what some people call Elder Dempster today. The Usuk-Akpa remnants (Idua) stayed at present day Tete Street. These were the formative years of the great historic city of Calabar[32]. The three Ema Atai clans of Iboku, Obut?ñg and Adiab? founded Creek Town in the late 14th century AD [33]. In Creek Town Efiom Ekpo Efiom Ekpo settled where Adak-Uk? is today while Edidem Ey? Ema and his people stayed where Otuñg is still. Obut?ñg occupied where Mbarak?m Ekpe lodge is and Adiabo stayed in the region of Idim Mbe, Ndomndom and Idim Esa [34].

All Efik clans were arranged in family units and each unit had her own trade canoe [35]. Only blood descendants of founding ancestors had the privilege to own such canoes and negotiate trade. The trade canoes in later years, especially during the trans-Atlantic slave trade, evolved into family groups called houses which grew naturally from the patriarchal character of the Efik social system. Below is a table of Efik house arrangement as documented by the Dutch slave merchant of the late 17th century, Jeane Barbot and presented for posterity by Prince Magnus Duke (Ekpenyong Efiom Edet Nsa Efiom) on 12th June, 1890. An Efik person is therefore defined as anyone who can trace his genealogy paternally or maternally to Iboku [36], the founding ancestor of the Efik kingdom, through the various major ancestors and founders of the twelve Efik ancestral clans, houses or family units.

NOTABLE EVENTS – EFUT ETC. CONNECTIONS

It is imperative to write briefly about a certain man Asib?ñg-Ekondo by virtue of the key role he played in shaping Efik history. This man was born Asib?ñg Anatiñg Ekpe Inyañg Ekpe Atai Iboku from Enwañg clan. His mother was Uyi Ntekim Osukp?ñ Inyañg Ekpe Atai Iboku of Usukakpa (Idua) clan. He preferred to join forces with his mother's depleted clan Idua and so his children know themselves today as Idua sons and daughters [37]. As a fisherman, Asib?ñg sailed in his canoe to the large waters of Usahaedet where he met and married a certain Mutaka of Efut Usahaedet. His father in-law, Ekondo, gave him a form of Usahaedet mystery to protect his family. It was his long stay in the home of Ekondo that made people come to refer to him as Asib?ñg Ekondo, a name that has found a pride of place in Efik history, yet complicates it by making many think of Asib?ñg as an Efutman. Well he could not have been an Efutman because the name Asib?ñg is wholly Efik as Mutaka is also wholly Efut. Besides, about 60% of Idua kingship revolves around his descendants. Upon the death of his father-in-law Ekondo, Asib?ñg returned to present day Tete Street where Idua people were. Here he learnt that the descendants of Ema Atai had reached Creek Town and Asib?ñg decided to go to them in the 1st quarter of the 15th century AD, with his wife Mutaka, three sons namely Mba, Ndem and Ebito, and some Efut Usahaedet in-laws [38]. These Efut in-laws constituted the very first set of Efut who lived in Creek Town.

In Creek Town, Asib?ñg lived among the Obut?ñg people where 'Idim Mbarak?m (Mbarakom spring of today)' is, with his bosom friend Ñk?k Ofuta; a name derived from the nickname 'Ñk?k, afo ata'. It was in this context that the late Esien-Ekpe Edet Okon Itam came to write in the third paragraph of the 94th page of his Uyi Efi?ñg Esien that "Iboku Utan, Enwang, Adiab? and Obut?ñg, nte mbufo ema ekef?fi?k, kpukpru ekeduñ? mi ke Akwa Ekot Etoñgko, ebuaha enyu emana" (Iboku Utan, Eñwañ, Adiab? and Obut?ñg, as you know, all lived here in Creek Town as one family) [39]. The Efik people of those days knew Asib?ñg as an Eñwañg man, so he and his house represented Eñwañg clan in Creek Town even though he preferred to associate with his mothers in Idua [40]. Asib?ñg revealed the secrets of Mb?k? Ekpe to Ema Atai people of the time, prominent among whom was Ey? Ema (the Priest-King at the time) and the secrets were entrenched in the SANCTUM of Ekpe Efik Iboku. His wife Mutaka unarguably knew about Mb?k? since it was a very common thing among Usahaedet women. And so when the Ema Atai people found her invoking Mb?k? one day, they decided in the narrow-mindedness of the time that she should die so the secrets would remain. Asib?ñg permitted them to kill his wife, only to have himself killed by the same people afterwards, so that his wife's death would be kept secret and Mb?k? secrets would not be revealed to other people. His children knew what went on and so fled Creek Town with their Efut maternal cousins back to Tete Street in Calabar [41].

The exit of Obut?ñg and Adiab? from Creek Town is said to have occurred in the 1st quarter of the 15th century [42]. The story goes that there was a wrestling contest between the Iboku clan and the Obut?ñg people in which an Iboku son was killed. Iboku demanded his replacement from the Obutong group, who stealthily withdrew from Creek Town to Calabar to settle with the Eñwañg group at the Calcemco area. Adiab? of the Ukpong Atai group left immediately after to where they now are, for fear of transferred aggression from the Iboku clan since they descended from the same mother as the Obut?ñg people [43]. By the exit of these clans, unoccupied territories were created in Creek Town. Edidem Ey? Ema Atai sent for his cousin Oku Atai Atai in Ikoneto (Mbiab?) who moved over to Creek Town with his descendants and became the ancestor of the Ambos (Mbarak?m) where Obut?ñg, Enwang and Adiab? had once occupied [44]. Edidem Ey? Ema and Etinyin Oku Atai died in the same year (1454 AD) after the appearance of the Harley's comet "Akpan Ntafi?ñg"[45].

Events in Adak-uk? saw some children of Efiom Ekpo Efiom Ekpo break off to found New Calabar or Kalabari in present day Rivers State, in about 1640 AD [46], but Efiom Ekpo Efiom Ekpo Efiom Ekpo of the second half of the 16th century had no child to succeed him. This was a source of worry for the entire Iboku clan. An informant persuaded him to visit Anansa who, said he, was responsible for the numerical strength of Enwang and Obut?ñg clans. Efiom Esemin Esu Ekpe Inyang was the then priest of Anansa and before him Efiom Ekpo presented his request for a child. With the passage of time Efiom Ekpo had a son whom he took back to Enwang for naming. The priest named the child after the giver as Anansa Efiom Ekpo Efiom, contracted today as Ansa Efiom Ekpo Efiom or simply Nsa Efiom [47]. A second male Edem and his sisters, ? k?h? and Odo, were also born, albeit by another woman. ? k?h? Efiom got pregnant for an Efutman and had her twin children of ? fi?ñg and Efiom. The three were supposed to be killed as was the fashion then, but their uncle Edem Efiom saved them by smuggling them out into Nsutana where the young lads grew. From Nsutana they crossed over to the present Marina where the Eñwañg people were. The Eñwañg people fled the beach for fear of reprisals from the gods saying "Mbiomo oduk ine" (evil has desecrated the fishing port) [48], and sank into the forests where Nsiduñg, Hope Waddell Training Institute and West African Peoples' Institute are presently located. The famous 'diamond hill' (on which the Union Jack was lined in commemoration of one of the diamond jubilee celebrations of Britain) still connected them to their Anansa shrine at Eñwañg spring [49]. Their inward movement brought them very close to the Idua people at present day Tete Street [50] with St. Margret's Hospital on its hill. ? fi?ñg ? k?h?, Efiom ? k?h?, Edem Efiom and his son Efiom Edem Efiom spread over the abandoned area and brought in ? k?h? Efiom. These became the founders of Duke Town in Calabar in about the middle of the 17th century [51]. Calabar or Old Calabar therefore was not founded by the twin children of Okoho Efiom as misconstrued by a lot of historians; otherwise it would be a younger town than New Calabar (Kalabari) [52]. The twins only erected their huts as part of a town that had been founded about 300 years earlier.

Ansa Efiom in Creek Town had children late and by the time they grew up, they found one Nsa Ekpeny?ñg, whose mother was Efiom Ekpo's second daughter, Odo, in control of their father's house. Internal wrangling ensued and the Efik people judged the case in favour of Nsa Ekpeny?ñg (Nsa Odo Efiom Ekpo) [53]. In anger, the children of Ansa Efiom left Adak-uk? for Nsa Odo Efiom Ekpo and his descendants. The exiting children included Efiom Ansa Efiom, Ansa Ansa Efiom, Ekpo Ansa Efiom, Ewa Ansa Efiom, Efañga Ansa Efiom, Ñkoro Ansa Efiom and Ekeñg Ansa Efiom [54]. They first dwelt with their cousins in Duke Town at a place they called Okopedi Ewa Nsa, and as their population grew, Efik people decided to give them all one separate Ekpe lodge to make of them an autonomous Efik settlement. Establishment of Ekpe Efik lodge in a territory by the Efik people of those days was synonymous with the hoisting of flags by nations in today's world [55]. Problems ensued at the point of erecting the pillars of the Ekpe shed. Ansa Efiom's children thought they should do the honour since they descended from Efiom Ekpo's first born, but the Efik people judged the case in favour of the twin children of Okoho Efiom and their uncle who established the town [56]. Ansa Efiom's children pulled out in disgust and went to dwell among the Eñwañg people. These events were those of the late 17th century AD, the period of intense slave trade in Calabar.

The close proximity of the Eñwañg people with Idua earlier hinted on brought problems in later years, the cause and nature of which we are unable to trace. War broke out between the two in the last years of the 17th century and many Idua sons were killed. Prominent among the survivors were Etinyin Umo Atiñg-Ita Atiñg Ndem Asib?ñg Ekondo who had married Ñk?r? Ansa Ansa Efiom Ekpo Efiom [57] and had a son Etim Ñk?r? as Idua remembers him [58]. This man, with a few others, left present day Tete Street for the Akpabuyo area. A few of them went to Eket and constituted Idua Eket. Eñwañ clan spread over Tete Street and the other Iboku people taunted Enwang clan in the saying 'Nduñ ndiana ama owot Idua ke Efak Tete, Owot ama, ada obio oduñ ete ke im? inyene" (a neighbor killed the Iduas at Tete street, then took over his land and claimed it to be his own) [58].

Of the proverbial seven Efik clans mentioned earlier, only Usukakpa (Idua) was left out in the house system. This could be attributed to the constant mishaps that came their way which left them always splitting until they found their ways to the Oron region from Akpabuyo in the 1st half of the 18th century. While still in Akpabuyo, descendants of Esañg Abatim Ibom En? of Eni?ñ clan arrived and realizing their kinship, settled down and both grew into one large community. The community later broke up into three groups namely Idua-Asañg Abatim, Buk?ñg Abatim and Abatim Akani Obio [59]. By reason of the hemmed-in geographical location of Akpabuyo, Idua-Asañg Abatim moved out to the shores of the Oron region in those years of peak slave trade, led by Etinyin Osukp?ng Inyang Atiñg Esu, Mba Ntekim, Ntekim Osukp?ñg Inyang and Ekpe Atai Iboku. They established the port now called Oron Port [60] in the 1st half of the 18th century so as to partake in the slave trade business of the time [61]. Buk?ñg Abatim and Abatim Akani Obio eventually returned to Eni?ñ to establish the famous slave market in Efik history and Akpabuyo was left unoccupied but for the frequent visits by Idua fishermen notably Aya Iy? Aka Nta Nya Ntekim Nta Ntekim Osukp?ng Inyang (Ayaiyo), Atu Iy? Aka Nta Nya Ntekim Nta Ntekim Osukp?ng Inyang (Atu Iyoka), Oboyo Ntekim Esu Mba Esu Mba Ntekim, Ntekim Osukp?ñg Inyañg and Osukp?ñg Ntekim Esu Mba Esu Mba Ntekim, Ntekim Osukp?ñg Inyañg Ekpe Atai Iboku [62]. It was from one of these visits that Aya Iyo Aka Nta Nya met his death in the last quarter of the 18th century as captured in a popular Efik saying" Mfon okowot Aya Iy?"(generosity killed Aya Iyo).

In the last quarter of the 16th century, Adiab? clan was visited by their share of internal wrangling. Descendants of Ukpa Otu Mesembe and Mb? Otu Mesembe had lived peacefully together at Adiab? Ik?t Mb? until descendants of Mb? Otu's daughter (Abasi Mb? Otu) established a rival Ik?t Otu Ibuot group which brought a lot of disenchantments over royal supremacy. Ukpong Mb? Otu descendants moved down to Obut?ñg in Esuk Utan where Otu Asiya, a son of Edak Efefi?ñg Otu Mesembe of Adiab? Ik?t Mb? Otu and Asiya Andem Asiya Es? Adim of Obutong was born to salvage the dwindling fortunes of Obut?ñg Ik?t Adim [63]. This Otu Asiya is therefore the ancestor of Obut?ñg Ik?t Otu family. His son Prince Mb? Otu Asiya was decapitated by Willy Ey? Honesty (Ey? Nsa) in 1767 during the Duke Town-Old Town war [64]. His daughter Princess Edak Otu Asiya was married to King Mettinon of Eñwañg (Atiñg Añwa Efiom Esemin Esu or Siñkañwar Sindam circa 1690) [65]. It was through her marriage that Obut?ñg clan got integrated into the esoteric rituals of Anansa deity, albeit at the cost of her father's life. In Adak-uk?, Creek Town, Nsa Odo Efiom Ekpo Efiom had two sons namely Ekpeny?ñg Nsa and Eyo Nsa. Waddell reports that there was a third male called 'Tom Honesty', the descendants of which have defied all tracings. Eyo was the famous warrior who emerged on the side of Iboku people during those turbulent years of trade piracy in Efik history [66]. He is remembered for slaying the lead pirate of the Uruan people, Uko Akpakpan Uko, who menaced the trade business of the Efik people of those days. He returned to Creek Town to a warm reception and Etinyin Esien Ekpe of the Ambo ward and redeemed his promise by giving his daughter Inyañg Esien to him in marriage. Apart from the Ambos, the Eyo Ema group also gave him ? k?h? Ibritam Ey? Nsa Ey? Ene Ey? Ema [67]. Adiab? gave him Nyomoañwan Asido Efa. Obomitiat gave him Añwatim Ukp?ñg Ukp?ñg Nneneñg Esien Ndemndem, and Mbiab? Ikoneto gave him Ako Eniañg Añwadet Eniañg Ñk?t Odo Efiom [68]. So the purported annoyance and grudge by the Cobhams that Etinyin Esien Ekpe Oku had given Inyañg Esien in marriage to Ey? Nsa was not a group feeling but an entirely personal one, at least at that time. This fine man brought sanity to that part of Creek Town abandoned by his kith and kin and completely rebuilt it to the envy of other wards [69]. He is variously referred to as Eyo Nsa Ekpenyong [70], Eyo Nsa Odo Efiom Ekpo Efiom [71], Eyo Willy Honesty [72], Willy Eyo Honesty and C

I [73]. It must be stated here that if it was the grudge borne by Akabom Ene over the honour done Eyo Nsa in the 1760s that saw to the founding of Cobham Town in Calabar, then this segment of the Iboku clan would have been founded in the 2nd half of the 18th century AD, and the founder who died in Creek Town in the first quarter of the 19th century was Akabom Ene Akabom Antigha Akabom Akabom Ene Eyo Ema Atai Ema Atai Iboku and not Akabom Ene, the grandson of Eyo Ema who must have died since 16th century AD.

About the middle of the 18th century, Eñwañg clan and their Ansa Efiom brothers went into a bloody battle over Ekañg, a customary secret cult of the Eñwañg people [74]. There were casualties on both sides. Leading the war on the side of Eñwañg was Idem Orok Esu Eyo Efiom Esemin Esu, the maternal great grandfather of Asib?ñg Edem Asib?ñg Ekpo Efiom and King Duke Ephraim X (Edem Efiom Efi?ñg Edem Efiom Okoho). Similarly, on the side of the Henshaws was Ewa Ekeñg Ewa Ansa Efiom Ekpo Efiom, the grandfather of Ekeñg-Ita The Mettinon [75] family of Prince Atiñg Eyo Atiñg Añwa had moved to their mothers in Idua before the war, from where they founded Ikot Esu settlement in Creek Town in 1803 led by the famous swordsman Prince Esu Atiñg Eyo (alias Esu-uko Ating Eyo) [76]. This settlement was extended to Ikot Esu square (Akani Obio Ikot Esu or Ebiet Ntete) in Leopard's Town, Calabar by Prince Etim Ntete Ating Esu (alias Obong Ntete or Etim Whyte) and his aged father in 1891 [77]. Another Mettinon family of Esemin Esemin Ating Añwa had also moved to their mothers in Obut?ñg [78] while Prince ? y? Inyañg ? y? Ekpe Efiom Esemin Esu, the father of the famous Efik warlord, ? y?-Ita, moved to his mothers in Duke Town. Quite significantly too, the last Priestess of Anansa of Eñwañg extraction, Añwatim ? y? Ekpe Efiom Esemin Esu, before this conflict, had married Prince Ansa Efiom Ansa Efiom of Henshaw Town and Edet Nsa was born out of that union [79]. During the war, the young lad fled to his cousins in Duke Town and got christened by the Dukes as Adam-Duke Henshaw as was the fashion then. He became Great Duke Ephraim's Scribe during his reign. There was also Prince Abia Atiñg Añwa whose mother was Henshaw and his descendants stayed back in Henshaw Town till this day [80]. Descendants of ? kp?ng Atiñg Añwa moved to their mothers in Obomitiat Ikoneto and kept the house of Enwang as Ndem Curcock House (ekpri ñk?k Ndem House) [81]. A combined force of Duke Town and Henshaw Town caused most Eñwañg people to leave Calabar, led by Prince Antai ? r?k Atiñg Añwa Efiom Esemin Esu (Mettinon V)[82,] first to Idua, then subsequently to Esuk Eñwañg in Mbo Local Government Area of Akwa Ibom State, where they are today [83]. It is said that the name Nsiduñg was adopted as an aftermath of that war, and Henshaw Town finally had a place to call their own. In another development, Prince Et?ñg Otu Mesembe, nicknamed Antai Ema, constantly lost his children to crocodiles in Adiabo creeks and feeling witch-haunted, sailed out in a canoe to ? k?b?, probably by maternal connections, and established a new Adiab? settlement called Atab?ñ, there in the second half of the 18th century AD. The settlement had since survived and blossomed into a large population which had caused some to move to Eket to form another Atab?ñ group called Atabong Eket and a fishing port, Ine Atab?ñ, in the Bakassi Peninsula [84].

In 1821, Great Duke Ephraim (Eyamba IV) sent out a clarion call to all Efik families to make an effective occupation of Akpabuyo which had been vacated by the Idua-Asang and Asang-Eni?ñg groups in the 1st half of the 18th century [24]. We had earlier hinted that this region was left unoccupied but for the frequent visits of few Idua fishermen. The entire area is named after Oboyo Ntekim Esu as "Akpa Oboyo (Oboyo's River)". Oboyo's cousin, Aya Iyo Aka was murdered in Akpabuyo by his trusted friend from Duke Town (Iboku Clan) in the 1790s and the place was held in contempt by the Iduas [85]. When Great Duke Ephraim heard that an overzealous and adventurous King Akwa from the Cameroons had plans to take over Akpabuyo, he called on Efik gentries of the time to effectively occupy the area. And so Akpabuyo became officially a consolidated group of Efik villages in the 1st quarter of the 19th century AD. [986].

In the last quarter of the 19th century, Prince James Egbo Bassey (Okon Ekpo Abasi Ekpo) set sail to found James Town in the Oron region by reason of the kingship tussle of the 1880s. Prince Archibong III (Asibong Edem Asibong Ekpo Efiom) also led his family out of Duke Town to found Archibong Town in the Bakassi Peninsula by reason of the same kingship tussle which King Duke Ephraim Eyamba IX (Orok Ededem Ekpo Efiom) won [87]. Prince Esien Etim Ofiong Esien Abasi Ofiong Okoho in the late years of the 19th century also founded Esien Town in Obutong through maternal connections, when there was family disagreement between him and his two brothers as well as with the Coco-Basseys in the Eyamba ward of Duke Town

The culture history and origin of EFIK people including URUAN, Lagos, Edo, Tiv, Igbo etc. and Ibibio/Annang seems to be one of the most interesting and perhaps the best documented in the whole of Nigerian history books. It is also the most intriguing, fantastic, captivating, dramatic and even bizarre. From all accounts Efik writers and most notably E.U. Aye, O.E. Akak, Ekei E. Oku, etc. having traced the origin of the Efik ditto Uruan from the Orient, precisely from Egypt and Palestine identified the exact place as Nubia of Black Jews – the Falashas – including Ethiopians, where some like the Efik, Uruan, Oron, and even Ghanaians, to mention a few later pulled out into different regions. The Efik in particular migrated to Ututu in Nigeria acquiring in turn the soubriquet "EFIK EBURUTU. They moved to found Gibbom (IBOM) from where they later migrated to Uruan whereas Uruan and Oron went to the Cameroons and later to Nigeria. Surely, the Author has acknowledged and accepted all this account by the Efik, but insists that it should be the point of departure for all those mentioned Nationalities and Tribes. It is from the overview of all these coupled with the pulling out of Efik from Uruan and founding Creek Town, Calabar, Ikoneto, Adiabo, Akpabuyo etc. in their present locations, same with Oron and Uruan as also their pre-eminent claim in the evolution history of Oron clans, that the Author has argued to the glaring, incontrovertible and unmitigated position that the same Efik ditto Oron and Uruan are all along one and the same indivisible people of ancient Uruan who migrated and now find themselves with their separate entities and nomenclatures as at present. This view has been corroborated by most world historians on Uruan history, taking Uruan as progenitor. It is on this also that we as Editors of the Book, base our stand with the Author after a thorough overview of his book on URUAN/EFIK and other ethnic nationalities: Lagos, Edo, Igbo, Ijaw, Ogoni, Itsekeri etc.

The Efik seem to argue that the Author by disagreeing with what they say and claim to be is insisting that the Efik, Oron and Uruan are one and the same people thus insinuating that the Efik people are a sub-set of Uruan people, but this is impossible since the Author is calling upon all the Nationalities viz. the Efik, Yoruba, Itsekeri, Ogoni, Igbo, Hausa, Nupe, Tiv etc. to unite for a new Nigeria. There is a whole lot of difference between insult and dissent, even criticism. The Lord Jesus when addressing the crowds among whom were his disciples wanted to know what they regarded Him to be. He also wanted the disciples in particular to tell Him what they thought of Him. It was to enable the people have an objective assessment of Him, the type of thing that is implied here. For any objective assessment, it is what others say that matters and not what people subjectively think or say about themselves. It was St. Peter who promptly answered the interrogation: "You are Christ, the Son of the Living God" (Mt 16: 16). It should not be exactly what the Efik or any other ethnic group or set of people regard themselves to be that matters but what others think of them. That is why URUAN/EFIK people give such names and designations like Atam to Ogoja peoples, Ibibio/Annang to Akwa Ibom peoples, Uneghe to the Igbos, Umani to Rivers people, Asannu to the Hausa/Fulanis, and Okusa to the Yorubas. Even someone invented the nomenclature America, Nigeria, etc. The Hausas call us "Nyamiris". No Igbo man calls himself "Uneghe"; no Yorubas says he is "Okusa". Most people do not even know that such a designation exists regarding their identity and nomenclature. The Efik subjective claim to be a distinct and separate people is their "revisionist history" and is countered by a superior Uruan/Oron argument to the contrary, namely; that they are one and the same people all along. The word "ORON" is a corruption of "URUAN" which was one of the 12 clans in ancient URUAN. It is time people learn to recognize that the best way to ensure the integrity of their claims is to be open-minded to allow all the facts be put on the table. Obdurate and dogmatic refusal to reckon with evidence and suppression of dissent is simply atavistic and the surest way to emasculate enlightenment, maturity and progress.

When the position described by the Efik themselves, viz. that they migrated from Egypt - Nubia - together with some others who went into Ghana, the Congo, Equatorial Guinea and then specifically mentioned Uruan and Oron who moved into Cameroun while they went to Nigeria is matched with the situation where the three of them are speaking the same tongue and have identical cultures and traditions and are now located in present day Nigeria on the Lower Cross River. What glaringly emerges, unmitigated and unassailable is the position held by the Author, namely, that the three are unmistakably one and the same people having come from the same ancestor and moving together all the time. Though the Author is an Uruan Indigene, but any other author using the same parameters which the Author has used would arrive at the same conclusions. This is Didaction Analysis which the author is talking about. It is meant to objectify whatever has been said and garnered from the facts available. It is not meant to offend but to say the truth about what the Reality is. No insults are contemplated nor any points to be scored. But if anyone decides to counter or debate our position, Nigeria now is counted among free and civilized nations, where people can say their minds and hold their individual opinions, then the debate is still open and they should feel free and not hesitate to come on board one way or the other.

Finally, the Book is about The Evolution and Development of a Nation State in Africa viz. NIGERIA with particular reference to the Origins/Pre-history and Heritage of Nigeria's ethnic Nationalities including URUAN-EFIK, Lagos, Edo, Igbo, Ijaw, Ogoni, Itsekeri, Ikom, Bekwarra, Yoruba, Annang, Tiv, Nupe, Hausa-Fulani, Berom, Urhobo, Ibibio etc. The Book also articulates the perspectives which fall squarely within the bracket between the modern day aspirations of Nigerian peoples long lost to their ancestral customs/traditions and the immediate past generations enmeshed in the tragedy of identity crisis of perpetual slavery to primordial issues of indolence, fraudulent behaviours by embezzlements, bribery and corruption, malice, hatred, bigotry, ethnic/religious intolerance, violence, crime and wickedness. It is not about the identities that belong to other climes and centuries. It is about the situation now concerning the fabrications of indigenous ethnographic writers of late. These are disturbing issues which have been all the more exacerbated by Nigeria's neo-politicians and these exaggerated facts of history ostensibly to claim relevance and accolades as movers and shakers of history. These are issues that seem to defy solutions which bear upon the citizenry who need to save themselves from themselves – issues that have kept Nigeria prostrate with no end in view. Chapter 8 is concluded in this Revised Edition with the Author's Spotlight on the Archdiocese of Calabar and Diocese of Ogoja.

F O R E W O R D

I see a major thrust of the contributions made in Msgr. Ekarika's book on "NIGERIA:ORIGINS/PRE-HISTORY AND HERITAGE OF NIGERIAN ETHNIC NATIONALITIES" with particular reference to his ethnic URUAN-EFIK ESSIEN DUOPEBA a.k.a THE TWELVE TRIBES/CLANS OF URUAN-EFIK and the perspectives which fall squarely within the bracket between the modern day aspirations of a people long lost to their ancestral customs/traditions and the immediate past generations enmeshed in the tragedy of identity crisis of perpetual slavery to primordial issues of identity that belong to other climes and centuries. As a result of the interest generated by the situation brought about by the fabrications of indigenous ethnographic writers of late, there are many disturbing issues regarding these views which have been all the more exacerbated by these exaggerated facts of history ostensibly to claim relevance and accolades as movers and shakers of history. This must be the reason that must have made that man of God and of vision, Pope Paul VI of the Roman Catholic Church among other things, to lampoon and pooh-pooh certain writings on African Insights and Traditions which could bring about terrible dangers and acrimonies among the people for whom the issues were targeted. First of all there is the worry he has about the recent write-ups and the distortions by certain neo-nationalist writers on their cultural history and heritage whether of URUAN or EFIK that seem to run counter to those solemn precautionary injunctions and exhortations of the legendary Pope concerning historical pluralism which can issue forth in local folklores or exclusive racism, or arbitrary separatism or even egoistic tribalism just to score some points of relevance and whip up rancor and disaffection among brothers, tribes and races. For what exactly were these people trying to rake out if not by so doing they had ended up extolling their noble emanations from incoherent and unauthenticated exaggerations of their origins which had evolved from "incredible Progenitors of the Orient and the Zodiac." That is why first of all as Africans, nay Nigerians South of the Niger, I totally agree that we just have to learn to accept the universality of mankind and human Brotherhood of Nations, and particularly those of the macro Semi-Bantoid Stock as recorded in Msgr. Ekarika's Book through the ages. When this symbolic and momentous evolution of a people from the shackles of ignorance, falsehood, and shame seems to stare all of us in the face, I think we need simply to wrestle ourselves from this destructive and despicable arrogance of triumphalism and mistrust and try to redirect the course of history and heritage towards the solid models of trust, collaborative and resolute emphasis for the emergence and enrichment of traditional culture vis-a-vis of nation building from which values of togetherness, joint-effort and evident growth and development can evolve. From there Msgr. Ekarika has urged his URUAN-EFIK peoples as brothers and sisters of the same indivisible Nigritic stock to constantly and patiently exercise a leadership in the message of unity and love so as to contribute their quota towards the emancipation and transformation of their two kingdoms and environments.

Msgr. Ekarika's Book is an attempt towards the evolution and development of the Nigerian Nation through the emancipation and revolutionary programmes of progressive change in all the ethnic communities that make up Nigeria, nay Africa blessed by God Almighty. This is what he thinks can transform every community into a city state and as a nation in the proper sense of the term, but always as part and parcel of contemporary Nigerian state among the comity of nations. I think this is also the same position of Restructuring Apologists with the mantra: Restructure Nigeria NOW, or else everyone "Away to thy Tents O Israel" (1Kgs.12:16). More than anything else, Msgr. Ekarika goes on to emphasize his advocacy for purging out the misunderstanding in certain quarters of this great country of ours even among his URUAN-EFIK people of what he describes as "New Ideas" which can build either in a definite positive or negative way, and most often than not, negative. In fact, as often does, these neo-politicians and even the so-called leaders including present day "politically minded Royal Fathers" could wreck and ruin everything even the foundations of the past and present if they are allowed to continue to act and behave in the way they are doing now. Whereas the "new ideas" he is advocating should be such that could bring about changes as things just have got to change in this country ditto his URUAN/EFIK and other ethnic kingdoms of Nigeria. These ideas and changes will of necessity come with a heavy price since it is in the nature of "New Ideas" and changes to cause a lot of discomfort, especially to the few who have benefitted from the rut of the past because they always want things to remain in their primordial past and still more so, because of their selfishness, greed, incompetence, sabotage, corruption and decay which have made most of these Nationalities even the Nigerian State to continue to stagnate and lie prostrate.

The problems of pre-historic peoples are enormous and dramatic, but so too are their resources and values – spiritual, moral, educational, socio-cultural, economic and political. The traditions of URUAN-EFIK and other ethnic groups in Nigeria argue to the global history evident in the enthusiastic embrace of transformation and developmental goals which are spreading in Africa today. The impressive analysis of our ancient past is complex and captivating but not without its shades and shadows. Worthy of note is the fact that those ancient customs and traditions as reflected in Msgr. Ekarika's re-writing of URUAN-EFIK culture history deal with this heritage of national growth and progressivism which are still relevant. Therefore, the new generation of Nigerians should purge and disentangle themselves from unbridled utterances of those who try to confuse and disparage the minds and hearts of the generality of the people because this will inevitably lead to their loss of faith and violent reactions, crimes and protests with amoral display of chicanery to hoodwink and cause chaos and anarchy in the land. That is why Msgr. Ekarika has done such a lot of research to clarify these seeming complexities and confusions. However, I see and trust in Msgr. Ekarika's ardent zeal and aspiration towards a radical highlighting of the ever pressing need to meet the challenges posed by tracing both the past and modern patterns of these Nationalities which bear wonderful marks of unbroken line with the original treasures of Nigeria's ancient past even towards the evolution of a new Nigeria Nation.

Most captivating is the methodology employed by the Author to galvanize his points of view especially at a time when the identities of these Ethnic Nationalities vis- a-vis URUAN/ EFIK are either assailed, denied, confused, doubted and or distorted, despite the materials for meaningful research available to scholars and students of all disciplines and persuasions. I do agree with him for having adopted certain methodologies which in recent times seem to outclass the researches hitherto undertaken viz. his didactical research which have enabled him to present a sort of mosaic of whatever materials, oral or written, folklores, rhymes, doxologies including proverbs worldwide, idioms, satires and even sarcasms that have characterized most of these ethnic cultures and mores, ancient and modern. When all these have been gathered and re-arranged, synthesized and retold in a book like this, I think what will emerge becomes an authentic unmitigated and absolutely complete profile which is altogether unassailable and incontrovertible, and I also agree that no true son or daughter of these nationalities can deny or contradict. The Author has given his leit motif that it is beamed from the great light of the Divine Grace and from the ancestors who handed down unmistakable land-marks of the Founding Fathers of our ancient past, some of which predated even the Christian era. His method of Christian Apologetics which he used as a defense is to enable him employ an unmitigated opinion as a method of proof, using objective arguments particularly those of external evidence in order to prepare his readers for a judgment of credibility and authenticity.

Finally, I salute the courage of Msgr. Ekarika for providing answers to some of the often misconstrued nature and cosmology of Ekpe Confraternity and his URUAN-EFIK and other arcane cultic associations of other nationalities including Ekpo Ny?h?, Ek? kemba etc., to the un-initiated which up to this, were considered recondite, exotic and esoteric because they have now become demystified and easily assimilated as part and parcel of the soaring socio-cultural and interesting fulfilling scenarios. I have no doubt that this Book will serve a very useful purpose, not only for academicians, but also for all Nigerians and indeed Msgr. Ekarika's new generation youths including those whom he describes as AREA BOYS AND GIRLS – mostly aliens and children of slaves, "mme ndit? emana". Msgr. Ekarika's Book has touched many issues that often agitate the minds of those seeking the truth which is the liberator of mankind. I strongly recommend this book to all who are interested in seeking the truth. Above all I thank Msgr. Ekarika for the great work and effort he has put into this work for URUAN-EFIK, for Nigeria, for Africa nay, the whole world.

In recent times and more than ever before, their voices as deliberate and coordinated as they are, continue to beat incessantly on my ears "Monsignor, write, try and write something mb?k, before we lose you to be gathered to your fathers on your final home-call to your Maker." But why? Why me? Because after all, this is not going to be the first nor will it be the last of URUAN or EFIK or any other ethological HISTORY in print as many others especially the early European Historians, Anthropologists, Sociologists, Ethnologists & Religionists etc. have written; including the recent publications of URUAN/EFIK, the Yorubas, Igbos, Ogonis etc. sons and daughters and University Dons and Historians to wit: the late Dr. E. A. Udoh of Ndon Uruan (ABU & UNICAL, 1981) and Prof. Dominus Essien of Nung Ikono Obio (UNIUYO, 1993) Dr. E. N. Amaku, Dr. Eyo Okon Akak, Etubom Efiong Ukpong Aye, Madam Ekei Oku, all of Efik ancestry and Prof. A. E. Afigbo an Igbo, just to mention a few. But now almost clocked 80, not a few Nigerians vis-a-vis URUANEFIK citizens including URUAN in the Diaspora, our EFIK brothers, Ibibios, Igbos, Yorubas, priests, the Religious, and other friends and lovers of URUAN/ESSIEN DUOPEBA, even aliens notably scholars of Culture and History, Social scientists, the St. Patrick's Fathers and other Missionaries have continued to urge me with visits and demonstrations, to dust my shelves, ransack those ever ubiquitous files scattered all over my rooms, even to consult the Elders especially men and women of my generation still alive who had trod the length and breadth of this great country in yester-years. So in response and to register my 80 years on earth I have decided to acquiesce and put pen to paper however perfunctory and produce something to re-write URUAN/EFIK and some Nigerian ethnic nationalities CULTURE HISTORY as an up-date to whatever has been put forth whether through oral tradition, books, proverbs and other write-ups of eminent history scholars, Colonial Administrators as well as Missionaries and anthropologists as AN UPDATE OF NIGERIAN NATIONALITIES vis-à-vis URUAN/EFIK IN WORLD HISTORY AND PROGRESSIVE CHANGE.

DEVELOPING NOSTALGIA, TACT AND AUDACITY FOR LEGENDARY ANCESTRAL WISDOM AND EXPLOITS

All these have been further fueled by their nostalgia if not regrets in the remissness, apathy or lack of seriousness and commitment by Nigerian early scholars, and traditional Rulers, Chiefs and Kings who through their negligences and nonchalant attitudes had left nothing worthy of significance in print for posterity. Some even had the temerity and audacity to lay the blame at the feet of some educated Royal Fathers and elites including even for example, the last two Nsomms: Etinnyin Edidem Atakpor Nyong Essien (OBE, CMG, CON, 1872-1972) whose not-to-be-forgot libraries could not be located in the Archives in URUAN but are now installed and left to rot in the University of Uyo and also Edidem Atakpor James Udo-Afia (CON+1992) who while alive constrained me to write this book. But this is not to lay blames on anybody or groups or even to bamboozle or castigate; nothing like that has ever crossed my mind or being contemplated! Yet as all of you out there who have ever written even just a book, not two, not three but many, can attest to the amount of labour, the anguish and frustrations involved in the course of research and writing. It is only but the successful completion of the project that always brings joy and with that a sense of achievement and satisfaction. Honestly, it is very difficult to write a book, especially of this nature, yet it is also quite very easy to criticize it. What a misplaced regret! But those who have called on me to write have further reasoned rightly or wrongly that it has fallen on me by the irony of history that as the immediate direct descendant of their Imperial Majesties, Edidem Edet Isim Akpa - Inyang (1855-1913) my biological grandfather, and Etinnyin Edidem Ekarika Ekpo (1859-1945) my step grandfather, I should be better qualified to take on this onerous task for URUAN ditto EFIK, other ethnic nationalities and for posterity. But yes or no my humble self, thanks to God Almighty, I am the grand child of the legendary Etinnyin Edidem Atakpor Edet I.A. Inyang who received the first British Colonial Administrators in the late 19th century and the Holy Ghost Missionaries (CSSP) in the early 20th century precisely in 1906. My step grandfather, His Royal Highness Edidem Atakpor Ekarika Ekpo took over as the Paramount Ruler of the entire territory of now Akwa Ibom State (including Annang territory and Oron, while also stretching his hand of fellowship to the Kings of Iboku Esit Edik and Iboku Utan of old Calabar Province). He was also crowned by the same Colonial Administrative Authority in the early 20thCentury. He it was who handed over to His Royal Highness the (Honourable) Nsomm Edidem Atakpor Nyong Essien who in turn was succeeded by His Royal Imperial Majesty, Edidem Atakpor J. U. Afia and afterwards was also succeeded by Etinnyin His Royal Majesty, Edidem Atakpor Titus Williams, alias Obong Okon Udo Ekpe, the last NSOMM to be coroneted in the line of URUAN Royal progenitors. He was afterwards succeeded by another in the line of new Royal Fathers whose ancestry has been contested for not coming on board through the customary age-old conduct of selecting new Kings in URUAN kingdom, His Royal Majesty Edidem Atakpor E.B.A. Ekanem formerly the Obong of Ituk Mbang, one from among the towns euphemistically designated as the "nda-ndian Obio URUAN Nyong Essien". The reason is that most of the towns and villages in URUAN South are not the aborigines of ancient URUAN of 8000 BC who migrated from USAHAEDET a.k.a Edik Afaha or URUAN AKPE/EKPE = "the creek where lions abound" in modern Cameroun Republic to IBOM, now Arochukwu and afterwards to AKWA AKPA URUAN on the Cross River ie. the great sea through the Atlantic Ocean in present day Nigeria. However, following this impetus and coupled with the incessant barrage of requests and appeals, and also considering the supreme importance of such an update and Culture History, more so that of URUAN/ EFIK, I have by God's divine providence and His Omnipotent guidance decided to undertake this task to further put the records straight knowing that "if you get the courage to begin, you have the courage to succeed". Everyone knows "history is made after it has happened", you don't plan history. That is why I have decided to write it, because it has happened as it does.

The story or more correctly, the ethnographic and culture History of URUAN/EFIK as also some other ethnic groups recorded in the Book you now have in your hand or on your desk/shelf is nothing but a powerful and compelling commentary of the tragedy consequent upon a people, to wit an ethnic nation like URUAN/EFIK and many others whose history have become at best legends, and at worst, ephemeral myths. For according to that great film producer and writer, J. R. Tolkien, who in his book Lord of the Rings, had said among other things that: "Thousands of years passed by, history became legend and legend became myth". What can we say but that this insightful truism has become the albatross of several ethnic groups of yore? If you do not learn and continue to remind yourself of your history as a person, as a family, as a people, as a tribe and even as a nation, the likelihood is that what is historical fact gradually pales into an intangible and unlikely legend and then eventually turns into nothing but an ephemeral myth. Once such sacred historical facts become nothing but myth, it destroys not only the soul but the very foundation of your existence whether as an individual, as one from a family or as a people and as a nation. When you do not know, or care to know and learn and remember what your roots are or even your mother tongue, no matter how humble and inconsequential those roots may be, you become a nothing. It is to avoid the possibility of our history which should remain sacrosanct turning into legend and legend turning into a myth that I have chosen to retrace the footprints of time and set the records aright concerning these humble facts of our ethnographic history which for some like URUAN/EFIK goes beyond 8000 BC – a history that predates even the Lord Jesus. For example, who could believe that there was no such history as "till the coming of the Aros"? From what planet did the Aros come or was it from Jupiter? Whereas the truth is that they are just the proud degenerate descendants and remnants of Igbo slaves and those of ancient URUAN/EFIK stock that we are talking about here.

They were those who stayed put at IBOM, the country of URUAN primal settlement in what is now renamed Arochukwu - the city of "God's people".

By this time the main URUAN/EFIK group had sailed southwards and discovered the estuary of what is now called Cross River - a sea of immense expanse emptying itself into the Atlantic Ocean which they named AKWA AKPA URUAN about 3000 - 2000BC. Or what of the EFIK in particular, the Canaan people of Calabar as they always pride themselves though unsuccessfully ostensibly as "the people from ATAKPA = through the ATLANTIC" to distance and extricate themselves from the core URUAN by trying to retrace their ethnographical history to Palestine whereas that is equally the claim of URUAN? On this moot point according to one of their chieftains, the EFIK "have spent time and resources on providing day dream evidence of their claimed Jewish origin". But the EFIK even of today are simply a heterogeneous lot - a conglomeration and admixture of neighbourhoods communities of Cross River Basin and the Gulf of Guinea. As a matter of fact, a good proportion of the people of Odukpani LGA of Cross River State viz. Iboku Esit Edik (Creek Town) Ikoneto, Adiabo, Ikot Offiong West, Mbiabo Edere (North) etc. as also most of them in Oron and Okobo are URUAN. But they now seem to deny this because of the aggressiveness of the Ibibios and URUAN peculiar submission and tendencies towards the IBIBIO. Very many of their lot have through the years defended this view one way or the other, but unfortunately those who hold this view are always divided among themselves. Yet we should always be reminded that a house/people or country divided against itself is heading towards its collapse, but URUAN is saying no, let us not be divided anymore, but rather let us retrace our steps to the way of the ancients who have always seen themselves as one and the same undivided and indissoluble people who want to and continue to be. After considering all these, one does not need any god or goddess to tell us how much URUAN, whether as modern EFIK or other ethnic groups or simply ancient URUAN have contributed and will still be contributing to the progress of Nigeria and the modern world. In the first place who directed the Portuguese, the first navigators and explorers ever known in the history of the world to come to African soil and by implication URUAN/EFIK country, Lagos, Benin etc. to which they gave that name Lagos ie. the land of lakes, or Bene/ ie. Benin in Edo or Kalabros ie. Calabar, the land of mangroves? Again, who told Imperial Great Britain to set up their Headquarters at Calabar for the emergence of yet to be named country now known as "NIGERIA" which Headquarters was later transferred to Lagos in 1906? Or again who advised or directed the same Imperial Britain to cajole, bamboozle and bring the king and Oba of Benin, His Royal Majesty, Oba Ovonranmwen to Calabar in order to kill him and have their way for the Amalgamation because I have said elsewhere that without Britain doing that there would never have been Amalgamation talkless of a Nigeria today?

Then if not so, what is their genealogical tree and what was their ancestry before the world? And/or are the EFIK not the same URUAN, the great sea-farers and famed navigators of yore? Some of them while exploring the depths discovered the mighty ATLANTIC OCEAN and proclaimed as it were: "Here we are at ATA–AKPA = CALABAR! This has been anglicized to mean that portion of AKWA AKPA URUAN meandering into Atakpa, which coastal land is the indisputable Canaan city of CALABAR? Yes, indeed one can navigate from where they sited this mysterious expanse of water inexorably into the ATLANTIC! And is it not the same distortion and forgetfulness of HISTORY that has made the great literary Icon of the 21st century, the legendary CHINUA ACHEBE to alert and warn the nation, all of us especially his people of IGBO in that his controversial book: THERE WAS A COUNTRY? So come on board with me as we navigate these inexorable issues.

THE IMPERATIVES OF SECURING NIGERIA'S FUTURE FOR US AND FOR POSTERITY

The Author therefore however most fervently exhorts all the citizens, lovers and admirers of URUAN not excluding other ethnic "Nations" of Nigeria to lay aside pride and prejudice and learn to keep abreast of our cultural past which has helped to address issues of visionary developmental agenda as exposed in these pages and to appreciate the genuine effort so far made so that our time tested institutions, customs and traditions can continue to be perpetuated and handed on to posterity and generations yet unborn. As we enter this brand new millennium with a new spirit and euphoria of its Development Goals (MDGs) before us, let us make a compromise between the foreign and the native, the modern and the ancient, for the time is apparently right to revisit and rewrite our Culture history in order to imbibe anew the wisdom and vision of our forebears which evidently had helped the Nigerian society to achieve fame as one of the most cultured nations in Africa with deep and fascinating cultural and religious history; and to make progress so as to find her proper place in the scheme of God's creation and the comity of mankind, and the time to do it is NOW. Since God in His infinite wisdom, purpose and plan has positioned Nigeria and given her this strategic position and structures and also endowed this land of promise for our inheritance, let us begin now to breathe the new fresh air, with fresh talent and fresh energy. The Lord has blessed us with a common culture and mutually intelligent languages and dialects, thereby making us the most homogenous and monolithic society of all among the other nations of Africa living along the borders of Franco-phone territories, that vision should give us the ability to see beyond the circumstances around us. So let us start now with a new vision even beyond our present imaginings. Let us see ourselves now as a people belonging to the society of mankind –men, women and children, for as the great philosopher of all times, Aristotle had put it: A man/woman who thinks he/she has no need of society must either be a god or a beast. If not beasts, let us now stop our individualistic tendencies and mutual antagonism against ourselves for only beasts behave thus. Let us stop the empowerment of outsiders whose only aim is to divide and rule and then use us against ourselves. Accordingly, let us see ourselves and others as belonging together and reciprocally try to illuminate one another so as to understand our interconnectedness. Let us enlighten our consciences to the imperative of securing Nigeria's future for ourselves and for posterity. Let us join forces then to bury our clannish and political élan and decide now to shun self-hate and collective visionlessness in order to present a new road map for our future and common good.

AIMS: TO SPEARHEAD REGIONAL INTEGRATION OF NATIONALITIES

Today, let us endeavour to and allow the past experiences of our forebears recounted here enrich and enlighten us. Our aim here is to spear-head our regional integration as a paradigm development of all the tribes, sectors and clans of Nigeria including those in the Diaspora. But this integration policy should not mean that people/clans are to lose their identity into a Nigerian elite group of grabbers and self-aggrandizers or something. But let us be a united nation under God in freedom, tolerance and patriotism, a nation and a people that can translate into the personal and collective development of Nigerians as a people not just in structures and capacity building for personal control but that of effectiveness and collaboration. Then we can face up as to how we should develop ourselves not only as a unit but eminently as components of the Nigerian entity. This project is about the holistic integration of all ethnic nationalities in Nigeria, nay of all Africa and the world at large. It is not about ethnicity which people are afraid will threaten the unity of the nation. It is concerned with the overall integration of our ethnic nationalities with URUAN/EFIK as a paradigm towards achieving programmes which can uplift the national ethos and grow the educational, religious, moral, socio-political and economic potentials of the ethnic regions towards providing sound human development that can ensure good and sustainable jobs for the restive youths of this country. It is not about looking at the ethnic angle I repeat, as some might fear or think. It is not also complaining about the marginalization of "our ethnic nation" whether Ijaw, or Igbo or Ogoni or Bekwarra etc. No, it is about Nigerian unity and how she can come together with an undivided purpose to develop the nation together. When the different nationalities making up Nigeria strive to unite and make their individual projects succeed, then it is a certain sign that the unity of Nigeria can be assured and the Nigerian project as a nation will equally work.

I think we want Nigeria to develop and progress and the best way to develop this country is to encourage and allow the different nationalities to develop by getting them to work out how they can individually and severally do this for their benefit and that of the nation at large. All these should be that every ethnic group, each in its own pace and manner forwards, with the resources they can garner for achieving progress, hence this ardent yearning for the application of the National Conference which was put together by the Goodluck administration to kick start with a non- fettered and credible REFERENDUM. The first step towards developing a nation is to develop oneself and by implication your ethnic nationality even with the "mantra" of: change begins with me! When that is done your contribution towards the collective building up of Nigeria as an indivisible nation can then be achieved. That is why personally I want to pray and see to the change and transformation of the Nigerian nation. I also want to see my URUAN/EFIK nation and indeed other ethnic nationalities of Nigeria, nay Africa change.

SUBDUING PRIMORDIAL ISSUES AND INDENTIFYING FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS AND NEEDS IN THE TOWNS / VILLAGES & CHURCHES

I want to think and believe that my younger generation should be imbued with the same spirit like Mandela to aspire us to live in Nigeria that is better governed and organized educationally, economically, socio- politically, morally and religiously developed. I want to do that with what the Lord has made of me; a priest of His Universal Church. This Book should be seen by all both as a lamentation and a call for the solution to the myriads of problems bedeviling the Nigerian society today. It is a wake-up call to a people who appear to have been enmeshed in the tragedy of identity crisis and perpetual slavery to primordial issues and inventions of mythologies of identity that belong to other climes and cultures. Such cannot take us anywhere except towards stagnation, rot and decay. Nigeria has unique cultures and traditions which must not be distorted or confused but which we should cherish and strive to maintain at all times and this should point to a greater and better tomorrow. It means we must be ever ready and careful to note those areas where 'the rain started beating us'. In other words, when did we become a pariah nation at the brink of collapsed and failed nation even becoming an "URUANG" in the case of URUAN/EFIK and before the world! When did we start to abandon our identities, our customs, our laid down mores, our cultures and traditions as well as the paths of righteousness and hard work to follow for meaningful re-awakening, renewal and progress? When did we begin to live our individual lives and according to "our own understanding in criminal pride and primitive acquisition" as if to say" nduhe ke idak owo - nyu ndiaha ke uf?k owo - nnam se mmade, ndia da a kokut mi"? Because this is the type of mentality and behaviour we now find everywhere in Nigeria as people just live their life not minding anybody else or authority and doing whatsoever they choose. They go about selling patrimonial land holdings as if their lives depended on it because they are too lazy to go and work like our parents and grandparents did. They want to get rich quick and be able to manage their lives without working for it. The quickest way to make it is to sell out patrimonial estates or join criminal and cult groups of kidnappers, armed robbers, rappers OR better still join POLITICS as the easiest, the surest and quickest way. Our young people cannot nor do they want to recollect how and what their parents and grandparents were doing in order to make it in life. They do not want to bother themselves about how to work and get money in order to sustain themselves and parents, and they couldn't care less. According to Lynette Wallworth, the Australian Filmmaker, "If we don't care about something, we don't feel the need to act". They just want to walk or even run without first learning how to crawl. They cannot and do not want to live up to the billing that it is only by dint of hard work, tenacity of purpose and the cultivation of good character that can lead to a successful living. They do not understand nor care to learn living up to the billing that "when the going gets tough, only the tough gets going." This is the bane of our modern society.

IGNORING THE LAWS OF WORK AND THE WORK OF GOD

People of nowadays do not want to "walk the talk, but prefer to talk the walk" thus ignoring the "law of work" given by God in the Garden of Eden to all mankind wherein the Lord God said "by the sweat of your face will you earn your food until you return to the ground" (Gen. 3:19). Thus those who have money and especially in high positions become arrogant, refractory, stubborn, doing everything with Gestapo and impunity. Then they do not even think of or give a damn about their children and children's children yet unborn, nor even asking themselves" where would I have seen all these plots of land if my father/grandfather had behaved like this and sold them off?" They build houses anyhow leaving no space even for the roads/paths to lead them thereto. In modern Nigeria there are no spaces left for children's recreation, no provisions against erosion let alone other future developments and needs in the towns/villages. People begin behaving just like animals do, caring for nothing whatever and whoever except perhaps about themselves and for themselves. This has become a problem in the Nigerian society today. This is simply the era of lawlessness, chaos, madness, anarchy and doom. We are passing on nothing to posterity! Hence my appeal to the youths and neo-politicians of Nigeria, equally to our "ndit? emana URUAN INYANG ATAKPOR/ EFIK EBURUTU to: "arise and save themselves from themselves first – especially those of them who behave wildly and untowardly "ek?t inan" like beasts and immaturely like Area boys/Girls so that they can extricate themselves from these primordial hindrances that block their vision to dream new dreams and see better visions to forge ahead for a better tomorrow!

WICKED POLITICS AND MORASS OF INDOLENCE AND GREED

We must while lamenting the tragic effects of poor leadership, corruption and irredentism as also the monumental and obstacles of profiteering through "fantastic" bribery and corruption, chicanery and "wicked politrics" which have left Nigeria prostrate. Let them endeavour to overcome these evils and save themselves from themselves and from the shackles of criminality, vice, poverty, ignorance and underdevelopment. We must begin now to use our human capital, ethos and resources with which Divine providence has endowed us to propel progress and development. But in order to live up to these expectations of our ancestor, we do require new and consistent IDEAS. IDEAS rule the world. Like all changes, such IDEAS can build, in a definite positive way, or it can wreck and ruin everything past and present if we do not know how to plan and prosecute these IDEAS correctly and well. New IDEAS bring changes and with this book in your hands it is hoped that things have got to change in NIGERIA with the reign and rule of IDEAS we are proffering here because "IDEAS ARE CAPITAL, THE REST IS MONEY ". This book is my IDEA for URUAN/EFIK and the other nationalities, for NIGERIA, for AFRICA et pour le monde entier! IDEAS as we know are words written or spoken or even imagined and this book made up of words contains my IDEAS. Words as ideas according to that great Christian writer of antiquity, St Clement of Rome (AD 150-216) are first to exhort, then train and finally teach us (Paidagogos PG. 8, 685). I am therefore using ideas/words in this trichotomy to exhort and teach my people of Nigeria to arise and glow and to work out this agenda to lift us from the morass of indolence and greed to the stratosphere of excellence and righteousness.

I know all these ideas and changes will of necessity come with a heavy price because it is in the nature of new ideas and changes to cause a lot of discomfort, especially to the few and old brigade especial our neaveau riche and neo-politicians who have benefitted from the rot in the Nigeria of today. They just want things to remain in their primordial past and done in the same old ways of ignorance, selfishness, greed, self-aggrandizement incompetence, sabotage, gerrymandering, corruption, deceit and decay so that Nigeria will continue to stagnate if not decline completely. They are those I may call 'forever people' who say "this is how it always has been, or was said or done; this is how it is and this is how it will be forever and ever, Amen". Ignorance is a very serious and dangerous disease, a potent factor undermining change and progress. If people are ignorant or do not understand the motives underlying the envisaged change and programmes thereto, they will oppose and antagonize it. In fact, change cannot take place in an environment heavily dyed with ignorance and deceit with of course a big dose of evil intentions and pride. So this book is aimed at creating that atmosphere that will be receptive of as also galvanize change. To God be the Glory, this effort and vision will succeed as it will arouse many ethnic groups in Nigeria including URUAN/EFIK sons and daughters to make the operators to key into and run the system with efficiency and professionalism in order to change the status quo and "business-as-usual" mind-set and orientation.

Yes, there must not be practised any more the "cash and carry" attitude of Nigerian power brokers. The Elohim and the Abissah Gibbhom of a true people of our ancient ethnic stock will not allow them to continue to hoodwink the citizenry especially you ndit? emana out there the environment to wallow in unrighteousness, not again! As at now even before the book sees the light of day, some Nigerian so-called leaders and custodians of our culture and heritage seem to back-pedal and withdraw their assent and approval of this enterprise. But it is forward ever – backward never, because NIGERIAN UNITY is not negotiable, at least for now. It is time to work towards forsaking the old ways and to seek a new order that will herald a new Nigeria of our dream with good people in governance, functional social securities and values as well as purposeful sense of living because according to Nathaniel Howe, "the way to nothing is to do nothing" for as the saying goes: "if we fail to plan – we plan to fail" by allowing things to remain as they are. The descent of any nation into a pariah and "BANANA REPUBLIC" such as we now find ourselves is the stock of those who fall into this psychological wilderness more often than not defined by anomie and helplessness, God forbid.

It is pertinent from the outset to remind ourselves that problems of socio-economic and political development that have many of our nationalities today cannot be understood except within their historical and cultural contexts. We have suffered from this socio-economic and political dislocation on account of the pluralist constellations of culture and stomach politics but most especially from the plurality of religious sects and churches that have become part of our heritage. These have left their imprint on the "national psyche" with the consequent mindset which has constrained initiative and stifled hard work, assertiveness and maintenance of values that enhance the patriotic spirit, entrepreneurial and progressive change. I have insisted in Chapter 9 in my 10-point Agenda that for URUAN/EFIK and by implication all ethnic nationalities in Nigeria to return ever more urgently and with alacrity once more to their former glory, to be perfect and even better still to return to God not in the multiplication of religions organizations and Alladura sects but to the Religion and Church which the early Missionaries brought and which made these groups unique as testified in their histories herewith. They must also play and use politics in the way God destined it to be used and learn to see that "it is culture, civilized traditions and good morals not politics that determine the success of a society." The central liberal truth is that politics can change a culture and turn it against itself. Nigerians be wary. We certainly do not want and should not allow Nigeria to become the Sicily where mafia and criminal organizations of political thuggery, kidnapping, militancy, hustling, prostitution, women and child trafficking etc. are the order of the day. These make us perpetually backward and abhorrent and abominable. There is vast erosion of culture and good values in our communities and leading to the lack of unity, crises of values and absence of joint planning of development. These are factors militating against our socio-economic development and wellbeing. That is why my thrust in this venture is to stem the assault of our misguided youths and their mentors against their being used for sacrilege of distortions of our age-old historical and social values and traditions. In terms of planning, I am urging and insisting on the imperatives of drawing up a long term developmental plan with in common with all our ethnic communities in brotherhood together and for URUAN/EFIK in particular with our former URUAN/EFIK speaking communities including those of Enyong, Itu Arochukwu. Old Bende, Afikpo, Itigidi, Ugep, Ikom, Uzuakoli and others in the Diaspora as envisaged in the organization of URUAN/EFIK NATIONAL UNION and the proposed Constitution to galvanize and fast track the establishment of big time businesses like state-of-the-art hospitals, high quality and educational centres for example through the up-grading of Hope Waddell/St Patrick's Institutions in Calabar and Uruan High School-Idu/Atakpor Central School Mbiaya educational Institutions into Polytechnics and Colleges of Education.

THE PROPER DEFINITION OF POLITICS AND ITS INSULATION FROM CULTURE AND GOVERNANCE

Our problem is how to define politics in such a way that our cultural factors can be held accountable for the development of the nation amidst the profligate endowments which Divine Providence has conferred on our ethnic kingdoms and to enable us use those ancient cultural circumstances to change the direction towards progress and the socio-economic, political, educational and religious orders of Nigeria whose ancient peoples were known to be industrious, courageous, highly talented and determined like what is happening now in Aba, Nnewi, Onitsha as also the co-operation paradigm of rice farming in Lagos and Kebbi States of Nigeria. But it is of course likely that the imagination of the current generation of writers on their ethnic nationalities has been heavily and significantly assaulted by the Nigerian reality of politicizing and monetizing of everything in the "cash and carry "atmosphere of "get rich quick "to the point that fiction and graft rather than reality have become more effective. This has also been acerbated by the modern preachments on miracles and breakthroughs syndrome in our Pentecostal assemblies and churches. The strength, power and progress of any nation lie in the collective will and readiness of the citizenry to take their destiny in their hands. You are the people for whom this book is written. All the Nigerian nationalities of this 21st century must therefore rise up as one to this and say yes to this proposal and project and damn all other influences. As a corollary, it should also be possible to envisage mitigating factors that can change and transform the Nigerian conundrum. Therefore, these IDEAS must help, clarify, enlighten and facilitate progressive change so that all our plans and endeavours through these IDEAS which though GOOD in themselves, but if not properly understood or well-articulated and prosecuted can hurt, annoy, confuse, scatter, delude, or even impede and stifle "change mantra" and progress. So I hope nobody is reading this work with such an evil and retrogressive IDEA which can only destroy us and make us worse than we ever were as we are all witnesses. Besides, I exhort all well-meaning people – men, women and even children of goodwill, particularly those with claims to the truth - to rise to the assistance of all Nigerian peoples and cultures so that humanity and lovers of mankind can be proud of and willing to assist us as they did in years past. Hence I now make bold to plead against their destruction and decay through derogatory, defamatory and abusive language against one another like "onye bullus", "nyamiris" etc. OR "sese URUAN emekabare edi URUANG!' which at the height of it, was commented by the legendary Hon E.O. Eyo UYO – IBESIKPO. Yes, because we see all this in the recent manner and ways of the very people whom God in His Infinite Wisdom and Goodness had blessed – these neo-politicians and neaveau riche over-pampered and "elected/selected representatives" of the peoples of Nigeria, who receive bogus salaries and severance pension fees as the so-called "co-custodians of ancient African personality and wisdom". Everywhere I went as a child, and whenever or wherever any blue blooded URUAN/EFIK citizen spoke as also whatever he/she stood out for or did, or wherever he/she was placed in charge of, he/she turned out to be a masterpiece. Many other nationalities like Lagosians, Tivi, Nupes, Abribas, Ikom or Afikpo peoples all put their hands to do with zest, candour excellence and pride were a masterpiece if not master-stroke

RESTORATION OF ALL THINGS IN CHRIST AND INCULCATION OF HIS THOUGHT AND TEACHINGS

Finally let this attempt so re-direct the hearts and minds of all readers of this book on the need for the restoration of all things in Christ and to inculcate in them the thought and teachings of Christ buried in germ as it were, within our ancient cultures, traditions and heritage over the centuries. Let it also assist them grow politically, socially, morally and spiritually along the path of Christ. It is this that has informed the Author's special Spotlight on parts of the Dioceses of Uyo, Ogoja and the Archdiocese of Calabar. The concern then should be how to make the ethnic groups and nationalities and the churches in Nigeria including URUAN/EFIK move forward and this project should be seen as a soul searching contribution towards the re-definition of their cultural History to make us ask again: 'Where did we go wrong to have become a degenerate community and a laughing stock of other nations?' I guess what people think is that we have allowed ourselves to be compartmentalized such that humanity is missing whereas we can rise and become noble again. Then with patriotism and the spirit of "nationalism" we can think as a nation. We already have a myriad of fast neaveau riche, professors, court judges, politicians, business tycoons and other celebrities and performing groups in dance, fashion, modeling etc. including corporate bodies who can boast about acquisition of houses, cars and fat bank accounts, but the new yard-stick for success should be "how did they acquire them, from which source and how many lives have they impacted upon positively with their fame and fortunes?" What the nationalities need are people with generous hearts and an ardent desire to rescue the poor among us from abject poverty, neglect and want.

Poverty has taken away our pride, honour, integrity and nobility. It is this ancient ethnic chemistry we are applying in this volume. That is why we want to address the problem of poverty, underdevelopments, crimes and want so that our citizens will once again learn to know what are called dignity of labour, honour and integrity. When poverty and squalor have taken away the pride of a people, they cannot feel honorable anymore because they are now diminished and debased. They succumb to accepting peanuts to go serve the mighty and powerfully rich in carrying on dirty and criminal businesses. They become a failed citizenry because lack of respectable employment has made them into vagabonds and beggars and a humiliating lot. Then the poor have become poorer and the rich, richer giving way to a classless society for the rich and mighty and neo-politicians to get sway. I was lucky to grow up in an atmosphere where what is called security, honour, protection and comfort reigned and because this is something I enjoyed, I am in a better position to think about how things should be and what had been the situation in those days. All these can therefore present a kind of feeling which I think should distinguish us from others. It is not immodesty, pride or haughtiness. URUAN/EFIK nation and many other ethnic groups in Nigeria need people who can subdue the prevailing greed and selfishness we see all around us today and help others and the nation to "arise and shine" and become self-respecting and self-sufficient. It is not impossible if we have the love of Christ.

OBVIOUS LIMITATIONS INHERENT IN THIS BOOK

There is no need to dwell on the obvious limitations inherent in this book because the task in undertaking this type of study with the attendant problems can be intimidating if not overwhelming. Trying to condense and rewrite many millennia of ancient Nigerian ethnic groups and their HISTORY into one volume is a challenging task and by sheer limitation of space it means that much of even real importance may be left out. My hope is that the updated bibliography will help to fill the gaps because my main aim was to focus on the events and structures that had shaped our ancient nationalities and kingdoms and to make them become what they ever were if not better since most of the books written already seem to have stopped short of addressing those things that made our people of yesteryears tick. This also explains why much of what this book covers has come from first-hand knowledge and experience of the author. A more strenuous effort was made to use the literature from extraneous sources that would highlight the Nigerian patterns, culture history and heritage relative to similar and known cultural traits in other climes within and outside Africa. Just now the religious, philosophical, theological and cultural pluralist approach employed in these pages are meant to restructure, reconcile and figure out how these new insights could be fitted into the ancient rock-ribbed structure of our ancient history and traditions as well as an attempt to produce a balanced account of the complex concatenation of events, ideas that can constitute historical reality. And I can only hope that this book with all its imperfections will provide the reader with some insights into Nigeria's vis-à-vis URUAN/EFIK fascinating and incredibly complex past.

INTRODUCTION

RETURN TO THE ANCIENT WISDOM OF THE CULTURE AND TRADITIONS OF URUAN ANCESTRY

This story or rather this work on URUAN/EFIK HISTORY & PERSPECTIVES vis - a - vis the Origins and Evolution of Lagos, the Hausas, Yorubas, Igbos, Ibibios, etc. towards the evolution and development of a Nation State in Africa is to be seen as an attempt however belated to rewrite the history of non-literate societies and is by no means an easy task to undertake since whatever records of the history available were written either by foreigners whose interpreters themselves had limited knowledge of the places they were writing about and more so, of the foreign language the foreigners used or even by URUAN/EFIK nationals and others who had made copious use of the aforesaid materials of foreigners. Some of these foreigners were administrative officers who were overburdened with their duties of state. Some of them on the other hand were travelers who had spent only a few months or even a few days at the place about which they were writing. To-date there has been no record of any archaeological work being carried out about the whole history of Nigerian peoples, nay URUAN/EFIK and this is quite a serious lacuna. It has contributed to a very serious problem nevertheless, it is still possible to fix dates and figures concerning some of these recorded events and more so on account of the key and central figures who as traditional Rulers and heads of communities, whether as Chiefs or Kings as we have them now were the accredited custodians of the customs and traditions of their kingdoms. There is also the lack of complete chronology of these Rulers since it may not cover the whole of URUAN/EFIK history. What we have now to rely upon as available sources are mostly oral traditions which are more often than not tainted with a dose of sectional politics and bias especially among her modern writers and historians. Yet it is only Tradition dominated by the quest for TRUTH that can put us on the path in search for the TRUTH since no one can presume to successfully start from scratch.

Yes, a study of the past is necessary because according to the great ancient philosopher-king of China, Confucius, 'study the past if you would define the future', which incidentally is the main point and raison d'être of this work. Here our aim is to retell the story of URUAN past glory and try to indicate the way forward for the modern URUAN/EFIK and Nigerians. King Futzu Latinized into CONFUCIUS meaning REVEALED MASTER, was the founder of that great ancient religion of the East known as CONFUCIANISM, a religion which upheld that Salvation, the answer to man's needs was simply a return to the way of the ancients and in our case, a return to the culture and traditions of URUAN ancestry since the failures and problems of modern URUAN/EFIK elites, politicians and administrators have left her where they are now as a consequence of their ignoring the wisdom of the Founding Fathers whose ancient ways had hitherto put URUAN on the world map, but now has left URUAN ditto EFIK prostrate. This abandoning of her ancient ways has upset the progress, proper relationships between classes and sexes, even the harmony among the people of URUAN/EFIK, including neighbours and aliens in their midst. To meet this challenge then, this work is going to be devoted to the revolutionary restructuring and reappraisal of those traditions and values which will appeal to modern URUAN/EFIK sons and daughters with a sense of identity and cultural values, and we know already that they are those which emphasize her communal and corporate dimensions. Strong societies are built with collective spirit and character of their citizens; with those who are ready and willing to stand up and be counted and she cannot be the exception. But here in URUAN/EFIK today, building a national spirit and character is a very serious problem to say the least because of some peculiar ironies that have unfolded. Overwhelmed by our collective inequities and irresponsibilities, the foundation of our nationhood has been further weakened by the irrationalities and eccentricities of parvenous elements among us who now parade the land and have suddenly maintained a jumped-up mentality that makes it possible for social reprobates to place the nation under virtual siege because these are the very people, yes these our sons and daughters who rose to power and recognition through intrigues and traitorous conspiracies and have become villains of history on account of their radical and downward trajectories.

These are URUAN/EFIK people today, who try "to revolutionize revolutionary revolutions" whatever that means. But we can guess, it simply means those upstarts who by reason of their new questionable positions try tooth and nail to distort, stifle, malign and destroy what the true revolutionaries have tried to do by presenting their own anti-revolutionary prototypes. They distance themselves from and refuse to co-operate or join hands towards another revolution that is yielding fruit. This shows there is still mistrust or if you like, a misjudgment or misperception about URUAN/EFIK identity and the revolution about to take place. These they do by condemning, criticizing or completely stifling the revolution that has or is about to bring about total progressive change. Thus they try polluting the systems and the society, and furthermore, make things worse to back up the status quo. For example, what you are reading about URUAN/EFIK here is imply that there was an ancient kingdom known as URUAN whose antiquity no one can doubt. When interviewing people concerning the existence of certain towns and villages like Obio Akpa, Ifuho, Ikot Osurua. Ikot Ibritam, Ikpe Ikot Nkon, Abiakpo Ntak Inyang or Nkap, all in Annang country of Northern Akwa Ibom State, just to mention a few, they begin to have a nostalgia about their ancient because they do not belong here. Thus these inhabitants begin to complain that they have been discriminated against by their Annang neighbours and you ask them: why so? Their unmistakable response is: They say: we emigrated from INOKON! What then should be the next logical question to ask? Is it not: "What and where is INOKON? Is INOKO not the same ancient IBOM ie. URUAN kingdom of yore we are talking about here!

Or again, when citizens of modern EFIK kingdom ie. Calabar say: They emigrated from the Orient – from Palestine, why don't people ask; "where is and which Palestine are you talking about"? Is it the Palestine of the ancient Jews or of the Philistines or the modern kingdom of Israel? Why then talk about IBOM as your first place of settlement if not ancient URUAN where also the tribes of modern Ibibio also claim as their primary place of settlement from USAHAEDET? Or again when some modern Igbos and others say: We are inhabitants of Arochukwu, Ohafia, Ebariba a.k.a Abriba, Item, Afikpo; Unwana including even Itigidi, Ugep, etc. why not ask about where these places are located? Are all these not towns and villages within the same massive ancient territory of IBOM ie. URUAN, the primary country of settlement as depicted in the old maps of Cameroun and Nigeria above? Yes, these are only trajectories of events that have occurred only within the past five to seven centuries within our Christian era, precisely 1600-2000+AD in which we now find ourselves, whereas we are talking here about events thousands of years before Christ, precisely beyond 7000 BC!

REBUILDING THE NATIONAL SPIRIT, IDENTITY, LANGUAGE AND CO-OPERATION

When as a child, thousands of the same Ebariba/Abriba, Ohafia lived at Idu where I was born, but departed just less than 50 years ago which is precisely less than half a century on account of the hostilities of the civil war (1967-70). They were coming and going from their lgbo homeland to and from IDU, and these included young children who schooled at St. Patrick's Marina, Beach town IDU, now gazzetted Ifiayong Esuk or Ifiayong Beach. From where did they learn to speak URUAN/EFIK or Efik language for short, if not right from where they came – their own native country now in Abia State of Nigeria? One of my childhood recollections is that I never did any promotion examination in Idu RCM town School right from my Infant classes. Indeed, I did my Infant II examinations in 1944 at St. Patrick's School which was the second Primary School within IDU town where more than half the pupils even till 1967 were from Igbo country mostly Abriba, Afikpo, Ohafia, Item etc. I never heard them speak in Igbo while at school otherwise how could I or any IDU child and others relate with them? How do I remember all this? Yes, because every child then loved to eat bread with the sweet tinned fish either of the Tinapa or Ekpum?-ny? brands. The mantra at that time was " kedia uwem ke Tinapa or simply put: " Uwem ke Tinapa".

On that examination day during the break time, my mother promptly bought these for me from the adjacent ESUK MBEHE IDU market overlooking the river. I am sure this was perhaps to serve as an inducement/encouragement to enable me continue to excel in the examinations which without being boastful, I always came tops even up to the University level. No child I guess can forget such gestures and goody-goodies! But where did they learn the Efik language if not that they were brought up with it, the Igbo language being their second mother tongue nevertheless. But the Efik language for short was the lingua franca throughout ancient IBOM country, was it not? They and everyone else read and studied E.N. Amaku Edikot ? wed, in those days, so did I, didn't we? Go to Arochukwu or Ohafia or Abriba kingdoms today and verify from some elderly people there who were my school mates at the time. In 1945 my father carried me on his shoulders as I stretched my legs forwards to St. Dominic's Mbak Etoi, another border village with IDU barely three miles away for my Standard I examination. From 1946-1950 I did all my Examinations at our St. Joseph's Parish Central School Anua, near UYO which is just four miles away. That was the style of the Holy Ghost/St. Patrick's Irish Fathers to make sure children would not have any chance of either knowing or practising EXPO. Every school child enjoyed and looked forward to the end of year Promotion Examinations with all the goody-goodies appertaining, and most interestingly too, to enable us acquaint ourselves with our fellows from other localities and tribes. This even worked towards a greater advantage as I grew into adulthood. That genuine personal friendship and brotherhood that had evolved has stood the test of time not excluding inter-tribal marriages even with Igbos till today.

Another moot point from this is that it was impossible for any pupil of those days to even conjecture what the EXPO of today meant. The child to your left and right was from a different school and more besides from a class different from yours. Yes, because either the pupils would be placed in such a way that a child is from another school or where the examinations involved different classes of the same school, then they would be placed on the same desks but the pupils would be from different classes. If the examination involved various schools coming to the same venue to sit for the examinations, then each pupil from the different schools would be placed side by side one another: a pupil from School A sitting beside the pupil from school B, etc. XYZ. In such a situation it was impossible to know the pupil beside you: then you dare not ask him/her about anything. The result was that you could never contemplate of any type of examination mal-practice as happens today. The idea was: "learn/know no evil, see no evil and practice no evil". Most importantly, why do we find people in these parts of Igbo land and of the millennium still bearing the names Okon, Edet, Bassey, Eyo, Iquo, Nsa or Archibong, etc. if they are not remnants of the true descendants from IBOM ie. of ancient URUAN dynasty? Someone should be humble enough to even find time and interview such great sons of Abriba/Ohafia like Prof Anya O. Anya, Prof Kalu Uka or my bosom friend, Prof Emele Mba Uka, the Prelate and current Moderator of the Presbyterian Church of Nigeria P.C.N nationwide. Let them/him/her ask why they studied at our prestigious Hope Waddell Training Institute Calabar and from where they learnt the Efik language they were speaking while there? Was it before or was it during their studies there? Was His Excellency Dr. Francis Akanu Ibiam from Unwana not here too? And did he not speak in Efik like everybody else? Personally, in the course of writing this book, I have agonized and prayed asking God to cover me with the light of His face to see and know the Truth which can only be attained by the light of Divine Grace from on High. It cannot be by accident or by any human endowment or effort or even happenstance. But certain people think they know and can speak the Truth. No problem! But in doing so, they need tons of illogicalities and irrationalities to support their claims which can only be by standing the TRUTH on the head! That is the mystery as also the idiosyncrasies of humankind, which it behooves all of us for our own sanity to admit. It is not just about my writing this Book exactly. Sometimes I take a long look at myself and try to maintain my sanity while others may lose theirs.

METHODOLOGY: History has two parts: that which happens and that which is written. Now considering the spate of historical materials on Ibibio peoples of what used to be termed the MAINLAND in contradistinction to those of the riverine areas to wit, CROSS RIVER STATE, URUAN/EFIK including ORON, former BAKASI, IBENO etc. that have appeared in recent times, I am wont to encounter certain difficulties in the attempt to condense them into a single work because of the quantum of materials which were available to me. Having them in different volumes would probably have spelt out their uniqueness but the better management of specific Volumes has always proved unwieldy, awkward cumbersome, and tricky if not complicated and problematic especially trying to find out whether the issue at hand is in Volume One, or Three or Seven! It is difficult to carry all the Volumes along and this has been tried many times and by many people already.

This work is also aimed precisely at providing materials for those who wish to immerse themselves in historical research; nevertheless, it can be a diversion for those who just merely want something to read as well as for those who enjoy committing things to memory. This of course can be a profit for each and perhaps for all who may happen to come by this Book. For some of us who have undertaken the drudgery, the Book is really an abridgment which has become by no means an easy task but one of sweat and the midnight oil comparable to the exacting task of someone organizing a banquet, whose aim is to satisfy a bewildering variety of tastes. Nevertheless, for the sake of rendering a general service, I am happy to endure this drudgery, leaving the accuracy of details to the historians and concentrating my effort on tracing the outlines in this sort of condensed work. For just as the architect of a new house is responsible for the construction of the whole building, it is the men doing the ceramics and painting etc. who have to take into consideration but only the decorative requirements, so it is with me and this Book. To make this subject my own, to explore its bye-ways, to concentrate and be meticulous about details is the business of the original historian, which I am not and so the person making the adaptations must be allowed to aim at consciousness of expression and to forego any exhaustive treatment of his subject. At the time when the identity of URUAN ATAKPOR vis- a-vis the EFIK EBURUTU is either assailed, denied, confused, doubted and or distorted, despite the materials for meaningful research available to scholars and students of all disciplines and persuasions, I have adopted a certain Catholic methodology which in recent times seems to outclass the researches hitherto undertaken viz. the didactical research. What has been presented here is like a "mosaic" of whatever materials, oral or written, folklores, rhymes, doxologies including proverbs, idioms, satires and even sarcasms that have characterized URUAN/EFIK culture and mores, ancient and modern and even those of other climes. When all these have been gathered and re-arranged, synthesized and retold in a book like this, what comes forth is an authentic unmitigated and absolutely complete profile which is altogether unassailable and incontrovertible and which no true son or daughter of URUAN/EFIK can deny or contradict because it is beamed from the great light of the Divine and from the ancestors who left us with such unmistakable land-marks of the Founding Fathers of ancient URUAN years before the Christian era. I have also employed another Christian method of Apologetics, a methodology which word derives from the Greek Apologia = defense, ie. a defense of one's conduct or opinion as a method of proof by objective arguments particularly through external evidence in order to prepare and project the way for a judgment of credibility and authenticity. Because the choice of any method is necessarily dictated by and predicated on the goal a person has in view, in our case therefore, it is to show that URUAN is the progenitor of whatever now is EFIK and how this came about.

We also present here a twofold goal for our treatment of this book. The first and major objective is to let readers gain a deeper and more precise knowledge of the arguments which guarantee certitude in historical matters and a better understanding of the reasonableness of our claims. The second is to help readers in how to lead others to the truth which ultimately is the moral perfection of mankind. So it is not exactly like one groping for the truth but as one who already possesses it and is merely seeking a deeper and wider knowledge of the arguments on which that truth rests. We shall equally employ the historical method whereby we seek through the study of written or even oral traditions the concerns and values of the great URUAN peoples of yore as well as EFIK ancient and modern, as also African and cosmic values through especially their folklores mores and proverbs. This approach will offer us the opportunity of benefitting from the wisdom of the past and we can employ this to prepare the way for a truly African background. Another approach is through critical analysis - the analytical methodology - as it is called. By this, facts will be assembled and their values ascertained to enable us make value judgment on every phenomenon presented - not just as to how far it has happened but also as to why it happened. Finally, we shall also employ the empirical methodology whereby we investigate whether all these observable data do really explain our point of view. We start off from what can be observed from the data of the natural sciences - physics, biology mathematics, chemistry etc. - and rise up to things we can only imagine; and then mount up to things visible and invisible - the unconquerable realities and mysteries of life. Then we can now try to understand what URUAN/EFIK, nay mankind stands for and a multitude of other things besides and the relationship which should exist between man and man, the Creator and man himself. But all this stems from the unique assumption of the ability of the human intellect (reason) to arrive at the TRUTH whether in metaphysical, moral or historical orders. We then begin to appreciate URUAN/EFIK history and heritage which are known to contain some of the most eminent truths on these matters as we are going to see. As one reads through these pages, it will be discovered that I have consciously repeated certain points. This is my purposeful attempt at introducing my readers into the complexity and varieties of the issues discussed and more so on account of the new dimensions which have occurred with every passing day. So come on board. Unless these points are readily admitted, any discussion about these ancient peoples in Africa is a farce, even useless.

DIVISIONS AND CONTENTS: The book is divided into twelve chapters including some wise sayings - proverbs from other races and tribes in Nigeria and elsewhere garnered from those who were ready and willing to contribute as well as a Glossary and INDEX for easy references to materials which needed re-occurrence. Chapter one in this revised Edition deals with a brief Spotlight and history of Parishes in the Archdiocese of Calabar together with the culture and ethnographic history of ancient URUAN including the evolution of the great EFIK kingdoms and those in the Diaspora. Chapter two treats URUAN/EFIK Traditional and political structures with demographical and sub-tribal dimensions. Chapter three treats Cultic Organizations especially of the great Ekpe mystical cults including Idem Ek? ? kemba, Ekpo Ny?h?, Akata, etc. while chapter four takes on the whole issue of URUAN/EFIK Religion in all its ramifications including world religious practices and artifacts, even Christianity. Chapter five deals with URUAN/EFIK socio-cultural and moral Institutions together with a synthesis for crime detection and their penalties. Chapter six treats the whole structures on Marriage, both pre-Christian and modern with emphasis on crimes against the Marriage Institution, while chapter seven concentrates on Chieftaincy Institutions. Chapter eight gets back to Religion and particular churches as also denominations with specific reference to the Centenary of the Catholic Church in the land with a special Spotlight on the Dioceses of Uyo, Ikot Ekpene, Ogoja and the Archdiocese of Calabar in this revised Edition. Chapter nine treats the new re-organization of URUAN/EFIK in her clans and villages with reference to the rebuilding of the Nation. Chapter ten deals with URUAN/EFIK National Congress with IDU as paradigm. Chapter eleven treats the reader to the title of the book viz. the re-building of URUAN/EFIK vis-a-vis Nigeria as a progressive city state in Africa. Chapter twelve concludes the book and presents the proposed Constitution and Bye-laws as Paradigm for all for the Nigerian Nationalities. I have also taken time to supply my readers with some of our age-old proverbs and wise sayings to enable them avail themselves of the ancient language of our ancestors worldwide especially for their speeches and writings since they will also be beneficial even for those who preach the Gospel of love, tolerance, initiative and goodwill in our churches so as to add flavour to and vivify their expressions, homilies and talks. These are figurative expressions which constitute the spices that give taste to the language of the living as also to encourage intellectual exercise.

The generation which represented URUAN/EFIK ancient laws and traditions is fast disintegrating and this has sadly accounted for a generation adopting western ideas and fashion wholesale in almost every detail of life thereby putting the African pattern in jeopardy. Our new generation is deliberately casting off most of the traditional norms and customs too hastily, and that is the price of modernity, social change, progress and the impact of science and technology – the digital age in an age of radical cultural changes such as we find ourselves today. Yet the gnawing question of conserving whatever is good and noble in our native customs and traditions. The nagging weakness and problems of our time are due to the fact that it is the very native, the sons and daughters of Nigeria as also of URUAN/EFIK who are the chief cause and deciding factor in the conservation of whatever remains of what Nigeria should be and used to be even URUAN/EFIK. That is why a treatise of this nature is a task so overwhelmingly difficult and it is going to be inevitable to reach conclusions which not everybody will agree or be ready even to contemplate thinking about the solutions proffered therein. URUAN/EFIK citizens, even Nigerians and aliens should not bother to like my guts, but I have written this both as an Elder and Senior Citizen who is troubled by the deplorable situation of our Nation. Here I shall bring my Introduction to an end. If it has forebodings of a well composed piece and to the point, that will be just what I want. If it is worthless and mediocre, this is all I can manage for now. For just as it is injurious to drink any wine by itself or even water alone, no food, and no nothing; but it can only be wine mixed with water that is pleasant and beneficial and can produce a delightful sense of fulfillment and wellbeing. So the skill used in presenting the incidents in this Book is what can delight the understanding of those who will be willing to read the Book in the first place.

ETHNOGRAPHIC HISTORY & ORIGINS OF URUAN/EFIK PEOPLES URUAN & THE DISTORTIONS OF HISTORY IN MODERN HISTORICAL SETTING

There is a popular saying that "Owo kiet akasiak afa " is a popular saying/proverb anywhere, anytime and URUAN is no exception in its implications. Many years ago most towns and villages were surrounded by thick forests and access to them was through bush tracts which a jolly fellow could in trying to pass through use his sharp machete and by cutting right and left; then pronto, he has inadvertently opened a foot path and later a ROAD for generations unborn. After some years of use and some notable developments in the town it has become a mighty road across other villages and towns. Forty years ago nobody heard of Calabar-Ikom Road now leading to Northern Nigeria. Whoever heard of Calabar-Itu Road now leading to South Eastern Nigeria through Ikot Ekpene? Someone had a bright idea, and lo, these roads have come into being for Nigerians and generations to come. Come to think of it and even in those golden days of the Canaan city of Calabar and there thereafter into the not-to-be forgotten days of the Nigerian-Biafran war, and then we can remember there was a time there was a Lagos Street across Egerton, the street of Nite life along the beautiful Willy-Way rendezvous! Somebody must have opened it thereafter the name came to be. There was also the grand Bookshop – the New Era Bookshop – along Egerton at the Bassey Duke Round About off Garden by Ededem Street, yet nobody seems to remember that now. Then thereafter in the early 1970s some persons now tagged Akwa Ibomites, remembering their roots and ostensibly in trying to stamp their feet in Calabar city – yes in the suburbs of course, they also opened new streets and labeled them after their ethnic notations viz. Etoi Street. I can vividly remember this one and the schemer was no other than Dr. Sebastian O. Eyo of Mbak Etoi then a recent returnee from the UK after bagging the proverbial Golden Fleece. He was also the first to build his house there; there after came Itam Street, Ibesikpo Street etc. Concerning this last mentioned whose dwellers were aborigines of Ibesikpo Clan, mostly Catholics, they decided to build a Church on the street which they named it after St. Michael the conqueror of Lucifer because this was a very notorious slum area at the tail end of EDIBE EDIBE terminating at a timber market. That miniature Church has now grown into a Parish named after St. Vincent de Paul today on account of the patronage of Ntisong Vincent Uwemedimo. We can go on and on, but the fact of the matter is that there also was once a people known as URUAN many thousand years ago, and in retrospect there must have been a time they were not which fact by implication summons us to believe that some location in the world perhaps bore that name tag. So when we also talk of Nigeria, the centenary of which we have recently celebrated, somebody as it were manufactured that name, but there was a time it was not.

According to Prof. K. O. Dike, it is not that Africans, nay URUAN and other nations do not have a history, but that "there is profound ignorance concerning it, and there is also an almost pathological unwillingness to believe of it when presented" because they want to continue to live in their safety zones loathing to hear new things lest their illusions be destroyed. But history always has a way of correcting whatever misconceptions and fast-paced tempo of change for people to see. The only problem is that some of these people won't see or can't see it when it is presented because they always cling to their comforting illusions even as reality is breathing down their necks. But no demon can stop the truth when its time is due because in a time of universal deceit like ours today, telling the truth seems a revolutionary act. I certainly believe we have enormous resources from our forebears to reconstruct whatever researches have been done into the distant past of URUAN history and traditions. Even when we look at what the so-called foreign political cum colonial administrators, anthropologists, biographers, historian and missionaries etc. recorded as the history and culture of URUAN, nay other African culture and ethnographic histories. But one cannot fail to admit that these people despite their prejudices and idiosyncrasies tried to present the truth because they had no axe to grind with anybody, and certainly they had no political points to score one way or the other. Surely as Africans, we just have to get something to start with and there are no other than most of what these foreigners had to say and we can be sure they tried to say them as they saw even if through the prism of their prejudices and preferred hegemonic tendencies.

Because of the interest generated by the situation brought about by the new ideas and fabrications of indigenous ethnographic and culture history writers of late there are many disturbing issues regarding these views and all the more exacerbated by these exaggerated facts of history ostensibly to claim relevance and accolades as movers and shakers of history. But we know that most new ideas can build either in a definite positive or negative way, and most often than not, negative. In fact, as often does, it can wreck and ruin everything even the foundations of the past and present if people act and behave in the way they are doing. Whereas the new ideas should bring changes as things just have got to change in URUAN/EFIK with the ideas we are proffering here, but we should know that all these ideas and changes will of necessity come with a heavy price because it is in the nature of new ideas and changes to cause a lot of discomfort, especially to the few who have benefitted from their tale-tell of the past because they just want things their ideas to remain in their primordial past and still more so because of selfishness, greed, incompetence, sabotage, corruption and decay of the past so that URUAN/EFIK will continue to stagnate.

Small wonder then that people always want to continue in the old world of education that has become irrelevant inconsequential and obsolete. It simply an expired old school even though the game is the same, but the rules have expired and must be changed. In the world of progress and success such as is envisaged here for URUAN/EFIK, the rules of the game have to change to meet the ensuing standards and ways of doing things. If our people want to remain here they are and refuse to be informed, hey will certainly become deformed. If our URUAN/EFIK people do not want to be updated, ipso facto they will continue to remain outdated as never before. If they do not want to be inspired especially by what is presented in this book, they are heading to expiration, they will expire. If they do not want to know what they should know and be about getting started to business they will most certainly be out of circulation for not wanting to flow with the progressives and those who want to succeed in life and keep our dream alive. As millennials we should not be happy with the present situation and order of things, we must resolve to change and begin to work out our mindset and institutional problems forthwith. This is a generation of solutions and we must be steadfast, willing and ready to solve all our problems ancient and modern.

Recent write-ups and the distortions by certain neo-nationalist revisit writers on their cultural history and heritage whether of the URUAN/ EFIK, Annang, Ibibio or whatever seem to run counter to those solemn precautionary injunctions and exhortations of the legendary Pope Paul VI in his address to the assembled Bishops of Africa in Kampala, 1969, precisely when among other things he had lampooned and pooh-poohed certain writings on African Insights and Traditions which could bring about terrible danger and acrimonies among the people for whom the issues were targeted. First of all, there is the worry about historical pluralism which can issue forth in local folklores or exclusive racism, or arbitrary separatism or even egoistic tribalism just to score some points of relevance and whip up rancor and disaffection among brother tribes and races. For what exactly are these people trying to rake up if not by so doing, they end up extolling their noble emanations from incoherent and unauthenticated exaggerations of their origins from incredible progenitors from the Orient and even the Zodiac by re-writing the history of their progenitors and confusing the citizens. Like all other exaggerations and conjectures, this level of historical revisionism blended with self-indulgent and negative triumphalism, documentations and lies have an expiry date, so also every evil. The reason is not far to seek because this sort of revisionist history is a text book example of the incredible capacity of URUAN-EFIK neo- historians to delude themselves as a result of historical amnesia and false hope of gaining currency whereas they are simply empty barrels and moral chameleons who would write anything to gain relevance ditto, our political class. So it is not possible to confuse the masses ditto URUAN/EFIK forever. That is why first of all as Africans, nay Nigerians South South of the Niger, we just have to learn to accept the universality of mankind and human brotherhood of nations, and in particular we of the macro semi-Bantoid stock as recorded through the ages. When at this symbolic and momentous evolution of our peoples from the shackles of ignorance, falsehood, and shame, we simply have to wrestle ourselves from this destructive and despicable arrogance of triumphalism and mistrust and try to redirect the course of our history and heritage towards the solid models of trust, collaborative and resolute emphasis for the enrichment of our traditional culture and nation building from which values of togetherness, joint effort and evident growth and development can emerge.

As brothers and sisters of the same indivisible Nigritic stock, we must constantly and patiently exercise a leadership in the message of unity and love and so contribute our best towards the emancipation and transformation of our kingdoms and environment. We can do this by allowing the dynamism of our forebears permeate the core and permanent values of URUAN/EFIK ancient past, salvage the scrutinized parameters of global consciousness and ensure that the continuity between the past and present flow and not caught up in a limbo of imitative and innovative present. In trying to revivify the glories of URUAN/EFIK past, we should endeavour to abolish apartheid and provincialism in our manners and ways even in our body language. But this is never meant as a campaign that people are to lose their cultural and national identity in a globalized shapeless and totalitarian pudding of pan-URUAN or EFIK but rather to ensure that this advocacy will lead the citizens, men, women and children of these ancient great kingdoms to a culture of playing their part in building a strong, united, prosperous and richly diversified new Jerusalem for themselves, for Nigeria and for Africa at large. So be it!

SOURCES & BACKGROUND TOWARDS THE RE-CONSTRUCTION OF URUAN HISTORY

We shall now attempt to reconstruct a connected culture History of URUAN of semi-Bantu peoples in spite of the obvious fact that a good part of this is as observed already like going to be highly tenuous. In fact, we shall not even belabour the point. The URUAN/EFIK of ancient Calabar speaking peoples have various traditions with regard to the history of their origins; some quite elaborate though nevertheless contradictory, still there is a certain general history dealing with their evolution and migrations. In sum, their history of origin is that they most probably descended from the Nigeria Plateau to the adjacent coast after acquiring the Malaysian food plants; but this would indicate only the diffusion of the Malaysian complex to the South without telling us how, when and whether the actual aborigines migrated from elsewhere as we are going to see. The arrival of this Malaysian complex by overland transmission from the East most probably occurred around the last few thousand years BC quite a number of years before the Christian era. This overland transmission gives us a firm induction that the Malaysian complex of West Africa particularly Bananas, Breadfruit, Coconut Palm, Coco-Yams (Toro) and Yams came from South East Asia. The plants could not have arrived by sea because there is no shred of evidence that these early trading explorers including even the Arabs had sailed further south than the Mozambique or had anticipated the celebrated Vasco da Gama who in the 14th century AD had rounding the Cape of Good Hope in any direction whatever. Therefore, this diffusion of Malaysian crops to the Guinea Coast must have arrived by land, viz. through the Arabian country. Now since this played an extreme role in the economic and cultural development of the Uruan people, constituting as they did, the staple crops of the West African Coast before the coming of the Early Europeans, the traditional background and culture of URUAN as a sub-family of Bantu/Sudan-Nigritic Peoples can now be easily accounted for.

First of all, the traditions of migrations have their basis in the Central Sudanic speaking Peoples who occupy a position at almost the exact geographical centre of the African Continent. These have played not a little significant role as mediators in the transmission of the Malaysian cultigens, and in other diffusion processes across the East African frontiers up to the Nile, even as far back as the 8th millennia

B.C. It was they again who mediated the westward diffusion of pastoral activities through the Sahara fringes up to and across Lake Chad. But since recorded history cannot carry us very far in explaining or reconciling the above facts, we have therefore to resort to conjectures and inferences which are nonetheless reasonable and consistent with historical and scientific analysis. This is a scientific work not fiction - a work based on facts that you and I can verify and objectively subject to scrutiny and investigation. Instead of discussing theories let us list a number of facts which seem indisputable, incontrovertible and tenable as far as the facts can carry us, and then reconstruct a historical synthesis which at the same time will be seen to carry not only the highest degree of probability but also of veracity and acceptance.

AGRICULTURAL AND CULTURAL IMPACT OF INDONESIA

Now as various lines of evidence seem to indicate, this exceptional intensive agriculture as practiced by the tribes of the cluster must have arisen as a result of the introduction of the Malaysian plants through the East African Groups from whose stock they derive. (Murdock, G.P, 208). For about the 8th millennia B.C. Sudanic agriculture diffusing eastwards reached the Ethiopian highlands and similarly expanded south-west into the Bushmanoid territories as far as Uganda. Then about a few centuries before the advent of the Christian era, the Malaysian crops hitherto acquired by the Peoples of the East African Coast passed westward through Uganda into Central Sudan. Even the traditional and genealogies of the Central Sudanic Peoples lead us to get the impression that practically all the inhabitants of the interior whether to the East or West, owe their origin to the movements and emigrations of the Indian traders and therefore are a result of cultural parallelism. Specific features of Arabic, Negroid and Malayo-Polynesian stock clearly reflect this assumption. (Grandidier, 192). Archaeological evidence has shown beyond question that most of East Africa from the Cape to Zambezi (Zambia) and the whole of the Congo basin and beyond were occupied entirely by hunting and gathering peoples viz. Bushmanoids, Pygmoids, and Negroids until the time of the Polynesian diffusion as mentioned above which also includes the Cameroun fringe as we are going to see.

CULTURAL IMPACT & EXPANSION OF THE BANTU PEOPLES

This brings us to yet a second affirmation of our stand on the evolution of the Bantoid Nigritic Peoples. It is simply not an overstatement to maintain that the introduction of the Malaysian complex led to the acculturation and migration of the Sudan - Nigritic Peoples. This is established from the fact that the cultivated crops of the complex hybrids could not have originated anywhere in Africa for societies without agriculture cannot transmit cultivated plants. (Murdock. 221-222*). We are therefore led to look for an unbroken corridor of agricultural peoples living around the 8th or 7th millennia B.C or even of the first century Christian era across this Bushmanoid and Pygmoid territory up to the Guinea Coast, a territory such that its geographical conditions throughout its entire length and breadth are favourable and adaptable to the cultivation of these Malaysian complex, viz. Yam, Cocoyam, etc. In other words, on account of the prominence of the Yam in this region, we want to establish a territory which can briefly be called a "YAM BELT", the diffusion of which will infallibly lead us to establish the possible penetration of a cluster of tropical tribes who occupy this Equatorial Forest Region today. In establishing this, we shall be left to a reasonable explanation of the facts which will avoid the gnawing and unsatisfactory assumption of historical accidents. This corridor will be seen to be no other than that which falls within the zone of tropical rain forest, a fact of very great significance, especially in the understanding of the cultures of this region and in the reconstruction of their history as we are going to see. For the tribes of these linguistic stocks, we have in all probability to admit that they occupied their present territory since the development of agriculture in the Western Sudan, a subsisting one at that even up till now, through "Shifting Hoe Cultivation" which was the vogue primarily in consequence of the introduction of the Malaysian complex. The incidence and diffusion of agriculture among the Eastern Nigritic Peoples illuminates this culture history with exceptional clarity. First of all, we cannot escape inferring that it was the adoption of the Malaysian crops that enabled the Sudanic Eastern Nigritic Peoples to penetrate the Rain Forest Region which was originally inhabited by the Pygmy hunters and gatherers to cultivate their acquired crops since a few Pygmy remnants still survive among the Nigerian Plateau and Cameroon Highlands today. Therefore, occupation of the region by the Eastern Nigritic Peoples must have occurred only within the last 3000 years. (Murdock, G.P., 231) Secondly, linguistic and distributional evidence render us another inescapable inference as to the historical role of the Plateau Nigerians and the Cameroon Highlanders in this diffusion process, since the largest portion of the region comprises members of the Bantoid sub-family of the Nigritic stock who speak semi-Bantu languages. Thirdly, this diffusion once begun suggests that a rather explosive expansion eastwards must have taken place at the expense of the Central Sudanic and Pygmoid Peoples who as has already been shown, occupied this fringe and who having therefore been displaced to the left and to the right must have descended from the Adamawa territory in the North to the Mande of Guinea in the West, and to the Congo even far beyond Rhodesia now Zimbabwe, to the South East. This fringe therefore embraces a good proportion of the Central Sudanic and the whole of the Eastern Nigritic semi-Bantu territory to the East and West of Africa as illustrated in the Chart below. There are therefore six main Culture Provinces of this YAM BELT.

CULTURE PROVINCES OF THE YAMBELT IN AFRICA

S/N	LINGUISTIC&CULTURAL PROVINCES	PRESENT COUNTRY OF ORIGIN
1	THE KRU AND MANDE	SENEGAMBIA, GUINEA, SIERRA LEONE, LIBERIA.
2	THE TWI	IVORY COAST, GHANA, TOGO, S. DAHOMEY (BENIN).
3	THE SEMI- BANTU URUAN/EFIK, IBIBIO & IGBO	SOUTH SOUTH / S EAST REGIONS OF NIGERIA.
4	THE CAMEROON HIGHLANDS	WESTERN CAMEROUN.
5	THE EASTERN NIGRITIC PEOPLES	WESTERN & NORTHERN NIGERIA, CHAD, S. SUDAN, CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC
6	THE CENTRAL SUDANIC PEOPLES	CENTRAL ZAIRE, C. SUDAN, UGANDA, KENYA, ETHIOPIA.

The Cameroon Highlands which connect the Eastern Nigritic and South East/South South Regions of Nigeria doubtless acquired this Sudanic agriculture at an early period, and later may well have mediated the Malayan crops from the East African countries to the inhabitants of Coastal Southern Nigeria including URUAN. This diffusion could also have taken place overland through the adjacent Plateau Nigerians. Whatever the case, this really completed the trans-continental diffusion of the crops from the Indian Ocean to the Atlantic Coast which clearly proves the direction of the migrations. These migrations set the scene of what follows blow. Equatorial Rain Forest as some would have us believe. On the other hand, the Malaysian complex which we have been talking about, which also might have originated in similar environmental conditions in the South East of Asia turned out to be ideally suited to the Pygmoid/Bantoid habitats, such that once these URUAN Bantoid ancestors had adopted them; then, their expansion to the South and East became inevitable. We have drawn this conclusion from a solid induction based on the lists of food plants reported in ethnographic sources, for once a people have acquired a better way of life and economy, it would seem impossible to conceive that they should revert to a primitive hunting and gathering economy once again - a fact which throughout human history has been invariably attested to as unattained.

HISTORY AND ORIGINS OF THE BANTU PEOPLES

With the corridor of ancient agricultural peoples running across the Bushmanoid and Pygmoid territory explored, the landmarks of attested facts stand out in sufficient clarity to enable us construct the history of events with only a minimum of inference. It now becomes our first task to locate the place and origin of the Bantu Peoples to date, trace and account for their explosive and phenomenal expansion, the impact of which catapulted both the economies and populations of the rest of the African Nations south of the Sahara. Our main source of reference is now Linguistics, for this clearly indicates the region from where they came. In his classic book, Greenberg has demonstrated very clearly that Bantu languages constitute only a sub-family of the Nigritic stock. Macro-Bantu sub-division of Bantoid sub-family of the Nigritic stock is strictly coordinate with the Bantu as a whole who are confined to only a small area near the Cameroon/ Nigerian Border as we have seen. (Greenberg E., 55) On these grounds it is impossible for URUAN to have migrated from anywhere else. Therefore, the last original homeland from where URUAN must have migrated lay immediately adjacent to the Macro-Bantoid territory in the Cameroon Highlands where these plants were adaptable to their geographical conditions and not the Equatorial Rain Forest. Since the "YAM BELT" was occupied by full-fledged agricultural peoples capable of adopting new crops with ease, the Bantu whose homeland is next to the East African Nigritic Peoples e.g. the Ugandans, could then have continued their expansion and mediation into all the adjacent geographical environments. One obvious route into the tropical forest is that running south along the Atlantic Coast and this seems to be the one which they followed into the Cameroun region we are at present considering. Hence if we allow about a thousand years of linguistic differentiation in the original Bantu region before this dispersion, or even from the attested historical evidence of the coming of the East Asian Traders to the shores of East Africa, we cannot be far wrong if we fix the eighth or seventh millennia BC we have already surmised, as the estimated date of the evolution and expansion of the Bantu Peoples, vis-a vis of the Semi-Bantoids of the URUAN/EFIK speaking Peoples and their occupation of their present geographical position in West Africa and South Southern Nigeria.

F. RE-ONSTRUCTION OF URUAN/EFIK HISTORY FROM THE CAMEROUN REPUBLIC URUAN ATAKPOR ORIGINS & EVOLUTION

WHO ARE THE URUAN PEOPLES?

On all accounts we cannot answer this and what URUAN and her peoples signify with a straight foreword answer since we cannot escape the incontrovertible conclusion from the above survey that the now URUAN/EFIK peoples of South Southern Nigeria have always traced their origins and migrations to the sub/semi-Bantu tribe of the Cameroun Republic of Central Africa to wit, URUAN - AKPE/EKPE, meaning the country of Ekpe peoples which invariably terminates in ISANGELI in Cameroun but corrupted by URUAN/EFIK to USAHA-EDET- IBIBIO, Usahaedet. This is a town in Rio del Rey popularly tagged IDOMBI by the same URUAN/EFIK but in Cameroun dialect it is called BAROMBI, that is centuries before CAMEROUN came into being just like Nigeria, both of which never existed in the first place before this time. Concerning this moot point, there is a history about the origin and evolution of the now REPUBLIC OF CAMEROUN. History has it that it was founded during the time of the great explorations by Portuguese and Spanish explorers in the 15th Century. Precisely it was said to have been founded by a Scottish chieftain by the name "ANGUS CAMERON" who later came up with the name tag of "CAMEROUN", thus naming this territory after himself. (Cf. The Origin and Evolution of the BENUE-PLATEAU PEOPLES above.) But URUAN EKPE originally was a fishing village and port which was founded by ancient URUAN during the period of the historic great migrations and dispersion of peoples world-wide as attested to by great world archaeologists of antiquity and corroborated by various ethnologists, historians and anthropologists, ancient and modern. USAHA-EDET or EDIK AFAHA meaning Afaha creek came to be so named much later and became inhabited by those who later became the IBIBIO, Oron, etc., because it had at this time become the melting pot of all the ethnic nationalities now inhabiting AKWA IBOM STATE.

In fact, URUAN even claimed that AFAHA was originally one of its original tribes but then spread to all the LGAs into which they were scattered on migrating from USAHA- EDET. There is no known LGA or clan in either Efik speaking Cross River or in present day Akwa Ibom State in which Afaha groups of villages cannot be found. They are found in Odukpani, Akpabuyo, Creek Town, URUAN, Etinan, Abak, Uyo/Oku, Oruk Anam, Essien Udim LGAs to mention but a few. We can now see why the early European historians and explorers who came to these parts jumbled them together under the linguistic title of IBIBIO ie. later on when a name tag had evolved for all these peoples under that general name of IBIBIO which never existed as we are going to see. URUAN are the semi-Bantoids and also perhaps the earliest peoples to occupy their present location in Nigeria. But URUAN AKPE has always been their terminus and ancestral land of settlement and cradle of abode having migrated from the East Central African Coast through the Congo into the Cameroun borders. This analysis comes from the documents I gathered which dates back to the 1960s when I was the General Manager of RCM Schools and later Education Secretary. I had established the St. Peter's RCM School there in ABANA kingdom which was originally in St Mark's Parish but now BAKASI in the Cameroun Republic. St Mark's Oron was hitherto the Central Parish and Headquarters of the entire ORON KINGDOM – AKPAKIP ARO which has recently been created into six LGAs viz.: ORON, OKOBO, URUE OFFONG/ORUKO (EYUBIA), UDUNG UKO, ENWANG and MBO whereas all these which constituted ORON of course were in old EKET DIVISION with the Paramount Ruler of Northern URUAN clans, His Highness, Etinnyin Bassey E. Akpan, of Mbiaya Uruan at the time (1960s) as the RESIDENT or DISTRICT OFFICER as the colonial Administrator was called then. Rev. Fr. Vincent Hannigan of the St. Patrick's Congregation, SPS, was the Parish Priest and Manager of Oron RCM Schools at the time and later Very Rev. Fr. Okon Francis Mbaba, the first African priest of the AKBC fame.

Tracing this bit of ancestral cradle land from the Cameroun borders was very fascinating because it was then very clear to me that URUAN ancestors must indeed have migrated from the present Cameroun Republic from the very context where the ABANA KINGDOM (BAKASSI) is situated. It was easy to see the connection why URUAN/EFIK could trace her origins and connections back to the region of their emigration which they had founded as also the ABANA KINGDOM, the nearest to their birth place in USAHAEDET which is at the border of the Cameroun Republic. In fact, in March 1968 during the civil war (Nigeria-Biafra war 1967 -1970), the gendarmes from Yaoundé in the Cameroun Republic with bravado of the war situation came to ABANA and in a commando fashion brought down the Nigerian Green - White-Green flag. They then proceeded to hoist their Red-Green-Yellow Cameroun flag and carried the 8 Catholic teachers away and took over the school. The existence of URUAN AKPE, ie. URUAN COUNTRY, this land of primary origin was first related to me by no other personality than Etinnyin (Engr) Bassey Effiong Bassey a native of OBIO OKO - Creek Town, an EFIK great grandchild of URUAN stock. Engr Bassey popularly known and addressed as BEBS, was then Commissioner for Education and later, Commerce & Industries, in the Old Cross River State of the then Governor Clement Isong Government. His great grandparents are descendants from Use Uruan in Northern Uruan. He is also the son in-law of the late Nsomm HRH Edidem Atakpor James Udo-Afia (1902-1988).

CREEK TOWN is usually called both by URUAN and EFIK as IBOKU ESIT EDIK which is now in ODUKPANI LGA in the present Cross River State of Nigeria. Most of the groups and other tribes in what is now IBOKU CLAN in URUAN were those who migrated from AKWA AKPA URUAN to the present Creek Town before further migrating to Calabar, the present EFIK territory as we are going to see. He had visited this land of URUAN ancestry earlier before, in connection with the writing of his book on EKPE EFIK (Bassey, B.E, 21). But in conjunction with this, everybody knows and accepts that URUAN peoples in present day Nigeria are the owners and custodians of EKPE INSTITUTION. URUAN peoples have many cultural and historical aspects regarding their migrations eg. ADADIA/ISSIET and IBENO URUAN peoples, all of EKONDO CLAN, are the custodians of EKPE NKANDA URUAN. This clan was among the last group of the Original 12 tribes in URUAN to migrate to OKOYONG in now CRS and from there departed in 1703 to URUAN SOUTH where they are now located while bringing EKPE NKANDA along with them. Similarly, another cultural History of URUAN and this is the testimony both from oral and written traditions, is that what we now know as ORON nation, AKPAKIP ARO, are the custodians of EKPE OBON URUAN and were the very last to have left USAHAEDET. For having stayed there for far too long, their original URUAN language became so diffused and if we allow that length of time and inter-cultural linguistic transformation, URUAN language which they were originally speaking naturally changed into what is now their present ORON tongue, before their emigration by sea to their present location on the lower Cross River basin of Akwa Ibom State. Today for example, it has so much become evident to everybody that over time, the IBIBIO language has so much permeated the length and breadth of the entire URUAN, ORON and EFIK kingdoms that due to inter-cultural interaction, association, trade etc. some, especially of the present generation after the civil war can no longer correctly speak or write their original tongue again. Everybody is speaking the Ibibio dialect as if their lives depended on it. So we can now begin to understand why things seem to be happening so fast and why some may be wondering what is happening to their heritage; so we are not making up stories. This is a scientific study using the redaction methodology of presenting cultural history as otherwise we would never have been able to know who were our forebears and what language they must have spoken. If all this is happening just within living memory; what more talking about thousands of years ago! People in those days of yore were able to retain their culture, language and heritage through oral traditions, also because inter-tribal movements and contacts were so limited and even curtailed. Yet people are talking now as if they knew what the situation even fifty years ago ever was.

Yes, Oron tribe, as their cultural History of migrations has testified never joined the other 11 tribes of URUAN through the CROSS RIVER to IBOM. They came through the Cross River but not knowing which way the others took, missed their way and instead of going northwards, they most probably continued southwards down the lower Cross River estuary to their present location (Cf. Uya, E.O.32). Still rescinding from this EKPE account, we can also conclude according to some URUAN elites and historians that EKPE URUAN took its origin from the Mithraism of the ancient Religions of Egypt. From Egypt they tried to trace how some of those who were expelled by Pharaoh Turankhamen who restored polytheism and the worship of Amenism, through whose cult the practice of worshiping the ancient Egyptian gods flourished had ruthlessly executed most of these followers of the monotheistic practice of Pharaoh Akhenaton II. It was these of Akhenaton's followers who had escaped from the persecutions including the Jews that founded Palestine. Small wonder why many of such historians including the Efik traced URUAN/EFIK origins to Palestine thus claiming that the Canaan Calabar was founded by those remnants who further migrated from the ancient Canaan of their Hebrew ancestors and having passed through many tribulations and wanderings finally arrived at and founded their present location in the Cross River and Akwa Ibom States respectively. This also according to them seems to conclusively prove why they are neighbours and border kingdoms of the same progenitors of the peoples of Palestine. But this conclusion falls flat on its face and is drawn from a false premise thus standing the truth on the head. Rather it should be the other way round.

It was the Africans and by implication URUAN who mediated the symbols and sign of NSIBIDI into Egypt according to the account of Paul Amaury Talbot (10) who has shown that the EKOI NSIBIDI writings exhibit traces of the early Egyptian hieroglyphs and even some of their buildings resemble the circular super-structures similar to the savannah types, ditto of URUAN. According to D.M McFarland, URUAN probably had circular buildings in distant past and so being of the Bantoid stock they are a mixture of Hamitic (Hebrew) and Negroid blood and that may well explain why some earlier anthropologists described them as emigrants from the Nile valley in Egypt. Then URUAN/ EFIK nationalists especially those of modern EFIK and URUAN kingdoms viz. Etubom E.U. Aye, Dr. E. O Akak, Chief (Mrs) Ekei Oku, Dr. E. A. Udoh, Prof Dominus Essien, DSP Asuquo Etuk etc. also insist that the progenitors were immigrants from the Orient and by implication Palestine. But some historians specifically point to this Orient as NUBIA in Egypt, the ancestral land of the Falashas or black Jews. I have also invariably accepted all this, but my contention is: where do we go from here? For sure, this should be the point of departure to land us at the now Cameroun Republic from where both URUAN nomenclature and final emigration into Nigeria began to unfold. The lion which is the totem of Ekpe abounds in these Equatorial highlands and savanna/forests which go to explain why EKPE Fraternities flourished in these parts. More of this will be elaborated upon as we are going to see when we take up EKPE URUAN CULT in the preceding chapters.

There are also other historical origins of URUAN including IBIBIO origins by many URUAN historians, pastors, administrators and poets especially the latest by Dr. Edet A. Udoh (37) of the University of Ahmadu Bello (ABU): WHO ARE THE IBIBIOS and Prof. Dominus Essien (23) of the University of Cross River State (UNICROSS) now University of Uyo: URUAN PEOPLE IN NIGERIAN HISTORY. But these should not occupy our precious time and space as they are deemed so spurious and bordering on legends and mythology as we have shown already. Yet this notwithstanding, our research has shown that USAHAEDET was the first port of call and rendezvous into which many Bantoid peoples flocked and due to frequent internecine raids coupled with mass occupation of the territory by other groups making the available land too small for such a large concourse of people, URUAN in particular as natural seafarers and not being used to wars and squabbles, had to migrate from the region in search of larger portions of river port and arable land after having settled there for centuries. Our account reveals that they sailed up the CROSS RIVER till they saw before them a large agricultural land mass which they named IBOM, and given the fact that the CROSS RIVER takes its rise from the Cameroon Highlands/mountains, and flows northwards to IBOM and southwards for about half its 250 - mile course before entering the Atlantic Ocean in Nigeria. (Daniel, W. F., 21) This testimony by Daniel goes to show convincingly and unmistakably confirm our earlier conclusion that the Cameroon border town ie. URUAN EKPE/AKPE near USAHAEDET was the original homeland of URUAN. The territory covers the land mass and coast hitherto referred to by URUAN ancestors as IDOMBI ie. BAROMBI in modern Cameroun Republic. Similarly, another pioneer expatriate, a Lutheran Missionary has also opined that URUAN ancestors might have migrated from the Cameroun (Nau, Henry, 92). Kenneth O. Dike reviewing the peopling of the Niger Delta with URUAN as part and parcel thereof in his Trade and Politics in the Niger Delta, has also observed that the IBIBIO, URUAN/EFIK, IJAW, EDO, etc. were migrants from the Cameroun Highlands and that here might have been their area of evolution (Dike, K.O. 20). But recent researches notably by Talbot and Mulhall have established strong similarities between URUAN, THE IBIBIO, THE ANNANG, etc. and the BAKOKO peoples of Southern Cameroun indicating they had all lived there together. (P. Amaury Talbot & H. Mulhall, 120) Again Barry Floyd (95) has expressed the same view that "it is most probable that they (URUAN and IBIBIO) migrated to their present area from the Cameroun Uplands to the East and, from the Cross River estuary moved up the River as well as westward (inland, and along the coastal swamps) until checked by other tribes".

In fact, many of such traditions of URUAN ancestry has USAHAEDET as their first port of call in their emigrations and these have been corroborated both by oral and written testimonies to the effect that the core of SOUTH SOUTHERN NIGERIAN peoples including THE IBIBIO, URUAN/EFIK, ORON, IBUNO, EKET, ANNANG all have the USAHAEDET linkage and OR IBOM in modern AROCHUKWU of ABIA STATE of Nigeria. (M. E. Noah, 6) Incidentally on this, Dr. J.U Ekong was one of those including Bassey U. Attah, father of Governor Victor Attah and four others who were given Scholarship for further studies abroad by the IBIBIO UNION in the early 1940s. Another point to be noted here concerns the antiquity of URUAN as also the IBIBIO to the effect that many historians on Africa notably G.P. Murdock have opined that URUAN and IBIBIO had settled for centuries in their present location ie. on the estuary of the Cross River and parts of the MAINLAND. Thus URUAN as also IBIBIO antiquity in the area dates back to a few millennia BC. (Murdock GP, 53) Also J.M.D. Jeffrey's (7) in his Ibibio Thesis concluded that the peoples of the stone axe may have been the immediate ancestors of URUAN and IBIBIO peoples. Even Talbot has also postulated that by the year 7000 BC some ethnic groups of IBIBIO and by implication URUAN also, had settled in the area because "with her equatorial forests abounding in wild fruits, her waters teeming with fish and salt which could be obtained from the mangrove and salt water" in abundant and sufficient quantities were capable of supporting from very early times, such large populations for a very long time (Talbot, Amaury P. 12-13).

THE IBOM AROCHUKWU CONNECTION vis-a-vis THE IBIBIO OF AKWA IBOM STATE URUAN SETTLEMENT IN IBOM (NIGERIA) NOW AROCHUKWU IN ABIA STATE

THE ORIGIN OF IBOM, ITS FOUNDATION & EVOLUTION

Having established beyond reasonable doubt the ancestral homeland of URUAN from URUAN AKPE and their movement to USAHAEDET a.k.a EDIK AFAHA = afaha creek, where they had settled for a long time let us now trace as chronologically as space will permit, their further emigration to IBOM and afterwards to where they are now located on the borders between Odukpani in Cross River State and Ibibio mainland of Akwa Ibom State of Nigeria. URUAN historians as also other historians who have documented the migrations of the other tribes which had moved from USAHAEDET have written that while seeking for a more expansive and comfortable settlement beyond the Cameroun Republic they sailed up the CROSS RIVER to IBOM where there was a large agricultural land mass, given the fact that the CROSS RIVER takes its rise from the Cameroon Highlands/ mountains, and flows for about half its 250 - mile course before entering the Atlantic Ocean in Nigeria (Daniel, W. F. 211). IBOM was the expansive arable land that these ancient URUAN/EFIK sea farers discovered after leaving USAHAEDET. It was the new name which they gave to this extensive arable territory beyond compare. They were delighted; they were excited and ecstatic. They were so much overjoyed and overawed at this great land of promise. They were so captivated by its size and expanse so much so that they named every large or great and powerful thing whether in the heavens above or on the earth below after it. Thus the Almighty God and Creator of Heaven and Earth they named and called Him AKWA ABASI IBOM. They also named the great seas and oceans, INYANG IBOM. They similarly named all tall, robust, dynamic, versatile and powerful young men, IFA IBOM or (IFABOM, for short) etc. Ancient IBOM country of URUAN/EFIK at the time extended to and included the whole of are now parts of EBONYI and ABIA STATES viz. Afikpo, Edda, Uzuakoli, Bende, Ohafia, Abriba and Arochukwu as also parts of Cross River State including the entire Abi and Yakurr (Cf. 2nd Map of IBOM above).

But first we have to accept the fact that as observed above and in many a forum and write-ups as can be gathered from and attested by those early European explorers, merchants, ethnologists, historians not excluding the Missionaries whom our fore-fathers met face to face and who had no ulterior or political motives and bias when they wrote about the IBIBIO in general, they considered URUAN, EFIK, IBIBIO, ANNANG, ORON, etc. as "a homogeneous society living around the same and contiguous geographical location". They also saw them as closely related to one another by reason of language and cultural expression. It could have been that the term IBIBIO was never at all used by these early writers on URUAN/EFIK, Ibibio, Igbo, etc. since it never existed nor even our country Nigeria; certainly, not even IBOM now named Arochukwu. All came to named what they now are. URUAN/EFIK must have settled at IBOM for hundreds of years before the Ibibios and others later on also emigrated from Usahaedet and settled there. That word IBIBIO came about in the same general sense for an amalgam of Semi-Bantu nationalities just the same way as one would regard all the nation States in Europe as EUROPEANS, or those of North and South America and Canada as AMERICANS, ditto peoples of the EAST as ASIANS. By drawing the analogy further one could also talk of AFRICANS, IGBOS, HAUSAS, YORUBAS, etc. This point need not detain us because even today, no URUAN citizen regards himself as IBIBIO whereas I always heard my mother saying: " ka ko ke Ibibio ndida eyen utom" implying, "I am going to IBIBIO country to hire a house help. Neither ORON nor ANNANG of today regard themselves as Ibibio though all had been jumbled together as IBIBIO by the early Europeans on seeing that they could understand each other's dialect during the time they settled at IBOM. Certainly neither the EFIK ever considered themselves as IBIBIO, not even perhaps in the farfetched context as analyzed above. URUAN/EFIK had always tried to maintain her singularity at Ibom. Even with the coming together of the other nationalities where they now find themselves in AKWA IBOM STATE, they only saw themselves as close neighbours and contingent to them, the core IBIBIO.

Indeed, at the height of it all when within the present 4th Republic, URUAN had gone on protest to the then sitting Governor of AKWA IBOM STATE, His Excellency Governor Victor Bassey Attah, to demand for their own slot in the Vernacular News Translation versions in the Akwa Ibom State Broadcasting Services and Bulletin, because other Akwa Ibom languages were being used for news telecast, drama, magazines, plays etc. But the Governor had unwittingly asked: "Are you not from or in this AKS and by implication, a scion from AKWA ABASI IBOM country"? This moot point should not be lost to any discerning reader of this book here, because very correctly Attah without knowing it was implying that "there was a territory called IBOM from where all the tribes in AKWA IBOM STATE emigrated as the country of Akwa Ibomites primary settlement". Hence we can also understand now why most of these tribes bear IBOM after their distinctive clans and tribes eg. Ibiono Ibom, Nsit Ibom, Ikpa Ibom, Ikono Ibom just to mention but a few. That is why we shall devote a section of this study later to the IBIBIO in general rather than URUAN in particular since most of these early writers had opined that they all were originally of the same STALK and they had said this without any qualms or apology to anybody on account of the profound influence they had noticed among them and upon one another on account of their congregating together for ages before politically/ geographically existing as distinct and separate cultural groups as they do today. Professor Dominus Essien, himself and URUAN son and historian of note seems to align with this idea when he opined that URUAN people had continued with their familiar occupations like farming, fishing and hunting in URUAN AKPEH including their neighbours viz. the Efuts, Bulundus, Bakundus, Bafes Batanga, Balue, and Bamkoko all of whom are now to be found in the Cameroun Republic. They are those who also like URUAN/EFIK people are the descendants of Semi-Bantu or Bantoid" (Dominus Essien, 14).

ORIGIN OF URUAN-EFIK IN PRE-HISTORY

URUAN-EFIK peoples occupy the South Southern part of Nigeria and have been conceded as perhaps the earliest settlers in their present locations for centuries such that they no longer have recollections of having migrated from anywhere. Therefore notwithstanding the recent claims of separate ethnic identities by all these sub-tribes of the IBIBIO to which they are morally entitled, the establishment of IBIBIO STATE UNION to which most of them belonged, with their establishment of Uyo T. T. C. in 1932 (now University of Uyo, AKS) and Ibibio State College at Ikot Ekpene in 1946, (now State College Ikot Ekpene) which had endured and waxed strong for years until the civil war, all these bear eloquent testimony as to why all of them were so grouped as the IBIBIO.

Dr. Ekpo Nta Amaku
Efik teacher, educationist, writer and poet

Concerning this matter, it is a well-known and documented (Ekpo Eyo, E.O., 43-45) fact that it was the legendary icon and charismatic URUAN son in the person of Chief the Honourable NYONG ESSIEN, OBE, MFR (1872-1972), the great orator, veteran politician, teacher, educationist and nationalist, High Court Interpreter of Calabar and later Lagos Branch Secretary of the Calabar National League and Secretary of the Calabar Branch of the Nigerian Civil Service Union (1923-24), who conceived the now defunct Ibibio State Union in the late 1920s. He too became the Organizer and Leader/President General of the IBIBIO UNION (1924-29). Most of his counterparts were Efik sons including the legendary Dr. Ekpo Nta Amaku of Edikot ? wed Mbuk fame, himself an Eniong son. He was a teacher, educationist, writer and poet and a product of the same famous Hope Waddell Institute as Chief Nyong. Later, he was discriminated against by the Efiks perhaps out of jealousy, prejudice and pride. Then he, the Honourable Nyong Essien had to call off their bluff and single-handedly used his influence and authority to master-mind the inauguration of that famous IBIBIO STATE UNION (1928-1943). Whereas it was this same Honourable Nyong Essien who was the brain child of the formation of the Calabar People's Rights and Liberties Union and Secretary General of the Efik National League which over time sponsored the Overseas training of Efik sons and daughters especially in the legal professions and the Sciences/Arts in universities abroad, notably in the UK. (1920-29). Yes, it was he who raised 'sleeping Calabar' as it were and became the 'political demon' of the Legislative Council of Nigeria as remarked by some contemporary writers. Before them all, he was the local "wizard" of the EFIK kingdom in those good old days (1938 -1949). A great lover of knowledge, hard work, honesty and truth and justice, the Honourable Chief Nyong Essien was reputed to have had one of the richest private libraries – "The Ibibio Shekinah Library" in the whole of Africa. But what overturned the table and perhaps the last straw that broke the camel's back as it were, was when he was denied the Calabar Obongship in lieu of himself going Overseas also to study Law. This last act of injustice and disgrace as it were led to and thus inevitably constrained him to go team up with the ubiquitous IBIBIO.

In fact, as the story went, he sorts of without qualms relocated permanently to his kith and kin in URUAN where he was subsequently adopted and later crowned the Nsomm of URUAN when he wasn't even seen or known there as he was deputed to be a son of the EFIK kingdom. But in those early 1940s as a child, I used to notice that he was coming and going from my grandfather's Court and palace. By 1945 when my grandfather's Royal Obsequies began, he literally relocated to IDU and often dined with my father in our house. He later became my late grandfather's successor, the legendary and charismatic Nsomm, His Imperial Majesty Ekarika Ekpo who was then gathered to his ancestors. This moot point must not be lost to any citizen of URUAN because as much as I can recollect, my father while still a pupil at Sacred Heart School, Calabar often narrated that he often heard of Chief Nyong Essien being a 'great Calabar son' at many a forum but nobody ever knew then that he was from URUAN. In fact, as at the time, he was all over the place in those early 1920's. His rejection and coming back to his roots in URUAN was often received with mixed feelings and suspicion because nobody really knew exactly from whence he came, and nobody seemed to have known his ancestry, since he appeared like Melchizedeck of sorts (Heb. 7:3). Again he was staying at Uyo at the IBIBIO UNION Secretariat Headquarters, and the IBIBIO UNION matters took away all his time in those days of 1939-45. Of course it could be noticed that when he became the Nsomm all that changed and he abandoned the IBIBIO STATE UNION affairs altogether to concentrate his attention on his primary assignment of the affairs of state viz. URUAN nation. It will also be recalled as explained elsewhere, that His Excellency and Head of State, General Johnson Thomas Umunakwe Aguiyi-Ironsi, was the one who ordered the closure of the Secretariat and confiscation thereof of all the apparata and documents concerning the IBIBIO UNION which at the time was at its apogee and very visible on the Nigerian scene. Trust Honourable Nyong Essien, the ubiquitous Calabar/URUAN man! In destroying and confiscating both the Headquarters and instruments of the Union, General Ironsi did so in order to completely obliterate its existence from the face of the earth and from the annals of colonial Nigeria. General Johnson Aguiyi-Ironsi it will be recalled, was the first Major General of the Nigerian Colonial army who foiled the first coup d'état that toppled the first Republic of the Nigerian State then under Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as Governor General. This resulted in the deaths of Sir Ahmadu Bello, the Sardauna of Sokoto and Leader of the Northern People's Congress, NPC which was the governing party of the Federal Republic of Nigeria at the time as also the Prime Minister, Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa both of the Hausa-Fulani tribe of Nigeria.

What exactly happened was that on 15 January, 1966, a few young Nigerian army officers popularly aged, the six Majors led by one of them, Major Chukwuma Nzeogwu an Igbo carried out the first ever coup d'état in Nigeria. It was later on in the later 1930's after he had succeeded in achieving one of the most import aims of the Union, viz. sending six qualified sons of the Union Overseas ie. to the white man's country to bring home the 'Golden Fleece' as it was popularly expressed in those days, also coupled with his accession to the Legislative Council of Nigeria in 1938, that made him pipe down and search for his roots in URUAN. Even then with my interaction with him, Nsomm Nyong Essien never found much favour with some of his chiefs in URUAN traditional Council of Chiefs. There was so mush betrayal and apathy and disloyalty; he couldn't really achieve much. I have recounted one of these bitter encounters elsewhere in this book. I knew HRH Nsomm Edidem Nyong Essien not because he took over from my grandfather while I was still a kid but because he tried to bring URUAN back to glory and his presence and authority was noticeable. Every URUAN kid up till the 1970s heard about this URUAN/EFIK phenomenon. It was his successor Nsomm HRH Edidem Atakpor James U. Afia who tried to pursue his goals but could not do much because of the war. At least one thing was achieved and that is also why I am encouraged to write this book: URUAN cohesion and unity. If he had lived longer than he did, there would have been no need of this book. He appointed me President of his so-coined 'Privy Council' Institution, which had nothing to do with the political advisory advocacy of nations, but as a sort of Director General and Chief of Staff Institution, to help whip up URUAN into action. Together with his in-law, Etinnyin B.E. Bassey of Creek Town, Calabar often quoted here, we toured URUAN going from village to village in the 1980s, and URUAN was proud to come back to life with the slogan: "Ojei bab URUAN"! It was an action slogan that could wake up people from their slumbers. When he died in 1988 everything fell apart, as his successor was not given any chance perhaps due to the fact that some members of his Nsomm in-Council did not regard him much being perhaps more educated. They seemed to have forgotten that this very Nsomm was previously the President of the same URUAN Council of Chiefs in Akwa Ibom State while his predecessor was alive. So let's take a break there.

It is a known fact that most of the nationalities found now in Akwa Ibom State and also within the Southern Senatorial District of the Cross River State, viz. EFIK, ODUKPANI, ABAKPA, EFUTS, UMON, EJAGHAM, EKOI, BIASE, AQUAGUNE (AKWANAKWNA), etc. (and later on the Igbos during the infamous slave trade) had congregated here at IBOM. What seems quite clear and certain is that IBOM was a major dispersal centre of these peoples and this dispersion must have begun after they had departed the scene about 1000 BC. They continued and reached the area now known as N I G E R I A, a territory which even had by then never existed before AD 1914, and which of course was brought about by the Amalgamation of the legendary colonial British master-planer and strategist Administrator, Lord Frederick John Dealtry Lugard, whose girlfriend was Lady Floyd nee Shaw (whom some say she was rather Lady Margaret Perham). She was a very intelligent, talented and well renowned British journalist, and she it was who invented that name Nigeria in the first place. Later on when Lugard became the Governor General he married her. Nigeria at the time as everybody knows was made up of different cultures with autonomous identities and values. For Awolowo Nigeria was simply a geographical expression a creation of imperial artifice – an artificial conglomerate. But historically it was held together by Britain by forces that shaped her into an organic indivisible groups or nationalities such that after Independence in 1960 she emerged a free authentic nation such that in 1963 it was no longer an appendage of Britain but a Republic and sovereign country with the new tag of THE FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF NIGERIA.

In fact, and according to Professor Obi Nwakanma of the UNN-Nsukka, there is not a single nation in the world that is not a product of "artificial creation" often founded to serve the higher political or commercial or even spiritual interest as in the case of Nigeria, Great Britain, the ancient Greco-Roman Empire, etc. Hence Nigeria like every other nation of the world is an artificial creation. Nigeria as discussed elsewhere in this book was actually a creation of colonial Britain to serve British mercantile interests in the inter-trade in the 19th century which involved her counterparts and rivals viz. the French, the Germans, etc. Before now the entire Southern Provinces had become known as NIGER-AREA, a title first coined by the early Portuguese merchants and explorers who had previously sailed to, discovered and named the river NIGER – ostensibly as the River of the black Peoples of Africa. These nomenclatures stuck for a long time because the Amalgamation of Nigeria was not a simple feat of a whiff of the waves or by a Fiat. That same River is the one which the European multi-national merchants before the European "scramble for Africa" in what became known as the Partition of AFRICA in 1884, were trying to explore. But it was the British in particular who by now had through their first class diplomacy masterminded and wrestled the Benin Kingdom from the Portuguese because they were interested in the River. That is why between 1818 and 1830 many British explorers including the celebrated Mungo Park who actually discovered the Delta part of River Niger, after whom Richard Lander and his brother John - the Lander Brothers endeavoured and succeeded in discovering the source of the Niger at IBUSA. The rest is history as they say.

ORIGINS OF THE TERM "NIGERIA"

From these two words N i g e r + A r e a = the area inhabited by N i g e r s ie. Latin = black peoples, Miss Flora Shaw, then a British journalist on the coast coined the word Niger Area. Before the Amalgamation, and to cap it all, she combined the two words NIGER and AREA and came up with the new name "N I G E R I A" by which this land of promise became known ever since. Also by some coincidence this river became known as the River Niger = the River of black peoples. It has become a RIVER of great forebodings - as Nigeria was destined to become the only single undisputed most populous and gigantic nation of the black race south of the Sahara. Thus the entire territory now NIGERIA became indisputably a country effectively in British hands. Consequently, Lord Lugard had no qualms and therefore seeing in this cerebral and beautiful girl not just a journalist friend and mate but one who would not only write good reportage about events concerning him, Nigeria and Great Britain, but also help him to manage and organize the statecraft called Nigeria, he promptly proposed and married her, and she became not just his mistress but now Lady Flora Lugard. Yes, but it was not just as simple as that for Lord Lugard to amalgamate Nigeria. There were overtures, subtle diplomacies, subterranean intrigues, maneuvres, wars and killings, even coups in the bargain for the so-called Amalgamation of Nigeria to take place as we are going to see. It even led to such strange and bizarre situations whereby reigning monarchs and traditional Rulers were by intrigues and betrayals deposed, handcuffed and exiled with the active connivance of mostly their wicked and greedy subjects, but sometimes their rivals as in the case of the Nanna of Itsekeri, who was the first Niger Delta victim and casualty in the hands of British imperialists masterminded by Lord Lugard. For after subduing the Northern potentates, the Emirs, and in order to hold sway and stamp their authority over what was to be known as the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria, Lord Lugard then as the official British warlord and General, decided to take on the Southern Provinces. The British were only able after much fighting using their West African Frontier Force to subdue the Western Obas, but the Provinces of the Niger Delta Empires became such a hard nut for them to crack. These Niger Delta kings were too much for them to easily overpower and subdue because even long before the British came calling, these kings were forces to be reckoned with in their various domains. After fighting in vain to subdue the kings of the Niger Delta they resorted to blackmail and subterfuge and tried to capture them alive in order to cow them down, intimidate, maltreat and send them into exile at their Headquarters then in Calabar.

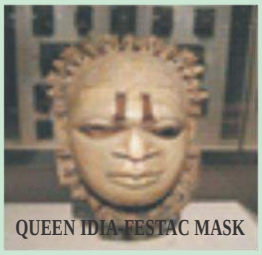
KINGS AND POTENTENTATES WHO STOOD ON THE WAY OF AMALGAMATION

ORIGINS & EVOLUTION DELTA - WARRI: ITSEKERI KINGDOM



Of all his contemporary traditional rulers, particularly those of the Niger Delta who fought the intruding and invading British imperialists against the amalgamation of the Southern Provinces, King Nnana a.k.a "Nanna Olomu" (1840-1916), the legendary paramount Ruler of Koko in Warri, popularly known as the Nanna of Itsekeri was probably the most powerful, exceptional and colourful. He was crowned the Govfena (Governor) and Royal Father of "Benin River" (territory) in 1885. He was a great warrior and was always in conflict with the colonialists using his war boats, rifles, cannons, swords, spears and poisoned arrows all of which constituted just a fraction of the arsenal he employed in his resistance of the imperialists' invasion. It was not easy to overpower King Nanna but for the pent up, revolting and pathological hatred within - the enemy within sort of - because not all his people liked him within his domain and time. History has it that it was this pent up hatred that escalated the imperialists' resolve to bring his empire down and this could have only been accomplished through his rival and relative, Chief Dore Numa who became the leading Itsekeri figure in the eventual capture of King Nanna. It is also on record that after his removal and until his return thereto, no peace ever came to the land. It so happened that in 1894, Sir Ralph Moore the then Acting Consul General in Calabar, was said to have placed a £500 price reward for his arrest. King Nanna was the first before the Oba of Benin, His Royal Majesty Oba Ovonranmwen, whom the British thought was a cork in the wheel of progress towards Amalgamation as also the one to resist the British annexation of his territory by force of arms. However, at long last the King was overpowered, tried and sentenced to life-imprisonment by the imperialist Consul Moore. After seizing all his entire wealth and treasures, he was hand-cuffed and exiled to Calabar. In 1895 he again was deported to Accra in the Gold Coast (Ghana).

Meanwhile Consul Moore who handed over to Sir Walter Egerton returned to Britain, got lunatic and later committed suicide. In 1906 King Nanna returned home from exile amidst pomp and pageantry of his admiring subjects. He soon gathered his people together, appointed new men and women of good conduct and patriotism and re-established his throne and pre-eminence before he died ten years after in 1916. His palace, the Nanna Living History Museum of Koko in Warri North, was declared a National Antiquity in 1979 by the Federal Government. In 1996 General Sani Abacha upgraded and dedicated it for the preservation of Nanna's Legacy as an out-station of the National Commission for Museums and Monuments. In fact, King Nanna was the only king of his time who fought the British, got tried and exiled and returned home alive and in honour. All others died in captivity including Oba Ovonranmwen of Benin who was deposed and handcuffed as it were, and afterwards exiled to Calabar in 1897. He eventually died there under dubious circumstances because the British had first to deceive, cajole and hoodwink him under the contrivance and pretext that he was sent there to understudy proper statecraft at the feet of the great king, the Obong of Calabar - Edidem (King) Archibong IV of Duke Town whose real name was Obong Ekpo Eyo Asibong Ekpo Effiom Etim Okoho, the reigning Obong of Calabar then, (1892 - 1916).

He was deputed as being endowed with wisdom, authority and power and with organizational skills of governance. It was to the effect and understanding that the Oba of Benin, Oba Ovonranmwen on his coming back from exile to his Benin throne, he would so organize his empire and reign in such a way that his dynasty would be incomparable in the whole of Africa, even imperial Britain itself and the whole world, if it so be. If the Oba had not been subdued and killed in exile at Calabar, it would have been impossible for Amalgamation to take place because after the Obong of Calabar, he was the last bastion of hope for the Niger Delta Empires and the last straw - the obstacle standing on the way of the British to break the camel's back, ie. the Niger Oil Rivers Protectorate strongholds. Remember that King Nanna of Itsekeri/Warri and Oba Ovonranmwen of Benin were not the only powerful Southern Nigerian/Niger Delta kings they had to contend with in order to impose Indirect Rule on the whole country in order to get the Amalgamation project on course for their selfish mercantile gains, authority and power over their acquired territory, Nigeria. Amalgamation was the key to open the door and give them the upper hand over their other European rivals. They also had to contend with King Jaja of Opobo, excepting of course the Obong of Calabar whom they all removed by force of arms ostensibly with the aid of the West African Frontier Force (WAFF) which Lugard had put together in 1899 just to push for Amalgamation to happen.

The exploits of that famous Oba of Benin, Oba Ovonranmwen have informed our interest to dig into the history of the old Benin Empire especially about this powerful and tenacious African king who was not doltish as attested to by his chiefs and contrary to the accounts of treaty portrayers such as Sir H. L. Gallwey as they want to have us believe. History has it that the Oba, for example, did not and could not have signed the treaty of Amalgamation when the British Colonial Authorities brought it to him to sign especially because that was a very restricted and sanctimonious season, the time of a very important festival in the territory, viz. the traditional IGUE FESTIVAL season which prohibited both the presence of any non-natives, aliens and any other category of persons within the empire and also all other activities during the sacred season. Ipso facto, it also prohibited even the king from doing anything else including signing any treaty thereof. Oba Ovonranmwen had always maintained that he "did not touch the white man's pen." But Sir Gallwey, one of the writers of ancient Benin history later claimed in his report that the Oba basically accepted the signing of the treaty in all respects. Despite the ambiguity over whether or not the Oba signed the treaty, the British officials easily accepted it as though he did. We may as well leave it as that because I have maintained here in this book that had the Oba, ditto the then Obong of Calabar not signed that treaty, though under duress as every evidence seems to point in that direction, the Amalgamation would never have succeeded and by implication, there would be no such a country called Nigeria today. But who was this Oba of note? Oba Ovonranmwen was the reigning Oba of Benin when the British colonials came calling to the Benin Kingdom around 1870. The city and empire of Benin had started to decline after 1700AD or thereabout. By this time, European activities in the area, most notably through the Trans-Atlantic slave-trade were on top gear and this resulted in major disruptive repercussions with the result that the Benin empire was seriously threatened and it naturally was destined to wane. However, during the last decades of that 17th century when Oba Ovonranmwen ascended the throne of the Benin Kingdom, he strenuously tried to revive Benin's power especially through the development of the trade in palm oil as exports from the kingdom and textiles as imports to the territory from Europe. To preserve Benin's independence, the Oba unfalteringly, but bit by bit banned the export of goods from Benin, until the trade was exclusively in palm oil. From all these it could be seen that it was not long before the Kingdom managed and retained its independence as the Oba exercised a firm monopoly over trade which the British found irksome. The territory was coveted by an influential group of investors for its rich natural resources such as palm-oil, rubber and ivory. He tried tooth and nail to make the kingdom independent of British control, but pressure continued from figures such as Vice-Consul James Robert Phillips and Captain Gallwey, the British vice-Consul of the Oil Rivers Protectorate then resident in Calabar. They were pushing for British annexation of the Benin Empire and the removal of the Oba. It must be noted that during the last half of the 19th century Great Britain had become desirous of having a closer relationship with the Kingdom of Benin for the purpose of trade especially in palm produce which by now had become the in-thing of foreign trade in West Africa. (Cf. Bondarenko, Dimitri M. 2005, 6-8).

The British officials were increasingly interested in controlling trade in the area and also in accessing the kingdom's rubber resources to support their own growing motor tyre market. Several attempts were made to achieve this end beginning with the first official visit in 1862 to Benin by Sir Richard Burton who was then the British Consul at Fernando Poo. He was the one who was following that attempt to establish a treaty between Benin and the United Kingdom. But it was actually Sirs Hewett, Blair and Annesley, all of who were resident in Calabar. These succeeded in doing so between 1884, 1885 and 1886 respectively. However, their efforts did not yield any tangible results because the Benin Empire resisted becoming a British protectorate throughout the Oba's reign right into the 1880s. But the British, who were never known to say die, remained persistent. Progress was however made in 1892 during the visit of Vice-Consul H. L. Gallwey. This mission was significant since he was the first British Official to visit Benin after Richard Burton. Moreover, it would also set in motion the events to come that would lead to Oba Ovonramwen's exile to and demise in Calabar. Ovonramwen ruled Benin from 1888–1897 when the British Colonial Consuls of the time because of his intransigence and refusal to sign the Treaty of Amalgamation organized a punitive expedition to sack his kingdom, capture him and send him into exile in 1897 as we are going to see.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF OBA OVONRAMWEN (1888-1914)

In the late 19th century when the 37th Oba, His Royal Majesty, Oba Adolo (1848 - 1888), joined his ancestors, a new king was elected/appointed the Oba of Benin in the person of Overami Idugbowa Nogbaisi. He was crowned the new Oba of Benin and he took the new title of Oba Ovonramwen as the 38th Oba (Cf. Ben-Amos, Paula. 1999, 34). This was and had been the practice just as Prince Uko Akpolokpolo took the title of His Royal Majesty, Oba Erediauwa in 1979. In Benin Kingdom, when the Oba dies, an official announcement is made by the Iyase of Benin, informing Edo people that the Oba had joined his ancestors. This is usually the first process to be carried out and is an internal affair of the palace. Thereafter there is another programme to inform everybody about the coronation after certain rituals would have been completed. In fact, in Benin history, the new king is already known, because in ascending the throne of the Oba of Benin, it is from father to the first son. That is why the reigning Oba His Royal Majesty the Oba elect was easily and readily able to announce his new title at his coronation as Oba Erediauwa. Regarding Oba Ovonramwen Nogbaisi, he ascended the throne as the Oba of Benin in 1888. At the end of the 19th century, the Kingdom of Benin had managed to retain its independence and this Oba tried with every available means at his disposal to exercise monopoly over trade which the British found irksome, audacious and insulting to their pride. This was at the time the territory was coveted by an influential group of investors for its rich natural resources such as palm-oil, rubber and ivory. The kingdom was largely independent of British control, but much pressure continued from such British colonial Authorities as Vice-Consul James Robert Phillips and Captain Gallwey who was then the British vice-Consul of the OIL RIVERS PROTECTORATE. They were the people pushing for British annexation of the Benin Empire and the removal of the Oba. Shortly they organized a British invasion force captained by the Vice-Consul James Robert Phillips. These set out to overthrow the Oba in 1896. The force's weapons were hidden in baggages, with troops disguised as bearers. Phillips plan was to gain access to Ovonramwen's palace by announcing that he intended to negotiate. But Ovonramwen's messengers issued several warnings to them not to violate Benin territorial sovereignty, insisting that he, Vice-Consul Phillips would not be permitted to see the Oba due to certain ceremonial duties taking place at that time. Having been warned on several further occasions on the way, Phillips sent his stick to the Oba, a deliberate insult designed to provoke the conflict that would provide an excuse for British annexation (Cf. Roese, P. M., and Dimitri M. Bondarenko. 2005, 34-7). Unknown to most people, the indirect rule which Lugard had in mind was what he wanted to extend to everywhere in the area they just acquired. Captain Philip had seen that there was no way this could be done without coming to provoke a situation that will lead to war between Benin and the British. Philip wrote to the British Colonial Office saying they must invade Benin. He assured that there was plenty of reasons to believe that the value of the bronze and ivory they will find in the Benin palace will be enough to offset the cost of the war; it was another way of telling them that they were not going to lose anything in the war. So they came to provoke the Benin people. At the end of the war, they tried everybody including Oba Ovonramwen and could not find anything against him because the chiefs who were physically present at Ogbenewen where they killed Captain Philips and his six men were interviewed and they denied that the king sent them to kill the white men. Some even said the Oba told them to go and clear the road and make it passable for the British people. What they told him was that they had set up a new administrative system in Calabar and he should go there and be exposed to it so as to know how to administer his people in future. They were cajoling him; they knew they will never allow him to come back; they controlled the means of movement at the time. So they took him away. They kept him in Calabar for 17 years. Thereafter, they made efforts two or three times to install another Oba in Benin; the Benin people of course resisted. Lugard needed a powerful king through whom the British could introduce indirect rule in the South. They got to Lagos and precipitated problem between Dosunmu and Kosoko. The one they met that the people actually put there, they instigated another set of people against him and consequently removed him and put another one but he didn't have authority over many areas in the South like the Sultan had in the North through the emirs. They heard of another one, King Jaja of Opobo, they thought he could be it, they got to the place, they were not satisfied with him, and they removed him, now they had Nana of Itsekeri. Nana was not the traditional ruler, he was only an influential businessman and they thought they might be able to use him, they didn't succeed. To remove Nana, they had to build a military cantonment in Sapele and it was from that cantonment that they invaded Ovonramwen in Benin. They knew he was the man who fitted the role like that of Sultan they wanted but he was also the man they hated because he had some high degree of independence, he was not subservient as they would have liked. Very surprisingly, but with the Oba's strategy, Vice-Consul James Robert Phillip's expedition of eight was ambushed and himself and five others perished, only two escaped alive. However, one thing we should know is that these pre-colonial kings were not doltish at all. They were wise and brave to the core. Most of these Niger Delta kings like King Jaja were also great warriors and were prepared for any eventualities being seasoned war lords. In fact, until the introduction of guns in the 15th century, these kings had already acquired the art of making traditional weapons like the spear, short sword, and bows and these held sway till the coming of those early European supercargoes who brought guns and gun powder into the fray. Until then efforts were made to reorganize Locals Guilds of blacksmiths in the 18th century to manufacture light firearms, but dependence on imports was still heavy. But the snag about it was that before the coming of the gun these guilds of blacksmiths were charged with war production, particularly swords and iron spearheads ostensibly so that the natives would have nothing to rely on. This was exactly what happened immediately the British colonials came. They would cajole and bamboozle into order the chiefs and elders to assemble their weaponry as if for exhibition and then charge them for amassing armaments without license. They would then confiscate everything and erect their Union Jack of annexation of the town or territory with their own force of arms. But as for Oba Ovonranmwen it was a different thing altogether. The Benin Empire was solidly under his full control and he knew exactly what and how to do it. He coordinated everything well and Benin's tactics were well organized. The Oba and his sub-commanders could always weigh the situations with tactics and with preliminary plans and logistics they easily could support the missions from the usual porter forces, water transport via canoes, and requisitioning from localities through which the army passed. Movement of troops via canoes was critically important especially in the lagoons, creeks and the rivers of the Niger Delta which were key areas of Benin's domination. Tactics in the field seemed to have evolved over time. While the head-on clash was well known, documentation from the 18th century showed greater emphasis on avoiding continuous battle lines, and more effort to encircle any invading enemy. Even we have it on authority that the Oba by this time had such an organized army with the "Great National Benin Military Flag" to boot. This Flag is said to have been stolen when the British struck in 1897. (Cf. British National Maritime Museum and Institute for Benin Studies Retrieved May 26, 2008). Fortifications were important in the region and the Oba made sure that the numerous military campaigns fought by Benin's soldiers were to be undertaken around sieges. As noted above, Benin's military earthworks were the largest of such structures in the world, and Benin's rivals also built extensively. Barring a successful assault, most sieges were resolved by a strategy of attrition by slowly cutting off and starving out enemy fortifications until it capitulated. On occasions however, European mercenaries were brought in to aid with these sieges. As recompense these Europeans mercenaries received items, such as palm oil and bundles of pepper. Little wonder then why the kingdom of Benin was impregnable and the Oba invincible. Perhaps this was the type of tactics the Oba who first sent Prince Ado employed in order to enter, subdue, and conquer the Awori people and founded Eko, which is known as LAGOS today as we shall soon see. These mercenaries were said to have used European cannons which helped them batter and destroy the gates of the town of present-day Lagos, thus allowing hundreds of the warriors of Benin to enter and conquer it. This example of Benin goes to show not only the power of indigenous military systems of those Niger Delta kings, but also the role outside influences and new technologies brought to bear. In deed this has become the normal pattern among many nations today and was to be reflected across the entire African continent when the 19th century dawned.

THE BRITISH INVASION OF BENIN AND CAPTURE OF OBA OVONRAMWEN

Consequent upon the in 1897 led by Harry Rawson, the city of Benin City was burnt down resulting in the deaths of untold numbers of its inhabitants. Although the British had orders to hang the Oba, but the Ovonramwen escaped and later surrendered himself to the British forces. Characteristic of invincible Niger Deltans, nothing could touch or break the Iroko of Africa and to prove to the British war lords that he was impregnable, he simply said as if Pontus Pilate had said of old: "Ecce homo, "Here is the man you have been looking for!" Yes, he surrendered; but they could do nothing to him. In fact, they couldn't have done anything except perhaps that what they could only do was first to try to deceive, cajole and hoodwink him under the of their so called diplomacy - contrivance and pretext to the effect that they were bring to their colonial Capital at Calabar where he would have the benefit to understudy proper statecraft at the feet of another of their greatest and wisest kings, the Obong of Calabar - deputed to be endowed with wisdom and organizational skills of governance. He would thereafter become so wise and great such that on coming back to his throne in Benin, he would organize his empire and reign with such dignity, candour and honour that would be incomparable in the whole of Africa even Europe. That how they were able to take Oba Ovonramwen away on exile to Calabar with his two wives. As I said above, if the British had not employed their diplomacy but tried to deal with him within his own Benin kingdom, nothing would have happened to him, the British "Brussai" and commando abracadabra or abbrocadacio tactics would have availed them little or nothing because according to an URUAN/EFIK proverb: " kp? inamke Abasi Abriba ke Abriba: Ojei – Ojei – Ojei bab Odudu: Owei! koro kakat itaha ekpeme, ibuot inyu ik? ke Ekpe" At certain times God creates "very strong persons "with strength, great intellect, large heart, courage and maximum will power like Edidem Okoho Nkpang-Inyang, the Founding father of Akpa-Inyang Royal House in Akpa Osurua, IDU URUAN and Edidem Ibanga Nkenta both of ancient Uruan, Edidem Duke Town King Archibong IV, the reigning Obong of Calabar (1892 - 1916) at the time, King Jaja of Opobo, King Nanna of Itsekeri, and in ancient times; King Hammurabi of Babylon (Iraq), King Nebuchadnezzar of Persia (Iran), King Confucius of China, the Buddha of India, King Alexander the Great of Greece, Queen Deborah of Ramah, King David of Bethlehem, Queen Jezebel of Sidon, Prophet Elijah of Gilead, Emperor Caesar Augustus of Rome, King Herod the Great of Israel, etc.; then in the Christian era – Pope St. Leo I the Great, King Charlemagne of the Holy Roman Empire, Pope Gregory the Great, St. Catherine of Siena, Napoleon de Bonaparte of France, Pope Pius IX (Pio Nono) of the "Famous Sentences & Syllabus of Errors in the age of Enlightenment" (1846-78), 'Uthman dan Fodio, Owelle Benjamin Nnamdi Azikiwe, etc. etc. Concerning the latter, when my mother returned on that eventful day in 1947 from the famous Esuk Mbehe Idu URUAN which had a large beautiful square adjacent to it, she reported about the visit of this Igbo charismatic figure who had come to address Uruan people about on-coming events in Nigeria viz. moves towards Independence and the impending London Conference, this man who could "appear and disappear at any place and at any time", the man everybody held as a legend; and so he was especially when it is recalled that a meteor had appeared at his birth in faraway Zungero, in Northern Nigeria then.

Yes, it was this Oba Ovonramwen who of his own volition, agreed to go down to Calabar to stay with his friend, King Eyo Honesty IX. Even there at Calabar, they could not have done anything to him because he even stayed there, married many more wives of Efik stock and greatly fructified as it were. For 17 good years he stayed there, and as long as he and King Eyo were alive and ticking, the British could do nothing; neither could they carry out the issue of Amalgamation. It was exactly in January 1914 he died under inexplicable circumstances, yes because the time was up; and this is a veritable lesson for us all. He died the death when the time came. Then it was the turn to face King Eyo, but he on his own accord - "koro ?kp? anam owo enye ekere idem", decided to sign the Treaty of Amalgamation. That same January, Lord Frederick declared the Amalgamation of Nigeria. That is why I said that had Oba Ovonramwen not died the death, and had the reigning Obong of Calabar not signed that Treaty, Amalgamation would never have taken place, and there would perhaps be no Nigeria till today. What then was this ominous and portentous Treaty which at the time was known as:

"THE GALLWEY TREATY OF 1892" FOR AMALGAMATION?

The Treaty reads Article 1: "Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India in compliance with the request of [the] King of Benin, hereby extend to him and the territory under his authority and jurisdiction, Her gracious favour and protection"). The Article 2: "The King of Benin agrees and promises to refrain from entering into any correspondence, Agreement or Treaty with any foreign nation or power except with the knowledge of her Britannic Majesty's Government".

Article 3: "It is agreed that full jurisdiction, civil and criminal over British subjects and their property in the territory of Benin is reserved to her Britannic Majesty, to be exercised by such consular or other officers as Her Majesty shall appoint for the purpose...The same jurisdiction is likewise reserved to r Majesty in the said territory of Benin over foreign subjects enjoying British protection, who shall be deemed to be involved in the expression "British subjects" throughout this Treaty"

Article IV: "All disputes between the King of Benin and other Chiefs between him and British or foreign traders or between the aforesaid King and neighboring tribes which cannot be settled amicably between the two parties, shall be submitted to the British consular or other officers appointed by Her Britannic Majesty to exercise jurisdiction in the Benin territories for arbitration and decision or for arrangement." Oba Ovonramwen being such a tenacious man, it is inconceivable that the Oba would have accepted the terms laid out in those articles nor that would he knowingly bestow his dominion upon Queen Victoria for whatever apparent remuneration. There were some other Articles, about ten of them in all which need not detain us here. Like my late great grandfather did, the Oba would have audaciously told the British officials to the face: "Even if you put your sword through my neck, I will not sign."

That is why I said elsewhere that he refused point blank to enter into any agreement to give out even one square foot of Benin land or by extension my great grandfather Edidem Edet A. Inyang, who refused when threatened to surrender Idu URUAN ancestral land to the British. Then upon his refusal, a British invasion force headed by Phillips set out to overthrow the Oba in 1896. The force's weapons were hidden in baggage, with troops disguised as bearers. Phillips plan was to gain access to Ovonramwen's palace by announcing that he intended to negotiate. Ovonramwen's messengers issued several warnings not to violate Benin territorial sovereignty, claiming he was unable to see Phillips due to ceremonial duties. Having been warned on several further occasions on the way, Phillips sent his stick to the Oba, a deliberate insult designed to provoke the conflict that would provide an excuse for British annexation. Phillip's expedition was ambushed and all but two were killed. Subsequently a military operation against Benin in 1897 led by Harry Rawson resulted in the burning of Benin City and the deaths of untold numbers of its inhabitants. Although the British had orders to hang the Oba, Ovonramwen escaped, but later surrendered. Ovonramwen was exiled to Calabar with his two wives, and died there in 1914.

During this time, and with the development of the trade in palm oil including trade in enslaved captives, and textiles, Oba Ovonramwen in order to preserve Benin's independence began bit by bit but persistently to ban the exportation of certain goods from Benin, until the trade was exclusively in palm oil. This was his strategy which was to make him lord and sole master of the trade in the entire Niger Delta region. By then the British had gained ascendancy in what came to be known as the Oil Niger Protectorate, and was scheming to take full control of the entire region, nay, what was to become the Southern Nigeria Protectorate – and even the Protectorates of Northern and Southern Nigeria. Let's leave it at that for the moment! Yes, with Oba Ovonramwen coming into the scene and taking full control of the affairs, the Benin Empire and by implication the Oba, stubbornly and persistently resisted signing any protectorate treaty with Great Britain through most of the 1880s and 1890s years of his reign. By this time also, the city and empire of Benin had reached the depths of its decline ie. from 1700 and thereafter and even well into the closing years of 1800s. Then occurred the slaying of eight British representatives who had come to Benin territory for the first time ostensibly on espionage by the Bini natives. But predictably and knowing the British for who they are, and as a reprisal a sort of, a 'Punitive Expedition' was launched in 1897 by the British Commandieries in what came to be known as the British West African Frontier Force under the command of Admiral Sir Harry Rawson. This commando Force conquered and burnt the city, destroying much of the country's treasured works of art and dispersing nearly all that remained to all parts of Europe. Some of them they carried off to Her Majesty', Queen Victoria Kingdom. The portrait figures, busts, and other groups of art works which were cast in iron and some carved ivory but most especially those crafted in brass, viz. the famous "Benin Bronzes" were all carted away. Some of the remaining ones can still be found in Benin while some are now to be found displayed in museums around the world. In fact, not less than 3000 were removed and carted away. For many years they were stowed away in secret to perpetuate the myth that no such artwork could ever have been of African provenance.

Igodo, the first Ogiso, wielded much influence and gained popularity as a good ruler. He died after a long reign and was succeeded by Ere, his eldest son. In the 12th century, a great palace intrigue and battle for power erupted between the warrior crown prince, Prince Ekaladerhan, son of the last Ogiso and his young paternal uncle. In anger over an oracle, Prince Ekaladerhan left the royal court with his warriors. When his old father the Ogiso died, the Ogiso dynasty was ended as the people and royal kingmakers preferred their king's son as natural next in line to rule.

A SHORT HISTORY & ORIGIN OF THE BENIN EMPIRE: EDO

Indeed, when we begin to discuss the famous Ancient Benin Empire of yore and try to examine it in bold relief in order to put everything in its proper perspective, we cannot but discover a well shot picture of an organized and sophisticated African city state in operation, a polity already functioning before the major European colonial interlude, to wit, a country already in existence over eight hundred years before the coming of the first early Europeans, viz. the Portuguese and a little after, another five hundred years before the British invasion and intervention. According to one traditional account, the first name of the territory by which it was known, ie. about 810 AD, long before it later metamorphosed into the great and ancient Benin Empire was Igodomigodo. This was the name it was called by its own inhabitants. Their ruler or traditional king was called "Ogiso" in Bini tongue meaning the "King of the Sky". The aborigines and forerunners of the Benin Empire, the Binis or Edos were a people initially ruled by these mythical beings whom they regarded as the "Kings of the Sky" or Ogisos as mentioned above. King Igodo was their first Ogiso. He wielded much influence and gained popularity as a good ruler. He died after a long reign and was succeeded by Ere, his eldest son. The very city of Benin which in their tongue was called Ibinu and lately called BENIN CITY was actually founded by these kings of the sky about 1180 AD; so it is believed before the city-state turned into an empire named Edo. But around 1400, about 36 of these "Kings of the Sky" the Ogisos, counting from the first Ogiso, King Igodo, accounted for those who ruled the city state as monarchs before it metamorphosed into the city state of Benin. It happened in this way: In the 12th century, a serious palace intrigue, "a sort of palace coup," and battle for the control of power erupted between the warrior crown prince Ekaladerhan who was the son of the last Ogiso and his young paternal uncle. The issue that brought this about was as a result of one of the Queens changing the message given by the oracle to the Ogiso his father. In anger over this oracle, Prince Ekaladerhan the heir apparent, is said to have left the royal court with his warriors on exile. When his old father the Ogiso died, the Ogiso dynasty was ended as the people and royal kingmakers preferred their king's son as natural next in line to rule.

The exiled Prince Ekaladerhan is said to have wondered through thick and thin until he eventually arrived at Ile Ife in the country of the Yorubas. There he later became the IZODUWA or ODUDUWA, the first Oni of Ile Ife. Oranmiyan, the grandson of Oduduwa took up his abode in the Benin palace built for him at Usama by the elders. This structure is now the coronation shrine for the crowing of an Oba. Soon after his arrival he is said to have married a beautiful lady by name Erinmwinde, the daughter of Osa-nego who was the ninth Prime Minister in Bini tongue> She gave birth to a son. After some years of residence here he called a meeting of the people and renounced his office and title remarking that the country was a land of Ile-Ibinu by which name he meant "land of vexation" The country was afterward known by that name. It was later corrupted to "BENIN". Then he commented that it would only be a child born, trained and educated in the arts and mysteries of the land that could reign over the people. He caused his son born to him by Erinmwinde to be made King in his place, and returned to Yoruba land Ile-Ife. After some years in Ife, he left for Oyo where he also left a son behind on leaving the place, and this son Ajaka ultimately became the first ALAFIN OF OYO of the present line of which Oranmiyan himself was the reigning Oni of Ife. It could therefore be concluded that Oranmiyan of Ife, the father of Eweka I, the Oba of Benin, was also the father of Ajaka, the first Alafin of Oyo. The Oni of Ife and Alafe/Alafin of Oyo are all Bini titles in Bini spoken language and all the Kings titles are of Edo language.

But another version of this episode and history has it that on the death of the 36th and last Ogiso, his son and heir apparent named Ekaladerhan although he grew up to be a very powerful warrior and a well-loved Prince among the people, was banished from Benin as a result of one of the Queens changing the message given by the oracle to the Ogiso his father. At a certain point in time, he Prince Ekaladerhan is said to have exited from Benin travelling through forests and rivers to the West of the present day Nigeria until he arrived in the land of the Yorubas. Before then a Yoruba oracle had predicted that their King ie. the king of the said Yorubas, would come out of the forest and rule over them. Eventually, as the story went, Ekaladerhan finally emerged from the forest and later arrived at Ife. He was there and then received in jubilation and pomp as their King by the inhabitants. He changed his name to Imadoduwa meaning "I did not misplace my royalty", and became "the Great Oduduwa of Yoruba Land." On the death of his father who happened to be the last of the Ogisos in Benin, a group of Benin Chiefs led by Chief Oliha travelled to Ife to plead with Ekaladerhan, the Oduduwa to come back to Benin and ascend the throne of his late father. His reply was that since he had become the king, it was not lawful for him to come back "since a king cannot leave his kingdom". However, while staying in Ife, he is said to have sired seven sons. Then he asked one of them to go down to Benin and rule there as the next king after his father, the acclaimed last Ogiso who had joined the ancestors. Oranmiyan, one of the sons of Ekaladerhan a.k.a Oduduwa, agreed to go down to Benin. He spent some years in Benin and came back to Ife after his wife had given birth to a son named Eweka. Eweka who succeeded him then became the first Oba of Benin. In 1440, one the successors of Eweka named Ewuare came to power. It therefore implies that he Oba Ewuare was a direct descendant of Eweka I and the great grandson of Oduduwa, the first Oni of Ife. He became so famous and powerful that he was nicknamed "Ewuare the Great'. He it was who then turned the city-state of Benin into an empire. It was around 1470 AD and he named the new city-state

EDO. But there was nothing by the name BENIN CITY until the 15th century. It was during the reign of Oba Ewuare the Great that the kingdom's administrative centre, the city Ubinu, began to be known and addressed as Benin City. It was given by the early Portuguese navigators as mentioned elsewhere, and was later adopted by the local peoples as well. Before then, due to the pronounced ethnic diversity at the kingdom's headquarters by the mix of the Itsekiris, Esans, Ikas, Ijaws, Edolites as also the Urhobos, all these were living together in the royal administrative centre of the kingdom. During the 15th century therefore, the successors of Oba Ewuare, the earlier name "UBINU" which was that of a tribe of the Edos, the colloquial language spoken then was adopted as "Bini". The Portuguese would later write this down as "Benin City" and this has stood till today. As can be ascertained from an early tradition, the farther Edo clans, such as Itsekeri and the Urhobo still referred to the city as Ubini up till the late 19th century.

This great Benin Empire of yore came about the system of a sort of military rule championed by the Oba in his kingdom who at the time, ie. the 15th century even through the golden age of the kingdom, was still loosely based after the Ogiso dynasty. It was combined military and royal governance for protection in exchange of the use of the kingdom's resources and implementation of taxes paid to the royal administrative centre by the annexed territories. Language and culture were not enforced but remained heterogeneous and localized according to each group within the kingdom as observed above. The local Prime Minister/ Governor, "Enogie" in local parlance was often appointed by the Oba for specified ethnic areas as Administrators. The military operations which relied upon a well-trained disciplined force were put together in place by these new great kings called Obas beginning with Oba Ewuare the Great. At its apogee, the Benin Empire had spread enveloping most of what became known as the Western Region of Nigeria and as far up north as Dekina in Kogi State and as far down East to the heartland of Igbo land. Oba Ewuare the Great had become the de facto Paramount Ruler within the region. He had become the mountain of power within the region. Oba Ewuare, the acclaimed first Golden Age Oba, is credited with turning Benin City into a City State from a military fortress originally built by the Ogisos and protected by moats and walls. These series of great walls marked the incremental growth of the sacred city from 850 AD.

It was from this bastion that the Oba launched his military campaigns and began the expansion of the kingdom from the Edo-speaking heartlands. The lands of Idah in Kogi State and Owo, Akure in Ondo State, all came under the central authority of the Benin Empire. At its maximum extent the empire is claimed by the Edos to have extended from Onitsha in the east, through the forested southwestern region of Nigeria and into the present-day nation of Ghana. Till today, the Ga peoples of Ghana trace their ancestry to the ancient Kingdom of Benin. In the 15th century, Benin became the greatest city of the empire created by Oba Ewuare. To enclose his Palace, he commanded the building of Benin's inner wall, an 11-kilometre-long earthen rampart girded by a moat about 6 metres deep. This was excavated in the early 1960s by Graham Connah. It was estimated that its construction, if spread out over five dry seasons, would have required a workforce of 1,000 labourers working ten hours a day and seven days a week to complete it. Ewuare also added great thoroughfares and erected nine fortified gateways to the city. In fact, further excavations have also uncovered that a rural network of earthen walls 6,000 to 13,000 km (4,000 to 8,000 mi) long was also built. This wall could have taken an estimated 150 million man-hours to build. In fact, it must have taken hundreds of years to build. These were raised ostensibly to mark out territories for towns and cities. Thirteen years after Oba Ewuare's death tales of Benin's splendours reached to the ends of the earth comparable to the tales of the magnificence and splendor of the city and Temple of Jerusalem, one of the seven wonders of the world built by King Solomon. (Cf. 1kgs 6 -7:51; 10-29). Then these so attracted and lured more Portuguese traders to the city gates of Benin resulting in their being the first European country to set foot on the shores of Black Africa in 1485 (Cf. Roese, P. M., and Dimitri M. Bondarenko. 2005). At its maximum extent, the empire extended from the Western Ibo tribes on the shores of the River Niger, through parts of the southwestern region of Nigeria of present-day Ondo State, and the isolated islands of current Lagos Island and Obalende in the coastal region of present-day Lagos State. The Oyo Kingdom, which extended through most of South Western Nigeria to parts of Dahomey of present-day Republic of Beni was to the West of the Benin Empire.

ORGANIZATION OF THE BENIN MILITARY FOR TERRITORIAL EXAPANSION

The organization of the Benin Military for campaigns abroad was a very sophisticated one as we are going to see. At the head of the host of the army stood the supreme Ogiso, the great monarch one of whose descendants metamorphosed into the Oba of Benin as we have seen. He it was who served the empire as the supreme military commander. Beneath him were subordinate generalissimos, the Ezomos, the Iyases, and others who supervised a sort of Metropolitan Regiment based in the capital Benin, and a Royal Regiment made up of hand-picked warriors who also served as bodyguards to the great king. Benin's Queen Mother also retained her own regiment, the "Queen's Own." The Metropolitan and Royal regiments were relatively stable because they were of permanent formations. (Cf. Roese, P. M., and Dimitri M. Bondarenko. 2005, 17-19). The Village Regiments were so organized that they provided the bulk of the fighting force and were mobilized as needed. Whenever there was any serious emergency for military call up, the King of Benin could in a single day make 20,000 men ready for war, and, if there was great need, he could mobilize 180,000; Uk?m ibietke ke ika ," Because of this he had great influence among all the surrounding peoples. His authority stretched over many cities, towns and villages. There was no King thereabouts as his equal who was in the possession of so many beautiful cities and towns; He had the army at his beck and call. These would be sent as contingents of warriors on the command of the king and his generals whenever necessary. The formations were so organized and neatly broken down into sub-units under designated commanders such that foreign observers who visited the territory often commented favorably on the discipline and organization of Benin's military expertise. These foreigners used to remark that they were a better disciplined military organization than that of any other Guinea nation, thus contrasting them with the slacker troops from the Gold Coast, Ghana. Most of the early European Supercargoes often regarded this region of the Niger Delta as the territories along the Guinea Coast.

Until the introduction of guns in the 15th century, traditional weapons like spears, short swords, and bows held sway. Later on in the 18th century, efforts were made to re-organize the local guilds of blacksmiths to manufacture light firearms, but dependence on imports was still heavy. However, when the British came with their guns, those guilds of blacksmiths were charged with war production of contraband goods particularly swords and iron spearheads since they wanted to subdue "the natives" but allowing only their military hardware to fly. Yet Benin's tactics were extremely well organized, with preliminary plans weighed by the Oba and his sub-commanders. Logistics were organized to support missions from the usual porter forces, water transport via canoe, and requisitioning from localities where the army passed through. Movement of troops via canoes was critically important in the lagoons, creeks and rivers of the Niger Delta, a key area of Benin's domination. Tactics in the field seem to have evolved over time. While the head-on clash was well known, the documentation from the 18th century showed there was greater emphasis on avoiding continuous battle lines, and so more effort was put to encircle the enemies - the ifianyakos (Cf. Bondarenko, Dimitri M. 2005, 45-56).

THE GOLDEN AGE OF THE BENIN EMPIRE 1500 - 1800

We can now graphically look into the goings-on within the Benin Empower at the zenith of its organization in her military, in arts and crafts, in her economy, governance and human development etc. For maximum effect fortifications were also very important in the region since numerous military campaigns were necessary and the Benin soldiers on ground were always handy and ready to fight off whatever revolved around sieges. As noted above, Benin's military earthworks were the largest of such structures in the world, and Benin's rivals also built extensively. Barring any successful assault, most sieges were resolved by a strategy of attrition by slowly cutting off and starving out the enemy fortifications until they capitulated. On occasions however, European mercenaries were called on to aid with these sieges as happened in the cases of King Jaja of Opobo as shown. In 1603–04 for example, European cannons helped batter and destroy the gates of a town near present-day Lagos, allowing 10,000 warriors of Benin to enter and conquer it. As payment, the Europeans received items, such as palm oil and bundles of pepper (Cf. Scholefield, Alan. NY.1975; 67-81). This example of Benin shows the power of indigenous military systems, but also the role outside influences and new technologies brought to bear. This is a normal pattern among many nations and was to be reflected across Africa as the 19th century dawned. Again we see the state developing an advanced artistic culture especially in its famous artifacts of bronze, iron and ivory. These included bronze wall plaques and life-sized bronze heads of the Obas of Benin. For example, the Oba's palace or court was a square, but was actually a very large town and as large as the town of Haarlem and was entirely surrounded by a special wall, like that which encircles the town. It was divided into many magnificent palaces, houses, and apartments of the courtiers, and comprised of very beautiful and long square galleries as large as the Exchange at Amsterdam. Each gallery was one larger than another which rested on wooden pillars, from top to bottom covered with cast copper. On these were engraved the pictures of their war exploits and battles. The state developed an advanced artistic culture, especially in its famous artifacts of bronze, iron and ivory. These include bronze wall plaques and life-sized bronze heads depicting the successive Obas of Benin. The most common artifact is that based on Queen Idia which is best known as the FESTAC Mask used in the 1977 logo Second Festival of Black & African Arts and Culture "FESTAC 77" which was hosted by Nigeria.

Most of these artworks were commissioned by or created for the palace, often for ceremonial purposes. Some of them depicted the Obo in various costumes. The guild of artisans enjoyed royal patronage and occupied a designated district of the capital. When the early Europeans particularly the Portuguese first saw these beautiful arts species, they regarded them as not originating from African craftsmen because they did not think Africans were capable of making such sophisticated works of art. They did suppose instead that they were ancient art works crafted either by the "Ancient Egyptians or even by the lost tribe of Israel." They were dumbfounded and were never convinced that they should be credited to Edolites. During the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, Benin grew increasingly rich on the slave trade with Europe. They acquired slaves from enemy states of the interior and carried them in Dutch and Portuguese ships to be sold to the Americas. The Bight of Benin's shore soon came to be known as the "Slave Coast."

Government and Peoples: Just as the Benin Empire was vast and extensive, so also did the monarch and his team of lieutenants including the Ezomos, the Iyases, etc. who waited at his beck and call for Sundry services, emergencies and needs. Whatever needed to be done was carried out with dispatch. Everybody was kept at his toes. At the beginning, the empire was ruled by a regent called the Oba. Today, the Oba of Benin is still very much respected in Nigeria; he is the most revered traditional ruler in Nigeria though his powers are largely ceremonial and religious. The capital of the Benin Empire was Edo, now known as Benin City in what is now southwestern Nigeria. The Benin Empire derives its name from the Bini people who dominated the area. The ethnonym may possibly derive from groups in western Nigeria, where the term "ibinu" means "anger" reflecting the warring nature of the Binis or from central and north-central Nigeria, where the term birnin means "gated" or "walled area" like Kano. The city and its people are more properly called the Edo. That may well have informed the creation of EDO STATE in 1991 by the Babangida Military Regime. Today, this population is found mostly in and around modern day Benin

City. It is from Portuguese explorers that we get the name of the Benin Empire as seen above. However, the Bini name for the land and even the capital city was Edo. When the first European travelers, Portuguese explorers arrived in Benin in 1485 AD, a strong mercantile relationship developed with the Portuguese trading their European goods and guns in exchange for West African tropical products and soon afterwards but increasingly in slaves. In the early sixteenth century the Oba sent an ambassador to Lisbon while the king of Portugal sent Christian missionaries to Benin. It is believed that the missionary enterprise was so successful that many young men and women joined the Religious Congregations and went over to train in Europe. Many of them were caught up with the fascinations of European life and civilization and never came back. At the time many residents of Benin picked up the language and there were some still who could speak a pidgin Portuguese version the late 1800s. The first English expedition to Benin was in 1553, and a significant trade soon grew up between England and Benin. It was mostly based on the export of ivory, palm oil and pepper. The trade consisted of: 20 percent ivory, 30 percent slaves, and 50 percent of other West African merchandise. European visitors in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries brought back to Europe tales of "the Great Benin Empire," which the regarded as a fabulous city of noble buildings, ruled over by a powerful king, the Oba.

THE GREAT DECLINE AND ITS AFTERMATH

Like everything in life, whatever begins, will always have and end, whatever comes to be ceases to be; so too with the great Benin Empire we have been considering. It did come to an end not because of anything else but most precisely on account of the involvement of the British in West Africa in particular and other parts of Africa and the world in general especially in her built-up towards what became known as the British Empire which itself also declined and even collapsed. The Benin Empire declined considerably with the exit of the last and greatest of the Obas, Oba Ovonramwen as discussed above. Yes, as Holy Writ in the Book of Ecclesiastes has declared, “there is a season for everything under the sun – a time for building up (an Empire), a time for knocking (it) down.” There is always an “expiry date” for everything including drugs vis-a-vis our ubiquitous NAFDAC jingles. This reminds me of those good school days and in Standard IV History class, because then one had to study about the Slave Trade and the Discovery of the source of the River Niger by Mungo Park; in Standard V Class especially in Geography lessons, one had to study about every single city-state of British Dominion of both East and South Africa to wit: Rhodesia, the Orange Free State, Cape Coast, Tanganyika, Azania, etc. while in Standard VI History and Geography lessons, we had to study about the Inventions, the Age of Great Discoveries and the Industrial Revolution masterminded by Diego Cam Vasco da Gama, Bartholomew Diaz, David Livingstone, Albert Schweitzer, Mungo Park etc. which divided up the United Kingdom into cities with specific specialties in Inventions and Manufacturing to wit: Manchester, machinery, Birmingham, bicycles and motor cycles; Middlesex, Nickel knives, spoons, etc. I could still recall this latter city specializing in “small arms”, hence “Birmingham Small Arms”. It was being regarded as 3rd Class in bicycles and motor cycles manufacturing tagged BSA whereas its 1st Class and 2nd Class counterparts were Raleigh and Phillips bicycles. Lancashire was noted for its manufacturing of cars ditto Wexford in Ireland, while Ipswich and Liverpool were noted for their deep sea ports and Railway terminals. Not to be forgotten was the city of New Castle specializing in the production of coal, hence the idiomatic expression: “Carrying coal to New Castle”. But the climax or was it the anti-climax of them all regarding this issue of decline and expiry, was that on that eventful morning in 1957, we had all trooped out, both pupils/students and teachers for the Morning Assembly. I was a pupil teacher then. After the routine activities of “Inspection” of uniforms, other aspects of practical hygiene including the inspection of teeth, nails, sandals/Canvas (White or Brown), hair etc. of the pupils, the tutor on duty intoned the British Empire song for marching in. At the words “the British Empire shall never perish, Hurrah –hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!” the Head Master watching out from his office window shouted down on both teachers and students "S -sha -rap there, you baboons"! And this should not be lost to you and me dear readers, because while innocently and happily singing and clapping for the eternal reign of the British Empire, that Empire also met its eventual Waterloo and collapsed, ditto the great UNION OF SOVIET SOCIAL REPUPLICS (USSR). But why all this? It is all about the beginning and end of all things under heaven. The year 1957 was declared "Internal Independence Year" both in the Western Region and Eastern Region of Nigeria. The North understandably was not ready and postponed her own to 1959. While the West perfected the three "F" s of Free Education for all, Free Health Services for all and Free and Integrated Employment for all" by the Government of Western Region under Chief Jeremiah Obafemi Awolowo as the Premier of Western Nigeria, Dr. Benjamin Nnamdi Azikiwe, Premier of the Eastern Region had also declared Free Education only in the Eastern Region that year, and it ended in a fiasco. The economy of the East plummeted with a bang and the entire Eastern Region of Nigeria lay prostrate. This and others resulted in Dr. K.O. Mbadiwe mockingly and derisively commenting with his mantra of "Boycott the boycottables! But why? Because these were surely those mute events which lead to the collapse and fall of the ubiquitous British Empire with Nigeria's Independence in 1960 after India had gained her Independence in 1947, similarly Gold Coast in 1956 with the new name tag of Ghana to show for it. Yes, as it did happen, the British Empire collapsed, so did the great Persian Empire, the Greek Empire, the Holy Roman Empire. Yes, the Great Benin Empire had also to give way; it did decline as we shall soon see. And that another species of A???ùë??? digression for you!

By the last half of the 19th century the city and the great Benin Empire began to decline ostensibly through the slackness, flagging and diminishing influence of the kings but more so as a result of the decline in Slave Trade in favour of the "Legitimate Trade" in European goods and services which the reigning Obas and potentates of the time were not used to, and more poignantly too, because they were quite unwilling to let go. So they were faltering and caught up between and betwixt. First, like it always happens when people are sated with the good things of life, the Obas began to relax and lose focus. Because there was so much affluence and the good things of life seemed inexhaustible, what they ever thought about was to sit back and enjoy life. They began to indulge in luxuries and debauchery and were caught up with the easy life and pleasure. The latter age Obas began to marry uncountable Olories and concubines and forgot about whatever happened in the Empire. Similarly, the army generals and other officials of state were also caught up with this bug of relaxation, enjoyment and indolence. They forgot about patrolling the frontiers and staying alert and fit. The dukes and kings including those who were stakeholders in the good governance of the city as also other functionaries of state became enmeshed in hedonism and ravenousness to the extent that the apparatus of state began to rut and decay. They lost touch with the citizenry but most especially with both their vassals and conquered citizenry by ignoring their complete integration and the welfare of those from their acquired territories. This led to the loss of faith, exasperation and unhappiness of the people who then began to complain of marginalization, neglect and high-handedness. With all these inequities and complaints galore, imbalances and mounting discontents, the citizens began to extricate themselves from the concerns of the Benin Republic. It became a sort of *"to your tents O Israel" (1 Kgs 12:16). All these were an avenue for internecine wars here and there such that the Captains of war and the militia warlords became stretched beyond their capacities. This led to the loss of fitness, drive, focus and dissatisfaction. The inevitable result of all these was disintegration and decline. The Obas and their chiefs could not just understand. They became flat footed, clueless and bereft of ideas. Hence they could not just cope with the happenings in an era of such a situation. Then the consequence was its collapse. Again by this time, European activities in the area, most notably through the Trans-Atlantic Slave-trade had begun to wane as a result of the British Government's ban on slave trade by force of arms. This resulted in major disruptive repercussions such that in the early 1800s the European Supercargoes also began to change gear in order to concentrate on the booming “Legitimate Trade” in the interior with the Kings and Chiefs of the Niger Delta. They had also begun to develop their own tactics and new trade versions with various maneuvres to deal with the overbearing British merchants and nationals who masterminded the entire West African coast trade. This inevitably brought with it intermittent trade wars that ensued as will be discussed in another article below. The last straw came with the discovery of the River Niger whereby Great Britain became more desirous of having a closer relationship with the Kingdom of Benin than the other kingdoms of Africa. The British merchants and officials also became increasingly interested in controlling trade in the area. They began accessing the kingdom's rubber resources to support their own growing tyre market at home. Several attempts were made to achieve this end beginning with the official visit of Richard Burton in 1862 when he was appointed Consul at Fernando Po. Following that was an attempt to establish a Trade Treaty between Benin and the United Kingdom by Messrs. Hewett, Blair and Annesley in 1884, 1885 and 1886 respectively. However, these efforts did not yield any results. Benin resisted becoming a British protectorate throughout the 1880s, but the British remained persistent. Progress was finally made in 1892 during the visit of Vice-Consul H. L. Gallwey. This mission was significant, being the first Official visit after Burton's. Moreover, it would also set in motion the events to come that would lead to Oba Ovonramwen's demise.

The British tried to use their Brusai “Gestapo” of power to force themselves on the Obas and their chiefs. They even began to do so by force of arms. In their first encounter and bombardments they brought out their WAFF as discussed elsewhere to bring down the Benin Empire, but they were thoroughly thrashed by the Oba's reigning Oba's counter forces grace a la the accession of a new no nonsense and powerful warlord and king, Oba Ovonramwen to the throne of Benin ancestors at that point in time. This came about after the likes of his predecessors viz. Oba Obanosa (1804 - 1816), Oba Ogbebo (1816), Oba Osemwende (1816 - 1848) and Oba Adolo (1848 - 1888) who by their commissions and omissions, but most particularly due their weakness, love of pleasure and leisure, redundancy and lack of focus had brought the mighty Benin Empire prostrate. They could not face the invading Supercargoes and their colonial power-drunk and territory seekers for the annexation of African territories. The task at hand was not such that weak and hedonistic lazy and complaisant kings and bloated military commanders and war officials like those mentioned above could handle. With the added vexed question of conquered and annexed territories within the empire shouting marginalization and seeking to be released to seek their destinies as is happening now in Nigeria, only powerful potentates like the Oba could decisively take action and bare their fangs to deal with such emergencies threatening the corporate existence of the Benin Empire. Yes, because as soon as Oba Ovonramwen became solidly established on his throne, he took full control of proceedings. He tried to revive Benin's power by enthroning the development of trade solely in palm oil and textiles. To preserve Benin's independence, he gradually banned the export of goods from Benin, until the trade was exclusively in palm oil. He then began to work towards restoring the past glory of the Ancient Benin Empire, It should be recalled that the Ancient Oyo Empire which eventually gained political ascendancy over even Ile-Ife triumphed and absolutely took over political strength and ascendancy over much of what is now Mid-Western and Western Nigeria as the Benin Empire was waning. Then, the Oyo Empire was bordered on the territory of and Empire of Dahomey (Benin Republic) on the west, on the east the River Niger and on the north, the northerly lands which later succumbed to Uthman dan Fodio's Fulani-Muslim invasion in the early 1800s. Interestingly, much of what later became known as Western Ibo land and even Yoruba land was conquered by the Benin Kingdom in the late 19th century under Oba Ovonramwen. Agbor (Ika), Akure, Owo and even the present day Lagos Island, which was named “Eko” then meaning “War Camp” in Bini tongue was under the sway of the Old Benin Empire. Nevertheless, as soon as the Oba began to suspect Britain of larger colonial designs, because in these matters there is always a quid pro quo, he cut off communications with Britain until that Expedition in 1896-97 when British troops captured, burned, and looted Benin City.

Britain came not just for business and trade but for acquiring territory. They knew what they wanted to get out of Africa before they came. It was this that brought the Benin Empire to an end (Cf. Benin Edo Princely State. uq.net.au. Retrieved May 26, 2008).

Yes, because as noted above, when Captain Philip, who led the British Commando WAAF exhibition to Benin got to Benin area, before he came, he had sent an intelligence report between 1895 and 1896 to the British Home Office informing them that they were about to come to Benin and depose the king, the Oba of Benin hoping that they their strategy would be successful. What people thought he meant was that the Oba did not want trade between his people and the British agents. But strictly speaking, could they have mounted a war to depose the king of a foreign country just because of trade? Surely the reason for this must be far more important than that; because unknown to most people, it was the "Indirect Rule" which Lugard had in mind and that was what Lugard wanted to extend everywhere in the area they had hitherto acquired. Captain Philip must have discovered that there was no way this could be done without stoking and provoking a situation that would lead to war between Benin and the British. That was why he, Captain Philip wrote to the British Colonial Office saying they had no choice but to invade Benin. He assured them that there were a number of reasons to believe that the value of the bronze and ivory they would find in the Benin palace would be enough to offset the cost of the expedition. Certainly, this was another way of telling them that they were not going to lose anything in the war. So they came to provoke the Benin people. At the end of the war, they tried everybody including Oba Ovonramwen and could not find anything against him since the chiefs themselves who were interviewed and who were physically present at Ogbenewen where Captain Philips and his six men were killed actually denied that the king sent them to kill the white men. Some of the chiefs even testified that it was the Oba who gave orders to them to go and clear the road and make it passable for the British people to come to Benin as there were no roads in those days. That event was as a result of the ambush and slaying of the eight British representatives in Benin territory with Captain Philips as Head of the British espionage to Benin. But it led to the British organizing a 'Punitive Expedition' which was launched in 1897. The British forces, under the command of Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, conquered and burned the city, destroying much of the country's treasured art and dispersing nearly all that remained. Thus Oba Ovonramwen was captured and eventually allowed to live in exile until his death in 1914. In the end they tried cajoling the Oba and informing him that they, the British, had set up a new administrative system in Calabar and advised that he should go there and be exposed to it so as to know how to administer his Benin people the better on his return from Calabar. But everybody knew the British would never allow him come back because they controlled the means of his movements at the time. So they took him away they kept him in Calabar for 17 years. Thereafter, they made several efforts to install another Oba in Benin but the Benin people of course resisted. The main reason Lugard was interested in the Oba's case more than any other ways that he needed a powerful king through whom the British Colonial Government could introduce indirect rule in Southern Nigeria as they had done in the North. Failing to get the Oba to do business, they turned to Lagos and precipitated some problems there between Oba Dosunmu and Oba Kosoko, two powerful kinsmen. The one they met that the people actually put there, ie. Oba Kosoko, they instigated another set of people against him and consequently removed him and put another one, Oba Dosunmu, but discovered he didn't have authority over many areas in the South like the Sultan had over almost the entire North through the Emirs. It was the same scenario that they found out in King Jaja of Opobo whom they thought he could be it. But when they got to the Opobo they were not satisfied with him and so they removed him. Now they also tried to get at King Nanna of Itsekeri. But they discovered to their confusion that King Nanna was only the local not the like of a great traditional ruler they thought him to be. He was simply an influential businessman and local chief and they thought they might be able to use him, they didn't succeed. To remove Nanna as seen above, they had to build a military cantonment at Sapele and from that cantonment they invaded Oba Ovonramwen territory of Benin.

THE BRITISH STRATEGY AND END OF OBA OVONRAMWEN

The British knew that the Oba was the man who fitted the role like that of the Northern Sultan they had wanted, but he was also the man they hated because he, the Oba had some high degree of independence. He was not as subservient as they would have liked. They were no longer comfortable, so they needed to act fast and introduce Indirect Rule in the South in order to align it with the North and eventually get the Amalgamation of them both on course. Yes, they needed to do something about him hence his seventeen years exile and eventual death at Calabar on the eve of December 31, 1899. Yes, they needed to do something about him and I have reasons to believe that they gave him the kind of treatment they gave to Abiola. My belief is reinforced by two events. During the centenary just elapsed a few years ago, it was discovered both in Nigeria, the United Kingdom and America that the death certificate of Oba Ovonramwen could not be found, and this is very unusual. The Public Office in London is very rich, there is nothing that happens in that country that cannot the evidence cannot be found whether about marriage, death, birth or whatever eg. Sir William Shakespeare's birth certificate is there but the one of Ovonramwen is not there. When asked they will say "Go to Nigeria, go to Ibadan archives etc. But it is not there; "go to Calabar, go everywhere", it is not there. That is another moot point they have kept quite close to their chests and this should not be lost to the readers of this book because it seems they did not want to show it to anybody. But then where is it? There is a place called Etinan in Akwa Ibom State. In 1982 still marking his Installation of 1979, the present Oba Erediauwa Omo N'Oba N'Edo Uku Akpolokpolo I made his goodwill tour of the country and came to Calabar and from there he visited Etinan. There and then the Obong of Calabar told a story to the effect that the Calabar people were friends of Oba Ovonramwen. He said that years before then, one of their princes who came trading in Benin-City, took ill and died. So, people came from home, Calabar to look for their prince. They led them to Oba Ovonramwen who gave them a certain number of chiefs to assist them to exhume their prince and they took the body home. Shortly after they got home, they heard that the Europeans had brought a big chief to Calabar. This was no other than Oba Ovonramwen. The people knew what had happened to King Jaja of Opobo, to Nana and all of these; so they were wondering who the big chief they had brought to Calabar again could be. There at Calabar they, to their great surprise, the people discovered that it was the same Benin king who gave them all that help when they came to Benin to look for their dead son that the British had brought to Calabar. From that moment, these chiefs became his friends and they were visiting him regularly. Then they heard the story that the man was dead. But they reasoned that during their visits the king was always in good health; he was jovial, everything was fine with him. But how could it be that they just got back home only to hear that the man was dead? This is the second reason that convinced me that what they did to the Oba in Calabar was similar to what they did to Abiola, ie. to eliminate him. The British planned to invade Benin, depose the king and, after doing what they did, they couldn't press forward with their Indirect Rule while he was yet alive and well. Yes, then, they had to eliminate him and having eliminated him, they could go ahead to effect the amalgamation which he Lord Lugard had wanted more than anything else 20 years before. If Ovonramwen didn't die, it would not have been possible for the British to amalgamate the Northern and Southern protectorates, and if that was not done, Lugard's fiancée or girlfriend as they described her could not have named the area Niger area which in turn, became Nigeria as she conclusively named it. Therefore, it was the death of Ovonramwen that created the country called Nigeria.

However, the office of Oba continued to be recognized during the colonial era even till the Nigeria of today. At his demise, Oba Eweka II (1914-1933) ascended the throne as the new Oba of Benin. Versatile and charismatic, he rebuilt a new palace to replace the one that the British destroyed when they burned the city. Akenzua II (1933-1978) became the next Oba. He was one of the longest reigning Obas in the history of the Benin Kingdom spanning the reigns of King George the V of England and that of his daughter, Queen Elizabeth II gloriously reigning. He it was who received Elizabeth II of the United Kingdom during her state visit to Nigeria in 1956. In 1966 Oba Akenzua II became Chancellor of Ahmadu Bello University, Nigeria. The Oba who by tradition is advised by a Traditional Council, both together with the Obo and the Nigerian Government he purchased back some of those items looted by the British in 1897, viz. the portrait figures, busts, and groups created in iron, carved ivory, and especially those also carved in brass which are conventionally called the "Benin Bronzes". Most of these "Made in Benin Bronzes" are now displayed in museums around the world. About 3000 objects were said to have been removed and for many years stored in secret to perpetuate the myth that no such artwork could have had an African provenance. Today the Obas in conjunction with the Federal Government still continue to request the British Government return what they describe as the "stolen" arts of the Ancient Benin Empire to Nigeria. At his demise in 1979, Crown Prince Eheneden Erediauwa, a graduate of the University of Wales was crowned the 3rd Oba after him at a time he was appointed the Nigerian Ambassador to Norway.

Yes, Prince Edaiken N'Uselu was crowned on his Birthday, Saturday, 20th October 2016. But this young crown Prince, His Royal Majesty, Omo N'Oba N'Edo Uku Akpolokpolo on his accession to the throne took the new title of OBA EWUARE II. Before then, the new Crown Prince had by tradition visited USE community where every Benin Oba picks his name as one of the most significant events in the coronation of the Oba of Benin. But as was rumoured and earlier expected, that he was going to pick the name of his great grandfather OBA OVONRANMWEN ie. as Oba Ovonranmwen II, however the ancestors of the revered Benin Kingdom knew better. That was why and to the surprise of all, he picked the new title of OBA EWAUARE II to the amazement and admiration of his adoring and watching Edolites. To God be the Glory.

As observed above, Oba Ewuare 1, the Golden Age Oba (1440 -1473) was the first ever and greatest Oba of the ancient Benin Empire. He was honest, straight forward and a no nonsense leader. He it was who planted the first Emotan Tree" while Oba Akenzua II commissioned the Statue. He also started the Ewuare Ceremony and the Igue Festival to commemorate his third year of reign. He conquered over 200 towns and villages and expanded the Benin Kingdom and also restructured Edo governance. No wonder this young Crown Prince is being seen as a replica of his father Oba Erediauwa and more so his great grandfather Oba Ovonramwen, and like them all, he will never shy away from the truth. Hence this second coming of Oba Ewuare II will bring great reforms, prosperity, the strengthening of Edo Traditions and a New Agenda for the legendary Edo peoples. He has already started by keeping the records straight by making himself the 40th Oba of the great Benin Kingdom starting from Oba Ewuare 1 as the first Benin Oba thus making his father Oba Erediauwa the 39th OBA right from 1200 AD. But who is this young new OBA of the Ancient Benin Kingdom?

THE NEW OBA OF BENIN, OBA EWUARE II HIS PROFILE AND CORONATION EVENT 20 /10 / 2016

PREAMBLE: The Oba of Benin, or as traditionally designated "OMO N'OBA, EMINI MINI MINI" is the Traditional Ruler of the Edo peoples as also Head of the historic Eweka dynasty of the Great Benin Empire as noted already. The ancient Benin homeland discussed above should not be confused with Modern-day EDO STATE or the REPUBLIC OF BENIN in West Africa which was then known as DAHOMEY. Present-day Benin Republic of course has been and continues to be mostly populated by the Edo peoples known as the BINI OR BENIN ETHNIC GROUP. The title "OBA" was first used by OBA EWEKA 1, of the Old Benin Empire as seen above. He was the first to assume that designation and title 'OBA' about 1180 AD. The Oba of Benin was the de facto Head of State or Emperor of the Benin Empire and remained so until the annexation Benin by the British in 1897. The present Oba picked his new name and title as OBA EWAUARE II ostensibly to indicate that there was the first great king and Oba named OBA EWUARE 1 (1440-1473). Oba Ewuare II is seen by many as one of the greatest modern Obas of Benin Kingdom who has ascended the throne after Oba Erediauwa his father. Oba Erediauwa was the son of Oba Akenzua II born in 1923. Before being crowned he was known as Prince Solomon, Aiseokhuoba, Igbinoghodua Akenzua. His Royal Majesty is the grandson of Oba Akenzua II and his new title is Omo n'Oba n'Edo Uku Akpolokpolo, Oba Ewuare II, the 40th Monarch of the Benin kingdom.

Born Prince Eheneden Akenzua, His Royan Majesty Omo N'Oba Ewuare II ascended the throne of his forefathers on his birthday, October 20, 2016. He attended Edo College, Benin City, Immaculate Conception College (ICC) Benin City, Government College, Ibadan and Yaba College, before going for his post-secondary studies at King's College, Cambridge where he studied Law. Later on the young prince went on to the United States for his Master's Degree in in Public Administration. On his return, he undertook the compulsory National Youth Service (NYSC) Programme at the Nigerian Institute of International Affairs (NIIA), Lagos. Instead of joining the Civil Service after his NYSC, he boldly ventured into the corporate world setting up several business ventures and services. But he later on joined the International Public Service when he served as the Nigerian Ambassador to several countries.

CORONATION OF OBA EWUARE II AND HIS NEW STYLE OF PALACE RULE

Today Oba Ewuare II has changed the narrative of palace administration by his use of customary arbitration instead of the time-used previous Panel Systems, putting back the shattered customary adjudication system to quickly address the numerous disputes brought to the Palace. In short, restored peace and sanity to the kingdom by banning the use of Panels, which were notoriously abused and used for intimidation and extortion to compromise justice and fairness. The young Oba is equally a man of great advocacy of agricultural development, arts and culture and he has capably created the much-needed employment opportunities for Edo teaming youths to further secure stability, security and peace in the kingdom. According to Simon Ebegbulem (Cf. Saturday Vanguard, Oct. 13, 2016), Oba Ewuare 11 was crowned at about 2am on Thursday at the USAMA PALACE by the Usama N'Ihinro, known as the EDION, headed by Chief Oliha. After being crowned, the Oba used a white hand-kerchief to cover his mouth as stipulated by tradition after which the IHAMA presented him to the Bini people at Usama palace. However, the name the monarch picked was kept secret until the grand finale of the coronation at URHOKPOTA HALL where it was disclosed after he was handed the Staff of Office by Governor Adams Oshiomhole. Thereafter, the Oba spent seven days at Usama palace which is located along SILUKO ROAD. This was the first palace built by OBA ORONMIYAN before OBA EWEDO moved it to the present location in the 15th century. However, the final journey to the throne was between Usama palace and Urhokpota Hall where the new Oba met dignitaries from all over the world who came to grace the occasion. The last journey was not easy. By Benin tradition, it is only the gods that give the Oba the strength to survive that last tedious task. The task, worsened by the full regalia made of coral beads with the crown on his head weighing about 20Kg. Oba Ewuare then left Usama palace that Thursday at about 1:45pm and had to follow the ancient path as did by Oba Ewedo to ascend the throne. But before he left the Usama palace, a he-goat was slaughtered at the gate while Ihama, accompanied by Chief Leteman, poured libation to pray to the Ancestors. Then he was held by Chiefs Osa and Osuan, two other chiefs representing Benin ancestors, the twin brothers who escorted Prince Oromiyan from Uhe – a.k.a Ile Ife. When he arrived the palace of Chief Oloton, the young Oba stopped in order to pay homage and perform some rites. He again stopped at IWEHEN N'EWAISE SHRINE before he proceeded to cross the River OMI OTEGHELE. Amidst joy and exclamations by the hailing crowd, Oba Ewuare 11, assisted by Chief Isekhere, crossed the River to meet the 92- year-old CHIEF SAMSON EDOGUN, who had assembled a mock army to fight the enemies of the Oba who may want to stop him from getting to his destination, viz. the URHOKPOTA HALL. When he arrived there 3:25pm, the ceremonial coronation began and was conducted by the USAMA N'IHINRO. Thereafter, his new name was publicly announced to the joy and admiration of the adoring Edolites. At the reception Oba Ewuare II in his 'Acceptance Speech' declared that he was already filling his father's shoes and hoped that His Excellency, Godwin Obaseki, the Governor-elect would do his best “to fill the shoes of the out-going Governor Adams Oshiomhole”, the new Oba of Benin said. He further strongly advised his faithful Benin people, to strive to maintain Benin culture, especially Bini/Edo language by insisting on its use in communicating with the children and with each other admonishing them that the Benin empire which formerly encompassed part of Lagos, across to Asaba, even to the then Dahomey, has now reduced to only a State and that to survive, it was imperative for them to maintain their culture as the only unifying force for the Edo peoples.

ORIGINS AND ESTABLISHMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF BENIN

We cannot bring this Odyssey of the Ancient Benin Empire to its logical conclusion without making no matter how brief, a short account of the origins and establishment of the Premier Higher Institution of the Benin Empire, viz. the UNIVERSITY OF BENIN (UNIBEN), masterminded by the indefatigable and no nonsense Action Military Governor, Brigadier General Samuel Ogbemudia.

ORIGINS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF BENIN (UNIBEN)

When in 1970, Col. Samuel Ogbemudia (1932-2017), then Military Governor of Mid-Western Nigeria conceived the idea of establishing a Higher Institution of Learning in the State, he so designed that the Institution would be named INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY. Later on, he applied to the National Universities Commission for the upgrading of the Institute to a full-fledged University. In July 1971, the NUC acceded to the request an upgraded the Institute accordingly. But in his Budget Speech in April 1972, the Military Governor announced the change of name of the Institute to the "UNIVERSITY OF BENIN" with all the privileges appertaining. Three years later, precisely on April 1, 1975 the University at the request of the State Government, was taken over by the Federal Government of Nigeria thus making UNIBEN then, the 6th Federal owned University in Nigeria. The earlier established Federal Universities were the University of Ibadan – UI, (1948); the University of Nigeria, Nsukka (UNN) 1960; the University of Ahmadu Bello (ABU) 1963; the University of Ife now Obafemi Awolowo University (OAU) 1963 and the University of Lagos (UNILAG) 1965.

VISION AND PROGRESS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF BENIN (UNIBEN) Right from its inception, the University of Benin (UNIBEN) had carved out a niche for itself and also unambiguously set out its vision to "establish a model institution of higher learning which would rank among the best in the world and responsive to the creative and innovative abilities of the Nigerian people". To this end the University, ab initio set out with a Collegiate system right from the 1990s. It meant that what had obtained in the wee years were Colleges and Institutes eg. College of Arts, College of Physical Sciences, College of Medicine, etc. instead of the time-tasted and universally known establishment of Faculties. Having experimented on this, the University Senate decided on reverting to the Faculty system leaving out the Colleges of Medical Sciences and Institute of Child Health. Today UNIBEN has grown beyond our wildest imaginings. The University now boasts of more than twelve Faculties together with the College of Medical Sciences, the School of Dentistry, and several other Institutes and Centres of Learning. In addition, UNIBEN offers Diploma and Undergraduate / Postgraduate Course at various levels and all these have been accredited by the NUC to wit:

FACULTY OF ARTS	FACULTY OF EDUCATION	FACULTY OF ENGINEERING	FACULTY OF ENIVRONMENTAL SCIENCES
FACULTY OF LAW	FACULTY OF MGT. SCIENCES	FACULTY OF LIFE SCIENCES	FACULTY OF PHARMACY
FACULTY OF PHYSICAL SCIENCES	SCHOOL OF BASIC MED. SCIENCES	FACULTY SCH. OF DENTISTRY	FACULTY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
FACULTY OF SOCIAL SCIENCES	SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH	SCHOOL OF PETROLEUM -EFFURUM	SCH. OF FORD FOUNDATION

It is pertinent to note that UNIBEN is also affiliated with local and International bodies like USAID, FAO, United Negro College Fund (UNCF), Raw Materials Research and Development Council (RMRDC). Others are in the areas of Agriculture, Public Health and Engineering. Today, UNIBEN has a total enrolment of over 45,000 students from every state of the Federation, Africa and the rest of the world. There are sufficient provisions and adequate facilities for all including academic and non-academic centres, extensive library, lecture theatres, faculty buildings and administrative services. Just to round up and perhaps readers of this piece were expecting that it must not be omitted: UNIBEN has the enviable reputation and privilege of producing in 1985 the first ever female Nigerian born Vice-Chancellor in the person of Professor Grace allele Williams (1985-1991).

THE OPOBO KIGDOM vis – a - vis KING JAJA OF OPOBO ORIGINS OF OPOBO & KING JAJA

Before 1869, what is now known as Opobo was called Opubo, which was christened by King Jaja. in appreciative remembrance of Chief Opubo, the family head of their House at Bonny to which Jaja had originally belonged as a slave until his emancipation by operation of customary law regarding the gaining of freedom by slaves in those days. Actually King Jaja himself was originally better known and addressed as "Jojo Nwa Nkwerre" ie. Jojo, a "(son) native of Nkwerre in Orlu Administrative District, by the people of Bonny among who he was a slave – a very strong and energetic one at that. As far back as 1869, a civil war had broken out in Bonny on account of a dispute between "Opubo House under the leadership of Jojo Nwa Nkwerre ie. Jaja who then after gaining his freedom had become a reputable chief in Bonny and addressed as: Chief Jack Jojo Annie Pepple on the one hand, and "Manilla House under the leadership of Chief Fugbara which supported the King of Bonny ie. King George Perekule otherwise known as King Pepple. But when Jaja and his comrades-in-arms saw that defeat was imminent, he retreated with 12 other chiefs, each in his canoe with personally recruited and loyal fighting men with their followers and dependents. They made good their escape in search of an asylum in Andoni territory. The flight took them through the creeks of Andoni to Ikot Abasi River now christened Opobo River. The Manilla House in several canoes manned by heavily armed militia men gave them a hot pursuit and almost overtook Jaja but for the intervention of some Andoni stalwart canoe men, who were also arrayed in their fighting armour. These latter successfully blockaded the creeks by felling trees across the creeks thereby cutting off the Bonny warriors and Jaja with his men successfully gained Andoni territory on December 20,1869.

Taking advantage of this protection offered them, Jaja and his fellow adventurers took shelter and settled on some of the islands scattered around. Jaja and his immediate household specifically sheltered themselves in NKORO Island which was then under the governance of King KPOKPO of now Western Obolo. Surprisingly despite this favourable acceptance and refuge granted them, his Andoni hosts did not wholeheartedly trust them whereas Jaja never intended them any harm. Jaja and his men had put themselves at their mercy. To assure the Andoni people of their clear conscience, Jaja and his people arranged that a blood oath of fidelity be taken by both parties and they mutually agreed on a date. This solemn oath by implication bound both sides and their successors never to suffer any harm by way of treachery to either side. Then on Christmas day 1870 by a special arrangement and permission, Jaja and his fellow adventurers sailed to another island further into Ibibio land called Nkontoro which was usually occupied by the Ibibios as a fishing village a.k.a "Ine" but not as a permanent settlement. Having been permitted by the latter to settle there, Jaja christened the place "OPUBO" in memory of his slave master as the head of "OPUBU House" at Bonny. "Opubo" was later corrupted to read "OPOBO" by the European traders just as "JOJO" was changed to "JAJA" This became the trade name of the island including the entire mainland territory for the European traders. With the British colonial administration later, Opobo became the Administrative District encompassing what is now Ogoni land, Eastern and Western Obolo (Andoni) including Ikot Abasi and Mkpat Enin – to wit, eleven Local Government Areas to-date. Opobo had unwittingly acquired considerable prominence among the comity of Divisions and Native Authorities (N/A) in old Calabar Province. With the establishment of the Oil Rivers Protectorate in 1891 a Vice Consul was posted to Opobo River. He established the first consulate at Itak Abasi, a land opposite Opobo ie. Down Town or what they called "Down Below" proximate to the Atlantic littoral. Many European Companies like the Miller Brothers which around 1920 so flourished as to become a conglomerate and a multi-national company and which later changed her name to the United African Company(UAC), Johnson & Cooper, etc. were attracted thereto ostensibly being assured of the British Consulate protection. Meanwhile Jaja had been crowned king with the new title of Jaja of Opobo. He wielded enormous influence and became very rich on account of his trade links with these European companies. He owned fleets of canoes withes with hundreds of servants to man them. King Jaja was known to have established the practice of shipping his palm produce and other articles directly to Europe on his own and profited immensely thereby. His aim was to maintain and consolidate his trade links and importing British manufactured goods into his domain and this independent and powerful manipulation often brought him in conflict with British imperialists who tried to annex his territory and establish the Consulate at Ikot Iwuo near Ikot Abasi under the already recognized name of Opobo. But Jaja stood his ground, and even the King of Ikot Abasi with his people also objected to the British Authorities who had readily opted to pay them compensation in respect of the land. Even Ikot Abasi people also objected to any form of compensation pointing out that it was contrary to their Ibibio custom to sell their land to strangers. At the height of it all, when Jaja became a thorn in the flesh of British imperialists who wanted to exercise full suzerainty over the territory with of course amalgamation in mind, the imperialists placed a ban on Jaja's merchandise with a view to crippling his enterprises. This interface snowballed into open conflict such that when the British posted Sir Harry Johnson as Consul to Opobo in 1887 he immediately schemed out the deportation of Jaja to St Vincent, one of Tenerife Islands in the West Indies where he eventually died.

It only remained for the Obong of Calabar to "voluntarily agree to sign the Treaty of Amalgamation" to make Amalgamation a fait accompli. Till today, every Obong of Calabar has always added to his designation: 'Natural Ruler, Treaty King and Patriarch of Efik Eburutu Kingdom'; which treaty except that of Amalgamation! That is why the Obong of Calabar has always remained the most eminent King in the line of Kings. Obas, Emirs Etc. of Nigeria ever since, hence the designation, His Eminence. Lord Lugard among other things deferred to the Obong and promoted him "Primus inter Pares and First Chief." It was only left later for the "Khaki Boys" when they took over control as Military Rulers of Nigeria to acquiesce and therefore as if to assuage and not incur the envy of the Hausa-Fulani potentates the "Almighty North" raise the Sultan of Sokoto, himself also a First Class Ruler and King in Nigeria - the Supreme Head and Commander of the Muslim Faith to the same rank as "His Eminence, the Sultan of Sokoto" till today. But there will also be other "Eminences" in Nigeria, mark my works. In fact, the same scenario had also played out in Calabar metropolis as the Ndidem of the Quas and the Muri Munene, Patriarch of the Efuts discovered to their chagrin, that they were often schemed out in the political affairs of Calabar on account of the ascendancy and hegemonic tendencies of the Efiks who inhabit but a fraction of the metropolis. But immediately after the civil war, the Khaki Boys in tow promptly raised both Monarchs to the status of First Class Chiefs in the land and even tried though unsuccessfully, to keep them at par with the Obong of Calabar. The British under Lugard had of course previously subdued and abolished the Sokoto Caliphate including the Kwararafa Empire in the North. Having finished off and defeated Uthman dan Fodio the potentate Sultan of Sokoto and Commander General or Field Marshall of most of the Northern empires stretching even to Senegal. They had to also abolish the great Fulani and northern Emirates by subduing the El Kanemi of Borno Empire, etc. amalgamate and impose Indirect Rule in the entire North. This made it possible for them to handle the territory as they wanted. Remember also that the World War I was in the offing, it was there shinning like the Sun on the horizon, and so they needed to act fast to introduce Indirect Rule down South, impose Amalgamation and get the entire territory solidly in their hands. Now you can exactly imagine the fortunes this would bring to them in the event of the outbreak of the World War which inevitably happened and the British in consort with America had held the upper hand. Wasn't it so? All these were taught to us right in the primary schools of those days. This was a Standard IV History Course which text book my mother had bought for me right from our town IDU, precisely at Nwaniba where the British and other European Companies like the United African Company (UAC. British) Chellerams (Dutch), (M&K. Italian), Compagnie Française Africaine Occidentale (CFAO/ French), and Paterson Zochonis (PZ. German) etc. were situated. I have mentioned this elsewhere in this book yet all this is news to our younger generation for not teaching them History and Geography in Schools any more. The deposition of Oba Dosunmo of Lagos and the Installation of Oba Kosoko, their yes man and protégé were done in order to carry out their tricks and programmes of political expansion and conquests of the West because they also had abolished both the great Oyo as also the Benin empires. But when this could not work out, yet with another subterfuge, they masterminded the deposition of Oba Akitoye in 1906 for the Unification of Lagos with rest of Southern Nigeria. All these were part of the British game plan through Sir Lugard and his clique as Architect-in-Chief, including of course the inexplicable transfer of the capital of Nigeria then together with Sir Walter Edgerton from Calabar to Lagos in that same 1906. Of course they had to do this, because after bringing Sir Egerton the erstwhile Consul General to Lagos the new Headquarters of what they destined to become Nigeria; soon after, the British Foreign Office decided to "kick him upstairs" by promoting him as Lord Mayor in the British Crown Office in London. That is why they sent him back to England ostensibly in order to install Lugard as Lord and later Governor General with Lagos as the new colonial Head Quarters of the Nigerian State. Again all this was a calculated planning for the eventual AMALGAMATION of 1914 we are all talking about now and planning to celebrate the centenary thereof next year 1914, which will be 100 years from then. So to Lagos then we must go as high profile location for the scheming of the intrigues of Amalgamation. But first of all let us take on even if superficially the profile and history of the origins of those some of those ethnic nations like Ogoni, Okrika, Ijaw, etc. which constituted the great empire of King Jaja.

ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION OF OGONI, OKRIKA, IJAW, ETC. IN ANCIENT OPOBO.

We cannot get a complete picture of the great empire over which King Jaja of Opobo presided over without mentioning if only perfunctorily the ethnic kingdoms of Ogoni land, Ijaw land and ACRIKOCK a.k.a Okrika kingdom all in now the Oil Rich Rivers State of Nigeria which was created in May 1967 together with the other two Eastern States of the defunct Eastern Region of Nigeria under Chief Michael I. Okpara as Premier and Sir Francis Akanu Ibiam as Governor, viz. South Eastern State with Headquarters at Calabar and East Central State of Nigeria with Headquarters at Enugu. The States were created by no other authority than General (DR) Yakubu Gowon, GCFR, the legendary war lord of the infamous Nigeria-Biafra war. He was then the Head of the Military Government and Commander IN-Chief of the Federal Armed Forces of Nigeria.

EVOLUTION HISTORY AND ORIGINS OF OGONI LAND

Not so long ago and precisely in the 1990s during the reign of the then tagged "evil maximum ruler", General Sani Abacha GCFR, Head of State and Commander of the Armed forces of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, OGONI, this land of promise came into the lime light if not for any other reason but more so over the great storm which also brought about a great turmoil and lamentations among the Ogoni peoples leading to the so-called "OGONI 4 v/s OGONI 9", after the gruesome decapitation of the amiable poet and playwright Comrade Ken Saro-Wiwa under the gulag of the aforementioned maximum ruler. Why? Just for the simple reason that he had looked into the 1989 Constitution of this country which guarantees the citizens as well as offers ethnic nationalities the freedom to seek self-determination under the same Federal Republic of Nigeria and by his declaration and championing of the "Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People - MOSOP" as we shall soon see. The Ogoni Kingdom is an ethnic nationality among the many kingdoms of ancient Opobo now in the present Rivers and Bayelsa States of Nigeria - a region in South South of Nigeria. The population of the Ogonis is put at about 1.5 million people with a land mass of 404 square miles or 1,050 square Km. The inhabitants always refer to their territory and homeland as Ogoni land. They share common boundaries with the Oruk Anam nationality of Akwa Ibom State and the Ikwerre and Okrika in the Rivers State. They also have oil-related environmental problems and hazards with the oil-bearing territories of Niger Delta viz. Ibeno in Akwa Ibom State as also the Ijaw, the Urhobo, Itsekeri and Edo. As mentioned above, Ogoni land rose to international attention after the massive public protests and campaigns against the "Royal Dutch/Shell" Company there which had neglected and literally destroyed their source of living, their economy, environment etc. in the despoliation of their rivers and land which bore the rich black gold for Nigeria. Then due to oil spillages all over the place, these protests led to their formation of the famous Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People – MOSOP as mentioned already.

The Ogoni territory is located as seen in the Rivers State of Nigeria on the coast of the Gulf of Guinea and lies east of the city of the Capital Port Harcourt. It extends across the Local Government Areas of former Opobo Division now numbering five LGAs viz. Western Obolo ie. Ancient Opobo proper, Khana, Gokhana, Eleme and Tai. Other LGAs of ancient Opobo numbering three now belong to Akwa Ibom State Viz. Eastern Obolo, Ikot Abasi and Mkpat Enin. Traditionally, Ogoni land is divided into six kingdoms namely, Babbe, Gokhana, Ken-Khana, Nyo-Khana, Eleme and Tai. There are six linguistic groups in Ogoni ethnic nationality of which the major ones are Khana, Gokhana, Tai or T??, Eleme, and Ban Ogoi, but they are all coined from Khana. The beautiful T Road Junction at Taaba speaks very eloquently of the greatness and importance of this great ancient town and kingdom of Khana. This is indeed the characteristic twist of the Niger Delta region as an "atomistic society" with a multiplicity of sometimes mutually unintelligible linguistic diversity. Brosnahan has made a detailed study of this ethnic group and has come up with a compendium and word list of Gokhana dialect (Cf. Brosnahan, L.F. 1967; See also Hyman, L.M. 1983, 171–179; Ikoro, S.M. 1989, 19; Ikoro, S.M. 1996, 45; Piagbo, B.S. 1981, 78; and Thomas, N.W. 1914, 37-41. 32)

Oral tradition has it that the Ogonis migrated from ancient Gold Coast now Ghana down to the Atlantic coast and eventually made their way to the eastern Niger Delta, hence the recurring decimal of Khana v/s Ghana. Kay Williamson has also done some linguistic calculations to place the Ogonis in the Niger Delta since 15 BC, but it could be much earlier considering the antiquity of the Niger Delta peoples which also includes URUAN/EFIK. This has made them one of the oldest settlers in the eastern Niger Delta region. Radiocarbon dating taken from sites around Ogoni land and the neighbouring communities coupled with oral traditions also support this claim. Traditionally, the Ogonis are an agricultural people, also known for livestock herding, fishing, the production of salt and palm oil cultivation as also trading. Like other peoples on the Guinea Coast, the Ogonis have an internal political structure which is subject to the political arrangement and organizational expertise of their community leaders. It is a sort of "government of the community by the community and for the community". This extends to the appointment of chiefs and other community developmental bodies. Some of these are recognized by Government but others are not.

The Ogonis also survived the scourge and period of the slave trade masterminded by King Jaja, but in their relative isolation they did not seem to lose many of their members to enslavement. During the built-up towards the colonization of Nigeria by the British around 1885, the British soldiers arrived in Ogoni by 1901 and a major resistance to their presence continued through 1914 as mentioned above in the treatment about Opobo. The Ogonis were integrated into a succession of economic systems at a pace that was extremely rapid which really exacted a great toll from them. But at the turn of the twentieth century, according to their own writers "the world to them did not extend beyond the next three or four villages" (Cf. V?bnu, S.K. 2001, 12). But that soon changed because the late DR. Ken Saro-Wiwa, their own son and activist as also the President of MOSOP, described the transition that engulfed Ogoni in such an emotion-laden temperate to the effect that "when people begin to think that within the space of seventy years when the people of Ogoni were as it were struck by the combined forces of modernity, colonialism, money economy, indigenous colonialism and very poignantly by the Nigerian Civil War, certainly the people Nilly Willy would have had no other choice but to adjust to these forces without adequate preparations or direction." It was this sort of situation that caused the bafflement of the people and the subsequent confusion engendered within the society. Anybody who could not "appreciate this should have nothing to do with our people" (Cf. Ken Saro-Wiwa, "Genocide in Nigeria: The Ogoni Tragedy"; See also "Quotes from Ken Saro-Wiwa; "Letter to Ogoni Youth.";" Ogoni Bill of Rights)".

In their contributions on this matter of Human Rights violations and the persecution of Ogoni peoples, two very important Conflict and Conflict Resolution Ogoni citizens and commentators, Steven Crayford, similarly David Kupfer wrote among other things that "the Ogonis have been victims of degradation and that over 200 locations of Ogoni land have been wasted." The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) also concurred on finding out that with the impacts of the 50 years of oil exploration in the region and on account of oil spills and oil flaring brought about by the despoliation of the entire Ogoni land, the people must be rehabilitated and compensated because according to them the extent of Environmental Contamination were "threats to Human Health". Following in the same vein, the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) as also the WHO declared in their assessment in 2011 that on account of waste discharges all over the place, the alluvial soil of Ogoni land, nay the entire Niger Delta was no longer viable for agriculture. Furthermore, in many areas that seemed to be unaffected, they also judged and concluded that the groundwater was found to have high levels of hydrocarbons and consequently were very contaminated with benzene, and carcinogen at 900 levels above WHO guidelines. Then in their estimation they concluded as a sort of both caution recommendations to the effect that "it could take up to 30 years to rehabilitate Ogoni land to its full potential and that the first five years of rehabilitation would require funding of about US$1 billion" (Cf. News Centre. August 4, 2011).

It will be remarked that the Ogonis have been victims of human rights violations for many years. It can also be recalled that in 1956 ie. four years before the Nigerian Independence in 1960, the Royal Dutch/Shell Company in collaboration with the British Government, discovered a commercially viable oil field on the Niger Delta precisely in a village called Oloibiri now in Bayelsa State of Nigeria and promptly, the British started oil production in 1958. I can remember this vividly because apart from the fact that we had a radio set which had broadcast this novel and heart-warming news, though the radio was not common in those day, our Geography Tutor, the late Dr. Aloysius B. Usua of Calabar origin at the St. Thomas Higher School and Teacher Training Collect alerted us to this event during a lecture programme on Seismic Studies at a Geography lesson. But just within a 15-year period ie. from 1976 to 1991 there were reportedly 2,976 oil spills of about 2.1 million barrels of oil in Ogoni land alone which is a neighbouring territory by sea to this very oil well town located in Bayelsa. This has accounted for about 40% of the total oil spills of the Royal Dutch/Shell Company worldwide. Can you beat that? But this is exactly what brought Ogoni land to the eyes of the International Community due to their plight in the despoliation of their land, thanks to UNEP and WHO for bringing this disaster and degradation of Ogoni land and the plight of the people to the attention of the world for immediate redress. It was this also that infuriated the people such that in 1990, under the leadership of their own son Ken Saro-Wiwa, an activist and environmentalist started the Movement of the Survival of the Ogoni People (MOSOP). With this, he planned a revolution to kick-start the action against the Federal Republic of Nigeria and the Royal Dutch/Shell Company. In the month of October 1990, MOSOP presented "The Ogoni Bill of Rights" to the Federal Government during the military Presidency of General Ibrahim Badajoz Babangida. It was hoped that this Bill would gain political and economic autonomy for the Ogoni peoples. The aim was to give them some control over the natural resources of their kingdom and to protect her against further land degradation. But unfortunately with the execution of Ken Saro-Wiwa and three others known as "Ogoni 4" by the maximum evil war lord, General Sani Abacha led Federal Military Government and counter reprisal retaliation in the killing of other Ogoni citizens who were the official mouth piece and leaders of the opposition to their "beloved Ken" in what became tagged as the "Ogoni 9" in 1994, MOSOP disintegrated and lost steam till today.

Then in 1996 led by David Kupfer, the Ogonis launched a “Worldwide boycott" of Ogoni Progressives against the Shell Company. The protests were designed to stop contractors from laying any new pipelines for the Shell Company. But the Government ordered the Mobile Police, the combatant force equivalent of “Front War military in action” in a war situation to raid the area in order to quell the unrest. It was another disaster for the people of Ogonis since in the ensuing chaos about 27 villages were alleged to have been raided resulting in the death of over 2,000 Ogonis and the displacement of 80,000 people as refuges. But thanks to the accession and appointment of Niger Delta citizen, an indigene of Bayelsa in the person of Dr. (Mrs.) Deziani Allison-Madueke in 2012 as the Nigerian Minister of Petroleum Resource by another Niger Deltan of Bayelsa, His Excellency Dr. Goodluck Ebele Jonathan GCFR, the Nigerian President and Head of State, Commander In-Chief of the Armed Forces of Nigerian who personally, during that Administration announced the eventual establishment of the Hydrocarbon Pollution Restoration Project as follow-up to the UNEP report to usher in the clean-up of Ogoni land to prevent further degradation. Very recently and precisely in 2016 under General Muhamadu Buhari, GCFR, the new Nigerian President and Head of State and Commander In-Chief of the Nigerian Armed Forces, the clean-up has been officially flagged off to the greater Glory of God and the eternal wellbeing of the Ogoni peoples.

RIVERS: A HISTORY AND ORIGINS OF OKRIKA KINGDOM

As a follow up towards the restoration of the ethnic nationalities in former Opobo Division of ancient Calabar Province of the colonial era, there is need to also comment briefly on the origins and evolution of those colonial towns and clans which the early European Supercargoes and explorers precisely the Spaniards traded with viz. Ogoni, ancient Okrika part of which have been subsumed into what is now called PORT HARCOURT. The early European slave merchants had christened this ancient village “ACRIKOCK” a.k.a OKRIKA which is also situated in the Rivers State of the Niger Delta region of Nigeria. In our childhood days in the 1940s and 1950s, nobody ever associated the name Okrika with any town or village or even a people for that matter. Rather what one heard and saw were the second-hand clothings especially dresses for the women folk which were sold in the open floors in the markets of big towns and cities like Calabar, Idu Beach Market a.k.a Esuk Mbehe, Aba, Onitsha, Port Harcourt, Lagos, Enugu and Kaduna. In those days these tokumbo clothings popularly and jokingly tagged “OKRIKA WAKE UP” were thought of as clothings thrown away in America and Europe but which the so-called “been-tos” had collected and brought back home after obtaining the proverbial “Golden Fleece” academic degrees after their studies abroad. They had collected these god-forsaken clothings from dust bins and brought them home to show off that they had been to America or Europe for further studies. These clothings were not like the dresses usually worn in Nigeria and they were easily distinguished as such. At first it was just that and nothing else. But later these clothings began to win the attraction of the masses because most of them after all were not exactly so worn out or torn or dirty. With time, trust Nigerians, some people really embarked on going to Europe and America to bring home these forsaken items of clothing. Apart from the cost of freight there was nothing else to them. No wonder why they were so cheap, hence the nick name “sat- eke-amade” or “sat ekema” in URUAN/EFIK and Ibibio tongues for these “Okrika” clothings. People used to come from all parts of the hinterland to Calabar or Idu or Port Harcourt to pick up these cheap dresses. Keeping up with Joneses is not only expensive, it innovative and trust our women, they won't stop at flogging the fashion to buyers in faraway places outside Lagos or Calabar. Some have even stopped asking their business associates to help them sell their fairly used clothes because some believe buyers are not forthcoming with cash at hand payments. Men's used outfits are more difficult to fling. Husbands are advised to dry-clean their expensive clothes so that they can keep well and can later be sent to the high-brow fashion houses to be sold. Sometimes it is worrisome why so much fuss is made of the sale of second-hand clothings in this country. Maybe it has to do with the crude and unsavoury sales methods marketers adopt. But nothing looks so good when marketers dump them in a heap asking buyers to fight for them.

It was later on that people began to hear and learn that "OKRIKA" was actually the name of a kingdom and territory not quite far away from our shores, ie. from Calabar. Then those hearing about it for the first time began to wonder whether it was not rather in this area of Port Harcourt that such type of clothings were manufactured. Nevertheless, OKRIKA is indeed an island port town situated quite near the southern port of Port Harcourt which therefore makes it a of the city of Port Harcourt. It is also the capital of the Local Government Area of the same name. It lies on the north of the Bonny River and on Okrika Island, 35 miles ie. 56 Km upstream from the Bight of Biafra now Bight of Bonny. The town can be reached by vessels of a draft of 29 feet (9 metres) or less. The Okrika peoples speak one of the nine closely related Niger–Congo languages, all of which belong to the "Ijoid" branch of the Niger–Congo tree. The primary division between the Ijo languages is that between Eastern Ijo of Bayelsa and Western Ijo in Delta State, the most important of the former group of languages being "Izon", which is spoken by about ten million people. The local language of Okrika people "Kirike" is part of the ljaw group of languages. It is also spoken by some natives as first language. Some Proverbs of Okrika can be found in the Appendix of this book in the Niger Delta section. Also spoken by some natives as their primary language in Okrika is the Igbo language as well.

Before the coming of colonial Britain to the shores of Port Harcourt, Okrika was just a small fishing village of ancient "Ijo"- Ijaw people who were living along the mangrove swamps of the eastern Niger River delta. But by early 17th century when the early European Supercargoes came calling, Okrika became the capital of the Okrika kingdom and actively participated in the booming "Slave Trade" of the Niger Delta region. With the abolition of the evil trade in the 1830s, it served as a port for the exportation of palm oil and kernels, but it was a less significant port facility than Bonny 18 miles ie. 46 Km away to the south of Opobo and 32 miles ie. 81 Km away to the east-southeast of Opobo. The estimated population of Okrika is put at 145,000 by the 2006 census and this constitutes the entire population of the Wakirike Local Government Area of Rivers State. But an estimated Okrika native population is put at 222,026 and these live elsewhere around the world, mostly in the United Kingdom and the United States.

By the turn of the century, precisely around 1912, Okrika was completely eclipsed by Port Harcourt. It was only around 1965 that it was revived as a commercial port when the nearby Alesa-Eleme Oil refinery was completed and pipelines were built to a jetty on Okrika Island. There is also a major gas plant, the "Alakiri Gas Plant" facility in Okrika now and it is this that supplies gas to the refinery and others. The only significant exports in Okrika for now are the refined petroleum products but there are other considerable avenues of commerce and commercial enterprises viz. the local trade in fish, oil palm produce, locally processed salt, cassava ie. manioc, taro, plantains, and yams. There are nine traditional towns constituting the Okrika Kingdom including Kirike, Ogoloma, Ogu, Bolo, Abuloma, Ogbogbo, Ibaka, Ele and Isaka. Most of these traditional towns also have satellite villages. Today the constituent towns of Okrika kingdom has increased to eleven towns. The additional two towns are Obumoton which have become part and parcel of Port Harcourt City as also Koniju Town ie. Koni-ama. Obumoton is a collective name for Okrika villages which were acquired by the British Colonial Government in 1913 to establish the sea port of Port Harcourt. Some Ikwerre villages were also acquired by the Colonial Government to constitute "Obumoton" which was the old township now renamed Port Harcourt after the colonial High Commissioner J. Harcourt during the reign of King Jaja, but it is now also part of Okrika Kingdom. In 1995 the Koniju section of Kirike was declared Koniju town by a Rivers State High Court. It is now also a constituent town of Okrika Kingdom. The traditional towns that constitutes the Okrika nation has therefore increased from nine towns prior to 1913 to eleven towns as at 1995. The constituent towns of Okrika are therefore as follows:

OKRIKA TOWN	ABULOME	ELE	OGU
OGOLOMA	IBAKA	ISAKA	OBUMOTON (NOW IN PORT HARCOURT)
BOLO	OGBOGBO	KONIJU	CAPITAL CITY

OKRIKA WAR-CANNOES AND OKRIKA HOUSES

The people of Okrika as mentioned above and like the Ijaw and other sub-groups of the Niger Delta are organized into autonomous and co-equal "War-Canoe Houses", the "Omuaru-wari"and see themselves as kith and kins living together in the same area each sub-group constituting a "War-Canoe House". This is because in ancient times these HOUSES were made up of warring groups principally for war and defense.

Placed against the background of ancient Opobo, there were always wars between one community and another such that each autonomous community or kindred in the ancient kingdom of Okrika would always be living in a war situation well prepared and well-armed and set in battle array to contain any attack by another warring community, hence these sort of "house-systems ie. "War-Canoe Houses". The people in these houses living together by their kindreds just as military battalions or brigades who are constituted for any war situation. Since the war situation having ended with the coming of the colonial masters and missionaries, these Omuaru-wari ie. "War-Canoe Houses" were retained as a political unit just as the URUAN/EFIK Royal Houses an institution of kinship. There are different kinds of War-Canoe houses in Okrika kingdom in terms of size and man power. Nevertheless, benefits and community assets are shared equally to the "Houses" irrespective of their numerical strength. Every "War-Canoe House" is headed by a "Warinyanabo" or "Waridabo" which is the Okrika nomenclature for "Chief" or village/house/kindred Ruler. They are assisted in various capacities and functions by sub-chiefs. The Chiefs also are addressed as according to their status as heads of the entire War-Canoe houses known as "Omuaru-wari" or "Warinyengi". Similarly, each War-Canoe house is constituted by sub-units known variously as "Warikubu" or "Oko". Each sub-Warikubu or Oko is headed by a sub-chief known locally as the "Oko-tibidabo"'. Again, each sub-unit of the Warikubu or Oko is further divided into extended family units known as "Furo". Okrika people are characterized by strong kinship ties composed of grandfathers, parents, uncles, aunts, brothers, sisters, cousins, nephews and nieces just as in URUAN/EFIK and other territories of the Niger Delta region. There is or "Age Grade" or class system in Okrika land just as was the case in URUAN/EFK, Igbo land, etc. though these class systems may not be working as they did in the olden days. The male members of the War-Canoe house apart from the Chief and the King or Paramount Ruler ie. the "Amayanabo" are classed into "Opu Mumbu ie. First class, "Ogbobiri Mumbu" ie.' second class, "Kala Mumbu" ie. Third class and "Owuapu-awo for the teenagers below 18 years of age. Similarly, female members of a War-Canoe house are classed into the "Opu Mumbu" for the first class, 'Kala Mumbu' (second class) and 'Iria-Soka Awo' (Maidens). The class system is an

The Ijaw peoples also practice a type of "Class System". Within each War-Canoe house, there are four classes for men and three for women. Classes are referred to as "Mumbu". The male members of the War-Canoe house apart from the Chief and the King a.k.a Amayanabo are classed into "Opu Mumbu" ie. first class, "Ogbobiri Mumbu" ie. Second class, "Kala Mumbu" ie. Third class and "Owuapu-awo' for teenagers below 18 years of age). Similarly, female members of a War-Canoe house are classed into the "Opu Mumbu" ie. First class, "Kala Mumbu" ie. Second class and "Iria-Soka Awo" (Maidens). The class system is an ordinary ranking system; however, it ensures hard work and progress within the War-Canoe House. Ranking is usually based on age and achievements. However, the main factors that determines promotion to a given class may vary between War-Canoe Houses. As opposed to the Indian Caste system, classes are neither heritable nor transferable. Therefore, no member of the War-

Canoe house is born into a class. Members higher up the class have a greater share of the benefits and financial burdens of the War-Canoe House but decision making within the War-Canoe house is democratic. In ancient Okrika as was the case with most of the riverine villages towns in the Niger Delta region most the people practised animism or African Traditional Religion. In modern Okrika since the Coming of the Missionaries notably the Roman Catholic and Anglican Churches many of the Okrika people have become Christians and baptized into these Faiths. Later on around the 1960s but more so after the war, many are now adherents to the multifarious Evangelical and Pentecostal brands like the First African Church (FAC), the Christ Army Church (CAC), the Assemblies of God Church, the· Apostolic Church, Deeper Life, Greater Evangelism, El Shaidai Church, Church of God Mission, Winners Chapel, Christ Embassy, Cherubim and Seraphim, the Salvation Ministries etc. In the main Okrika town the St. Peters' Anglican Cathedral is the most prominent Church. It is this same church that honoured Dame Patience Faka Jonathan the former First Lady and wife of Dr. Goodluck Ebele Jonathan GCFR, the out-going President of Nigeria as a Knight of the Anglican Communion. Other prominent sons of Okrika include the former Governor of old Rivers State, Chief Rufus Ada George and Group Captain John Ibiwari, former Military Administrator of Yobe State during General Sani Abacha's maximum regime.

HISTORY AND ORIGINS OF IJAW PEOPLES OF NIGERIA

As a child, the name Ijaw always conjured up sentiments of fear and awe at these sea faring coastal communities which were always armed to the teeth and ready in battle array to strike down any invasion or warring neighbours not minding their business. In fact, like the Umani, the people of URUAN/EFIK kingdom often hired these great invincible warriors whenever there was a scheming attack on the land. Small wonder then that quite in recent times the name IJAW has also come into prominence ostensibly on account of the Itsekeri/Ijaw wars during the past twenty years or so. One manifestation of ethnic violence on the part of the Ijaw peoples has always been in the increase in the number and severity of clashes between Ijaw militants and those of Itsekeri origin who are close neighbours in Delta State particularly in the town of Warri. Deadly conflicts had rocked these two communities of the South-South region especially in Delta State where they were often engrossed in terrible internecine, intertribal killings. Over the years these conflicts have resulted in uncountable deaths on both sides with the Ijaws "never saying die." Scattered all over the Niger Delta region of the South including Ondo in South Western Nigeria, are these warlike collection of indigenous peoples of the Niger Delta also known by the subgroups as "Ijo "or "Izon". They are spread all along communities and kingdoms mostly in Bayelsa, Delta, and Rivers States within the Niger Delta region of Nigeria. Some are also in Edo and Ondo states of Nigeria as noted above. Many are found as migrant fishermen in camps as far west as Sierra Leone and as far east as Gabon along the West African Coast. Some are said to be of the line of the Timi Dakolo Family that migrated from Ghana to the present location. Most of these wars in the recent past were as a result of disputes of a political nature over the siting of local councils at places and headquarters deemed to be within Itsekeri strongholds which are unfavourable to the Ijaw eg. The most disagreeable issue which cause a more serious conflict between the Ijaws and the Itsekeris was the creation of a new Local Government Authority in Warri East with Headquarters at Ogbe Ijoh right in Ijaw enclave whereas Warri is deputed to be the stronghold and Headquarters of the Itsekeris. The Itsekeris reasoned that as an Itsekeri city no amount of politrics should warrant the siting of the Headquarters thither for the Ijaws. It should be sited within Ijaw communities though sharing borders with them. In most cases several Itsekeri villages, including Gbokoda, Udo, Ajamita, Obaghoro and Ayerode-Zion on the Benin River axis, were razed to the ground with many Itsekeri citizens losing their lives in the resultant encounters. Thanks to the ingenuity and great heart of the former Governor of the State, Dr. Emmanuel Uduagham, himself an indigene of Itsekeri who brokered peace and brought the two warring brethren together in peace and harmony.

ORIGINS AND CULTURE HISTORY OF IJAW PEOPLES

Regarding the origin of the Ijaw peoples, oral tradition has it that the probably settled where they now find themselves in the Delta Region from the earliest of times of antiquity, similarly the other nations of the Niger Delta as observed above. But unfortunately not much is known about this period. Traditionally their early ancestors were said to have "dropped from the sky". It means that the ancestors, ie. the "Orus" were of divine origin and also were devotees of a spiritual culture that made much use of the waters, hence their allusion to mermaids and "water peoples" which are simply mythologies and legends of the "Beni-Otu" common among the Niger Deltans. Then later they were joined by other ancestors "Kumoni-Orus" between 400AD - 650 AD after settling first in the Nupe and afterwards in the Borgu regions of Niger State. Then again they were said to have settled in the Ile-Ife region before moving to the Benin region via Nupe, and Ile-Ife (Cf. Ijaw-naa.org. Retrieved 2016-02-09). From the Benin region they eventually settled and launched expeditions into the Niger Delta where they came across remote settlements of the Orus whom they termed the "ancient people". But because they had been the Orus from the beginning they then began to establish communities in their new territory as one people. The Ijaws or Ijos were known by the two names of Kumoni and Oru up till the 19th century when the European slave merchants came calling. But on noticing that the name Oru as a distinct term was different from Kumoni as another term for Ijaw, the compilers of the Izon/English Dictionary concluded that since "to speak Kumoni is to speak pure Izon language", the term Ijo ie. Ijaw or Izon should be preferred as the name for the whole ethnic nationality. That was how the nomenclature IJAW evolved through time. But there was another ancient tradition about their evolution. This tradition has it that there was an ancestor by the personal name "UJO", hence the derivation of IJAW from this one ancestor.

The Ijaw speak nine closely related Niger–Congo languages, all of which belong to the "Ijo" branch of the Niger–Congo tree. The primary division between the Ijo languages is that between Eastern Ijaw in Rivers/Bayelsa States and Western Ijaw in Delta State. But the most important of the former group of languages is Izon which is spoken by about ten million Ijaws scattered all over Nigeria. Similarly, there are two prominent groupings of the Izon language. The first is that of either Western or Central Izon (Ijaw) and consists of Western Ijaw speaking communities viz. Ekeremor, Sagbama (Mein), Bassan, Apoi, Arogbo, Boma (Bumo), Kabo (Kabuowei), Ogboin, Tarakiri, and Kolokuma-Opokuma or Yenagoa district. South-eastern Ijo (Izon speaking areas include Nembe, Brass and Akassa (Akaha) dialects represent). Buseni and Okordia dialects are considered to be those of Inland Ijo. The other major Ijaw linguistic group is Kalabari. Kalabari is considered an Eastern Ijaw language but the term "Eastern Ijaw" is not its normal nomenclature. Kalabari is the name of one of the Ijaw clans that reside on the eastern side of the Niger-Delta viz. Abonnema, Buguma, Bakana, Degema etc. These have formed a major group in Rivers State, hence their involvement in the fight for greater oil control. Other "Eastern" Ijaw speaking clans are the Okrika, Ibani or the natives of Bonny, Finima, Opobo and Nkoro in Western Obolo – the "Umani/Andoni".

They are neighbours of the Kalabari peoples. Other related Ijaw subgroups which though have distinct languages yet are of very close kinship, cultural and territorial ties with the Ijaw are the Epie-Atissa, ie. ? g?n? and Degema also called "Udekama or Udekaama". These groups speak Delta languages akin to Edo. The Ogbia clan, Andoni as well as residents of Bukuma and Abuloma or Obulom speak Cross River languages akin to URUAN/EFIK. In fact, the name Kalabari is no other than the Portuguese name of "Kalabros meaning "CALABAR" as discussed elsewhere. They were the warriors of ancient URUAN now turned EFIK as emphasized throughout this book. They were obviously those warriors who needed to team up with the hired Ijaw warriors for the fighting army at Calabar on those occasions of attack on URUAN/EFIK. Later some of them migrated to the present Rivers State notably Ijaw land where they confused the language now resulting in what is known as KALABARI. Then right into our era in the 1980s, it was discovered that a nearly extinct Berbice Creole Dutch, spoken in Guyana is actually an Ijaw dialect which is partly based on Ijo lexicon and grammar. Its nearest relative seems to be that of Eastern Ijo and most likely Kalabari. (Cf. E. Kouwenberg 1994, 23).

These Ijaw peoples in connection with our discussion on ancient Opobo were one of the first of Nigeria's great people to have contact with Westerners, and were active as go-betweens in the booming slave trade since the 1800s. They were engaged because of their aforementioned war mongering nature in bringing slaves from the peoples of the interior to the European slave merchants and this ennobled and greatly enhanced their political and economic profile more than their other Niger Deltan neighbours. This was also the case when the ignoble slave trade ended in favour of the "Genuine or Legitimate Trade" introduced by the British as discussed elsewhere. This was more so, particularly in the era before the discovery of quinine, when West Africa was still known as the "White Man's Graveyard" because of the endemic presence of malaria which killed many of the European Supercargoes arriving on the coast. As a result of these trading enterprises by the Ijaw, many "kin-based trading lineages" developed among the Ijaw peoples which metamorphosed into substantial corporations which were known as "business houses". It so came about that many of these "go-between" groups grew into trading and business companions, each group constituting what was known as "Houses". Each house had an elected leader as well as a fleet of war canoes for use in protecting trade and fighting rivals as commented above. While many influential Ijaw communities were engaged in these enterprises with the Europeans, others were engaged in fishing and farming which were the tradition and main occupation common among the Ijaw. Being a maritime people, many Ijaws were also employed in merchant shipping sectors in the early and mid-20th century. Then with the advent of petroleum and gas exploration in their territory, many Ijaw people especially those with business acumen became engrossed in the sector especially even into becoming so extensive that State-government sponsored scholarship programs were granted for studies Overseas in the 1970s and 1980s. This programme produced many Educated Ijaw personnel capable of competing with and engaging the European Petroleum Masters and other Niger Deltan Oil experts. Many beneficiaries of the scholarship scheme also produced a significant number of Ijaw professionals in other sectors of the economy. Many others also stayed put after their Overseas studies in Europe and North America to form the so-called the Ijaw in the Diaspora. But this has resulted in a sort of double edged sword with another contributing factor resulting to human capital flight as a consequence of abject poverty in their homeland of the Niger Delta. The palpable and unavoidable tragedy resulting from decades of neglect of the Ijaw oil bearing communities by the Nigerian Federal Government as also the Oil Companies in spite of continuous petroleum prospecting in Ijaw country and other communities of this region. This has brought about the decay and frustration of the people.

Like many other Niger Delta ethnic groups in Nigeria, the Ijaws have many local foods that are not widespread in Nigeria. Many of these foods involve fish and other sea foods such as clams, oysters and periwinkles; yams and plantains. But some of these foods and specialties of the Ijaw include Polofiyai a.k.a "iwuk abia". This is a very rich soup made with yams and palm oil. The Ijaws also eat Kekefiyai, which is a type of pottage made with chopped un-ripened green plantains, fish, other seafood or "bush HYPERLINK "https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bushmeat" HYPERLINK "https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bushmeat"meat" and palm oil, fried or roasted fish and plantain ie. fish fried in palm oil and served with fried plantains, Gbe — the grub of the raffia-palm tree beetle that is eaten raw, dried and fried in groundnut oil or pickled in palm oil, Kalabari "sea-harvest" fulo which is a rich seafood soup mixed with stew and can be eaten with fofoo, rice or yams.

As with all other Niger Deltans on the West African Coast, the ancient Ijaws were animists ie. those who practised ATR and believed in a multiplicity of spirits including marine spirits a.k.a "Owuamapu" especially MMAMI-WATER in their Ijaw pantheon. The Ijaws believe that water spirits are like human beings and have personal strengths and shortcomings, and that humans dwell among the water spirits before being born. The role of prayer in the traditional Ijaw system of belief is to maintain the living in the good graces of the water spirits among whom they dwelt before being born into this world. Year by year the Ijaws hold celebrations in honour the spirits lasting for several days. Central to these festivities is the role of masquerades, in which men wearing elaborate outfits and carved masks dance to the beat of drums. They believe that by so doing they are manifesting the influence of the water spirits through the quality and intensity of their dancing. (Cf. Hlaváèová, Anna, 2012, 17; See also. Ottenberg, S. and Binkley, D. eds.1957, 164. These spirits are taken to actually possess particularly those spectacular masquerades on whose behalf they are dancing. There are also a small number of Converts to Islam the most notable being the founder of the "Delta People Volunteer Force" viz. Mujahid Dokubo-Asari. Jeremiah Omoto Fufeyin also comes from this ethnic group. They also believe in the spirits of their ancestors. Veneration of ancestors plays a central role in Ijaw traditional religion. Nowadays most of the Ijaws are primarily Christians. About 95% profess to be Roman Catholics and Anglicans. But there are other varieties of Christianity most prevalent among them namely, the Evangelical and Pentecostal brands. The most prominent ones are the Cherubim and Seraphim church of Christ including Mount Zion church, all of the C & S Churches. A prominent founder of one of these churches is Apostle J. E. Patani, a police officer from the western Izon division. They still also maintain the elaborate traditional religious practices of their own. The Ijaws also practise a form of divination called Igbadai by which they interrogate recently deceased individuals about the causes of their death. The Ijaws are also known to practice ritual acculturation ie. Inculturation whereby an individual from a different, unrelated group can undergo certain rituals to become an Ijaw. An example of this is King Jaja of Opobo, the Igbo slave who rose to become a powerful "Ibani" a.k.a Bonny chief in the 19th century who is actually the forerunner of this piece. Besides King Jaja the real great sons and daughters of the soil include the first and only President and Head of State of the Federal Republic of Nigeria of so far South South Nigeria extraction, the amiable and lucky chieftain from Otuoke, DR. Goodluck Ebele Jonathan GCFR. He is himself an Ijaw aborigine, similarly his wife (DR) Dame Patience Jonathan from Okrika. "Governor General" H.E. D.S.P. Alamieyeseigha 1st Civilian of Bayelsa, Jonathan's predecessor was Ijaw, similarly his successors Timipre Silva, Seriake Dickson from Bayelsa are Ijaw. The great leader of the Niger Delta and South South, Chief Edwin Clark, former Federal Minister of Information together with his brother, DR. J.P. Clark are Ijaw. The war lord Chief Pompolo of Gbaranmatu is also Ijaw. Dr. Peterside the former Gubernatorial Candidate of the APC is Ijaw. Not to be forgotten are some Ijaw notables viz. The first Iron Woman Petroleum Minister of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, the inimitable Dr. Mrs. Deziani Allison Madueke, then the World's Most Beautiful Girl/Queen "Miss World"- Agbani Darego, the "Generals" and freedom fighters of the Niger Delta especially the Movement for the Emancipation of Niger Delta – MEND and other officials notably General Boyleaf, Henry Okah and brother Charles, etc. There are many Ijaw citizens in and out of Government in their preferred professions who are Ijaw. One of the 9 new Universities of Science and Technology which was established by the Jonathan Government is also located in Ijaw country, viz. the University of Otuoke.

The Ijaw ethnic group consists of 50 loosely affiliated clans. These clans are based along kinship lines and/or shared cultural and religious traditions. The clans, towns and village span the whole of Rivers, Delta and Edo States of the Niger Delta also including Ondo in South Western Nigeria. They include:

Having concluded the odyssey of King Jaja of Opobo and the evolution of those great autochthonous ethnic kingdoms of Ogoni, Okrika and Ijaw lands which were vassals and suffragan territories of the great Opobo empire, let us now turn to Lagos the centre of which bore the great storm of the master schemer the ubiquitous master-mind of that master-stroke called AMALGAMATION, which brought about the emergence of the country which his consort Lady Flora had reasoned out to be named "Nigeria" which she coined from the two words: NIGER + AREA = NIGERIA ie. the country of black peoples as explained above.

LAGOS: HISTORY OF ORIGINS & EVOLUTION

INDIGENOUS AND VERY IMPORTANT LAGOSIANS

That AMALGAMATION of Nigeria in 1914 stands out clear and loud in bold relief as the epi-centre of the evolution and history of LAGOS, ancient and modern. The very title and nomenclature "LAGOS" to all intents and purposes is a linguistic term and on all accounts, it seems to be so from the conclusions of ethnologists, historians, anthropologists, colonial administrators, religious writers and even explorers of the African continent who all agreed as mentioned already in the case of KALABROS – CALABAR (ie. Land of mangroves), to be the name originally given by the Portuguese explorers to this land and "CENTRE OF EXCELLENCE" when they arrived the shores of West Africa in 1472. Unlike Calabar territory which they observed to be a coastal location where mangroves abound, Lagos territory to them was a habitat surrounded by "lakes" hence "LAGOS" in Portuguese, meaning "THE LAND OF LAKES" ie. a locale with numerous lakes. What can be confirmed here is that the history of Lagos and origins predate the rounding of the Cape of Good Hope by the Portuguese, Vasco da Gama in 1492 – 20 years later as also the discovery of the West Indies - the New World of America by Magellan and Christopher Columbus respectively around 1400-1500 AD. It is that which many historians and ethnographers of ancient Yoruba history and in this case, Lagos in particular, including of course Dahomey (now the Republic of Benin) have tried to make us believe. Lagosians at this point in time were the indigenous aborigines of this ancient land whose identity and nomenclature both of habitation and people were simply "Awori" a name which they called themselves. (Cf. http://www.hubert-herald.nl/NigeriaL.htm) These inhabitants therefore happened to be a well-organized and cultured people just like URUAN/EFIK peoples when these early Portuguese explorers came calling. Actually it was the Portuguese explorer, Ruy de Sequeira, who visited the area in 1472 and named the area around the city "LAGO DE CURAMO"; which is the Portuguese nomenclature for "lakes".

Another explanation is that Lagos was so named ostensibly for the benefit of colonial Portugal and specifically for her citizens' imperial and mercantile quest to conquer African territories and to make Lagos the maritime town which at the time was the main centre of Portuguese expeditions on the West African coast and whose own name is derived from the Celtic word Lacobriga. Later, after the discovery of the West Indies which later became known as the new world of the Americas, especially when the Portuguese and their counterparts, the Spaniards, began the notorious slave trade in order to get slaves from Africa to work in their American plantations, Lagos became a major centre of this slave trade until 1851. Thereafter Great Britain, which also had joined and even became masters of the trade on account of their new-found alternative economic mastermind at a time which became known as "the Age of Discoveries and Inventions and the Industrial Revolution", craftily hoodwinked the other European powers and decreed the abolition of slavery in 1807. In fact, this alternative economic "master stroke" had in time become a more powerful and lucrative economic venture for the British than slave trade. They began to bombard those other European nations which did not toe the line as it were, and craftily established a treaty which ushered in the British Consular Period through which they appointed British technocrats and seasoned economists cum war lords like Captain Frederick Lugard, Lt. Harry Johnson, Cpt. James Watt, etc. as Consuls to man their new found colonies Overseas. Then they annexed Lagos via "The Lagos Treaty of Cession" in 1861 thus ending the Consular Period and starting at the same time the British Colonial Period. (Cf. The Reduction of Lagos. Retrieved 1 February 2015, 23). Thereafter they seized and colonized the remainder of modern-day Nigeria in 1886. (Cf. Bigon Lewiston 56-59.)

Every student of history from Primary to Secondary of our time could remember that it was in the early 15th century when Pope Martin V (1415-23) by what was known as the Papal Bull of Demarcation divided the known world between Spain and Portugal, the then two world powers. This decree enabled them to discover other territories and empires and to found new settlements in their imperial and mercantile quest to conquer the world of the astronomers including BENY ie. Benin which was a well-known world-class empire then the Benin Empire. Lagos including Beny/Benin which fell within the axis of the Portuguese was one of the first within what is now Nigeria in Africa to be visited. In fact, it was later on that the British came and conquered Lagos, also Benin whose monarch then, Oba Ovonranmwen they dethroned and then exiled to Calabar where he married several Efik women and had many more additional children partly of EFIK descent. All these are what every true URUAN/EFIK as also Yorubas, Lagosians in particular, can and should recite from memory. Modern-day Lagos is now a state in South-Western Nigeria formerly known as Western Region in colonial terms. It is bounded on the west by the Republic of Benin, to the north and east by Ogun State with the Atlantic Ocean providing a coastline on the south. Lagos has a total land mass of 3,577 square Km; 787 square kilometers being the real locale of numerous lakes – the lagoons as they are often called and the creeks including: Lagos/lsland, Lagos Harbour: Apapa, Five Cowrie Creek, Ebute-Metta Creek, Porto- Novo Creek, New Canal, Badagry Creek, Kuramo Waterside and Light House Creek.

HISTORY OF THE ORIGINS & EVOLUTION OF LAGOS

As can be garnered from oral history on Lagos, it was about 1300-1400 AD, when the Oba (ie. King in Bini language) of the Benin Empire is said to have received serious and incessant complaints from one of his traders that he and his men were being hounded and maltreated by the Awori people then occupying the area of present day Lagos among whom they sojourned. The Oba then sent a trade expedition by sea to engage the Awori indigenous inhabitants. They immediately overpowered and attacked the mission sent by the Benin monarch. In consequence of this and upon hearing about the fate of the mission which had returned to report to Benin City, the Oba of Benin ordered an assemblage of a war expedition, to be led by one Ado, a Benin Prince, against the selfish and treacherous Awori people. The expedition headed straight to the settlement of the Aworis, surrounded the citizens and demanded an explanation for their untoward action. But quite surprisingly, Prince Ado and his army were more than well received. To their utter amazement rather than treat the seeming invaders with scorn and bravado, the Awori aborigines instead requested Ado, the Benin Prince to stay there with his "army", and there and then himself become their leader and king thereof. Prince Ado gladly agreed, but gave their terms of agreement to the effect that they were prepared to stay with them on the condition that they Aworis would be ready and willing to surrender their sovereignty to the Oba of Benin, to which the Awori people readily and gladly agreed. Since this territory they were going to occupy appeared to have no discernible nomenclature, they had no qualms but to name it EKO in their Bini tongue meaning "war camp". Upon hearing this, the Oba of Benin gave his permission for Prince Ado and his expedition team to remain in Eko with the Aworis. The Oba of Benin later sent some of his chiefs, including Eletu Odibo, Obanikoro and others to assist Prince Ado in the running of Eko land with Ado as King – invariably as the first Oba of Lagos. It can therefore be said without contradiction that modern-day Lagos was founded by the Binis in the sixteenth century. It was later called Eko by them. But this is not to say that the Benis created the Kingdom of the Lagos Yorubas and the reason is not far to seek. It is certain Yoruba history and by implication Lagos history that the Aworis are the costal Yoruba people of Lagos and by the 10th century they had spread and settled in the island all the way to Ota. This according to Yoruba history was he time most of the Yoruba kingdoms evolved viz. Ife, Oyo and Ilesha. The Awori kingdom later evolved into Ota which was the oldest, then Isheri and Lagos kingdom which evolved from Iddo and Lagos Islands with an Awori king.

This first king of Lagos, Oba Ado, had two sons and also a daughter named Erelu Kuti, who gave birth to Ologun Kutere, who later also became a king. Shokun his brother, who was more aggressive and whom Erelu suspected could plan a palace coup, was given the Chieftaincy title of "Onile-gbale", and a palace just behind the king's palace. This was the first time that a Chief would be appointed and installed at the same time as a King. (Cf. Adefuye Ade; et al., eds., 23-7;See also,eraffoundation.org/erelukuti.php). Till today, the Oba of Lagos is the head of all the Obas (Kings) in Lagos State and his status is different from other Oba's most of whom were later given back their crowns and staffs of office only within the last 40 years. Those who got their crowns back were the Olofin's children who were the original land owners. Modern-day Lagosians have so intermingled that no single tribe or people can claim to be the owner of Lagos even though the predominant language is Yoruba. In fact, every settler in Lagos regards him/herself as a bona fide Lagosian. Perhaps that may well account for her republican status whereby many citizens are given equal opportunities, and some have even become Chairmen of Local Governments, heads of Administrative Boards, etc. in the Government of Lagos State, a laudable situation such as that should be emulated throughout Nigeria of which all are to be regarded as freeborn citizens.

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION OF LAGOS

Just as in the case about Igbo Origins recounted above, many Igbo groups who have traced their ancestry to the Nri and Aguleri as the cradle of the people who inhabited the territory of the Umueri clan and who in turn also have traced their lineages back to the patriarchal king-figure ERI, some educated Igbos are confused about this Eri's origins and try to reject the whole mythology altogether. So too, some Yoruba historians do not seem to be comfortable with the culture history we have traced about the origin of Lagos as presented above. They would rather prefer to recall that the present day LAGOS State has a higher percent of many of those sub-groups who allegedly migrated to the area ie. Lagos, from the word ISHERI –a region along the Ogun River. History also has it that the Awori people mentioned above were actually from IFE, the cradle of Yoruba land. (Cf. A History of Lagos: "The Reduction of Lagos: Introduction". Retrieved 1 February 2015) The Awori people were originally said to be a very peaceful and accommodating people, not taken to warfare. Perhaps that may well explain why in our account above, they preferred to remain docile and so readily acquiesced as to allowing themselves to be surrounded by the strong and powerful aggressive and warlike Binis. The story has it also that due to incessant wars happening during those days, those from the hinterlands like the Ekiti, ran towards Isheri, which at that time had more than one OLOFIN (Alafin) who were sort of Village Heads of their settlements about 1400 AD, almost the same time as we surmised above. Currently and with those fleeing people from the war-torn hinterlands, most of them were said to have scattered again, some to IRO, some to Otta, Ado, and others to Ebute Metta i.e. the three landing places of Oyingbo, Iddo Island and Lagos Island (Eko). The OLOFIN who brought those that went to Ebute-Metta was Ogunfunminire later known as Agbodere. With the full commencement of the war about 2000 of them were alleged to have moved to the nearest island of Iddo, others to Otto Awori or Otto Ijanikin towards modern-day Badagry. Those from Ekiti Aramoko came to settle at Ebute-Metta, Iddo and then Ijora.

After the demise of Agbodere, the name Olofin became the name used for remembering him while the title of Oloto was given to his successor. With one of his sons becoming the Oloto, his other children parted ways to settle in what is known as present-day Lagos. Until the coming of the Binis, Lagos's geographical boundary encompassed Lagos Mainland and Lagos Island. The seat of the Oba of Lagos, then consisted of a pepper farm and fishing posts. No one lived there. The name Eko was given to it by its first king, Oba Ado, during its early history, LAGOS, also saw periods of rule by the Kingdom of Benin. Eko was then the land area now known as Lagos Island where the king's palace was built. The palace is called IGA Idunganran, meaning "palace built on the pepper farm". Oba Ado and the warriors from Benin, as well as some of the indigenous people who sought safety, settled down in the southern part of Eko called "Isale Eko". Isale literally means bottom, but must have been used to indicate downtown just as in Downtown Lagos, or Down Below which is proximate to the Atlantic littoral of Opobo as seen already. These are the names and regimes (administrative periods) of the Obas after Oba Ado who ruled Lagos before their break off from the authority of the Oba of Benin. But King (Oba) ASHIPA (1600–1630) died on his way back to Benin.

LAGOS: PART & PARCEL TRIBUTARY TO THE BENIN EMPIRE

Following upon the crowning of Ado as the first Oba of Lagos then called EKO, Lagos then served as a major centre for slave-trade which Oba of Benin, Oba Ado of Lagos and his successors. Then came King (Oba) Akitoye, who at his demise, was not buried in Benin. After him no other Oba is said to have gone back to the tradition. Those Kings (Obas) of Lagos thereafter were the successors of King Akitoye as Obas of Lagos as outlined above. They were supported for over four centuries until 1841, when Oba Akitoye ascended to the throne of Lagos and attempted to ban it. By this time slave-trade had been embargoed by the British Government. But the local merchants strongly opposed the move and consequently dethroned and exiled king Akitoye, and installed his brother Kosoko (ie. his nephew). Yorubas also URUAN/EFIK regard their close blood relations eg. cousins, uncles, nephews, nieces as brothers and sisters; so Oba Akitoye was actually Oba Kosoko's uncle. (Cf. http://www.hubert-herald.nl/NigeriaL.htm). Oba Kosoko believed in and strongly supported the continuation of slave trade. That is why he was often at loggerheads with the British, hence his dethronement and flight, first to Badagry and later to Epe where he founded kingdoms that still exist today. What exactly happened was that when his people dethroned and exiled Akitoye for attempting to suppress slave-trade, he escaped and took refuge in Europe. Then during his exile in Europe, Akitoye met with the British authorities who had decreed the banning of slave-trading since 1807. With this development therefore, the British decided to support the deposed Oba and help him to regain his throne. This intervention of the British met with success and in 1851 Akitoye was re-installed as Oba of Lagos. By now British influence over the kingdom of Lagos had become absolute in practical terms, such that ten years later, ie. in 1861, Lagos was formally annexed as a British colony. Oba Akitoye who ceded Lagos to the British was Oba Kosoko's uncle. Oba Akitoye was the first Oba not to be buried as a Bini in Benin kingdom. Prior to this, all the Kings of Lagos were buried in Benin. They passed on all the taxes collected in their domains to the Oba of Benin until the British came and explained that there was no need to send taxes to Benin anymore especially as the Binis themselves were equally paying their taxes to Imperial Britain. It was during his reign that the direct influence of the Binis on Lagos ended.

COLONIAL LAGOS BECAME THE CAPITAL OF NIGERIA

After Imperial Britain had annexed Lagos as her colony in 1861, the remainder of the which encompassed the vast territory of almost modern South West and South South Nigeria was seized by the British in 1887 to form the Southern Provinces of Nigeria and amalgamated as the Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. By 1910, ie. after Sir Walter Egerton the then Consul - General of what was to become NIGERIA had been transferred from the then Headquarters and Capital City of Calabar to Lagos in 1906, Lagos became the capital of the Southern Protectorate of Nigeria. It is note-worthy always to remind ourselves that before all this, there was no such name not to talk of a "geographical expression", territory or nation known anywhere in the world by the name "NIGERIA" until the Amalgamation in 1914 as was discussed already. When the Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria was established, Lagos thereafter experienced rapid growth throughout the 1960s and 1970s as a result of Nigeria's economic boom from her three products of palm produce - East, cocoa – West and the groundnut "pyramid" – North, prior to the Biafran War. This continued through the 1980s and 1990s even up to the present. In that year both the Protectorate of Southern Nigeria and the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria were joined together in the famous "Amalgamation of Nigeria" by Sir Frederick Lugard as treated above and Lagos was declared the capital of Nigeria. Lagos continued to maintain its status as capital when Nigeria obtained its independence from Britain in 1960. But in 1991, Lagos was replaced by Abuja as the Federal Capital Territory, a move which was masterminded by the Federal Military Government under General Muritala Mohammed in 1976 and eventually executed by General Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida in 1991. Lagos therefore stood strong as the capital city of Nigeria from 1914 until 1991 when Abuja was planned as a Federal city and specifically built for that purpose. Indeed Abuja as a capital like is just like those great world Capitals eg. Washington, DC in USA and Brasilia in Brazil in that it was built from scratch specifically to be a capital. This observation is pertinent otherwise we would never understand what it has taken to make Lagos what it is today. From its humble beginnings, Lagos became Nigeria's largest city and even in the whole of Africa. It the nation's economic nerve centre and a modern city of prestige and economic leverage though as observed already Onitsha is rivaling that position. I really the appreciate the great wisdom, painstaking endeavours and planning of her rulers and administrators both military and civilian since after the war.

But it is good also to laud the contributions of the Oba of Lagos especially her new-time. political governors and in recent times Oba Rilwan Akiolu, Asiwaju Bola Tinubu, Babatunde Raji Fashola, and Akinwunmi Ambode in toe for keeping faith with Lagos, Nigeria's centre of excellence and melting pot of all nationalities without discrimination. In fact, one can say with all modesty and without any fear of sounding apologetic, that even the most interior village in Nigeria is represented in Lagos, thanks to the republican and accommodating nature of Yorubas. However, it has retained its importance as the country's largest city and as its economic nerve centre. Worthy of mention here is the magnificent work done by the past two Administrations towards the reclaiming and development of the Bar Beach to wit, Eko Atlantic which has really become a well-planned city being constructed on land reclaimed from the . It is located on former Lagos Bar Beach. The new island is still under development is, and one expects that the young indefatigable Governor Ambode, who has outstandingly stepped into the big shoes of his predecessors, their Excellences, Bola Tinubu and Raji Fashola, will bring the work to its logical conclusion for the anticipated of at least 250,000 residents and a daily flow of commuters over and above 200,000 upon completion. This development will also have a positive environmental impact; its purpose being to stop the erosion of the Lagos coast (Cf. The Punch Newspaers: May 21, 2009). The Eko Atlantic City project received global recognition as the Lagos State Government and its private sector partners on the Project, "South Energy" received the Clinton Global Initiative Commitment Certificate in 2009. (Cf. This Day: September 29, 2009).

THE LAGOS STATE OF NIGERIA: ESTABLISHMENT

Lagos State together with other 11 States were created by decree on the 27th May 1967 by the Nigerian Military Government of General Yakubu Gowon as Head of State and Commander in-Chief of the Armed forces to wit: Western Nigeria, former Mid-West renamed Bendel State, East Central State, South Eastern State and Rivers State all in Southern Nigeria; others were North Eastern State, North Central State, North Western State, Benue – Plateau State, Gongola State and Kwara State, all in Northern Nigeria. Before the promulgation of this Decree, Lagos city then was Nigeria's Capital and was administered directly by the Federal Government through the Federal Ministry of Lagos Affairs. (Cf. Lagos State Information Services and the National Bureau of Statistics). But Ikeja, Agege, Mushin, Ikorodu, Epe and Badagry were administered by the then Western Region Government. Thereafter Lagos along with these other towns were grouped together to create what is now Lagos State as a fully recognized semi-autonomous administrative division on April 11, 1968. Lagos then had the dual role of Lagos State Capital as well as Federal Capital until 1976 when her capital was moved to Ikeja. After the full establishment of the Federal Capital Territory at Abuja, the seat of the Federal Government was also formally relocated thereto on December 12, 1991. Nevertheless, Lagos remains the financial and economic nerve centre of Nigeria and perhaps the fifth largest economy in Africa (Cf. Ekundayo John M. O, 135) if it were a country though she is now challenged by Onitsha and Aba both in South Eastern Nigeria. Lagos has now also grown to become the most populous city in the state and the country, nay Africa. Lagos State has a geographical area of 1,381 sq. Km with an estimated population of over 20 million to-date. Alhaji Lateef Jakande became its first civilian Governor in 1979. (Cf. Filani Michael 2012, 67-81)

LOCAL GOVERNMENT AREAS AND CHIEF CITIES

Lagos State is divided into five Administrative Divisions, which are further divided into twenty Local Government Areas. The chief cities are Eko Atlantic which constitutes exactly our overview on the history of Lagos above; others are Ikorodu, Lagos Island, Lekki, Epe and Ojo with Ikeja as Capital City and Headquarters. The divisional Headquarters are Lagos, Badagry, Ikeja, Ikorodu and Epe. Its main towns which are also the Local Government Headquarters. There are officially 20 Local Government Areas in Lagos but 16 of the LGAs constitute the statistical area of Metropolitan Lagos as follows:

The first 16 of the above LGAs comprise the statistical area of Metropolitan Lagos, but the last four LGAs viz. Badagry, Ikorodu, Ibeju-Lekki and Epe are not part of Metropolitan Lagos. In 2003, many of the existing 20 LGAs were split by the Bola Tinubu Administration into Local Council Development Areas ostensibly for better administrative purposes. These lower-tier of administrative units now number 56: Agbado/Oke-Odo, Agboyi/Ketu, Agege, Ajeromi, Alimosho, Apapa, Apapa-Iganmu, Ayobo/Ipaja, Badagry West, Badagry, Bariga, Coker Aguda, Egbe Idimu, Ejigbo, Epe, Eredo, Eti Osa East, Eti Osa West, Iba, Isolo, Imota, Ikoyi, Ibeju, Ifako-Ijaiye, Ifelodun, Iga ndo/Ikotun, Igbogbo/Bayeku, Ijede, Ikeja, Ikorodu North, Ikorodu West, Ikosi Ejinrin, Ikorodu, Ikorodu West, Iru/Victoria Island, Itire Ikate, Lagos is the socio-cultural melting pot attracting both Nigerians and even foreigners especially from West Africa as observed already. Many early Europeans who came to Lagos lived and intermarried and died there, hence some of those foreign names like T.O. S. Benson, Carmen McCain, Dan Murray,Cyril Stober, Patrick Dele Cole etc. (Cf. Ajose, Sunny A. 2010.45-7.) To-date Lagos State boasts of the following Higher Institutions of Learning to wit: University of Lagos, Lagos State College of Health Technology, Lagos State University, Lagos Business School, Caleb University, Yaba College of Technology, Lagos State Polytechnic, , Adeniran Ogunsanya College of Education, Lagos City Polytechnic, Wolex Polytechnic, It is hoped that with this development coupled with the breathtaking drives of the "Action Governor", His Excellency, Akinwunmi Ambode Administration, Lagos will ever grow to still remain the financial centre of Nigeria, and also become the most populous city in the country and the whole of Africa.

It is important to note that a people who do not know their past and where they came from, can never know their future and where they are going. The study of History has been deleted from the school curriculum. Today the only teaching and instruction bordering on History/ Geography lesson or is General Knowledge or the so-called Social Studies such that what the Nigerian child from the Nursery School to Secondary is fed with is something like: "In what year did the AMALGAMATION of Nigeria take place –A, B, C, D? Who caused the Amalgamation of Nigeria – A, B.C.D?" In all these we begin to talk glibly of AMALGAMATION as it were a tea party! There is nothing the British colonial potentates did not do to get A M A L G A M A T I O N on course because they also had to grapple with the African power blocks and potentates of the Kingdoms and empires of Lagos/Ibadan, Sokoto, Kano, Benin, etc. especially the city states and kingdoms of the great Niger Delta under the supreme authority of their Imperial Majesties, the Nana of Itsekeri, King Jaja of Opobo, the Obi of Onitsha, the Obong of Calabar, the OLU of Warri etc. because these became a thorn in the flesh of imperial and potentate Great Britain. They had stood as the rock of Gibraltar against their schemings. For after having subdued the likes of Othman Dan Fodio and his almighty empire which stretched across the length and breadth of the Sokoto Caliphate, the Emirates of Kano and Katsina, etc. the Colonial Juggernauts thought they could easily also dismember the El Kanemi Borno empire and those of the Niger Delta mentioned above which were the most powerful in the whole territory of Africa that was once known as the Dark Continent by these European potentates! They had applied all the arsenals in their armory so that they could fall like a pack of cards.

THE TRIANGULAR TRADE: EUROPE-AFRICA-AMERICA
PORTUGAL - SPAIN - AND THE NORTHER LANDS TRADING NATIONS

THE GREAT ARMADA OF THE PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND DUTCH OF THE 1600s-1800s

It was a big miscalculation and blunder to so think because the army of these empires at their apogee could be equiperated with the great ARMADA of the Portuguese, Spanish and Dutch of the 1600s-1800s which were brought to the fore in the wake of the infamous Slave Trade. Perhaps Imperial Great Britain was recounting their blessings when they masterminded the Great Trade by drowning as it were the fleets of the Spaniards and Portuguese who were the original Founders and Discoverers of the new World of the Americas a.k.a West Indies, led by Magellan and Christopher Columbus. The Netherlands naval squadrons later overpowered and took over the command of the Triangular Trade as it was called from Spain and Portugal and soon after, it was the turn of the master-craftsmen of gigantic British ships powered by steam engines which were invented at the time by big time discoverers and inventors like James Watt, Michael Faraday, George Stephenson/Livingstone, etc. fleets which then hit the combined forces of the Dutch – Belgium, Holland and ie. the Netherlands. The British war cum merchandise ships were captained by the Arch-Pirate and Commander in-Chief and master, Sir Francis Drake who released a reign of terrorist and piracy regime of looters a.k.a high profile robber on the high seas only comparable to Boko Haram and Al Qaeda cum Al Shabab terrorist gangsters on the Dutch. In those days it was customary for well-equipped naval fleets to intercept and overpower ships carrying merchandise and slaves from Africa on the high seas and overturn their cargoes of men and goods, plunder them and transfer them into their ships and off to England or Germany, or France or Holland or wherever in Europe after disembarking and offloading the slaves at their plantations in the Americas. That is why it was called the "Triangular Trade" ie. the supercargoes trade voyages from Europe with their finished products by those who came down to Africa for exchange of slaves and goods mostly raw materials for their factories while in turn they brought gun powder, tobacco tinned foods like ekpum? ny? and tinapa, clothings etc. then sailing up across the AKWAAKPA URUAN Atlantic to the Americas and rounding up the quasi-parallel voyage back to Europe with the African goods after discharging the slaves in the Americas. That is how these pirates took over the flourishing trade both in slaves and merchandise from the Spaniards and Portuguese who were the first to explore and discover the African coasts and begin trade on the shores of Warri, Bonny, Calabar and IDU a.k.a NWANIBA.

Similarly, we see today, children in URUAN/EFIK and beyond who only see or hear about marine vessels – ships, boats or even trains and the railway etc. in pictures and the TV. They have nothing to see or talk about while on picnics or School excursions or recreations at school. Some do not even know that there was something like trains plying the railway tracts in this country from nearby Niger Delta Port Harcourt to the North through Enugu to Kaduna, Kafanchan, Kano and to Katsina ie. East-North routes; OR from Port Harcourt to Benin, Ibadan and to Lagos known as East-West Routes just not too long ago. Nevertheless, thanks to the amiable President Goodluck Ebele Jonathan for resuscitating these railway routes systems in Nigeria, at least the much he can do so far. But when will such a thing be seen in the Niger Delta and other parts of this great country of ours? Elsewhere in this book I have anguished that there should be a railway terminal at IDU at URUAN Headquarters which is only three minutes away from UYO Capital city of Akwa Ibom State. I have also suggested that the return of the maritime ventures with a mini sea port for plying local boats, canoes and launches there at NWANIBA and ESUK MBEHE IDU a.k.a "ESUK IKOT ETUONG" including of course Ikot Offiong, Ikon Eto, Creek Town and Atimbo – Akpabuyo would boost international trade involving our neighbours of the Cameroun Republic, Equatorial Guinea and Gabon; and that such a project would re-connect, facilitate and get Northern Cross Riverians bringing in their merchandise especially agricultural products of yams, garri and rice by sea to the bargain as formerly when IDU was the melting pot of these nationalities as a trading port. Equally the local youths and neighbouring coastal peoples from areas like Oron, Eket, Ibeno, Ikot Abasi, Ikono, etc. would get back to the sea-side to ply their trade and haul in quantities of fish, crayfish, periwinkles etc. because all these goods can easily get to other parts of Nigeria by train since also there is an airport scarcely 20 kilometres away, if these goods exited from here. This would thus involve creating honest and genuine non-collar jobs for over a million people engaging in buying and selling aside whatever cool collar jobs the Federal and State Governments would thereby provide because, when as a child, I could notice and calculate that not less than ten thousand people were gainfully eking out their living every blessed day here. But does this sound like anything meaningful, practicable and achievable or is it just plain wishful thinking from an idle and lazy mind?

EMIGRATION OF NATIONATIES FROM IBOM AND EVOLUTION OF AKWA IBOM NATIONALITIES WHO MIGRATED TO UYO, ABAK, IKOT EKPENE, UKANAFUN, OBOT AKARA, IKA, ETIM EKPO, EKET, ETINAN, IKOT ABASI ETC.

Therefore, as we get back to our account of the emigration of the great URUAN peoples, we also notice that it was from IBOM that those other nationalities migrated to Uyo, Abak, Ikot Ekpene, Ukanafun, Obot Akara, Ika, Etim Ekpo, Eket, Etinan, Ikot Abasi etc. which constituted the area described by Darryll Forde and G. I. Jones as Eastern and Western Ibibio and now people of AKWA IBOM STATE ie. the territory now inhabited by immigrants from ancient IBOM country of URUAN. That is also the reason why URUAN as the original settlers and by implication the author has been able to give the true picture and account of what exactly happened about what was what, or who was who in the narrative you are now reading in this book. That is also the reason why these accounts are considered incontrovertible. (Cf Forde Daryl & Jones, G.I; 31). But on this G.I. Jones in particular has noted that:

> A study of the present distribution of the Ibibio tribes suggests an early scatter of Ibibio over an area extending from Arochukwu in the North, Ika in the West and Oron in the South. This was followed by a massive dispersal North and South from a centre somewhere between the present Abak and Uyo Government stations and a differentiation into Annang (Western) and Ibibio (Eastern) [Jones G.I. 31-33].

The routes of their migrations must have been many and varied. Some must have reached IBOM by land while others like URUAN, ORON, and IBENO who might have moved earlier, some straight to their present locations like ORON, while others like URUAN and IBENO reached IBOM by sea. URUAN has never had a history of having displaced any previous inhabitants anywhere. They had always been the first to discover a place, and then move on when it became obvious that the land would not accommodate them and all the new and subsequent comers as this could become a source of disputes and conflicts. URUAN fights shy of handling such unwarranted confrontations and has never been enmeshed in conflicts and never fought a war of confrontation with any nation, tribe or country throughout her history, even till today. These land users were obviously numerically superior and their major centre of dispersal after IBOM to AKWA IBOM makes this evident. Many written and oral traditions have attested to this migration of the bulk of Ibibio nation from USAHA-EDET popularly known as EDIK AFAHA ie. AFAHA CREEK in the Cameroons to IBOM or modern AROCHUKWU of Abia State. (M. E. Noah 7) The history of what is known as the 'Ibibio war' between them and the Aros /Igbos is also well documented and can be found in any State Library in the Federation. History has it that after settling in IBOM and establishing their shrine, the IDIONG oracle, which later popularly became known as IBRITAM INOKON, then afterwards known as the Long Juju or the Arochukwu oracle was owned and used by URUAN for years before their departure to AKWA AKPA URUAN. This is because afterwards a bitter enmity resulting in warfare ensued between the Ibibios who had then become custodians and owners after URUAN had left and the descendants of the remnants of URUAN ie. the Aros now turned into Igbos with their now Igbo settlers who subsequently dispossessed it from them, the Ibibios. (Cf. Ashley, 12). Another account by Talbot A.P. has it that the Efik peoples a.k.a URUAN, originally a branch of the Ibibio tribe known as URUAN before they migrated to their present abode in Cross River State on account of inter-tribal wars and constant harrying of their villages by the slave-dealing Aros who were then the principal custodians of the shrine. Corroborating this Chief J.S.B. Ikpe of the IBIBIO STATE UNION fame, in 1939 had remarked that this Ibibio secret society, IDIONG IBRITAM INOKON was also known as EKPENYONG (NNUK), since as a principal URUAN/EFIK deity it was previously called EKPENYONG IBRITAM. He also opined that it was the Eburutu clan that was appointed the principal custodian (Cf. J. S. B. Ikpe; 12-24). This happened hundreds of years after URUAN had departed for AKWA AKPA URUAN leaving everything behind, such that from their present abode ditto the EFIK, whenever they needed to seek the services of IDI? ? oracle, they had then to go to either AKWA IBOM country or EKOI country, and this is happening till this day. T.M. Shankland, who was then the Assistant District Officer for Arochukwu also wrote that:

> It is fairly certain before the coming of the Igbos into Arochukwu the Ibibios had a Juju Ibritam situated by a little stream not far from the present town at Ibom. What particular property or power was attached to the Juju in those early days will be ever uncertain, but certain it is that the Juju survived the Ibibio War and was before long to become the most famous shrine in Nigeria, indeed on the West Coast (T. M. Shankland: ENUGU, 3/1/55).

EXPULSION OF IBIBIOS, ANNANGS ETC. AND EVOLUTION OF AKWA IBOM

Dr. P. Amaury Talbot also confirmed that the expulsion of the Ibibios from Arochukwu might have occurred between the 14th and 15th centuries but this is a relatively recent phenomenon compared to their settlement in IBOM Arochukwu, because they had settled in IBOM for such a long time that the Aros themselves are believed to be their descendants, a fact that is also corroborated by certain oral traditions. It is also true that as a result of the war between the Aro confederacy and the Ibibio referred to in historical accounts as the Ibibio WAR, the last group of the Ibibio which happens to be those now living in the border towns such as Ikpe Ikot Nkon, those of Eastern Ibibio Ikono, Nkari, Usakka, Itu Mbuzo (Mbon-uso) etc. were forced to leave Arochukwu between AD 1400 and 1600. In fact, that account of Dr. E. N. Amaku in his Edikot ? wed Mbuk 2, (Amaku, E.N 2-5) seems to confirm this although most of the accounts are quite tenuous and URUAN in particular has rejected it in toto, considering it as a myth and a later fabricated version of URUAN/EFIK ethnographic history. It is also incontrovertible that every bona fide and blue-blooded citizen of URUAN/EFIK ancestry heretofore recounted has always accepted that the true culture history of EFIK dates from that further migration of some URUAN groups from AKWA AKPA URUAN via ATA AKPA ie. the confines of the ATLANTIC OCEAN, the region bordering the Atlantic Ocean which they at first sight had exclaimed: THE REAL SEA =”EH, ATA AKPA”, which is URUAN/EFIK expression for an infinitely large expanse of water like the ocean: 'HE THALLASSAR'! 'Behold the sea'! This was the exclamation made by the Greeks of old to express the same idea. It should be pointed out here that most of these documents especially those concerning the expulsion of the Ibibio from IBOM and the taking over of the Long Juju by the Aros is a much recent history because by this time the Ibibios and others now living in Akwa Ibom State had already migrated to Akwa Ibom and were living there for several hundreds of generations. It could also be true as noted above that a sizeable chunk of Ibibios, Annangs, etc. must have stayed put at Ibom from the early 1300 – 1600 and beyond when the Ibibio war occurred, that is, if they did not immigrate to their present locations in AKWA IBOM STATE as a result of that war. That is why Talbot corroborating this as it were, had remarked that this episode might have occurred between 1300 and 1400 AD thus suggesting that the Aros themselves were their remnants and descendants. It is pertinent to remark here for the umpteenth time, that any world history concerning URUAN should always pre-date and not be subsequent to that describing the events that ensued concerning the Ibibios, the Aros and later on the Igbos. This is because URUAN had left the scene of IBOM hundreds of generations before these events and the slave trade met them at their present location as seen already. The Aros of course as observed above being the renegades and remnants of URUAN had stayed put as proud owners and custodians of the oracle having dispossessed the Ibibios and craftily using the oracle, the awesome LONG JUJU to hoodwink and capture the Igbos and send them to Calabar when the slave trade became so large and lucrative an enterprise worldwide. It was the Ibibios who having been dispossessed of the oracle derisively nicknamed them In?-Ikon anglicized into INOKON meaning "mme Inokon or Ibritam meaning" ie. "thieves of the Ikon". The xylophone and hat were the veritable instruments effectively employed by the intimidating and bogus oracle for making the divinations as we are going to see.

THE IBIBIO WAR WITH THE ARO CONFEDERACY & AKPA GROUPS/BIASE

This Aro confederacy was a power block to reckon with at the time perhaps between 3000 BC - 1000 AD and made up of the three ethnic groups viz. the AROS themselves who were URUAN proud descendants and remnants including the IBIBIO remnants, the IGBO and the AKPA or IKPA ie. BIASE and EJAGHAM including Umon, Aquagune (Akwanakwana) and Ugep. This last group also consisted of those of OKOYONG origin, a fragment of the remnants who stayed put within the Cameroun tribe and now long resident in the colonial old Calabar Division of AKAMKPA, also remnants of the EFUT, the bulk of whom are those now resident in Calabar South metropolis who must have occupied their present location centuries before URUAN/EFIK immigration in the present Calabar and beyond. Regarding the OKOYONG a sub-tribe, some earlier historians have reported that after having left the Cameroons, the AKPA/IKPA group first settled at AKAMKPA which became the centre of OKOYONG clan stretching from Ekong-Anaku to Mbarakom. As earlier said in this account, the Akwa Ibom Ibibio people were the early settlers and indeed the owners of IBOM country and custodians of the IBRITAM INOKON or EKPENYONG IBRITAM, after URUAN had departed from the scene. The arrival of the IGBOS served only to make the ethnic configurations in the area more complex. The Igbos had come into this land just like others of pre-historic times worldwide being driven by hunger, scarcity of land holdings to plant their crops and this therefore made them come in collision with the northern fringes of the IBIBIO. This undoubtedly and inevitably must have created a situation which no matter what events that led up to it - the Ibibios and the Aro remnants of URUAN, having then acquired the Igbo tongue and using the Igbos as their cammeradie (allies) lay facing each other, both prepared to slug it out for possession of the land. Trust URUAN; trust the AROS of URUAN remnants and descendants in their master mindedness and craftiness! Recounting further on this, Sir Shankland who was the colonial Administrator of Arochukwu at the tail-end of the infamous slave trade remarked in his REPORT that at the beginning of the hostilities:

> The Igbos met with no outstanding success in the struggle with their opponents until the third tribal element appeared upon the scene (ie. the AKPA). Tradition is agreed throughout Aro towns that at this juncture the Igbos sought the aid of the AKPA/IKPA mercenaries and the Igbos won in what is now termed the Ibibio war. (P. J. Shankland: Intelligence Report on the Aros).

Having lost out in that war, the bulk of Ibibio remnants migrated to join their kinsmen in the MAINLAND, now Akwa Ibom State, some of whom having already settled there for centuries while other still remained. They are those mentioned above as URUAN remnants and descendants in now some parts of Obot Akara LGA and INI. What has given prominence to that Ibibio war was that it involved so many other ethnic groups and written accounts of that war are still extant. All this goes to confirm what we had earlier said to the effect that most of the Ibibios had lived in their present abode for several millennia long before the war. In fact, as speculated above, it seems the Ibibios were the agents of the magic lores that reached Egypt and not the other way round. Dorothy Talbot has alluded to this when she opined that the likeness in rituals and legends of Egypt can be traced to the West Coast Tribes of Africa and would appear to have been borrowed from the latter and borne across the Continent from the Niger to the Nile. (Talbot, Dorothy Amaury Talbot; 5) It therefore seems most probable although tenuous that the mixed crowd of peoples who went with the Israelites out of Egypt in the Exodus account were the people referred to here. At Egypt during and after the time of the Pharaohs, many nationalities had settled there just like the Jews did on account of the famine that rocked the face of the earth. The black people from Africa South of the Sahara must have settled there too. Those were the years before the ascendancy of the Pharaohs who had reigned supreme after Joseph, son of Jacob a.k.a Israel. Therefore, when URUAN now turned EFIK talk about coming from Canaan or wherever, they should start their story from there in order to make sense. This would also mean that they were not the only people who must have emigrated from Palestine if we want to carry the story further. The truth of the matter is that the EFIK in particular who tried to snob ancient URUAN and the rest of humankind could not be telling the world the simple truth, unless they want to stand the truth on its head. (Cf. Exodus 12:37-40). These multitudes of mixed crowd which left Egypt with Israelites as captured in the above scriptural passage, from whence did they come in the first place? Would the simple truth not rather be that they were the descendants of those who left West Africa for Egypt and not vice versa? Were they the aborigines of Egypt? Do the aborigines flee their country of origin unless there was something to have driven them into bondage? I have concluded elsewhere in this book that the NSIBIDI of Ekpe URUAN were native to URUAN and not borrowings from Egypt or anywhere else and Ekpe is not the preserve of URUAN alone although they might have been the progenitors and founders. Therefore, it must have been this group of people who transmitted NSIBIDI to Egypt if we follow the trend of argument of these early historians and ethnographers like Mmama Talbot who had nothing to gain from URUAN or any other ethnic African tribe, one way or the other and who had put the evolution of URUAN ditto Ibibio, Annang, Ghanaians, Beninoirs etc. well beyond 8000 BC. I have already stated somewhere that the history of URUAN/EFIK predates even the biblical accounts about Joseph and the Pharaohs including the Jews of Palestine. Likewise, Robert S. McKeown also remarked that of all the peoples of the Cross River the IBIBIO and by implication URUAN are "probably the native stock from whom most of the smaller tribes in the Qua Iboe and Calabar have sprung". They could not distinguish between the Ibibios and URUAN, for them they were from one and the same linguistic group, hence the same people. That is why in writing about the EFIK, they simply concluded that they were descendants of URUAN from the IBIBIO (Robert S. McKeon, 35); thus confirming our stand on the URUAN antiquity in their present location.

THE AKWA AKPA URUAN - AKANI OBIO THE ATLANTIC OCEAN CONNECTION: FINAL SETTLEMENT SETTLEMENT OF ALL URUAN PEOPLES INCLUDING THOSE WHO LATER BECAME EFIK

ORIGINS OF THE EFIK - THE TRUE URUAN CONNECTION

URUAN peoples who now occupy most of the entire territory from the Lower Cross River estuary right up to the Atlantic did not necessarily all emigrate together from IBOM to their present locations in their thousands but rather the pioneers might have come in droves in their canoes on sails and some even stayed behind till this day, viz. those who later became the AROS and neighbouring ENYONG. As observed already, there were originally 12 tribes (clans = ESSIEN URUAN DUOPEBA) corresponding to their 12 Idem Ekpe Globes. There are also those who left from USAHAEDET or from IBOM to their present abode. Some clans like Oron, Ibeno, Ikono, Ikpa Ibom (mostly in Mkpat Enin and Ikot Abasi LGAs eg. Ikpa Nung Asang ie. ESSENE district) Obio Akpa in Abak LGA, Ifuho, Ikot Osurua, Abiakpo, Nkap, etc. all these emigrated to where they are now located in Akwa Ibom State mostly in the Ibibio and Annang Mainland from ancient Ibom otherwise tagged INOKON a.k.a AROCHUKWU. This will be treated in a subsequent article as URUAN in the Diaspora. URUAN nation which is treated here now constitutes the seven remaining tribes (CLANS/ESSIEN) popularly so designated as ESSIEN URUAN/EFIK ITIABA located in the geographical and contiguous territories of ancient CALABAR, URUAN NORTH, URUAN

CENTRAL, URUAN RIVERINE and URUAN SOUTH; bounded on the north by old ITU DIVISION in Akwa Ibom State and ODUKPANI LGA in Cross River State, on the South by ORON nation and the Atlantic Ocean, on the east by the old UYO DIVISION and on the west by old EKET DIVISION all in Akwa Ibom State.

According to certain other ethnologists like Roland Oliver and Brian M. Fagan, migrations at this time even from the Cameroons into IBOM or even direct to AKWA AKPA URUAN by sea, was in trickles over the centuries through a variety of sea routes (Roland Oliver & Brian M. Fagan;31). Though this might not have been exactly so, yet it seems a natural postulate because to suggest otherwise would carry the unnatural burden and implications that there was a worldwide date-line on which the migrations were supposed to commence or end. Our treatment also of the IBIBIO as we are going to do subsequently, should never give the impression that either all the IBIBIOs or URUAN for that matter are the AFAHA people who had emigrated from USAHAEDET to IBOM where most of them must have met as described above. No single ethnic group should ever be considered as a biologically homogenous breeding population because it could have happened that URUAN being such sociable, tolerant and accommodating people, would have absorbed many other disparate groups and other stocks of Nigerians who also had emigrated from the Cameroon via USAHAEDET and who would also have been tolerant, law-abiding, amicable, and ready and willing to accept URUAN identity, speak URUAN (now URUAN/EFIK) language and become part and parcel of URUAN as history has demonstrated so admirably and unmistakably worldwide. I can still recall that some old maps of the world of the 1920s -1960s put some towns in the maps of Italy or Germany or France etc. whereas today these towns are either in Germany, France or Spain/Portugal world maps and vice versa eg. Sicily which hitherto was located in the old map of Italy is now located in France. Similarly, Kiel was formerly in the ancient map of Germany but is now located in Poland. What is implied in all this is that in all humility, URUAN accepts the amorphous nomenclature of IBIBIO as then known by the early expatriate historians and ethnologists who had neither cultural bias nor political points to score, one way or the other. URUAN/EFIK people are quite unique in their culture, language (DIALECT) with their customs and traditions etc. ditto the EFIK as every intelligent and reasonable person can admit and detect. We have also come to accept that the attitude of the majority towards the minority is a characteristic of humans even in our age because according to Etinnyin (Engr.) B.E Bassey, the Romans of Europe, the aborigines of Australia and New Zealand, the Red Indians or the West Indians of the two Americas, etc. suffered the same fate, the teachings of Jesus, Muhammed and Buddha notwithstanding. Wherever the populations are high the acculturation effect is so great that most of the smaller societies just get swallowed up both in culture and language if care is not taken. URUAN is becoming gradually swallowed up and many of the new generation cannot utter or spell a word of the original URUAN/EFIK language except the Ibibio language which surrounds them.

In Calabar the Ekoi/ABAKPA - QUA language is gradually being forgotten about. Unlike Oron, Okobo all now in AKPAKIP ARO as also EKET and IBUNO/NKPENEK-UPENEKANG are still holding on to their own language and traditions because they are cut off by sea and not swamped by their gargantuan Ibibio neighbours, yet gradually the young generation especially those born outside the stock are now speaking Ibibio as if their lives depended on it. Whereas the greater URUAN on the mainland of Akwa Ibom State are almost subsumed by the Ibibio language and culture those of Adadia, Ifiayong Obot, Asong who are of the core ancient Iboku stock can still speak flawless URUAN/EFIK tongue whenever prompted. It must also be admitted that with such a cultured species, URUAN expects that people see ethnicity not as static but as something dynamic and revolutionary, bearing in mind that the recent mushrooming of ethnic nationalities all over the world especially in Ibibio land and wherever in Nigeria as also elsewhere in Africa, is but part of the gradual evolutionary process worldwide which in turn, should testify to the antiquity but most demonstrably the ubiquity of URUAN which this venture is trying to address before people continue to confuse the issues further and things get worse. Therefore, URUAN culture history is that they probably pre-dated the others ie. the core Ibibio in their emigrations, stopping first in IBOM where they discovered such a large and incomparable expanse of arable land, settled there for ages, until many other ethnic nationalities including the IGBO subsequently joined them. Then with the inconveniences and hostilities due to too much concentration and concourse of nationalities in a territory that had become jam-packed, also coupled with inevitable squabbles, wars and other socio-political factors, they (URUAN) inexorably were compelled to set sail from IBOM passing through ITU to where they discovered and named AKWA AKPA URUAN – ie. the large Atlantic peninsula adjoining what they later also discovered which became known as CALABAR, via the same Cross River to the estuary which empties itself into the main Atlantic Ocean including what later became known as Calabar or EFIK country just mentioned above.

RECONSTRUCTION OF URUAN NEW TERRITORY & FOUNDING OF AKWA AKPA

ORIGINS AND FOUNDATION OF ITU IN MODERN ITU LGA

This continuing issue of URUAN migration and their settling at IBOM which is contiguous with present - day AROCHUKWU in modern Abia State of Nigeria, inexorably leads us to notice that URUAN peoples had settled here for hundreds of years until compelling forces caused them to move again. This must have happened due perhaps to the same factors that had reared their heads there at Ibom and/or other socio-political factors which also had militated against them and inevitably catapulted their quitting IBOM for good as commented earlier. Moving out from IBOM they traced their way back to the Cross River from where they came. But this time, they had to sail southwards through a vast rocky and undulating territory they named and called ITU. The word ITU is derived from ITIAT – ie. a rocky and mountainous land of stones which they, URUAN-EFIK founded. ITU simply means = land of stones. Because of the rocky nature of the land and typography they decided to move while some remained including some cutters of stone and artists who later became known as ITU MBON – USO meaning ITU artisans or craftsmen and women versed in pottery and smiting as they turned out be but which nomenclature the Igbos overturned and converted it to read ITU MBAUZO. In time Itu became noted for pottery and stone cutting until late in the 1960's when stones became the most important instrument and masterstroke in galvanizing palm produce especially palm kernels which became the key economic product of the East. Moving further from Itu they continued to sail southwards to the great river which they named "AKWA AKPA URUAN". This great river is a Confluence of the Cross River which empties itself into the Atlantic Ocean. Now we are in a position to graphically reconstruct the remaining history. But before that, let us return to Itu for a brief spotlight on ITAM and ITU Local Government Authority with its peoples.

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE ORIGINS & FOUNDATION OF ITU

But according to the Paramount Ruler of Itu, the Ada Idaha ke Eburutu, HRH Obong (Barr) Nyong Edet Inyang, ITU was founded about 1000 years ago by Captain Eyo, probably Etinnyin Eyo and later the Obong of Calabar, but this was only about two – three hundred years ago (Cf. Etinnyin Eyo Eyo Nsa Odo Effiom Ekpo a.k.a King Eyo I [1827- 1838] v/s Etinnyin Uko Akpakpan Uko Okon Edem Eyo Abasi Mesembe Otu a.k.a UKO MBIAKONG of "Ek? okoowot Uko edem-edem" fame as discussed above). But as commented elsewhere, this could only have happened "ke Mbakara ema eked?k obot," ie. from the 1700s, centuries after 1000 AD. Then according to the "Ete Idorenyin Ayadehe" HRH N.E. Inyang, traversing from Iboku Esit Edik a.k.a Creek Town across the Cross River in one of his expeditions, Captain Eyo with his "Ndit? Ubom" discovered to their excitement, but at the same time enthusiasm characteristic of sea farers, some aquatic mammals swimming and mating with their flappers along the beach. These happened to be "ITU" fish ie. Manatee. With excitement and curiosity, they dropped anchor and killed a number of them with their IKE? /USAM. Then fearing that some of them could rot on the way while rowing back, they quickly smoked and packaged them to Creek Town for the Elders to ascertain whether these could be safe for eating. To their delight and amazement, the Elders assured them to be safe and they also discovered that they were very delicious aquatic animals just like any other type of edible fish. Knowing that plenty of them abound in that area, they named the location ITU till this day. Equally they also discovered that the green forests were also full of wild animals especially monkeys. Thus began the rush for the newly founded Itu town for the ITU manatee fish. Readers can make their appraisal one way or the other vis - a - vis ITAM Clan. Since its foundation in the 1800s the following Clanal Kings and Rulers have reigned in ITU to wit:

OBONG EFERE ANSA (1887-1899)	OBONG EKPO ADIAHA (1899-1922)	OBONG ASUQUO MBANG (1922-37)	OBONG OKON ONOYOM (1937-45)	OBONG OKON EKPO ANWATIM (1945 -46)
OBONG EKPO EKPO (1946-66)	OBONG IKONI EYIBIO IKONI (1966)	OBONG EDET OKON EKPO (1966-06)	OBONG UDOETTE EBIANGA BASSEY (2006 -15)	OBONG (BARR.) NYONG EDET INYANG (2015====)

Ancient Itu as captured above, remained part and parcel of URUAN/EFIK and by implication, such that its peoples spoke Efik language until long after the Slave Trade era. Thereafter, the Efik opened up trading posts at Esuk Itu and environs dealing in palm produce and other items of merchandise brought into Calabar by the European Supercargoes with East Itam peoples in particular as the main beneficiary until in recent times and well into the post-civil war period. As discussed already above, on account of the rocky nature of the land and its typography, the majority of URUAN Founding fathers decided to move on while some remained at ITU including those who later became the ITAM.

ITAM IN PARTICULAR: CULTURE HISTORY & ORIGINS

There are several culture and ethnographic histories on the origins of ITAM. Most of the versions of Origins are pure legends. That is why most of the traditions about ITAM origins speak of endless waves of their migrations. In fact, one of the traditions is based on a legend that the kindred was founded by a brave hunter by name "ITAM" who had wandered from the heartland of IBIBIO country, probably from IKONO into the area. He had roamed in search of a suitable hunting grounds and place of settlement and for farming. At the time, there were internecine wars among the IKONO and as people were displaced and scattered, he had wandered into this area and found a suitable settlement. Thereafter, the man begat three sons namely; Afaha, Ekit and Ibiaku and their descendants grew into three lineage groups of AFAHA ITAM (7 Villages), EKIT ITAM (14 Villages) and IBIAKU ITAM (26 Villages) OR simply that Ekit, Afaha and Ibiaku were his co-travelers who later formed the three kindred groups above. Those places occupied by these groups then came by a sort of general designation and the area came to be named after him as ITAM. Most of the villages enumerated in Itam Clan are classified under these three kindred groupings (Cf. A History of Itam, Ndeco Pub. Uyo, 2012; 15-16). Here we also discover that Ikono has the same border with ITAM. Another Ethnographic origin of ITAM and theory which most writers on Ibibio history seem to support, has it that ITAM people migrated from the Cameroun Highlands and specifically USAHAEDET and journeyed from there with other tribes and Clans like Offot, Ikono, Nsit and Iman passing through Western Calabar, Arochukwu, Ikono, ASAN IBOM and founded their present locations. ITAM in particular left Asan Ibom due to overcrowding passing through Offot and URUAN settled first at Ntiat Itam. Thereafter, they journeyed through the river at Esuk Uyo through IDU a.k.a Ifiayong to ITU. As a location associated with the abundance of Iyak "Itu" (MANATEE), their hunters and fishermen killed them at Esuk ITU down to the Upper Cross River region. Monkeys were also found in abundance here in ITU thick forests and the people often used them as thank-offerings sacrifice to their gods for their safety and prosperity. That is why ITAM people have considered and assumed monkeys as sacred animals and TOTEM of ITAM. Till this day, both the original settlers and their descendants are forbidden from killing and eating monkeys. Yes, but this version receives only partial acceptance and recognition in URUAN. The version which URUAN owns and maintains has it that ITAM peoples are the direct descendants of ITU, the Founding Fathers of which stayed put as founders of ITU as discussed above. Period.

Itam as one of the core Ibibio Clans is a Clan in Itu with an area of approximately 556.1 square Km. and a population of over 100,000. ITAM is bounded in the North by Enyong Abatim River (EFIK), in the South and South East by Oku and URUAN Clans, in the West by Ibiono Ibom and in the East by Ayadehe and Oku Iboku (URUAN) Clans. At a point in time and even right into the 1960's, Esuk Itam was a bee-hive of trading activities connecting URUAN, Oron, Eket, Old Calabar, Arochukwu, Ekoi, Cameroun, Sao Tomé and Principe including Equatorial Guinea. In those days Itam business men and women dominated the entire Old Uyo Province with the famous URUA EKPA market as the melting pot of traders from places far and near. Others were Urua Nkiduehe at Ekit Itam, Urua Etaha at Nung Ukot, Urua Atan at Mbak Obio, Urua ? kwed eyop at Mbak Atai, Urua Edodido at Northern Itam, Urua Whyte a.k.a Urua Mbakara at Nkim Itam, Urua Nyehe Iso at Nkim, Urua Enen at Ekritam, Urua Umia a Ekpat and Urua Obo on "OBO MARKET DAY" at Ekritam Ikot Obong or Ekritam I. Leading the whole pack of course was URUA EKPA at Ikot Obio Atai. All these markets led to the ascendancy of Itam nation and the phenomenal influence of Itam peoples in the development of Uyo Metropolis in the coming years. Most of the traders at Uyo city market were Itam citizens leading to the popular phrase: "Itam, Itam anie kp?" = only Itam people are wealthy. Infact, the first storeyed buildings ever built in Uyo were all owned by the Itam. Some of these Itam traders like Chief Etim Uwa a.k.a Abriba, Isaac Ita Uwa, Edidem Udo Ikot Idem, J.J. Akpan etc. started their business empires at Esuk Itam and then transferred to the Central Uyo market now Urua AKPAN NDEM as the Uyo Colonial Capital was developing in leaps and bounds then. Today Urua Itam ranks as one of the greatest local markets in Uyo Senatorial District. There are also many communities outside ITAM Clan which even till today have links with the core Itam – Itam communities in the Diaspora, and some of them include Item in Abia State, Ikot Akpan Ndua in Ibesikpo/Asutan, Obong Ntak in Utu Etim Ekpo and several other Obong towns in Abak LGA. Before now Itam people mostly of Ikot Ebom and Nkim Itam were noted for their skilled craftsmanship in pottery and cane furnitures. Most of the important personalities in Itu LGA as noted below are from ITAM Clan.

Moving to ITU as also the exploits of URUAN Founding Fathers, the thick forest, the gaping canyons and swamps before them were so terrifying that they were constrained to write off the area as very unconducive for habitation. Added to this was the fact that during their settlement there at ITU, they had increased in their populations and this had made them to continue to set sail further southwards through the tributaries to found what is now EAST ITAM and WEST ITAM which river is still part of the Cross River which runs as far as IDU a.k.a NWANIBA as discussed above. All these go to explain ITAM connection with URUAN and why Itam people between the 1700s -1800s were so visible during the booming trade at ESUK MBEHE IDU - URUAN Headquarters. Nowadays everybody in ITU L. G. A. seems to have abandoned URUAN-EFIK culture for Ibibio culture and language. They now speak Ibibio and adopt Ibibio ways as if their lives depended on it including Oku Iboku and Ayadehe peoples. But for the River Cross a.k.a CROSS RIVER which separates them, Mbiabo peoples would have long forgotten their Efik tongue and heritage, even so, they are gradually and inexorably caught up with the Ibibio bug, ditto IK? R? FI? ÑG, a.k.a Ikot Offiong with borders with Oku Iboku and Ayadehe. But this should not detain us here. If truth must be told, it is due rather to the wonder of the Calabar – Itu – Odukpani Road and masterstroke of Chief (Brigadier) U. J. Esuene, the erstwhile Action Governor of the defunct South Eastern State of Nigeria which metamorphosed into Cross River State by his opening up the new macadamized wonder and thoroughfare which terminal was named after yet another wonder Action Military Chieftain, General Muritala Muhammed, the Nigerian Head of State who toppled General Gowon's Military Government in 1975.

But where is ITU then? As noted above, this rocky and undulating URUAN/EFIK territory of yore is located further south as one moves from Ancient IBOM, now renamed Arochukwu through one of the tributaries of the Cross River towards AKWA AKPA URUAN and the Atlantic bay. Itu is the Headquarters of the Local Government Area and covers the physical area of about 606.10 sq. Km. It is bounded on the North by Odukpani in Cross River State, to the West by Ibiono Ibom and Ikono LGAs and to the South and East by Uyo and URUAN LGAs respectively. With Coordinates: 5^{o}N10 - ON, 7^{o} 59^{o}E // 5-16667^{o}N – 7-98333^{o}E, Itu LGA total population as recorded in the 1983 -1990 National Census stands at 129, 033 persons. Itu of course is part and parcel of the core Ibibio nation and most of the people speak either Central Ibibio or corrupted URUAN/EFIK today. There are five distinguishable Districts and Clans in language and culture viz. Itu proper, Itam East and West, Oku Iboku, Ayadehe and Mbiabo. ? N MARCHE TO AKWAAKPA a.k.a THE ATLANTIC THRO' THE CROSS RIVER

THE DISCOVERY OF WHAT BECAME AYADEHE & ISO ATAKPO a.k.a AKANI OBIO URUAN CROSSING OVER TO AKWA AKPA URUAN BEING LED BY "MBUKPO" THE MYSTICAL KITE

Then having left IBOM, these URUAN/EFIK pioneers again sailed along, but this time, down south to where they discovered a large expanse of water which later on, one of the British pioneers, Sir John Beecroft had named the "RIVER CROSS" a.k.a Cross River. From hindsight, they suspected such an expansive river could lead only inexorably to even a much larger one and to yet another at "UFAK" Confluences. So they sent some of their daring seafarers to explore the depths, and these came up with the confirmation that indeed the large and expansive river was running yet to a more expansive one with a Confluence in tow before it. There and then they decided to get back to Itu and anchor in order to construct lager canoes with sails in tow should in case the deep expansive waters would be difficult to navigate with oars. They also constructed bigger paddles for such expansive waters as well. That done, they set sail and arrived at what they termed as "AKWA UFAK AFIN" Confluence which in modern times has turned out to be the Confluence to the right of the Calabar – Itu Bridge head as one is coming from Itu. They anchored at what later became known as "EDIK ANI ESSA" to prepare their sails in order to move on. As they moved nearer to the Confluence, the rowing became more difficult even when the tides were in their favour. They became terribly afraid and, weary suspecting it to be the handiwork of the deity - AFIA-ANWAN NDEM, the great Goddess of URUAN-EFIK peoples (Cf. Interview with HRM, Edidem [Elder] Edet Akpan Inyang Amb.P. Paramount Ruler of Itu LGA. 11/8/17). Then they began to weave EKETE baskets for putting in eggs in order to make Peace Offerings sacrifice to the Goddess. But the more they tried to appease the Goddess, the more they got stuck and exhausted with rowing.

As they then began praying and moaning, a swarm of kikes flew bye and some of the people drew up some of the stones they had picked at Itu for grinding and other household chores and for cracking palm kernels to throw at and kill the kites for their meal. But the kites simply dived and flew over above them flapping their swings and soaring up in the skies. They were at a loss what to do next as they seemed to have come to their wits' end. Which of the converging tributaries were they to follow from the four before them, the larger on the right side of which they were rowing getting larger and more expansive than the others? It was quite confounding and perplexing to say the least. As if to add salt to injury, one of the kites as they were flying and skimming far into the horizon, came back and flew behind them while at the same time seemingly steadying above them fluttering and flapping its wings. They became more excited and frightened! One of them again took up a stone aiming to kill it, but it dived and flew back behind them." It should now be clear to you my discerning readers, that many a time we strive but very unsuccessfully to "lean very tenaciously on our own Understanding" (Cf. Prov. 3:5), feeling cock-sure of what we are aiming at and trying to do or achieve. This should not be. For the Holy Prophet Isaiah has forewarned us to be wary when we think we know a great deal about many things. Yes, we can only seem to know it all that we can solve our problems by our own Understanding and expertise. But hasn't the Prophet forewarned us? Indeed, the Holy Prophet Isaiah had admonished his people of Israel and warned them, and this should confine our options to that effect. He had said to the people, and by implication to you and me:

> Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call to Him while He is still near; for my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, says the Lord. For as the Heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways; and my thoughts than your thoughts (Is. 55: 6 - 8).

When Moses was leading the twelve tribes of Israel his Hebrew people, who later became the Israelites, a.k.a the Chosen People of Yahweh from their bondage in Egypt to the Promised land, the leaders of the people had always complained and murmured against Mosses. They had remonstrated many times why Moses was seemingly leading them from Ramses for Succoth through the circuitous route through the desert which invariably took them over forty years to arrive at Jericho, which was to be their first port of disembarkation as it were, a destination èn roûte the Holy Land. They had thought that leading them to cross the Red Sea to Palestine was tantamount to leading them into the unknown and to perdition instead of taking them through an easier, shorter and straight route – a route which was certainly through the territory of the Philistines (Cf. Exd. 13:17). They even apostatized. They grumbled and protested against Mosses:" And the whole community of Israelites began to complain about Mosses and Aaron in the desert and said to them, 'why… have you led us into this desert to starve this entire assembly to death'" (Exd. 16:3). Similarly, when URUAN arrived at this wonderful UFAK Confluence with so many Convergences, four of them to be precise, with the largest expanse to the right of them towards which they were rowing and confused, they also had protested so to speak: Why should we be rowing towards the wider and larger expansive waters leading us to the unknown instead of following the narrower ones to which we have been accustomed and with which we have ever been familiar? And worst still, we do not know whether our type of canoes can take us thither? They were thoroughly confused and flabbergasted, to say the least. But like the Israelites, God was leading them through the depths and they should have nothing to fear or complain about. Their destination was AKWA AKPA URUAN, and thither they must go.

Yet still, for while they were bemoaning their destiny, the mystical loan KITE continued to flap its wings while at the same time turning hither and thither - back and forth as if beckoning on them to follow on as it slowly flew onward advancing forward towards the expansive waters to the right – the coast of which they later named as IKOROFFIONG a.k.a IKOT OFFIONG. Yes, the mystery Kite was unremittingly and inexorably leading and directing them along to their destination, and this it did until they arrived at AKWA AKPA URUAN before vanishing from their sight just as the Sacred Star of Bethlehem which led the three Wise Men, the Magi from the Orient to adore the Child Jesus (Cf. Mtt. 2:1-12). It then dawned on them that God had sent the deity, AFIA-ANWAN NDEM to lead and direct them by means of the mystical Kite. It is worthy of note that this deity must not be confused with mermaids because it is quite distinct from MAMMY WATER or EKA ABASI. That is why the Oku Ndem URUAN immediately set about preparing and making the EKETE baskets in preparation for Thanks-Offerings to the revered Goddess. Thereafter, he announced to the bewildered but happy nation that the Mystery Kite was God's servant and messenger and was to be sacred to them from thenceforth through their generations. Since then, the "MBUKPO" kite has become sacred to URUAN as her TOTEM and must neither ever be killed nor eaten. That is why URUAN has refrained from eating the flesh of kites till this day. Nevertheless, this moot episode should not be lost to all readers of this Book.

The fact of the matter is that when the Calabar – Itu Bridge was being constructed by the French Foujeuroil Company, the bridge parts often collapsed and some of the iron metals, the railings and other materials used to disappear without a trace. Precisely in late 1977, it dawned on the Director of the Construction Company to seek out what actually was the cause of what was unfolding before them. It is a known fact that the Chiefs of Ayadehe in Council had advised the Foujeuroil Company to consult with their king, the Paramount Ruler of Ayadehe, His Highness, Eteidung Effiong Ikot Idem. He then had advised them to build a befitting Edifice to appease AFIA-ANWAN NDEM URUAN deity as her new abode because by unwittingly trying to build a bridge across the waters there, the Company was superciliously and defiantly disturbing and trying though without success to dislodge and drive away the revered highly celebrated Goddess from her sacred abode. Thereafter, a very beautiful storeyed building was constructed by the Company before the Calabar – Itu Bridge could be successfully constructed and completed, the bridge which still stands strong till today. What has happened to the colourful "Upstairs" House is anybody's guess because the same thing had occurred at Odukpani Headquarters when the Qua Traditional Ruler there In-Council similarly advised the Costain/MCC Company while constructing the Calabar – Ikom Road to build a befitting edifice to house the great deity of the QUAS, NNIM a.k.a NDEM at that particular time also. The Company promptly built the imposing edifice. They had been having problems with landslides and gully erosion there and could not make any headway while working on that particular site – a problem which still defies all solutions till today. Yes, the "Upstairs" house was indeed constructed and later, some Area Boys began to surreptitiously, imprudently and defiantly vandalize and steal the roofing materials beginning with the zinc until the whole edifice disappeared from the face of the earth without a trace till this day.

MOVEMENT FROM "UFAK" ABIN ANI ASSE CONFLUENCE TO ISO ATAKPOR THE DISCOVERY OF AKPA MFRIUKIM AND REBUILDING OF BIGGER CANOES

They then raised their sails and moved on to where they discovered another expansive water and Confluence which they later named as AKPA MFRIUKIM ostensibly because on arriving thereto, they lowered their sails and anchored. Meanwhile they discovered as it seemed to them, an expansive water with seeds of white hairs floating on the surface of the water. All over the coast were silk cotton trees everywhere. The convergent tributaries they later discovered, showed that the furthest emptied itself at what they called ESUK INWANG near NDON EBOM, the middle tributary led to Nung Ikono Ufok Beach and the nearest on their right flowed to IKOT INYANG ESUK and ANAKPA. Other tributaries rejoined the Cross River branching to IDU a.k.a NWANIBA and to IKPA URUAN through MBIAKONG and at the same time meandering to INYANG UDO NWANKWO/IKOT OSURUA in Annang territory, to Etim Ekpo and then to Ibagwa to join the IMO RIVER on the Rivers State border. They must have tarried here for years in order to explore the shore line, but discovered it to be too marshy for habitation and full of many rivulets as we have shown. Meanwhile they continued to stay on for some time in order to build larger and stronger canoes to move on. Thereafter, they set sail and discovered yet another Convergence of wider and more expansive rivers, the larger expanding into the horizon to no end – the Atlantic. There, they later named UFAK EFFIONG CONFLUENCE where the mystery Kite leading them seemed to be diving and dancing to signal that they were near their destination. It was here they discovered an expansive land mass stretching into the interior – a massive arable land which they appreciated a great deal and thanked their stars because it was what they had been searching for. They named the massive River before them as "AKWA AKPA URUAN". And the territory, AKWA OBIO URUAN. Then as they moved on through the ever expanding flowing Cross River, still to their right, they became thoroughly overwhelmed and awe-struck at the sight of the MAGNUM TREMENDUM FOREST before them – a forest magnificently clear, lucid and full of tall trees like the Iroko, mahogany, cedar, red wood trees, UKPA, etc. Their wonder was not without mesmerization because they had thought that indeed they had arrived at the threshold of their great deity, NDEM URUAN. Those ever-elusive trees but now ubiquitous before them were also what they were searching for the construction of ocean ferrying canoes. They would soon come to realize all these to be coming from no other than God's mighty hand. How mistaken, because some time as they disembarked and tried entering the mystery forest, they were mesmerized and awe-struck. They became completely confounded. No human before them had ever attempted to penetrate the FOREST. Nobody could ever dare to cut even a shrub talkless of trying to fell any tree yonder. This mystery forest was to be sacred to them through their generations and has remained so even till this day.

Briefly, they had no choice but to prepare EKETE baskets for presenting Peace Offerings Sacrifice to the stupendous and benign non-threatening deity. This forest was unambiguously the abode of what became URUAN unassailable and unmitigated DEITY through the generations which they named as ATAKPOR NDEM URUAN a.k.a. NDEM URUAN INYANG ATAKPOR or better still "ISO ATAKPOR". Iso Atakpor has nothing to do with the FACE OF ATAKPOR or the FACE of anything whatsoever. It is simply URUAN/EFIK expression for the definitive, designation and ABODE - the LOCATION where the deity, NDEM dwells. It means a special sacred abode of the gods or spirits, NDEM or Goddess, eg. "ISO UMAN ENA? " - MBIAKONG; "ISO ? FFI? ? ABIA" - IDU, etc. Sacred places in the Old Testament were known as SANCTUM SANCTORUM a.k.a. Holy of Holies. Pre-Vatican II, Catholic Church always referred to the Sanctuary as ISO ALTAR. Liturgical Ceremonies and Rites devolved around the ISO ALTAR. As pupils, we were often awe-struck and had to move fast with alacrity and scurrility past the sacred forest, turning our eyes neither to the right nor left in order to climb or descend the high hill while going to or returning from MBIAKONG. In Idu, no masquerade ever walked or ran past the "ISO ? FFI? ? ABIA FOREST". At nightfall, any person going to, or from Uyo - Nwaniba Road had to scurry past the SACRED FOREST and walk or run facing backwards. No one ever attempted to do so facing the road before him/her for fear of coming in contact with either ghosts, goblins or gnomes and getting stuck. Everyone was gobsmacked at the sight of the sacred forest. It was an awesome and frightening location. People were known to get stuck at nightfall and would have to unremittingly remain stuck there until dawn. People cycling on bicycles or going on lorries / cars etc. were also known to have been stopped short, remaining there till the day-break. This is no yarn but the fact of the matter. But all that is history now as the dualized road to the NWANIBA FIVE - STAR HOTEL and GOLF RESORT had cleared off the sacred forest without much ado. But that could only happen in the 21st Century and Millennium when conviction and FAITH in the Supernatural and metaphysical phenomena, spirits, Mmami Water, NDEM, etc. have waned.

SACRED FORESTS IN URUAN HISTORY AND HERITAGE THE "MKPATARI" MOSS AND PERIMETER FOREST GROUNDS

To us children then, the ISO AKAI EKA EKPO of IDU was a no-go-area even though situated right adjacent to the football pitch of St. Joseph's Catholic School. During the Ekpo Season, the "EKA EKPO" goddess was often heard poles away seemingly "mourning" for her children to return home at midday or at dusk. The road through this sacred forest led to the great OBO and EDEMETAHA main market. It was middle-way short-cut and thoroughfare meant for Ekpo masquerades crossing from one section of the town to the other. The road was constructed in such a way that people would not have to encounter them. Everybody used to scurry away at night-fall passing through the now completely abandoned and derelict N/A Idu/Mbak Etoi - Nung Udoe/Eket Road to avoid being caught up by sword carrying masquerades. For years beginning with the Zik/M.I. Okpara First Republic Administration which used to deceive the people by placing heaps of laterite and some sand and gravel at strategic locations along the road during National Elections - ostensibly to signal that the ever busy ancient N/A ROAD would be tarred prompto as part of their Election Campaign Promises. The tarred road has never seen the light of day. The road has continued to remain so and into the Millennium and 21st Century AD. Similarly, the proposed and Campaign promises of February 2019 Federal Elections for the yet-to-be dualized "ABA - IKOT-EKPENE - CALABAR FEDERAL ROAD" has remained so with everything abandoned after Elections. This can be seen as the road is increasingly becoming unmotorable with man-holes as you read this BOOK. This is my witness! Yet the citizens look on in disbelief as our so-called LEADERS who should stand up to be counted on the side of truth and integrity renege every time on their promises to the people. To the Nigerian Politicians nowadays, it is not about what they believe in any more, but who they believe in and how this aligns with their electoral fortunes. The irony of it all is that the poor masses are left at the mercy of these lot. You ain't seen anything yet! And this is by the way as I so end abruptly to continue the business at hand viz. "ISO ATAKPOR AND SACRED FORESTS". However, I hope that readers can still join these bits and pieces together to weave and knit the narrative and make sense out of it.

Now let me summarize because the most enigmatic of them all was the ISO EKPO NY? H? in IDU – the SACRED FOREST deemed to be very benign to children. At this sacred forest, masquerades and even spirits/ghosts were known to be appearing and disappearing therefrom. During the EKPO season, the Village road passing beside the forest is a no-go-area to all children and womenfolk even today. One thing to be noted about these sacred forests was their cleanness and clearness as observed above. They were mysteriously bright and could be seen through a couple of miles away. The mystery forests were very clear although full of tall gigantic virgin trees everywhere. In this particular forest which was quite close to our compound, there were very many "UKANA" oil bean trees. On hearing the cracking sound of these trees usually in the afternoon, children would rush inside the forest to go pick the oil bean seeds unharmed. Salad vegetables for making AFANG SOUP often grew there scrawling beside the forest perimeter with "MKPATARI" – a sort of evergreen grass, "MOSS" crawling and growing luxuriously all over the place. The MKPATARI was often used for decorations. Growing outside the perimeter of the forests, it meant the MOSS could be gathered without coming to any harm, especially by children, mostly virgin girls. Until in recent times, MOSS was often used in place of flags buntings and lengths of coloured silk cloths for decorations nowadays. The MOSS was the in thing and very much in use during village and school functions and celebrations. Often times the Headmaster / Headmistress would announce that pupils from Mbiakong and Idu where these forest abound "were to bring" the MKPATARI to School for decorations during school functions and End-of-Year Celebrations. Another characteristic of this perimeter ambient in some of the VIRGIN FORESTS, was the luxuriant growth of cultivated vegetables or fruit planted there. One of my aunts used to cultivate her plot of land near the perimeter FOREST and her crops especially green pepper, okro, brown cocoyams for making EKPA? ? KUKW? as also EDITAN vegetables were a class of their own. They were ever plump, green and fresh. Yes, VIRGIN FORESTS, in that no one was ever expected either to get in there or cut any tree or shrub in these FORESTS. They were to remain untouched, ever clear, ever green and luxuriant. The belief was that NDEM in this FOREST was always making everything evergreen and burgeoning and flourishing. Some of these VIRGIN FORESTS were often benign to children being deemed innocent and clean. No adult was ever found near such sacred forests and no child was ever known to have come to any evil till this day. To many it still remains a mystery. But this is a clear fact; and by the way, to ISO ATAKPOR we must return. For a more detailed treatment of NDEM/SPIRITS, see Chapter III.

"ISO ATAKPOR" here ie. URUAN SACRED FOREST could be regarded either as the NDEM URUAN deity himself, or his abode or the shrine of the deity, ATAKPOR NDEM URUAN INYANG. Having established the raison d'ìtre of ATAKPOR, the Oku NDEM URUAN was said to have ordered that from thenceforth individuals and groups, and indeed, the nation as an indivisible community would be duty bound to make their offerings in sacrifice using the EKETE baskets followed by the 'spreading /scattering' of "NSEI" sacred yellow powder over the designated location thereat. NSEI was later on meant to be used at all sacred functions and celebrations as a mark of sacralization and consecration both of persons and places/locations in URUAN/EFIK through the generations, even today. The term "ATAKPOR" has become a sort of password and identity for all URUAN peoples. Sometimes it is used as a greeting especially among the elders. On meeting an URUAN elder, he would simply say "DA ATAKPOR", or simply "ATAKPOR", and the other would instantaneously accord him the respect that is his due by also replying with "DAATAKPOR", how are you? The term is often used on momentous and great occasions and indeed, concourse of URUAN/EFIK citizens and in the Diaspora with "Ojei bab URUAN ATAKPOR"! and in the case of EFIK EBURUTU in particular, "Ojei bab EFIK EBURUTU". To which exclamatory is chorused aloud with tremendous and fantastic enthusiasm by all present – "OWEI"! It is an evocation and elicitation of a momentous occasion and pride of the citizenry. It was thereafter that they took possession of the large arable territory which stretched before them and even extended as far as the MAINLAND of what became the Ibibio country. Here they settled with its abundance of wild fruits, fish and salt from the rivers and big and gigantic trees for timber, for building materials and for making much bigger canoes including other items of furniture. The abundance of ETO NNUNUNG (mangroves) here was another blessing which they as will be seen later made the early Portuguese Explorers to name the area they (URUAN/EFIK Founding Fathers) discovered further on as KALABROS = Land of MANGROVES, a.k.a CALABAR. Then they employed these mangrove trees in constructing their houses as well as INE (water fronts and huts). Those with large families and who could afford built decent brick houses from ADUA? /EDON which is a type of mud which they had discovered there on the coasts. After constructing their "MBOI" mangrove houses they completed by putting on thatched mat-roofs. Some of them also burnt and moulded KORI – KORI bricks from the ADUA? /EDON they scooped from the creeks. This was a special kind of clayey-mud found along the coasts and creeks which they mixed with river-base sharp sand to burn into bricks. In fact, the early Missionaries capitalized upon this, and also used such bricks in their constructions especially Church buildings and parsonages the likes of which can still be found in Anua, Nsukara and Eman Uruan. These are still extant today. Such buildings can also be found adorning the landscape and towns like Esuk-Odu, Ntrukpum, Idu, Nwaniba, Ifiayong, Mbiakong, Ikpa, Adadia, Ibeno, Creek Town, Okoyong, Edik Ikpa, Ikot Offiong, Ufak Effiong, Ikpa Ene, Eman Ukpa, Ekim Enen, Ikot Oto Inyie, Nung Oku, etc. till today. The first ever brick work and permanent Catholic Church that was built in 1910 by the early Holy Ghost missionaries, CSSp, in Eastern Nigeria at Eman URUAN still stands strong to their glory and in testimony of the use of this type of materials invented by URUAN architects of yore.

But once again because of one reason or the other, URUAN people did not all continue to settle here forever as their ever growing populations with the attendant insufficiency of land necessitated their further emigration to found new homelands. Although they must have settled here for almost half a Millennium – 500 years, yet as great seafarers always exploring the depths, they must have discovered that they would have to move on to new and better locations. This, coupled with their spirit of adventure as world-class sea-farers must have warranted their further emigrations down the lower Cross River estuary as their culture history has shown. Some historians have put their settlement there as an invisible community for between three and four hundred Years. This is also corroborated by EFIK history as noted above. But the long and short of it is that later on towards the end of the first half of the Christian era, some of them had further set sail until they discovered another large expanse of land still along the Cross River estuary on crossing the Atlantic. Here, they also must have pitched their camps and settled for centuries as we are going to see. We need not go into the details of their exploits and eventual possession and settlement there for centuries of generations quite into the second half of the Millennium and 20th Century of the Christian era before moving still further and further along the NNUNUNG Atlantic coast. While this was going on, some of them were and are still settling there at AKWA AKPA URUAN which area they have now renamed "AKANI OBIO URUAN" today. Even till date, URUAN people living there in the territory are still plying to and forth from there, the same as the EFIK in particular are doing between Akpabuyo and Calabar or Calabar and Creek Town. But of course some of these daring sea farers before the nation, in what has seemed to be an entire clan or district had continued to sail along and discover new and larger expanse of land locations including Ikoneto, Adiabo, Ik?r?fi?ñg, Mbiabo, etc. Fortunately, then, and sailing further and further, they must have branched off either along the mangrove coasts or further along the Atlantic down the estuary to what is present day ORON territory. Yes, because the song of these ancient boat-men and adventurers had always been:

> Sia mma kebe AKWA AKPA URUAN/ When once I have crossed the Atlantic Mkpaha aba ke ube inya akwa mm? / I cannot fear death or drown crossing any depths Ekam es? -ub?k ewat esin man nnyin ikpesim is? !/ Just let us row on and we shall touch land! Se ik?t Nnunu ko, ekam ewat esin! / Look there is the mangrove forest ahead, row on!

RECONSTRUCTION OF URUAN/EFIK NEW TERRITORY THE FOUNDING OF CREEK TOWN, ETC.

Some of them are those who rowed from the AKWA AKPA URUAN and discovered the expansive territory where some of them settled permanently for centuries in what they named as IBOKU ESIT EDIK anglicized CREEK TOWN. It is very probable that most of them were of the IBOKU URUAN tribe and now remnants of IBIAKU URUAN, but not necessarily all of them had moved on, because everybody knows, when people move like that, some members of the group could be of a kind, that is, from the same kindred groupings and families while others could be neighbours, friends and others from kindreds of the larger tribe. Here too, we need not begin to argue about who and who and from which clans exactly the progenitors of Creek Town, ditto Iboku Utan ie. Atakpa /Calabar came.

All such names like Ekpenyong Effiom Okoho, Obong Eyo, Etinnyin Ntiero Effiwatt, Obong Eyamba, Etinnyin Ibanga Nkenta etc. are new concocted stories and recent fabrications that take us nowhere because most of these words and names came into URUAN/EFIK culture History and lexicon during the Hart's Commission of Enquiry into the Stool and Obongship of Calabar conducted just in 1964. Most of those who wrote or gave testimonies whether as EFIK or URUAN indigenes or whatever were doing so for relevance and to protect the old status quo that the EFIK came from Palestine, and that they are better than and different from the rest of mankind. These are immaterial to the aims and contexts of this book as we do not deal with controversies here. All that our readers are interested in knowing is whether these people of the same URUAN stock are the same as those who discovered and settled in Creek Town, till today, ditto Calabar, Akpabuyo, Abana ie. ancient Bakassi as they have always read and heard about which this story unfolds. Yes, these same URUAN boatmen of yore who as they were rowing, sighted the great Atlantic Ocean in full view. They had in excitement exclaimed now "Sese ATA AKPA ko ndien! We have arrived at the real ocean =ATA AKPA ". And rowing a little further they soon came face to face with this thick mangrove forest on the gigantic coast ahead, their newly found territory which came to be known as ATAKPA is what we now call D u k e T o w n, CALABAR ie. when putting the two words together ata + akpa=Atakpa, just as in the case of Niger+Area = Nigeria; or in the case of IDU Nwaòa+Iba = where two roads meet and then anglicized into NWANIBA as demonstrated already.

Nevertheless, it should be remarked here that it wasn't such a dramatic movement forewords or a total departure from and desertion or rejection of AKWA AKPA or CREEKTOWN, one or the other. It was rather a going and coming to and forth until they actually and finally had effectively and naturally taken possession of these mangrove coasts which the early Portuguese explorers and merchants in their first coming in 16th century AD had named KALABROS, Calabar = the land of mangroves. Remember that these same sea-farers from Portugal were the very first humans under the celebrated Christopher Columbus as Captain that discovered what we now call AMERICA in 1492. It must have happened as already observed in the case of Creek Town and even IBOM/AROCHUKWU especially during the Slave Trade era, that from time to time they were coming back to visit their kith and kin at AKWA AKPA/AKANI OBIO ie. Iboku Esit Edik often called OBIO OKO = OLD TOWN. It was as if to say "that is our ancient town of primary settlement", and they did this ostensibly to offer sacrifices for their welfare at the ISO ATAKPOR and the ANANSA. Some pagan groups are still doing that till this day though not officially on behalf of URUAN. Since the establishment of the Catholic Church and School there, and the dedication of the entire coastland by the legendary Bishop of Calabar, Most Rev. Dr. James Moynagh, an Irish missionary who came to Calabar in 1930, official sacrifices have been banned. URUAN people only use the place especially on the occasion of the initial ceremonies for the coronation of an accredited URUAN traditional Ruler or the Nsomm designate in a ceremony tagged 'Odunam Edik? Udak ye Eriyara Ntinya'. But in the case of Calabar, the EFIK are still going and coming to visit their kith and kin especially in Creek Town, Idu, Ifiayong, Mbiakong, Ikot Offiong, Adiabo, Ikon Eto and Akpabuyo etc. to this day. According to Sir Ethbert Udo Udoma, the last in the series of Presidents General of IBIBIO STATE UNION as also the erstwhile Chief Justice of Uganda who presided over most of the Court proceedings in a number of land cases, traditional evidence has it that it was a segment but not necessarily a designated clan or kindred of URUAN seafarers moved along and founded what is now known as Creek Town, ditto Calabar.

> Some later emigrated under the leadership of Effiom Okoho, a relative of Obong Eyo Nsa of Creek town and founded Ata Akpa = Atakpa, a settlement nearest to the real sea/ocean which the British supercargoes and slave traders later Duke Town, in the same manner, Nsidung christened by the supercargoes Henshaw Town was reputed to have been founded by Etubom Henshaw whose real name in Efik is Ansa and for not being able to pronounce it, the supercargoes settled for anglicized word "Henshaw". (Udo Udoma E.,8)

But this seems to be a much later story, a development that Justice Udoma as a lawyer must have tried to put together from what he had gathered during the proceedings. The point is that this book deals with the story of ancient URUAN hundreds of years before the Christian era. But still this should not detain us as we were continuing with their further movements from AKWA AKPA to their founding and settling in Creek Town, Atakpa and Nsidung where they must have settled only along the coast, the mainland having been earlier founded and occupied by the Quas/ABAKPA or popularly the EKOI on to the west and the EFUTs to the East. It will also be noticed that they are the same people ie. Those who settled there permanently since others would have been going and coming hither and thither from AKWA AKPA and IBOKU ESIT EDIK, who later became known as the EFIK. But as their populations increased with others coming and going as we have demonstrated already, people had to move on rowing further and further because the coastal areas were too small to contain larger populations. People have always been known to move on seeking greener pastures down the estuary even beyond the Atlantic. Some therefore had to continue along the meandering Cross River past the Idundu River the areas of which had effectively been occupied by the Quas to discover the Atimbo. They also must have continued rowing forwards and founded such towns in between and down towards the Cameroun to found yet another large expanse of territory we now call Akpabuyo, Ikang, and Abana now renamed Bakassi, Ine Archibong, and Atabong. etc. as most of the water fronts were named after the Chieftain or Head of the founding team and fathers. Again, it is some of these who settled permanently there, but thanks to their valour, enterprising spirit and love of adventure, ndit? Uruan Inyang Atakpor, who became the forerunners of what is now the NDIT? EFIK EBURUTU nation as we are going to see. Tradition also has it that these ancient founders could have rowed further into the AKPAYAFE River, ie. what became popularly known as IDOMBI from where they took off to settle at IBOM. The world is like that, just as Magellan, Christopher Columbus etc. in their attempt to discover a new route to INDIA sailed eastwards and discovered the West Indies we now call AMERICA, but didn't they sail back to Portugal and Spain, even perhaps en route the Indian Ocean? Couldn't this also be the missing link why perhaps in their rendezvous they unwittingly sailed rounding the Cape of Good Hope in our own South Africa as we studied in Infant II a.k.a Pre-primary Nursery II of those days? Yet we should not forget that it was not always a movement across the Atlantic. What of the bulk of those, the larger part - the main URUAN nation who now find themselves permanently occupying territories bordering the main coastline of AKWA IBOM including the ORON? It therefore means that while some were going up the Cross River estuary to found new lands, others were going down the estuary until they discovered even larger portions of land where they now find themselves occupying. They are those who also rowed and rowed into the Ibibio mainland and founded the mainland towns and villages but still being obliged to come back and forth to AKWA AKPA and ISO ATAKPOR for various cultural and ritual purposes till today. They are those peopling the aforementioned territory in Akwa Ibom State today.

THE EFIK PEOPLES – ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION

This culture History with the origins of the present EFIK is as interesting as also the most intriguing, because it is perhaps the most documented in the whole of the Nigerian history books, nay in the continent of Africa. It is also unique and bizarre: "big people big wahala". But there is just a simple straight - forward culture history of her evolution. It is so simple and common place that almost every bona fide child and citizen who is an indigene of URUAN ATAKPOR and indeed all blue blooded sons and daughters of the true EFIK stock or even in Ibibio land can recite from memory. This is simply because no true or even facsimile culture history of URUAN in general as also of the EFIK in particular can be contemplated let alone completed without referring to the evolution of the EFIK from URUAN so to speak. Yet human nature being what it is, wonders will never end. There are some who to assuage the hurt of whatever had happened, and probably influenced by a vengeful clique of revisionist EFIK theorists and legend writers deliberately re-wrote the history of the EFIK to promote the ego of some monarchs and potentates of yore in search of contemporary politics and relevance. History today has therefore become an intellectual pawn in the pen and armory of ethnocentrics as forerunners of empire builders and irredentist adventurers. Many bubbling Afrocentrics are now seizing every opportunity to re-invent myths as favourable facts of history. That is why this account and culture history of the EFIK is being "repeated" as it were, for everyone who cares to read and understand to accept. I know that every age or people has got its own tendencies and warped interests, but whilst making what adjustments that are necessary to suit these interests as also accommodate present-day idiosyncrasies, it must never be forgotten that whatever past or contemporary tendencies we may try to foist on ourselves they cannot only be anything else other than the reactions against whatever was done, accepted and accommodated in the past.

But reactions of this kind do tend sometimes to distort what is right; what is true, correct and proper as many people the world over do not seem to like/love and or accommodate the TRUTH, which often is bitter but always liberates and makes us free - yes, free, happy and law - abiding citizens of this world and of the world to come.

The illustrations and photographs shown above are certainly meant to emphasize what we have been saying about the comments of the early historians about ancient URUAN/EFIK ie. URUAN territory before she became known as EFIK land. As everybody knows, whatever is written always stays/ remains to tell us what is the truth and in this case, what these people saw – as they were, not fiction or myths. As the Romans always put it: "Scriptum maneat"; Truth always stays/remains". What we have to do here is to try to keep an open door for those new tendencies without which, as far as the EFIK both within her culture history and traditions are concerned, they remain as vestiges of reality even at the expense of sacrificing whatever human needs whether they are those of simple folks or of the nobles, whether of the poor, or the rich, and whether of the educated or illiterate who go about life not bothering to ask too many questions that are not concerned with themselves and the issues at hand. This must be always kept in mind because this book stems as it does, precisely from the new interest in and tendencies towards traditional URUAN/EFIK culture and history as well as those fears arising from innovatory thought and action in matters pertaining to URUAN/ EFIK traditions and heritage. It is also intended to be a contribution as to what extent we can offer anew towards the orientation, maintenance and stability of that culture and its traditions. Most of these misunderstandings, distortions and even confusions that have probably arisen have come not so much from the ordinary citizen's point of view as from rather the mentality of the westernized URUAN /EFIK who have in various ways and in recent times attempted to interpret and rationalize history in terms of modernity and the so-called western ideals which more often than not are very far from reality and the truth. We must repeat here that in the history of humanity, people have gambled with far greater inconsistencies than these. Therefore, we must see in all these the potential stability, progress and wellbeing of URUAN/ EFIK destined to take her place among the most cultured and developed races in Africa nay, of the entire world. Even if what will be presented here as the way forward does not work out as envisaged, it should be seen in terms of the deficiency it shares with the rest of humanity and its idiosyncrasies which also will stand or fall according to whether URUAN/EFIK solidarity and values are a location and memorial of those values and norms which had held together all the URUAN/EFIK tribes and clans as an indivisible unit in years past.

RECONSTRUCTION OF URUAN NEW TERRITORY HISTORY AND EVOLUTION OF EFIK PEOPLES

First, it was simply because the names 'Calabar' and 'EFIK' came about when some people from URUAN discussed above, who were living at this new place of their abode and settlement ATAKPA ie. Calabar, at the time the early European explorers and merchants from Portugal came. Then on their arrival, they had given the name KALABROS (CALABAR) to the place just as they did when they gave the name Beny/Benne to what afterwards became the Bight of Benin in view of its political, economic and cultural influence and value on Portugal's trade missions ditto LAGOS ie. LAND OF LAKES. Then secondly, they, URUAN/EFIK soon took advantage of the ensuing booming trade in general merchandise and goods brought by these early European merchants and slave traders. Thirdly, it was also because they URUAN/EFIK proudly and arrogantly without complaining in the least, accepted and made their own the soubriquet "Efik", which was actually a sort of angry cynicism and sarcasm foisted on them by their kith and kin still residing at AKWA AKPA URUAN native land. They, in their cocky appearance of the neaveau riche, and carried away by pride and prejudice you may say, because these their kith and kin - URUAN, did actually appear so disheveled, ragged and tattered as they came into Calabar town mooring their canoes. Therefore, clad in what looked to them, like people from AKANSOKO of the country-side in shrunken attires, the EFIK began to look down on them with contempt. They almost despised them (URUAN) like lepers and even tried to drive them away like strangers from a faraway bush country. That was why URUAN in their dismay and vituperation having been prevented from and deprived of joining in the booming affair took offense at such unkindly and rash treatment by their fellow brothers and sisters. Hence they sarcastically and derisively reacted by nicknaming them as: mme Efik, derived from the verb "FIK" which in other words imply: mbufo mmefik owo emi; mbufo mme Efik, ie. people who ignore, despise and oppress their kith and kin without any reason or provocation since they were so unwittingly aggressive (Cf Amaku, E.N. 2.). As the saying goes: No two monkeys can ever graze together: eb?k imaha uke esie eb?k etiene efri idibi; whereas for the Igbos it is rather the other way round with their Igbo fellows: "Let the kite perch and let the eagle perch; if anyone says the other should not perch, let its wings clip off": ? gb? b?r?, ? g? b?r?; nkesi ?beya ?b?l? ? k? kwaya".

In fact, this matter snow-balled and catapulted into what later became a serious conflict of acrimony and bad-blood between the two groups of brethren. Whereas it is common knowledge and a historical fact that the ancestors of the EFIK were indigenous inhabitants of Akwa Akpa Uruan some of whom were the first to discover and settle at Iboku Esit Edik, ie. Iboku Creek - a settlement later known as OBIO OKO but the European traders renamed it "Creek Town" as we have seen already. They also brought along the sacred paraphernalia of URUAN ie. Ekpe URUAN, etc. with them as they moved on. Still some of these URUAN sea-farers now settling at Creek Town which was much later, moved further down the lower Cross River until they arrived at Ata Akpa ie. Atakpa which to them was like the ocean ie. "the real Sea" which the British supercargoes later renamed as "Duke Town". Duke Town was so called because Okoho Effiom at the time of the Slave Trade was reputed to be the most powerful merchant at Atakpa. He was one of the direct descendants of Edidem Eyo Honesty of Creek Town hence the re-naming of Atakpa as Duke Town after him by the British traders who because they could not pronounce the word "Effiom" anglicized" Ephraim" to Effiom and afterwards honoured him with the title "DUKE": hence Duke Ephraim, ditto Okon anglicized to Cobham, etc. But despite being a direct descendant of King Eyo, he – Duke Ephraim soon decided that Duke Town became separate and distinct from Creek Town instead of allowing it to be treated as its accretion and subject to the suzerainty of King Eyo. This later brought greater prominence to Atakpa/Calabar a.k.a Duke Town or simply, "Calabar". It was also the British supercargoes out of respect and deference and for the goodwill and hospitality of the EFIK, hundreds of years before the advent of their British Colonial counterpart, began to form the habit of referring to these Efik leaders in the new settlement at Calabar as "Dukes and Kings" because the word "OBONG/CHIEF" was not frequently in use then. This in the ears of the European supercargoes of course was not as impressive as "King/Duke" designations. At the height of the trade boom especially with the British merchants, Obong Eyo was often referred to as King Eyo Honesty ie. Head and King of Creek Town because he was seen as an honest and trust-worthy ally; while the Head and the Obong of Atakpa – Calabar, was referred to as King Eyamba of Duke Town ostensibly because he was the Ekpe Adept ie. Obong Ekpe or "Ekpe High Commissioner". This is the classical terminology in URUAN/EFIK for such a high ranking Ekpe chieftain/king so to speak till today. The Ekpe Chieftain has always been titled the "Obong Eyamba/ Iyamba" both in URUAN and EFIK. When British Colonial Administration came into vogue, the Authorities could not accept such designations and titles ie. King of Calabar/Creek Town within His/Her Majesty's Empire any longer, because for them, only the King/Queen of England could appropriate such an exalted title to himself/herself. Therefore the EFIK Paramount Ruler's title had to revert to the "OBONG of Calabar "and the other Chieftains as Chief = DUKE. Hence the designations of Dukes and Kings which were given to these EFIK counterparts until the establishment of the British Colonial Administration of Calabar in 1891 were to be discarded. The URUAN/EFIK word OBONG denotes KING, therefore it was the Obong of Nsidung, Etubom Ansa Effiom - anglicized HENSHAW for ANSA and EPHRAIM for EFFIOM - who also became a prominent Chieftain with his kindred and others at Nsidung, also titled KING eg. King ASIBONG Edem anglicized ARCHIBONG.

Perhaps the best traditional narrative about URUAN/EFIK movement to Ata Akpa from Obio Oko and corroborated by no other than the English trader and historian John Adams was the one in which he stated in his notes 1790 that:

> Effiom (Effium) called by the English traders Duke Ephraim, probably a descendant of Obong Eyo, who was chief of Akwa Akpa (Ata Akpa) which came to be called Duke's or Duke Town after him. The town grew to be the principal seat of population and trade as the port of the neighbourhood. The Old Calabar consisted of Cobham Town or Ikoretongko, Efut, Duke Town and Nsi- dung under the King of Creek Town (Adams John, Calabar 1790, 21).

Other towns were Adiabo, Mbiabo, Ikon Eto and Ikot Offiong East, the other part Ikot Offiong West belonging to URUAN territory at the time. In 1889 he also wrote to Ndem Eno of Enyong popularly known by the Efik as Ibom Eno, who blockaded the Cross River and seized canoes, but as a result of this, the Efik burnt down most of Enyong towns in what came to be known as War between Duke Town and Enyong towns ie. war between Duke Town and Enyong (Cf Updates, p.642). It is interesting to note that this trading business with British men led to the foundation and establishment of Anglo-Nigerian relationship, a relationship bordering on the boundary of the territory granted by the British Parliament to the Royal Niger Company, a chattered and limited organization which the British Government in exercise of its powers in 1889 declared as the Oil Rivers Protectorate and conferred a local jurisdiction on the area.

NIGERIA: ORIGINS AND THE GREAT AMALGAMATION

MAP OF REGIONS AND PROVINCES, SELF GOVERNMENT, 1960.

BRITISH SURREPTITIOUS CONSULAR ADMINISTRATION OF NIGERIA

BRITISH AND OTHER EUROPEAN TRADING COMPANIES IN NIGERIA

COURTESY OF THE NIGERIAN SUNDAY VANGUARD, AUGUST 21, 2016

When we come to consider how the whole thing happened we are amazed at how the British Trading Companies just like the other European groups like the German Paterson Zochonis (PZ) United Africa Company (UAC), the Lever Brothers, May & Baker (M&K) Chellerams, Federation Companie d'Afrique Occidentale (FCAO), etc. which came to this part of West Africa were established for the sole purpose of trade links and business concerns. We also begin to wonder why all of them changed their focus to make what later became known as Nigeria with Southern Nigeria becoming the fulcrum from which they surreptitiously, as it were, carved out the territory hitherto inhabited by over two hundred and fifty ethnic communities and baptized them with the name NIGERIA as we have seen. They also made sure that a mere trading company, the National African Company just because it had the British tag, and therefore one with their imprimatur under false pretenses was transformed into the Royal Niger Company Ltd. By that British Royal Charter, it now became empowered to trade and at the same time control and by implication govern the area within which it traded without the mandate and authority of the citizens as if the owners of the land counted for nothing. This was colonialism short and simple; and that was the situation the people and indeed later, the entire citizens of Nigeria found themselves. This has become the situation that has been haunting Nigerians till today.

It is the story of how free-trade Companies connived with their powerful foreign imperial agents viz. the British business men to carry out wars of aggression against African peoples of the West Coast of Africa to wit Nigerians, and their communities in order to claim her resources and annex their territory to Imperial Britain. Finally, it is the story of Imperial Britain using their trading Companies to acquire the natural resources and capture the investment opportunities of Nigeria for their new markets Overseas for the continuous flow of their manufactured goods which flourished at this point in time and which inevitably led to the deposition of Nigerians and the imposition of foreign domination and rule that resulted in the subsequent loss of the traditional, political, economic, social and religious institutions of Nigeria's ethnic communities. It should be recalled that between 1807 and 1850 and on account of the Industrial Revolution which had brought wealth and breath-taking growth to their economy, the British Government turned her back on slave trade and instead renounced and imposed its abolition. It was certainly banned with a hidden agenda and not for any altruistic or humanitarian purposes. It was to further enhance the Industrial Revolution of Britain, check the rivalry and trade wars but most importantly upset the slave-trade economy of her other European neighbours and ventures so as to give her the monopoly of the Legitimate Trade. This became a new vogue in the British Isles, whereby finished products hitherto manufactured by hand gave way to the use of machinery for mass production of finished products – a situation which catapulted the British economy making her a first class economic world power. There was therefore a great demand for the natural products and raw materials from Africa to keep their factories on course. It was to Africa that these former British slave merchants now turned manufacturers of machine-made products turned their attention, and naturally to the territory of the Niger Delta in Southern Nigeria which was a store house of untapped wealth viz. rubber, red wood, palm oil and kernels which were used for making soap, margarine, Vaseline ointment, and lubricating oils for industrial machinery, etc. It should also be recalled that there was the problem of international trade competition and rivalry especially between the French and the British at this time, and the British wanted to act fast and block the French from getting ascendancy over the Niger Delta most especially Calabar which was the headquarters, as it were, of this great Southern Nigeria trade.

FRENCH TRADE-LINKS AND TREATIES WITH CALABAR KINGS

In 1847 for example, observing that the French had already established trade links and signed protectorate treaties along the West African Coast with the local rulers of Mauritania, Ivory Coast, Gabon, Dahomey (Benin Republic) etc. who had accepted French protection, the British Consul John Beecroft, then residing at Fernando Poo named after the Portuguese sailor Fernandez, who had discovered the Island, quickly dispatched a ship-load of merchandise with a letter "to blind " the reigning king of Calabar, Edidem Eyo Eyo Nsa Odo Efiom Ekpo popularly called, King Eyo Honesty II of Creek Town, in order to dissuade him from signing any Treaty of Protection with the French. His intention thereby was to enable him try and fashion a working friendship with the Efik monarch because at the time the Efik had already fashioned trade relations with the British supercargoes ie. these big-time free-lance merchants for quite some time. Many of the Efik big-time traders too were able to speak English because a lot of them had been going to and from Britain. Besides Missionaries of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland who were also working in Calabar joined forces and mounted pressure to persuade the kings not to accept the French Protection Treaty. The British then used their diplomacy to advise the kings to seek British protection as this would profit them better instead. Of course the Efik kings accepted without batting their eyes to consider for a second as to whether or not this could even lead to them losing their sovereignty in the process. However, their only saving grace was the protest and opposition by the local chiefs and coastal traders from other territories like Dahomey, now Benin Republic, Cameroun, etc. who themselves were also beneficiaries of the coastal trade. Up to this the French and British traders had been pursuing different trade policies (Cf. Talbot Amaury. Vol 1, London; 196). The British supercargoes had ordinary free trade links with them, while the French had a "protection trade policy" whereby they gave protection to the people in case of wars and aggression by other European groups in their areas of business; hence the establishment of what came to be called "PROTECTORATES" over their areas of operation. The British also wanted to follow suit, which the Niger Deltan chiefs, traders and kings rebuffed and vehemently opposed because this would run counter to their interests and the sovereignty of their locales. Since the costal chiefs could not get into the interior most especially on account of the unhealthy conditions in the mangrove mosquitoes and snakes infested swamp equatorial forests, they opted to purchase their goods of merchandise as middle-men. By so doing they were able to get these products directly from the forest growers. In this way they could buy them cheaply and afterwards sell them off to the British merchants at exorbitant prices. Naturally, acting as middlemen between the producers in the interior and the European purchasers on the coasts guarded their business concerns from encroachment by these foreign traders and power brokers. They could afford to amass so much wealth especially with their bevy of slave workers, large polygamous families and hordes of canoe men. Then the English merchants soon discovered that they were outsmarted by the mercantile middle men and coastal chiefs and therefore determined to execute their elimination. They complained to their foreign Government that these people in consort with Spain, Portugal and the United States of America were still engrossed with the illegal trade which they had wittingly abolished by law.

NIGERIA IN THE MAKING vis-a-vis AMALGAMATION NATIONALIST MOVEMENTS AND NIGERIAN INDEPENDENCE

As noted above, the Royal Niger Company (RNC) Ltd. surreptitiously under Great Britain's mastermind and eminently fantastic diplomacy employed the Charter they were granted, became emboldened and empowered as it were, and overturned the Trade Charter and at the same time took control and by implication began to govern the area which their British Masters afterwards named as NIGERIA within which they traded. But this was without the mandate and authority of the citizens as if those owners of the land counted for nothing. According to them, ie. the British, they were only protecting the part of the country which happened to be Southern Nigeria and the Niger Delta where they were settling. But as for the North which they had subdued by confronting the Jihadist Fulanis under Uthman dan Fodio, they said that they had a right to own and colonize it because it was their conquered territory. As if that was not enough, and according to Chief Mbazulike Amaechi, first Republic Minister of Aviation and now the only surviving Nationalist of Nigeria, Great Britain started ruling the entire territory such that in 1914, Lord Lugard who had been charged to take over control of the territory, directed that for administrative convenience he had no choice but to merge the Northern and Southern Protectorates. This was ostensibly to enable the British use the richer resources of the South to run the whole country because the North was seen not to be solvent on its own. It was this novel masterstroke that was bound to open the eyes of the Nationalists as we are going to see.

Then as the British kept on running the country like this, some Nationalists began to spring up in the country in the 1940s. They boldly started to agitate demanding that it was time Great Britain allowed Nigerians as the owners of the land to rule their country. This agitation as narrated by Chief Amaechi, was first led by Sir Herbert Macaulay a Lagosian, and people like Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, Dr. Akiola Maja, Dr. S.O. Gbadamosi, etc. Thereafter, all of them came together and formed the Nigerian Youth Movement and later the Nigerian National Democratic Party (NNDP). Then some of them began to reason that confining and concentrating the democratic struggle to Lagos Colony alone would not solve the problem of the country and they decided to form a Political Party with national spread. In 1944 the National Council of Nigeria and Cameroons (NCNC) Party was born with Sir Macaulay as National President and Dr. Azikiwe as National Secretary thereof. This was because Southern Cameroun and some part of Northern Cameroun were part and parcel of Nigeria then. In 1947, the group organized to tour the whole country with a view to sensitizing the people and in so doing selling themselves to the people to obtain their mandate to go to London and demand that the people of Nigeria wanted Independence and Self-Rule. I can recall very vividly as a kid that this group also came to our town in that same 1947 and addressed a mammoth crowd at A? WA MBAKARA near ESUK MBEHE IDU as noted elsewhere. As they toured the country, North. South, East and West, Sir Macaulay, then an octogenarian had an accident on their way to Kano and became incapacitated and therefore returned to Lagos where he sickened and died. But on his death bed he had emphasized among other things and articulated that the NCNC should take a break of the tour for four days in his honour and that his son Dr. Ogedengbe who was President of the Radical Zikist Movement, should keep the Flag flying. Then demonstrating with his bow tie and thick moustache, he gave an illustration to the effect that "just as my bow tie and moustache are parallel and inseparable, so shall the unity between the North and the South be indestructible". As Chief Mbazulike emphasized, when Macaulay had finished his last admonition to the NCNC stalwarts so to speak, he gave up the ghost and a few minutes after, the NCNC ordered a week of mourning for him and then continued the tour of Nigeria (Courtesy of the SATURDAY SUN, 2019 – Politics, eds. Magnus Eze, Geoffrey Anyanwu, David Onwchekwa).

Thereafter, the NCNC in subsequent Meetings ratified the appointment of Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as the new National President to take over the mantle of leadership of the Party and appointed the National Secretary from the North. When the Northern Secretary died he was replaced by Dr. Kola Balogun from the West. Then the first thing they did was to send a delegation to the UK to demand for Nigeria's Independence and the abrogation of the obnoxious 1947 Richard's Constitution as explained elsewhere in this Book. When Sir Richards, Nigeria's Governor General (1946 - 1948) was recalled to England, Sir John MacPherson took over and created the Northern, Western and Eastern Regions as a Federation. This led to the springing up of Trade Unions (TUC) and eventually the Nigerian Labour Congress (NLC) together with the Action Group Party (AG) led by Chief Obafemi Awolowo in the West and the Northern People's Congress (NPC) led by Sir Ahmadu Bello in the North. However, when the Nigerian Youths thought that the agitation was moving with such a slow speed, they formed the Radical Zikist Movement then chaired by Dr. M.C.K. Ajuluchukwu. Kola Balogun was elected Secretary. This was ostensibly to revolutionize the agitation for Independence since the NCNC was taking it too easy, believing in negotiation rather than revolution and conflict and recommending that they should go easy. Nevertheless, in 1949, the NCNC decided to stage a Revolution which was to take the form of protests by telling the Nigerian citizens to no longer pay taxes to Foreign Governments and warning the Policemen of Nigerian origin never to arrest or molest fellow citizens. It was a sort of civil disobedience, one might say! At this point in time, there was no Nigerian Officer beyond the rank of Police Inspector and Sergeant Major in the Police Force. In fact, nobody was even a Commissioned Officer in the Army. But that year, one of the Zikist leaders, Mr. Osita Agwuna came to Lagos and delivered a lecture at Tom Jones Memorial Hall to conscientize the people. He was promptly arrested, charged to court and thrown into prison together with Anthony Enahoro, Frederick Anyiam and other Nationalists who had attended the Lecture since their Zikist policy was not to make any pleas before any White Judge. People like Mallam Raji Abdallah, Mokwugo Okoye, Bob Ogbuagu, Ikenna Nzimiro, J.C.J. Anakwe etc. even dared the British to give them the maximum sentence if they thought their Movement was illegal. Indeed, all of them were put into the gulag for various terms with hard labour. They did not lose hope but however continued the struggle after serving their prison terms. The Nigerian citizens even accorded them heroic reception as they wore their Prison Graduate caps (PG) everywhere they went. Such bold and daring political ex-convicts were also exempted from paying bus fares when traveling in any part of Nigeria then, because everywhere, Nationalism was the in-thing. This also led to those series of pre-Independence Constitutional Conferences in London between 1947 - 1957.

That was why in 1960, the Nigerian citizenry with one accord agreed and as it were acquiesced by telling these freedom fighters to go ahead "we shall elect you to go and run our country for us now with the nationalism in you, we trust you". Yet they did all this without receiving or giving money as our modern day Nigerians are doing in recent times. Even communities in those days were begging their sons and daughters and other individuals to come out and serve them as Governors, Councilors, Senators or MHRS because such individuals were found worthy. But nowadays it depends on who has the money to bribe his/her way; who can tell lies and has the capacity to hire thugs against his political opponents. Nowadays too, those who find themselves elected or have maneuvered themselves to be elected are embroiled in open and hidden intrigues for positions to become principal officers and juicy Committee Chairmen in Parliament or the National/ State Assemblies instead of engaging themselves in robust and articulate discourse on good governance and service as well as how they would tackle the myriads of problems confronting the country and their States and Constituencies viz. on economy, security, education, health, unemployment, etc. Most people especially those in the political class today see politics as an industry and business for thugs and criminals in the way they take politics as a quick way of making money and amassing wealth. As a matter of fact, our political class seem to play God when they are always thinking and planning for positions in the next Elections which may be some years ahead whereas they have not even started or concluded their present terms in office. As human beings, nobody knows who will be alive at that time, but they are wearing themselves out about the future? Today, Nigeria's political space is replete with selfish and dishonest politicians who place themselves and their interests above national affairs and the welfare and progress of the country vis-à-vis fellow Nigerians. To what extent can a country make progress and advance as some countries like Indonesia, Singapore, UAR, etc. which were far behind Nigeria? This is why Nigeria as the 6th largest producer of petroleum in OPEC cannot afford a national carrier, cannot run a railway system, cannot produce an army not to talk of a Police Force capable of overcoming the challenges of insecurity, kidnappings, banditry, terrorism etc. cannot produce enough power for even the Capital Territory, cannot employ and pay her citizens and worse still cannot even have a functional refinery. What a shame! They forget that people used to win Elections in Nigeria in those days without spending money and without bribing anybody and bringing confusion everywhere. People were ready and willing to go out and vote for men and women of their choice as their civic duty demanded and the electoral officers were always civil servants. Everybody has read or heard about the absolute dedicated service, efficiency, commitment, honesty and integrity of civil servants of those days. Everybody can see that Nigerian Political leaders of today do not seem to show concern and genuine interest and patriotism to solve the problems facing the citizenry, whereas we all know that leadership is an opportunity to serve humanity. But in Nigeria it is an opportunity to amass personal wealth. This is nothing but a sad commentary on leadership and governance. The stark neglect and politicization of the orgies of terrorism, kidnapping, banditry and herdsmen rampages coupled with armed robbery and rape in recent times portray the extent to which Nigeria and her leaders with unpatriotic and selfish considerations have sunk and fallen prostrate before the international community and the world at large.

THE TROUBLE WITH NIGERIA: UNBRIDDLED & MANIFEST EGOMANIA

Because of the blind, crass and uncritical evaluation of our so-called leaders in what the revered and erudite sage, Professor Chinua Achebe has described as local patriotism and what he commented as "THE TROUBLE WITH NIGERIA" and Nigerians even till today, many have failed to see the reactionary ethnic politics that has brought this nation to its knees. But how did it all begin? Well, it all started on that momentous occasion during the first ever National Elections organized by Colonial British Government in 1951 when Chief Obafemi Awolowo without qualms upturned the table and took over the leadership of Western Nigeria House of Assembly from Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe who had actually won the General Elections as Premier Elect of the West, but with a very narrow margin as it turned out. Thereafter, Zik as if to say 'good riddance to bad rubbish' came scampering back to the East whence he came but this time, with a very monumental, ruinous and catastrophic intent. Whereas, Zik as a great and true Nationalist and NCNC National President that he was, Zik, who had championed the noble cause of ONE NIGERIA, nay ONE AFRICA – and even acclaimed "ZIK OF AFRICA", to the extent that he had contested and won that first General Elections as noted above, but had abandoned his principle which dictated that he should stay put in Lagos to champion the cause of the Nigerian State and not that of the Western House as Leader of the Opposition and to give battle to Awolowo, but instead conceded victory to reactionary ethnic politics, and fled unabashed to the East to compound his betrayal of principle and precipitate a major crisis of greater proportions by his selfishness and greed for power as is playing out among politicians all over Nigeria today. But it should now be clear to discerning readers of this Book and to all men and women of goodwill, that what really prompted the "take-over" of Government by Chief Awolowo was that Dr. Zik under the NCNC Party never was able to constitute the Majority in the West and therefore failed to form the Government. Then capitalizing on this Chief Awolowo ceased power with his Action Group Party since nature always avoids a vacuum. He, a lawyer that he was, appealed to and captivated the minds and hearts of his people of Yoruba, whereby hundreds of Yoruba elites in the NCNC "crossed carpet' and joined the Action Group, thereby catapulting the Party's population and giving him the required majority and authority to "take over" the Government of the West and become the de facto Leader of Government Businness of Western Region at Ibadan as it was so called.

In the East during that Election, Professor Eyo Ita, an urbane and detribalized humanist had also won in the Elections and had assumed office as the Leader of Government Business at Enugu – HQ of Eastern Region accordingly. But he could not be the de facto Leader of Government ditto Awolowo, because that position was being already occuied by the British Colonial Lt. Governor of the Eastern Region of Nigeria, ditto that of the Western and Northen Regions under their Lt. Governors in tow and accordingly, that at the centre Lagos. The position of "the Head of State" as Leader of Government of the Nigerian State was effectively in the hands of the Governor General of Colonnial Nigeria in Lagos who happened at this point in time to be Sir John Mcpherson KCMG, the equivalent of CGFR of modern Nigeria. That is why Prof. Eyo Ita could not see any reason to now vacate his position for the fugitive from Lagos, who had come rushing into the Region to destabilize it and take over. But how come! Whereas he Zik had always regarded himself as a Nationalist, how can he now fall so low as to come down to Eastern Region and to so stoop down as a 'regionalist and an ethnic jingoist"! Then against common sense, Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, himself a self acclaimed Nationalist and NCNC Leader, was seen as now struggling in far away Ibadan with Chief Awolowo to become a mere Leader of Government Businness and Ruler of Western Region. Small wonder why he came scampering to the East as a fugitive to wrestle power from the urbane and erudite humanist, Prof. Eyo Ita.

However, neither did most of Prof Eyo Ita's Cabinet Members who in sheer brilliance had surpassed by far anything the East had ever seen or was likely to see again for a long time or thereafter despite the Igbos seeing in Zik the most educated of their own. In fact, and even though erroneously, they had so much believed also, that they (Igbos) were the most educated tribe in Nigeria and indeed better educated than the Yorubas? Meanwhile, Dr. Zik instead resorted to using the loquacious Dr. Kingsley O. Mbadiwe and his privately owned Newspaper, the Pilot as a political muscle, with Chief Anthony Enaharo as Editor In-Chief, to maligne and force Professor Eyo Ita and his Cabinet out of office. However, Chief Enaharo understood the consequences and the situation so angered him that he resigned and forsook that post with immediate effect in sympathy with the Eastern Government Honourable Members with the resultant vicious split between the two Leaders in the NCNC, Prof Eyo Ita and Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe. This was indeed an extraordinary battle of wits and of personal abuse.

Yet were anyone to ask for the reason for the split, it was all shrouded in mystery! Then if any outsider wanted to know why the Ministers were to be so rudely forced to resign threir seasts in the Cabinet so as to enable Dr. Azikiwe reshruffle the Eastern Regional Government of which he was not even a member or party faithful in the East, the code answer the NCNC Party members were only permitted to give was: "Because the Ministers had failed to toe the Party line"? Dr. Azikiwe had claimed authority to do this ostensibly because he had assumed the de facto NCNC National Leadership! Yes, but the moot point and issue which was known to discerning minds was that the NCNC Leaders and Prof Eyo Ita though a shareholder and the appointed Diretor of what later became the AFRICAN CONTINENTAL BANK (but at that point in time "ZIK BANK" with Zik as Proprietor Sole) refused to make what was evidently public money (ie. funds of the Eastern Regional Government, the Local Governments and the Marketting Board) available to Zik by way of investment to the ACB. Prof Eyo Ita had argued and rightly so, that the money of the Regional Government was "TRUST MONEY" and could not be appropriated for private use which the ACB was at the time. Moreso, Prof Eyo Ita had asked Zik to submit the audited Balance Sheet of the Bank to him and the Ministers, which he, Zik had bluntly rebuffed. Prof Ita, ditto his Cabinet Ministers had also argued that to inject any public funds into the ACB, the Bank should be healthy enough and also meet the terms of such Investment, hence the need for making available the audited balance sheet to determine if the injection of public funds was warranted, in the first place especially as the ACB had not been licensed under the Banking Ordinance. The added reason for Zik's untoward action in trying to reshuffle the Ministers was to give him the lee way to expel unyielding Ministers to his Scheme of things in order replace with those willing and pliable to his whims and caprices. It was an intolerable attempt to set up a puppet Government at Enugu which Eyo and his CabinetMinister refused to accept. If truth be told, it was what might most appropriately be described as the first ever attempted civilian coup d'etat in the history of Nigeria. Only Dr. Michel Okpara had resigned, himself only a Minister without Portfoio at that.

Because all the Ministers refused to resign their seats in the Executive Council of the Eastern Region of Nigeria except Dr. Iheonukara Okpara, Dr. Azikiwe, assuming his position as the National Chairman directed the NCNC Party nationwide to declared a war of aggression against Prof. Eyo Ita in order to overawe and terrorize him and his Cabinet Ministers until they were forced to resign contrary to the advice of constitutional authorities. Instead, Dr. Azikiwe rather chose to convene a National Conference to debate without success a purported "motion of no confidence" against Prof Eyo Ita and his team of Ministers because Zik had assured his NCNC Party Executive that he would stop at nothing until the Ministers resigned their seats. Meanwhile and unknown to the NCNC EXCO, Dr. Zik had surreptiously written out a list of riffraffs: primary school teachers, ex-police corporals, sanitary inspectors, motor park stouts and what have you whom he had highly motivated to be the persons to be appointed as Ministers and new MHAs in ENUGU replacement of Prof Eyo Ita's Cabinet men and Eastern Party Leaders. He was sure of using them as disciples who would be unlikely to dispute anything he said and did. So began the rule of mediocrity as also the situation of a Ruling Party Nation Chairman playing God – who can do and undo – as is playing out in Nigerian politics, from which the Nigerian citizens are suffering today.

Even in that list of Ministers, Dr. Zik had purported to share the distribution of Ministries on the basis and terms of the population figures in each Province. Fortunately the MHAs of Eastern Region already had in their possession the official Colonial British Government population figures of each Province in Nigeria. In the East, Owerri Province came first, Onitsha second and Calabar Province third, which today constitutes Cross River State, Rivers State, Akwa Ibom State and Bayelsa. Dr. Zik then went on to constitute as follows: Owerri Province with 5 Cabinet Ministers, Onitsha 4, but Calabar Province, only one Ministerial seat; and this given to Chief O. E. Eyo as Minister of Public Works. This was an unusual situation instead of three which was always officially allotted to the Province. Then he impudently removed Prof Eyo Ita from the origina Portfolio of Minister of Natural Resources and Leader of Government Business as well as Prof S. J. Una as Minister of Health. He did so simply because he considered both as being responsible for obstructing and sabotaging his plan of diverting government funds to the African Continenental Bank. Hell was thereafter let loose on account of the brazen and wicked impartiality; and the Calabar Provincial block excepting Dr. Ibanga Udo Akpabio who was secretely promised the Portfolio of Minister of Education by Zik, with Dr. K. O. Mbadiwe of Orlu Constituency taking over the Portfolio of Minister of Natural Resources. Then Prof Eyo Ita and his team had no choice but to resign en block from the NCNC Party in protest. Most of those who resigned included:

[COURTESY OF DR. UDO UDOMA: IBIBIO STATE UNION PROCEEDINGS, 1928 -1966]

Yes, this could never have gone unnoticed in Uruan Efik especially with the highly sophisticated calibre of the elite in the Ibibio State Union. Small wonder why this has contributed in no small measure to the suspicion of the majority of Igbo by their minority neighbours nationwide. Now the state has been set for regional politics which Sir Ahmadu Bello had condemned in no strong terms. Nevertheless, he had reasoned but correctly that each Region should be able to develop at its own space for peace and harmony in the land to reign.

In 1957, the British Imperial Government granted internal autonomy or "Self-Rule" to Eastern and Western Nigeria but deferred that of Northern Nigeria until 1959 when the North would be ready. When it became clear that Nigeria was eminently ready and competent for Self-Rule, the Colonial Government had no choice but to grant Independence to Nigeria on October 1, 1960, just as she did to Gold Coast then renamed Ghana in 1957. The new Independent Federal Government of Nigeria was constituted in the 1959 pre-Independence Elections with NCNC scoring 2.6 Million Votes for 94 seats, Action Group1.59 Million votes for 74 seat and NPC 1.56 Million Votes for 144 seats in the Nigerian Parliament to enable the North produce the Prime Minister in the person of Alhaji Tafawa Balewa of Bauchi. Of coursed no single Political Party in that year had two-thirds of the seats hence the Coalition Government between the NPC and NCNC formed the Government. The Action Group led by Chief Obafemi Awolowo became the official Opposition to the Government with of course Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as the Governor General thereof. The rest they say is history.

Thereafter in 1961, the Nationalists considered that the Constitution signed by Queen Elizabeth II of England for Nigeria's Independence was not adequate and good enough and so ordered the New Parliament to set up a Committee to prepare a new Constitution signed by all Nigerians. The Committee set out to bring in eminent personalities within and outside of Parliament to draw up the Nigerian Constitution. In 1963 a new Constitution was promulgated which made Nigeria a Sovereign Republican State. Unfortunately, in 1964 there was a serious internal rift in the Action Group which led to the loss of face between Chief Obafemi Awolowo who led the Opposition at the centre and Chief Samuel O. Akintola his Deputy who had become the Premier of Western Region. He surreptitiously assumed leadership of the Party and went behind Awolowo to form Alliance with the Northern Peoples' Congress led by Sir Ahmadu Bello. It was this move that resulted in the sharp division within the Action Group that so much affected the position of the NCNC and the NPC together with the resultant crisis in the Western Region of Nigeria. The trouble was catastrophic and catapulted to what became known as "OPERATION WETIE" and the dissolution of the Western House of Assembly.

The situation continued to worsen to such an extent that some Candidates in both the NCNC and Action Group were not allowed to register in certain Constituencies. This worsening situation led to the Military staging a Coup in 1966 to stop the Government of the day and eventually taking over Government. To administer the Nation, the Supreme Military Council headed by General Johnson Umunakwe Aguiyi-Ironsi appointed Lt. Col Emeka Ojukwu as the Military Governor of Eastern Region, Lt. Col Adekunle Fajuyi, Western Region, Major Usman Katsina, Northern Region and Lt. Col David Ejoor, Mid-Western Region. Thereafter there was a crisis within the Military itself in which General Aguyi-Ironsi and Lt. Col Adekunle Fajuyi were assassinated in Ibadan Government House in the reprisal coup of July, 1966 and the headship of the Federal Government became void. Lt. Col Yakubu Gowon was promoted to take over as the new Head of the Supreme Military Government and Commander In-Chief of the Armed Forces of Nigeria. But Lt. Col Odumegwu Ojukwu argued that as his junior, Gowon could not boss over him. This led to a serious personality clash that overwhelmed the Nation resulting in the 1967-1970 Nigeria - Biafra fratricidal civil war that brought Nigeria to her knees. Then began a series of military coups with succeeding Military Heads of State taking over the governance of Nigeria beginning with General Muritala Muhammed who overthrew General Gowon and took over (August 1975 - February 1996); General Olusegun Obasanjo (February 1996 - October 1979); then began the Interregnum era of return to the Civilian Rule of Alhaji Shehu Shagari with a Constitution drawn up and signed by General Obasanjo (October 1979 - December 1983) followed by the Military Rule of General Muhamadu Buhari (December 1983 - August 1985) General Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida (August 1985 - September 1993) followed by another Interregnum and the Civil Rule of Chief Ernest Shonekan (September 1993 - May 1994). Then General Sani Abacha overthrew Shonekan and ruled (May 1994 - June 1998) and finally

General Abdusalami Abubakar (June 1998 – May 1999). General Abdusalami Abubakar then told a bewildered Nation that his military Rule would be a short one and the last. Then true to his words he formed a Constituent Committee to draw up another Constitution for Nigeria which is still in force but with amendments. One evil that ensued from military rule was the abolition of the teaching of History in Schools and this has affected the mindset of Nigerians; never thereafter to be able to learn from the past, re-organize and strategize for the present and plan for the future. It is sad indeed.

INSTALLATION OF BRITISH CONSULS IN NIGERIA

The activities of the combined forces of these West African chiefs, the Spanish, Americans and Portuguese traders had become a sort of terror to the British merchants whereas at this point in time, precisely in 1842, the British had made the kings of Calabar to sign the anti-Slave Treaty among the Efik. There and then the British Government in order to consolidate and confirm the long standing trade connections with the powerful kings of Calabar decided to appoint a British Consul to oversee British interests on the coast of the Niger Delta. That is why they chose John Beecroft, a British merchant seaman and naval Commander who was then based on his own in Fernando Poo, now Equatorial Guinea. His work on the island was to look after the liberated slaves placed there after the British navy had left. The island was used in the first place as a slave base for anti-slavery patrol by the British navy. It should be recalled that in 1843, the Spanish Government which had bought the island from Portugal in 1778 had appointed Beecroft as Governor of the island of Fernando Poo. While there, between 1835 – 42, he single-handedly embarked on the exploration of the Benin and Calabar Rivers and even sailed to the Niger, Lokoja and up to Ibusa on the Delta – a situation which brought about the British interest in exploring the source of the Niger with the arrival of the Lander Brothers as mentioned above. However, the British were soon to discover in John Beecroft a boon and an authority in this area and so in 1849 appointed him Consul to oversee the Niger Delta area between Dahomey (Benin Republic) and the Cameroons. His actions in this regarded helped to frustrate the French Government designs in the area. They were also instrumental in the British Government appointing him as the first Consul General for the Nigerian coastal areas (Cf. Fage, J.D. 1964, 118).

This was the beginning of British Consular Administration in Nigeria with the Niger Delta of Southern Nigeria being the fulcrum from which they eventually swooped to carve out the territory now known as Nigeria for themselves. Then from 1849 - 1891 Southern Nigeria became the theatre of consular jurisdiction of the Foreign Office of Great Britain. During most of those years, the Nigerian coastal region began to be governed by British Consuls, and from 1891 – 1906 it was administered by Consuls-General and Commissioners the status of which could be equiperated to Ambassadors who were appointed as political officers to represent Britain in foreign nations (Cf. Dike Kenneth O, 1958, 10). Beecroft's duties among others were to regulate trade between the British and the African Chiefs traders, to protect the British nationals and their property and most importantly to ban slave trade in order to introduce their new economic road map in the "legitimate commerce" in order that their new trade could flourish. To this end, Consuls were empowered to execute and enforce trade fines, carry out the imprisonment or banishment of recalcitrant kings and traders who obstructed the legitimate trade as well as promote the observance of the stipulations of treaties, conventions and agreements made or to be made between Great Britain and the local Chiefs in these coastal areas. They were even empowered and also expected to keep the peace, order and good government of His/Her Majesty's subjects within the said territories (Cf. Elias T.O. Olawale, 1954, 56-7).

But no sooner had Beecroft taken over these duties than he began to bring in politics of his own, policies that interfered with the internal mechanisms and policies of the powerful African coastal rulers. Since it was of supreme advantage for the constant flow of the supply of the much needed goods of Southern Nigeria for the British industrial machines abroad, Beecroft felt it was his bounden duty to use the heavy weight of the powers behind the Consulates and suppress those African coastal chiefs who would dare prevent the smooth flow of goods from the coastal regions to Britain. By intrigues and diplomacy, he ordered the deposition and exile of those powerful coastal Kings like King Jaja of Opobo, King Nanna of Itsekeri as also the Oba of Benin, Oba Ovonranmwen who failed to toe the line and play their puppet role as stated above. In some cases, he banished the Kings as he did to Oba of Lagos, Oba Kosoko a very powerful and popular king and enthroned another, Oba Akitoye who as their puppet king was more amenable to his policies. Earlier on as seen above, Consul Beecroft had deported King William Dappa Pepple a.k.a King Jaja of Opobo in 1854 ostensibly to eliminate the slave-trade loving king; primarily to promote British trade and interests.

In 1856 Britain introduced a Court of Equity at Calabar precisely to clip the wings of some Consuls who among others tried to interfere with and subjugate the local chiefs and favour their Supercargoes who at this point in time were practising a monopoly of the trade as also authorizing the detention of any African trader who failed to pay his debts. The Court of Equity was simply a foreign court introduced by the British in the riverine country of Calabar to promote their free trade policy. Membership of the courts comprised the agents of the trading firms and the costal Chiefs. Each trading agent acted as the president of the court by rotation and was done to prevent the agents of any firm becoming unduly more influential among the inhabitants or being unfairly prejudiced against the powerful chiefs. By so doing they tried to become the mouthpiece of the courts, which did not usually decide in favour of the African litigants. It was later on in 1872 that the Foreign Office of Britain empowered consuls to re-organize the Courts of Equity within the Old Calabar Province, Bonny, Cameroun, Kalabari ie. Degema a.k.a Old Calabar, Brass, Opobo, Nun and Benin Rivers for the better settlement of trade disputes between British subjects and the natives. With these legal weapons the consuls became more aggressive in their policies towards Africans. In 1861 Great Britain bought over the colony of Lagos from Oba Dosunmu, a very weak ruler of Lagos.

Since Britain continued to exercise her monopoly of industrial power over the rest of Europe, England was now more avid for the raw materials of Africa than acquiring more empires because this was their official policy then. But when the other nations of Europe also became industrialized and were also in need of the raw materials and new markets in Africa for their finished products and investments, Britain changed her policy of non-acquisition of territories such that in 1870 after Germany but most particularly France which also had embarked on the much needed share of Africa's natural resources, new markets as well as investment opportunities, Britain with the election of Benjamin Disraeli as Prime Minister recommended a new ultra-expansionist policy in the British Parliament which then approved a new trade war policy straight away. Once again, territorial expansion became the order of the day and power politics with other forceful methods and diplomacy were employed for the exploration and wars of aggression to win Nigeria for Britain.

THE BERLIN CONFERENCE vis-a-vis TRADE WARS THE ROYAL NIGER COMPANY CONNECTION

In particular, two French companies under the patronage of General Gambetta started off by making trade Treaties with the local chiefs of the Lower Niger. They used the treaties to establish twenty trading stations. On her part, the British in 1887 dispatched Sir George Taubman Goldie, a British ex-soldier, an imperial idealist with deep hatred for slavery and alcohol to the Nigerian coast to take care of the situation. In many circles Taubman is acclaimed as the Founder of Nigeria. He it was who succeeded in persuading the four British Companies already in the area on the need to forge a united action to face the French and German competition. In 1879, Goldie was able to achieve the amalgamation of the Companies under the trade name of the "United African Company". Three years later, he re-organized the business under the new title of the "National African Company" with himself as Manager (Cf. Wellesley Dorothy, 1934, 27; See also Flint, John E.; London, OUP, 1960, 17). With these combined resources, he was able to undertake a trade war with the French by undercutting their prices and absorbing their trading areas. In 1884 when General Gambetta died, Goldie bought off all the French Trading Companies since the French merchants with the loss of their patron could no longer cope (Cf. Burns, Alan; 1958, 144).

This unique accomplishment of Goldie became the basis of Britain's successful claim to predominance in Southern Nigeria. Then the European powers met in Berlin, the Capital then in Eastern Germany for the Berlin West African Conference (1884-5) to prepare and share out African territories for themselves in what came to be known as the "Scramble for Africa" (Hargreaves, John D. MacMillan, London, 1963, 64ff). The British representatives at the Conference firmly argued their claim to dominion on the Rivers Niger and Benue on the ground of the exploration undertaken by the Lander Brothers and co. It was this that enabled them to also pursue the measures to protect their commercial and economic interests in Nigeria - measures which actually constituted their fundamental arguments and claims (Cf. Protocoles de la Conference de Berline 1884-5). One of the measures which the British Government took from the agreements of the Conference was the creation of the "Oil Rivers Protectorate" in 1885, a measure which also guaranteed Great Britain freedom of the navigation of the Niger. As to the exploration and annexation of territories in the interior, the Conference was vague regarding their status, and this must have given the British Nationals on ground the impetus to aggressively pursue the acquisition and annexation of territories including their amalgamation which they eventually effected in 1914.

In fact, this was an area wherein other Powers undertook not to attempt in any way to acquire influence or territory by Treaty or Annexation because this was embodied in Article VI of the Berlin Conference's Protocols 401-2. Whatever "effective occupation that existed was Britain's according to their hinterland theory, and this however was backed by the Germans at the Conference. It meant Britain could claim the area lying inland for an indefinite distance from the coastal region. That is British diplomacy for you! But other Nations notably France, Britain's arch-rival also based her claim on her occupation of Algeria. Their argument was that Northern Nigeria was a French hinterland since the Conference did not attempt at any sharp delimitation, contenting itself with granting the British predominance over the Lower Niger and the French over the Upper Niger. That is why the French annexed what came to be the Niger Republic today ditto other countries up to Algeria.

It is interesting to note here that since the Conference had adopted King Leopold's of Belgium suggestion to the effect that treaties with local chiefs could be the basis for establishing occupation rights of annexation, an open end was created for the survival of the fittest such that any powerful nation could annex as much territory as it wanted thus setting the scene for what followed. This immediately led to the frenzy of ill-defined treaty making for the control of territories. For example, even while the Conference was still going on, the German Government dispatched a Her Flûgel to conclude a treaty with the Sultan of Sokoto, the Fulani overlord of what came to be known as Northern Nigeria. But Goldie had anticipated this move and had sent Joseph Thompson as emissary and was already successful in concluding a treaty with the Sultan. Thompson had had the satisfaction of passing a Flûgel going upstream on the River Niger laden with treaty forms and presents to the Sultan and before "you could say Jack Robinson!", Germany had been eliminated from the contest for Northern Nigeria. It is doubtful if the Sultan understood what powers he had supposedly signed away because in the treaty-making race, African local kings were often intimidated and sometimes bribed with a gift of shoes or a bottle of gin and vague promises of annual subsidies leaving them with little chance to think of consulting with their Councils regarding the terms of the documents they had unwittingly signed with the European Powers who craftily avoided explaining these terms to them. No wonder why this "type of corruption incorporated "became the order of the day and was sufficient in getting the chiefs to sign away their territories in ignorance of what they were doing. As Lord Lugard later wrote: "The Treaty forms were produced by the cart-loads (of presents) in all the approved terms of legal verbiage - impossible of translation by ill-educated interpreters" (Cf. Lugard Frederick D. London; 1929, 15).

THE ROYAL NIGER COMPANY IN NORTHERN PROTECTORATES

Now the scene had been set from simple trading to assumption of powers of governance in what was to become the Northern States of Nigeria, ditto the Southern territories. This began in 1886 AD when the Government of Great Britain granted a royal Charter to the National African Company hitherto masterminded by George Goldie and which now became the Royal Niger Company still under the direction of Goldie. It is interesting to also note that in response to the cut-throat competition of other European powers, similar Charters were granted eg. to "Cecil Rhodes British South African Company" and the "British East African Company" to annex the territories which became Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe, Tanganyika which became Tanzania, etc. ditto the Royal Niger Company which continued its economic functions because it was granted the right to trade and develop the natural resources in the territories but never of course the monopoly of trade thereof. Nevertheless, the Company was to be the sole representative of the European traders, but its powers were even considerable; eg. the Company was granted the power to levy taxes, collect custom duties and even to issue trading licenses. It was from such sources of income that the Company was able to raise an armed African force later known as the West African Constabulary// Frontier Force (WAFF) offered by European nationals. But the Company was specifically enjoined not to interfere with native laws and customs regarding property rights, marriage, divorce and legitimacy. This was a policy situation which later became the forerunner of "Indirect Rule". On the other hand, it was empowered to abolish the slave trade and human sacrifices. Other matters of course were to be referred to the Foreign Office (Cf. Cooke Arthur M. Philadelphia, 1934; 89-31). The Charter was really a half-way house procured to direct British governmental controls towards the creation of a Nigeria of their dream. At this juncture, perhaps it should be beneficial to look at some of the terms in the Treaties which our great grandfathers signed off, in more cases than one, to sell out the patrimony of our Founding Fathers for filthy lucre and a mess of pottage just like Esau did when he sold his birth-right, authority and honour (Cf. Gen 25:29-34). According to Alan Burns who wrote "A History of Nigeria", between 1885 and 1886 about 250 Trade Treaties vis-a-vis Annexation of Nigerian patrimonial territories were signed off by these our gullible fore-fathers, a few of which are set forth below:

TREATY TERMS SIGNED BY OUR AFRICAN POTENTATES

1. For the mutual advantages of ourselves (ie. our Royal Fathers - Emphasis mine) and people those Europeans trading under the name of the National African Company Ltd. I, Umoru XYZ of the Mussulmans of Sudan, with the consent and advice of my Council, grant and transfer to the above people, or others with whom they may arrange, my entire rights to the country on both sides of the River Benue and rivers flowing from it and their banks, as far as they may desire.

2. We further grant to the above Company the sole right to trade in our territories, and the sole right, also among foreigners, to possess or work places from which are extracted articles such as lead, antimony, etc..

3. We further declare that no communication will be held with foreigners coming from the rivers (eg. French, Germans - Emphasis mine) except through the above-mentioned Company.

4. These grants we make for ourselves, our heirs and successors forever and declare them to be irrevocable.

5. The Europeans above named, the National African Company Ltd. Agree to make Umoru XYZ Sultan of Sokoto, a yearly present of goods to the value of 3000bags of cowries, in return for the above grants (Cf. Burns Alan, 1958; Appendix G.322-23; See also Udo Edet EA; 1983, 293-4 &Cooke Arthur M; 89-91).

EXTENSION OF ROYAL NIGER COMPANY AREA OF INFLUENCE

In fact, the National African Company a.k.a the Royal Niger Company, even prior to its becoming a Chartered Company, had been extending its influence and by 1887, its territory had extended from the mouth of the Forcados River in the Niger Delta, to the Nun River, outlet of River Niger in the North. It also possessed treaty rights over the borders of Sokoto and Quandu Empires and the independent states on the River Benue up to 1600 Km from the Atlantic. The London Gazette even published this for Britain's Foreign Office regarding the establishment of a Protectorate over all these holdings. It was this frenzy of treaty making process that inevitably brought about a serious conflict with the expanding French and German holdings, a situation which necessitated further partition by the European Home Governments. In 1890, it dealt with the Anglo-French treaty which defined the northern boundary ie. Niger and Chad territories, while that of 1893 defined the German eastern boundary, ie. Cameroun. This arrangement in the Treaty gave great satisfaction to the British Prime Minister, Lord Salisbury because it brought the great Emirates of Kano and Sokoto under the British sphere while the Sahara holdings which Lord Salisbury sarcastically described as "a region characterized by a very light soil" went to the French. Nevertheless, the Western boundary remained a source of friction with the French advancing north and east from Dahomey (Benin Republic) desirous of making trade outlets into the River Niger.

This may well explain why Nigeria is surrounded by almost all the territories belonging to the French. That is why also the National African Company quickly concluded a treaty with the Chief of Bussa, the reputed Ruler of Borgu, but the French claimed that the Chief of Nikki was superior than he. In 1894 matters came to a head in a desperate race to win the Chief of Nikki. Sir Goldie immediately dispatched a letter of request to the Colonial Office in London for the release of Frederick Lugard, a professional English soldier, to come to Nigeria. This is the man who was to make an indelible impression on Nigerian history. Five days before the French Officer arrived; Lugard had already arrived Nigeria and reached out to the king of Nikki with a Treaty drawn by the Foreign Office. This Treaty was the aftermath that gave the Company the western bank of the Niger and consequently, a dominant position of Borgu in Northern Nigeria. In spite of this, the French threat continued and so a direct intervention with a new spirit of aggressive imperialism from the home Government of Britain was needed to boost the Company's constabulary. That was why in response to Goldie's request, the Secretary of the Colonial Office, Joseph Chamberlain swung into action to take measures under a more definite method of control to strengthen the existing colonies and other areas not yet formerly annexed. Hence Chamberlain chose Lugard, a no nonsense professional army officer as his instrument to counter the French on the western area of controversy. Through the Colonial Office, he was promptly promoted as Brigadier-General and sent to Nigeria empowered with full authority to create a force of 2000 men at Government expense in order to protect the Company's territories. He raised two battalions of the West African Frontier Force (WAFF), one at Lokoja and the other at Jebba. To sharpen his work, he trained Hausa, Nupe and Yoruba recruits into the constabulary which was made up of only European nationals. Lugard's efficiency and dispatch contributed to the French being forced to accept the 1898 European Convention which solved the western boundary problems.

THE ASCENDANCY OF LORD LUGARD

As Lugard's star began to rise in the firmament of Nigeria, that of the Company began to wane. The Government of Great Britain began to assume direct control and policy over the Company especially as there were so many impending problems both internal and external, but more so as the Company failed to abide by the "non-monopolistic clause of its Charter" in their open practice of discriminating against other traders both European and African. More importantly through their imposition of exorbitant custom duties and trade licenses, the Company incurred the displeasure of the local chiefs as well, which made the home Government of Britain to lose face with the local chiefs, whereas what Britain all the while needed was how to win their pleasure and co-operation against the French in particular. Space does not allow us to go into the intricacies and problems that made the British Government revoke the Company's Charter, but as one could see, it was near impossible for any chartered company by whatever mandate and by whom to be able to negotiate its way out with a sovereign government, and more so, with a powerful government such as France. It needed another and perhaps a more powerful sovereign state; hence the taking over of the Company by the BRITISH government and re-naming it the "Royal Niger Company." The pattern of extension of any territory leading to an increasing problem and international friction, the answer to it is only that of annexation and Britain could not have done otherwise. Certainly, Britain focusing parliamentary attention on the Niger Company was not limited to its trading role but most importantly to stamp out slave trade in the North and Goldie with his passion to effect this had increasing conflicts with the powerful Fulani Emirs in the North. It was obvious that the Emirs had to be decisively dealt with. To this may be added the French threat which underlined the necessity for prompt action on the government level and this is where Frederick Lugard came in at Goldie's orders.

In January 1897, he employed the Niger Constabulary and captured Bida, the Capital of Nupe and Ilorin and also marched to other territories in the heart of Sokoto Caliphate, viz Gusau, etc. An aspect in the history of Nigeria was soon to come to an end and another was about to begin. In January 1899 Joseph Chamberlain recommended that Lugard be appointed High Commissioner of Northern Nigeria and granted what was virtually absolute power to make and execute laws. Then Lord Lugard moved to Lokoja at the confluence of the Niger and the Benue as his base, hence "Lugard House" as Government Headquarters for Northern Nigeria then. December 31 was the date set down for the expiration of the Royal Niger Company Charter. On January 1, 1900, the Company's flag was lowered and the Union Jack hoisted in its place with a parade in the presence of a curious crowd. The guns fired their salute, the African military wing of the Wave band played "God save the Queen" and the Royal Proclamation was read in Hausa and Nupe to the innocent admiring but dumfounded African crowd which continued to jubilate and celebrate the event for two days (Cf. Cooke Arthur M. Philadelphia, 1934; 113-14, See also Colonial Office Annual Report; Northern Nigeria No.346, 1900). One begins to wonder whether these innocuous and innocent jubilating Africans realized that the man in military uniform who mounted the dais and read the Queen Victoria's II message that day had come with almost unlimited powers to wage wars of aggression and annexation, depose their kings, arbitrarily re-draw the boundaries of their territories and rule them in fear and terror! In fact, they did not need to wait long before feeling the iron hand of the white soldier. That was the short story of what came to be known as the Northern Protectorates of Nigeria. It remains to see what happened in the South.

THE ROYAL NIGER COMPANY IN THE SOUTHERN PROTECTORATES

As I often remarked, in a book like this, it is always possible and inevitable to go back and fro in a sort of A???ùë??? - a Greek word anacolutha for the inevitable repetition and seeming digression from the subject, because certain fresh but memorable and relevant ideas have suddenly flushed into my mind which I must needs put down, it is not necessarily a repetition concerning the issue at hand: koro "Ek? ke---e: ke ek? Abasi; nte mbuk akade iso, nnyin ko ikop itiene! While it seemed easy to hoodwink and cajole the Emirs and Obas of the Northern and Western potentates; capture and annex their territories, mount the podium and ceremonially declare ownership and sovereignty of the land, because they seemed ripe for the taking, on the other hand, the southern territories of the Niger Delta were never going to be so ripe and easy to capture as we have seen beginning with the country of King Jaja of Opobo, ditto Itsekeri, ditto the Benin empire as we have seen. It was not really a problem of the expanding French and German territories or the making of Anglo-French pacts, but of a very physical and stubborn nature arising from the personal authority and power of the southern potentates. The European powers were not simply going to succeed in playing "wayo" in their schemings and trade politics and policies with the coastal kings, mind you! They took these kings for granted, who only wanted trade relations, no more no less. For example, in 1879 the Efik king, Edidem Joseph Henshaw whose proper name was Etinnyin Nsa Okoho Eyo Nsa Odo Efiom Ekpo, the Obong of Calabar (Nsa often anglicized to Henshaw) opened the present Oron port to British business and arranged with Sir George Watts, an agent of the British firm to open up the Qua Iboe River basin to British trade. In 1801 Watts opened trading firms at Ibeno and Ukat. But King Jaja who had prohibited the Africans from trading with Europeans within his area of rule attacked and destroyed those firms because he felt his authority had been flouted. The British Consul, John Hewett then residing at Fernando Poo warned Jaja that his country did not extend as far as the basin. Then to effectively deal with Jaja and other African rulers the British Government transferred the Consulate to Calabar with Sir John Beecroft as Consul, later Consul General.

But the controversy did not end, it dragged on till July 1 1884 when Jaja was forced to sign the treaty placing his country under British rule while he himself was exiled to Calabar, and afterwards to Tenerife Island where he died as discussed above. In consequence of this, Britain in 1885 also declared a Protectorate over all the Niger districts thus making the Royal Niger Company responsible over the palm oil areas of southern Nigeria including Igboland. The deed appeared in the London Gazette as a fait accompli with notification extended to the other European countries. In 1887, the Niger districts were re-named the "Oil Rivers Protectorate" (Talbot A. Paul, London, 1967; 28-93). In 1891, Her Majesty's Government of Britain owing to Beecroft's demise, appointed Sir Claude Maxwell Macdonald Consul General of the Oil Rivers Protectorate adjoining all the southern territories with its Headquarters at Calabar. To supervise those areas and adjacent rivers, the Government also placed an armed Constabulary of the WAFF thereat with launches provided. But two years later Macdonald's empire was threatened by the Germans advancing from the North and the east of what was later to become Nigeria. The Royal Niger Company under which the Government of the Oil Rivers Protectorate was still placed could not cope with the aggressive tactics and international rivalries of Germany and France.

Then in 1893, the London Foreign Office was able to fashion out an Anglo-German Boundary Concordat which settled the Eastern border to the Cameroons, but could not succeed in forging any pact with her arch-rival France regarding the Western and Northern boundaries from Dahomey upwards. The Foreign Office then decided to extend the frontiers of the Oil Rivers Protectorate and in order to make it official, changed its name once again to the "Niger Coast Protectorate" to cover a wider area than before with the Headquarters still at Calabar. This was aimed ostensibly to cover what the expansionist Colonial Secretary, Joseph Chamberlain had published in the London Times to the effect that:

> "We are pegging out claims for the future, we are henceforth to consider not what we want now, but what we shall want in the future. We must consider what countries must be developed either by ourselves or other nations" (Cf. Joseph Chamberlain, The London Times; 2 March, 1893).

In 1898, the British Government finally succeeded in forging an Anglo-French Boundary Agreement thus ending the intractable west/north border crisis. Shortly after, the Colonial Office exchanged notes with the Foreign Office about the possibility of making Northern and Southern Nigeria a British Protectorate. In the event, consular jurisdiction was abolished, the Royal Niger Company was bought out as discussed above, and Nigeria was placed under the aegis of the British Colonial Office. On January 1 1900, the territory of the Niger Coast Protectorate up to Idah in what is now Kogi State with the Headquarters still at Calabar became the "Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. The Union Jack was hoisted. Sir Ralph Moore who succeeded Sir Claude Maxwell Macdonald as Consul General was promoted High Commissioner while former Consuls became District and Assistant District Commissioners (DCs, and ADCs). After the amalgamation they became known as District Officers - DOs. The Constabulary of the Niger Company was assigned to a new Protectorate to form the Southern Nigeria Regiment of the West African Frontier Force (WAAF) – a Force which subdued the entire South South and South Eastern Nigeria up to Kogi State thus marking the end of military Consular regime in Nigerian history (Cf. Nirven, C.R. Longmans, London; 1937,71-72; See also Edet A. Udoh, Africana Feb Pub; 1983, 303-5).

From 1900 began a series of new and heart- throbbing events - a solid 14 years of British diplomacy, intrigues maneuvres, and long exasperating waiting towards the Amalgamation of the two Protectorates into what was to become the sovereign nation "NIGERIA" with the white khaki kitted soldier Frederick Lugard, completely and effectively in control of operations. With the Amalgamation of 1914, Lord Lugard took over full control of the state-craft of Nigeria until he was succeeded by Sir Hugh Clifford (1919-1925) who announced the first ever Constitution for Nigeria in 1922. Sir GraemesThompson (1925 - 1931) took over as the Governor General of Nigeria and was succeeded by Sir Donald Cameron (1931 - 1935). He was later succeeded by Sir Bernard Bourdilon (1935 - 1943). Sir Arthur Richards (1943 -1948) of the famous "1947 Richard's Constitution" who constituted the 3 Regional Governments took over and was succeeded by Sir John Macpherson (1948-1955) as the 7th Governor General to be succeeded by Sir James Robertson (1955 -1960) who handed over to Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe on Oct 1, 1960.

FERNANDO POO vis-a -vis EQUATORIAL GUINEA

ORIGINS OF FERNANDO POO – NOMENCLATURE AND LOCATION

We have referred to the island of Fernando Poo in Equatorial Guinea several times in this article, and I think it will be profitable to take a closer look at the import of this island vis-vis the Nigeria we are talking about. As I always capture it, I want to believe and say with every amount of responsibility, maturity and good sense that without Fernando Poo, there probably would be no Nigeria today. The reason for this is that it was at the island of Fernando Poo that the British Government having acquired substantial diplomatic authority over it, appointed and placed Sir John Beecroft there as Consul to give Britain direct control over the administration of the entire territory now known as Nigeria. This eventually led to Her Majesty's Government of Great Britain and Ireland appointing John Beecroft hitherto Acting Governor of the island for the Spanish Government and later on appointing him Consul to oversee the entire Niger Delta region of Nigeria there from. Thereafter, Britain appointed Beecroft's successor, Sir Claude McDonald as the first Consul General for and declared Calabar the Capital and HQ of the new Protectorate and by implication of the whole of Nigeria by the Act of 1890, until the transfer to Lagos by Lord Lugard as we have seen. Fernando Poo which is only 85 sq. Km in area is an island on the Atlantic on the West Coast of Africa and is located south west of the Cameroun Republic and about 180 Km from Calabar.

The name Fernando Poo is derived from the Portuguese naval and slave dealer, Commander Fernandez, the navigator who first discovered the island in the late 1600s and named it after himself. This also goes to remind us of places and institutions named after those early officers who in most cases were the first either to discover or appointed to play a certain part in connection with the place or institution which now bear their names eg. McDonald Street and other high profile colonial streets and institutions including markets in Calabar which were named after those British Administrators viz. Mayne Avenue, Ballantyne street, Goldie, Beecroft, Forsebery, Bedwell, Chamley, Egerton streets etc., named after the last of the Consuls and Governors General before the transfer to Lagos and Amalgamation as also the Watt market named after the celebrated James Watt of Edikot wed Book II ie. wed Usari Primer. Others of course were named after the great Missionaries like Bishop Joseph Shanahan, Rev. Father Howell, Rev. Hope Masterson Waddell, Hugh Goldie, Port-Harcourt named after James Harcourt, etc. Like Liberia and Sierra, Fernando became one of those virgin West African territories on the coast which Great Britain employed to resettle captured slaves and granting them full authority and empowerment to take full possession of the land without let or hindrance, to till and cultivate for their use and sustenance as free citizens of this world, just as God the Father at creation put Adam and Eve, the proto-genitors of mankind, in the Garden of Eden to subdue it, till and cultivate for their sustenance and wellbeing.

Yes, it is a paradox of history that Fernando Poo which is situated barely 160 km. from Calabar came to play such an important role for the British in their diplomacies and wars of aggression for their eventual acquisition and amalgamation of the northern and southern territories of what they were to name as Nigeria. In 1774 the island was ceded by Portugal to Spain, but Spain which did not as yet occupy the place gave Great Britain the permission to establish a naval base there in order to use it as a port for the landing of "freed" slaves recaptured from the slave ports of Niger Delta. Remember that by this time slave trade was banned and many slaves who were strong enough tried to make good their escape right in the high seas and many of them succeeded and swam to safety as they were picked up by their fellow Niger Deltan canoe men. Fernando Poo was of course nearer to the Oil Rivers than Sierra Leone or Liberia where liberated slaves were being settled. In 1827, a British gun boat docked in the island with a large number of Sierra Leonean liberated slaves most of them skilled artisans, carpenters and labourers. The place soon became a British settlement and the freed slaves were treated as British subjects. Thereafter the British appointed John Beecroft who as noted above was a British national and a merchant sea man and at the time settling on the island as Superintendent of Works to look after the settlers. But in 1830 the Government of Spain appointed him Acting Governor of the island. Then the British navy and other British settlers of European descent found the mosquito infested island too unhealthy and because of the heavy mortality rate virtually abandoned the place and left en masse.

In 1842, Spain asserted her sovereignty and occupational right over the island but in 1849 Great Britain established a full Consulate in the island with John Beecroft as the first British Consul over the entire region then known as the Bights of Biafara (now Bonny) and Benin, a.k.a. Niger Delta or Oil Rivers Protectorates. Thus Beecroft became at one and the same time both Acting Governor for the Spanish Government and Consul for the British Government. In his capacity as Consul he operated using the British squadron with naval Commodore and Officers for the protection of British traders in those days of gun boat rule in the Oil Rivers. In 1854 Beecroft died and Spain appointed Commander Don Carlos Cha?on as Governor General of the island. In 1856 with the arrival of Spanish Catholic workers including four priests, nine Catechists, eight Nuns and eight artisans the Governor General immediately declared Fernando Poo a Catholic country with Catholicism as the official religion and in 1858 expelled Baptist missionaries from the island. It should be interesting for Nigerians to know that the famous and prosperous English Company of the Holts Brothers John, Jonathan, and Thomas Holt known as "John Holts" first began their operations in Fernando Poo and was first owned by a Dutchman Mr. Lynslayer who also was appointed British Consul and business man. On taking over the business the Holt Brothers extended it to Calabar and other Niger Delta ports where it expanded and became a big business concern with remarkable prosperity.

SPANISH AUTHORITIES AND AFRICAN SETTLERS IN FERNANDO POO

Thereafter the Spanish settlers together with these ex-slave Sierra Leoneans now turned natives and owners of the land began to carry out untoward treatment of Nigerians, but they soon discovered that they could not effect their mercantile and expansionist schemes grace ? la the Ibibio Union Intervention. They engaged themselves in the establishment of large plantations of tropical crops and grains across the length and breadth of the island. Later, the maintenance of these plantations necessitated the recruitment of immigrant labour and large contingents of labourers from Nigeria were recruited. This recruitment reached its peak around the 1930s during the so-called "recession" in Europe such that the Government of Spain threw in their weight and it became an enormous and well regulated business undertaking on a large scale. But unfortunately when so many Nigerians were recruited, the Spanish Authorities in the island capitalized on this and treated the Nigerian workers contumeliously with outrageously inhuman labour conditions and with such brutality as cartels. Slaves then became land lords and the Nigeria free citizens became tenants to be treated with contempt and hard labour. When the report reached Nigeria, the Nigerian Eastern Mail, a Weekly Newspaper then publish in Calabar published an article exposing the atrocities and the torture of Nigerian workers and the brutal treatment given to them there. The appearance of such publications in the Nigerian Press was attributed to the panel visitation of the delegation sent to the island in 1949 by the erstwhile powerful Ibibio State Union treated elsewhere in this book. As a result, the Spanish Authorities immediately reacted by placing a ban on the Ibibio State Branch Union in the island. But as soon as this action was communicated to the Headquarters of the Union in Nigeria viz. Uyo, the Union sent two Briefs in the form of Resolutions copies of which they sent through the British Resident Calabar Province, Sir C. J. Mayne to the Spanish Authorities in Fernando Poo; the Chief Commissioner, Eastern Provinces and the Chief Secretary to the British Colonial Government, Lagos pressing for the lifting of the ban by Spain failing which all agencies established in Calabar Province for the recruitment of labourers for work in Fernando Poo would be closed down with immediate effect. The Union further demanded that the Ibibio State Branch Union in the island must be allowed to function with all the Officers appertaining to wit: The President and the other Officers together with Obong Ikpa Isong with his "EFE" ie. Parliament Office for the purpose of protecting and catering for the welfare of Ibibio nationals in particular and all Nigerian workers on the island in general. With his full weight thrown on the side of Nigerian resident workers by the Calabar Provincial Resident Sir C.J. Mayne, the Lagos Office declared Calabar as the only recognized Port for the embarkation and disembarkation of Nigerian passengers to and from Fernando Poo. So great was the authority and power behind the Ibibio State Union. The Authorities then even allowed workers to take their wives with them and to make allotments for their dependents back at home in Nigeria which hitherto was forbidden. The name of the Ibibio State Branch Union in the island was to remain as formerly viz. "ASSOCIACION BENEFICA IBIBIO" (Cf Udoma U.U. 1987, 186 -7).

It should be recalled that the period in question marked a very serious repression in Nigeria whereby due to lack of organized and proper development in the area of the creation of job facilities coupled with lack of genuine spirit for the establishment of industries despite the prevalence of abundant mineral and agricultural resources had reduced Nigeria to a pariah state of abject poverty giving rise to unimaginable unemployment, such that Nigeria became a reservoir for cheap and surplus labour. Nigerians were then compelled to offer themselves as miserable labourers in the Spanish Island of Fernando Poo in the capital now known as "Malabo". The island later attained Independence from Spain and has since assumed the respectable name of Equatorial Guinea but which regrettably also resulted in the ignominious expulsion of Nigerians there from.

1891: ESTABLISHMENT OF A NE GOVERNMENT OF SOUTHERN NIGERIA

MEMENTOS & BENCHMARK: LEGACIES OF URUAN-EFIK HISTORY AND HERITAGE

The above illustrations and photographs very eloquently confirm what really obtained in those days ie. the Old Calabar Consulate (1891) viz. the iron pots and gas lanterns, ship hulks as well as the Sitim and Okpoho ie. Manilla brass currencies in use at the time but which in 1948 ceased to be legal tenders throughout Nigeria. But later the British set up a special Commission of Enquiry conducted by Major, then Sir Claude McDonald the successor of Beecroft as to what form of Government would be best suited for Atakpa ie. Calabar and the adjacent territories stretching from Bonny up to Benin as covered by the Protectorate. Naturally opinions were sharply divided especially between the two kingdoms with Creek Town agreeing and Duke Town people dissenting and still fearing that Creek Town would swallow them up. But they soon saw reason and both kingdoms unanimously accepted that direct administration was preferable. Then on 1st January 1891 a new Government was established as the nucleus of direct British Administration in Southern Nigeria with Sir Claude McDonald as the first High Commissioner and Consul General of the Oil Rivers Protectorate and representative of Her Majesty's Government, Queen Victoria of Great Britain as seen above.

1893: ESTABLISHMENT OF THE NIGER COAST PROTECTORATE

Then Calabar continued as Capital and Headquarters of the Old British Calabar Province which extended from West to East ie. from the Benin River (Bight of Benin) on the North West across the estuary of River Niger, ie. River Akassa and thence to the Cross River. The area covered the whole Eastern District from the Cross River to the Qua Iboe/ Akwa River in Eket District; the Central District ie. from former Opobo, now Ikot Abasi/Andoni River to Brass River and the Western District ie. from Benin River to Warri. It was in 1893 that the British Foreign Office changed the name to the "Niger Coast Protectorate" since in law the "Oil Rivers Protectorate" meant a foreign country. But all these go to confirm what was said above that no true culture history on the evolution of the EFIK from URUAN ante-dates their settlement at AKWA AKPA URUAN, and no progenitor of the EFIK ever emerged before the settlement at Iboku Esit Edik ie. Obio Oko or modern "Creek Town" which was the name given by the British supercargoes. Any such concocted history of the EFIK such as those presented by the EFIK new breeds which is nothing but revisionist history which came much later after "ke MBAKARA ema eked?k Obot". This certainly could not have happened before AD 1600 -1800; whereas URUAN EFIK culture history of antiquity dates back to centuries BC ie. ever before the ascendancy of the Egyptian Civilization and the Christian era 4500 - 300BC. Culturally, the present EFIK, most of whom are a heterogeneous mixture of neighbourhood communities of the Cross River Basin and the Gulf of Guinea, because of their coastal location, were most conspicuous internationally, nationally, and within the Eastern Region of Nigeria. This was partly on account of the primacy of Calabar in Nigerian history as the first Capital of Nigeria, and partly on account of the outstanding rich and elaborate cultural repertoire of the EFIK as mentioned already. URUAN language now Ik? Efik became the language of learning, commerce and diplomacy and was among the first to be written and officially taught in Nigeria, nay the whole of Africa. Among the broad cultural inventory of the Efiks are: "Ekombi", the Efik classical music; "Ukwa" the only fencing match in sub Saharan Africa; "Mbuk" a collection of Efik folklore (myths, and legends which were stories even read in Schools at the time; the "Ekpe" cult; not forgetting of course the famous local cuisine "Edika ik? ," and a host of traditional dance forms.

URUAN-EFIK RIFT: ? WED UD? BARA IKA AND ? WED USARI

But the 18th and 19th century Old Calabar was not exactly what was being portrayed in the early 20th century ie. the era immediately following the first World War when URUAN/EFIK as it were seriously fell apart. Very many events led to these which certainly need not form part of this project. Nevertheless, the last straw was the publishing of two sarcastic and offensive PRIMERS by the EFIK for use in the primary schools of those days viz. ? wed Ud? bara Ika and ? wed Usari ye Otu, the former disparagingly and derogatorily depicting URUAN and belittling them as servants and house-keepers; the latter also depicting a war of words between the Efik as the Nsa kot-proud superior peacock, and URUAN as the tiny and miserable ekik?, the cock. The reason is not far to seek. At this point in time as everybody knows, the slave trade had stopped and people especially of the ancient Niger Delta were settling down to real business in the booming palm produce trade that had overtaken with the now Efik at the helm of affairs as great merchants and masters of the manor. Most of the slaves had become very powerful barons of merchandise and their EFIK slave masters had to play it fast otherwise they could be outwitted and hoodwinked by their hitherto slave servants. They, trust that URUAN spirit and expertise in their veins as they the EFIK, masterminded the booming trade by building and supervising trading posts all over the enter coastline of URUAN and even into the IBIBIO territory and beyond along the Cross and Qua Iboe Rivers. Soon they became masters and Commanders right into the heartland of what was now regarded as URUAN strongholds in contra-distinction to EFIK territory along the Coast of Calabar River.

They took over and also built more and better trading posts and indeed succeeded in stamping their feet over those trading posts of Ikot Offiong, Ikpa, Nwaniba, Esuk Odu, Eman Ukpa a.k.a. Eman Ikot Ete Ekpenyong, Ufak Effiong, Anakpa, Ikpa Ene, Issiet Inua Akpa, Ibeno Uruan - just to mention a few - all in the hinterland of URUAN trading coasts. Along the other end of the Cross River they masterminded the trading posts of Aquagune, Ikot Ana, Umon, Uwet, and crossing over to Northern or what was known as ATAM/OGOJA territory, viz. Bansara, Ugep/Yakurr, Itigidi, Obubra, Ikom, including Afikpo, etc. They also became trading wizards along the IBIBIO Mainland strongholds including ORON, Ebughu, Ibaka a.k.a James Town, Effiat - Inua Abasi: Tom Shott, etc. They also went on to supervise and plant their own trading posts at Ibuno ie. Nkpanak, Upenekang, Eket, Opobo, etc. All these were possible and greatly enhanced EFIK hegemony because the entire kingdom had become so heterogeneous that it had become the melting pot of almost all the nationalities of the entire Niger basin ie. the Niger Delta region as we now call it. EFIK culture and by implication URUAN had now become tied up to and integrated with riverine culture because the Cross River which covers the entire URUAN/EFIK kingdoms crisscrosses most the rivers of the whole Nigerian nation. It is one of the longest rivers known aside the Niger which empties into the Futa-Jalon highlands in Burkina Faso, Mali and the Sene-Gambia Republics. It was so named by the early Portuguese explorers as the "Niger"="Black people's River"; because it rises from the Rumpi Mountains of Western Cameroun and runs in a north-westerly direction to Obubra and southwards to the main estuary of AKWA AKPA URUAN where it empties into the Atlantic with numerous tributaries further southwards to join the Andoni, Imo, Qua Iboe Rivers as we have shown such that with these open frontiers, the EFIK between 1600-1900 enjoyed the collaborative trade links with the Igbo, Ijaw, Andoni, Kwa, including the other West/Central African countries of Gold Coast(Ghana), Liberia, Sierra Leone, Dahomey (Benin), Fernando Poo (Equatorial Guinea) Gabon and Doula in Cameroun Republic.

All these rivers pass through the aforementioned territories forming great commercial posts as it were, for EFIK business. Small wonder then, that having such enormous power and trading contacts, they would succeed in jealously and tenaciously guarding and protecting their interests on the coasts thus upholding their hegemony and monopoly of the trade over the entire half of the Niger Delta region because they also extended their tentacles to parts of what was known as the Bight of Biafara, a.k.a Bonny as they looked down on the people including URUAN their founding fathers seeing them as nonentities and bush people even to the point of giving them names. I have elsewhere painfully rationalized on this and given the motives surrounding this volte-face especially with URUAN because given their position, situation and circumstances in which the EFIK found themselves, any other people would have more proudly and arrogantly acted likewise if not worse. Thus the congregation of peoples – merchants, towards the coasts where there were so many economic attractions eg. the salt industry in Inua Abasi a.k.a Tom Short, ibat- bongafish and obu - crayfish in Effiat, fish industry among others along Inua Abasi, Abana, Ikang as also edari for palm wine brewing industry and chewing stick (?k?k) made it possible for them to better their lot at these coasts. As a result, most of them made URUAN/EFIK and ORON land their home and even intermarried and adopted EFIK customs. Professor K. O. Dike has even confirmed this when he also wrote that the Igbo, the Ijaw, and peoples from other West African countries were inter-marrying and adopting EFIK culture, names and dialects because "every item of export trade in the port of Bonny at the time was a product of the tribal interior trade on which the prosperity and greatness of the Delta States rested."

In fact, the Efik of the 18th -19th century Old Calabar developed highly distinctive cultural patterns and these evolved from their dependence on the prolonged European presence in Efik territory. Such major URUAN traditions as NKUH? which typified the seclusion and training of girls in Uf?k kuh?, also Ekpe masquerades and cults, Chieftaincy Affairs, funeral rites and Coronation ceremonials which were also typical of URUAN from which they sprung incorporated new ideas in the paraphernalia patterns and exotic materials which now ennobled their culture and world views. The display of wealth and good living through expensive dress codes in exotic materials like silk, damask clothings, top-hats, carved maces, brass embossments, beaded shoes, wristlets and armlets with "esa -ub? " walking sticks and brass-beaded staffs to match for the men and stockings with shoes and kpaha-ub?k bangles for the women folk, not forgetting of course the large retinue of wives and slaves, ostentatious ceremonies in Ekpe mentioned above and other cultural displays of Ntimi, Ek?mbi, Yat-owo dances etc. and most importantly ownership of numerous trade canoes, plantations and imported fabricated houses became part and parcel of the new status symbol of EFIK rank and file. All these coupled with prestige ekara uf?k and imported wooden houses, furniture, house upholsteries, German and Panya wall clocks, etc. from Doula and Fernando Poo made affluent Old Calabar society, their Chiefs and kings impressive as the gentry of honour and adulation in the eyes of their peers and subordinates. In deed all these could not but become impressive exhibition of power and wealth before both their African and European trading partners. It was this and more that prompted them in sort of adulation to address Efik Rulers as "Dukes and Kings" as observed already. But in all these the episode of a conundrum resulting in the open quarrels and near warfare between the EFIK and URUAN around the tail end of the 18th century cannot be forgotten when a sizable number of the Efik brethren still coming to and fro AKWA AKPA URUAN from the newly founded cradle land of Creek Town. Some of them were still settling at Esuk Odu part of AKWA AKPA and it happened around the personality of Etinnyin Eyo Nsa Eyo Ema Atai Iboku who later was crowned one of the new Clanal Kings and leaders of the Efik, perhaps ostensibly on account of this ensuing episode namely, by this his singular exploit at Iboku Esit Edik a.k.a Creek Town (1798 -1814).

IBOKU ESIT EDIK/ESUK ODU URUAN/EFIK WAR OF WORDS EPISODE BETWEEN ETINNYIN MESSEMBE OTU IFEMBE a.k.a UKO MBIAKONG

AND ETINNYIN EYO NSA PATRIARCH OF KING EYO HONESTY DYNYASTY

Also at this point in time, the reigning leader and war lord of URUAN was Etinnyin Uko Akpakpan Uko Okon Edem Eyo Abasi Mesembe Otu. He also became the warrior and leader of the Mbia Ek? a.k.a Mbiakong mentioned elsewhere in connection with URUAN movement from AKWA AKPA URUAN into the mainland and the founding of MBIAKONG URUAN, a town on the coast of what is now known as Akwa Ibom State. Then there was much antagonism and wrangling between those who had moved to Creek Town a.k.a OBIO OKO and those still effectively residing at AKWA AKPA now renamed Akani Obio Uruan. At this time, the Efik brethren, whenever in the presence of Etinnyin Uko Eyo were Willy Nilly constrained to kneel in obeisance as a mark of honour to the ever conquering URUAN warlord and monarch, Uko. This sort of humiliation angered the EFIK not a little and they were determined to call off the bluff and disgrace by killing Etinnyin Uko Eyo in retaliation because Eyo had killed whoever among the EFIK individually or severally attempted to confront him in open combat. One day Eyo Nsa made good his well thought-out design to kill Etinnyin Uko. According to the story, after making a big catch of fish on this eventful night while at Esuk Odu, he feigned to have been benighted at sea, and since AKWA AKPA primary settlement was close by, he rowed to spend the night thither. Promptly he anchored by Etinnyin Uko's coastal compound moaning: "Enya a eyen mbufo –o, eyo okut abaha mmi ke udem" which translates: "Save your own kith and kin, for I am benighted in the depths". Etinnying Uko was moved to pity and called on him to anchor.

Not knowing his evil intention, Uko set fire for him to dry his fish lest they got rotten by morning. He also assisted him to prepare his evening meal with some of the fish. Soon after, according to the narrative by Chief Patrick Etim Eyo (82), himself a native of Mbiakong, Uko took leave of him to retire for the night while Eyo took his supper. But suddenly as soon as Uko entered his bedroom Eyo treacherously followed behind and when Uko shouted: "who is there", lo and behold, Eyo pointed his Mmonyo at him which immediately hypnotized Uko and he fell. Eyo then quickly drew his sword and cut off Uko's head and rowed back to Esuk Odu. On arrival he started blowing his nnuk enin bugle and to alert and awake his expectant co-travelers and shouting: "Efik Eburutu-o! Efik Eburutu-o! Efik Efik enam idut, idut enwen enam Efik, Efik etuak it? ;" Mbufo ed?h? Efik et? ? ed? etuak ibuot en? Uko, mm? ? Uko edidi anie?" This when translated means" Every other nation can always cower before the Efik; if any other nation attempts to make the Efik cowed down, the Efik will destroy them instantly by breaking their necks: And you (URUAN) say; 'Bow down and kneel before Uko, whoever is this Uko?'". But URUAN people are said to have retorted by countering the Efik brethren "they that could assassinate Etinnyin Uko only through treachery and perfidy by stabbing him behind, and never in an open face to face combat: "Iya woh Ek? owot Uko! Ek? okowot Uko edem-edem. Iya woh Ek? omowot Uko eren-owo! Akakam owot Uko edem-edem."

Remember also that in 1928 E.N. Amaku had previously in a defamatory material he wrote, derisively referred to the Ibibio as also URUAN tribes and peoples as" ignorant and stupid", when he wrote that the EFIK were ethnically different people from them. The aftermath of this was the famous and not to-be-forgotten riot in the city of Calabar the insult of which so annoyed the Ibibio who would have killed him but for the intervention of both the British Colonial Government and the United Presbyterian Mission of Scotland a.k.a CSM which hid him in their premises. Everybody knows that the major outcome of this incident was the break-off and formation of the "Ibibio Mainland Association" in Calabar which later metamorphosed into the famous "IBIBIO STATE UNION" whose main aim at its inauguration at the time was to train Ibibio youths Overseas. (Cf. Sir Egbert Udo Udoma & Chief James Udo Eka both Ex-President General and Secretary General Ibibio State Union; 1946-1976). It is instructive that when in 1949 Amaku wrote the "origin and migrations of the EFIK" in that Primer, he cautiously took a middle course because there was already a case in court on the matter instituted by the Ibibio in court. But later with the intervention of the above mentioned Agencies and Authorities to the effect that it be withdrawn for further investigations and negotiations, it was ultimately allowed to be settled amicably out of court as a matter between brothers. In fact, Amaku's writing as he did, that the Efik were a hybrid from the union between an Igbo man and an Ibibio woman as seen above, was like his plea to the Efik to stop their wranglings about their origins because from this position, they were not really from the Ibibio stock by reason of having an Igbo father; hoping this would satisfy both the EFIK and the Ibibio in the compromise. But before this as earlier explained; URUAN had asked the EFIK sarcastically:

Mbufo Efik itoho "Mbon-Edem "itoho Ibibio - You EFIK, you say you are neither from the IGBO nor from the IBIBIO, and by implication URUAN; Mbufo enyime Mbon-Edem ndien, ik? okure: Then accept your origin from the IGBO of yonder and the matter will end there!

URUAN AND IBIBIO BOYCOTT OF EDIIKOT ? WED UD? BARA IKA? AND EDIKOT ? WED USARI

Nevertheless, URUAN now settling happily upland and along the Ibibio frontiers to show some solidarity, retaliated by ordering the total boycott of these books both in URUAN and neighbouring Ibibio country. At the height of the insult, Chief, the Honourable Nyong Essien in the 1950s called off the bluff and banned the use of the books and E. N. Amaku's "Edikot ? wed Mbuk" series published in the late 1940s throughout the Cross River basin up to Ikom and Afikpo including Arochukwu, and these have stood banned till this day. In the 1960s, Chief, the Honourable E. O. Eyo of the Action Group fame - Eyo UYO - followed suit and abolished the use of the books in schools throughout Ibibio land and Annang country which was also in solidarity with them. This also led to the mass boycott of EFIK language and literature as one of the West African School Certificate Subjects (WASCE) offered in both the Primary and Secondary Schools by the URUAN majority and later the Ibibio and Annang students. Consequently, this led to the withdrawal of accreditation of the subjects by the WAEC and NECO Examinations Councils nationwide for reason of paucity of candidates offering the subject in the Examinations. It was such a sad irony and commentary of all that was to the glory of URUAN ditto the EFIK since there never had been any written language with Primers like those banned; talk less of any other one ie. that of URUAN/EFIK in the whole of the Eastern Region of Nigeria to equal those including their Igbo versions if any.

But hitherto URUAN, now the EFIK with their new designation and destination took advantage of the ensuing booming trade in palm oil and palm kennels as also the slave trade with these early European Multinational Companies viz. PZ, UAC, Chellerams, M&K, CFAO, Mandillas, etc. These Companies and slave merchants in their trade dealings with the EFIK exchanged gun powder, cloth, sugar, soap, etc. with them and in turn brought from them to America and Europe slaves, rubber, cocoa, ivory, palm produce and oil. This encounter led to and readily swelled up EFIK population at the Coast owing to the arrival of thousands of slaves being brought even by their URUAN brothers and sisters whom they were despising. The IGBOS on the other hand notably the AROS, also brought their goods especially slaves whom they masterminded through IBRITAM, of the Long Juju fame. From the Ibibio and the Annang country, the people likewise brought down many slaves and other goods especially palm oil and kernel to the Calabar coast by reason of their machinations of high technological and crafty manipulations in the use of the infamous Long Juju counterpart, viz. the EKPE IKPA UKOT of the "man-leopard" fame respectively.

IBRITAM a.k.a THE LONG JUJU OF ANCIENT IBOM, THENAROCHUKWU

The Ibibio and the Annang had in fact previously mastered but now master-minded the notorious craft of slave raiding. They were also craftily capturing their slaves through the IBRITAM (LONG JUJU) EKPE IKPA-UKOT (MAN LEOPARD) artifacts which enabled them haul in as it were hordes of slaves in their thousands. This increase in their populations further enhanced the prestige of the EFIK thus making them too pompous, audacious and overbearing before their Ibibio and Igbo slave merchant counterparts. Consequently, the slave trade whose haulage of captives was mostly of Igbo stock and neighbours, it was bound to swamp up the entire population of the AROS who at this point in time were EFIK speaking remnants and mostly of ancient URUAN stock. But being the indigenous inhabitants of the place, then IBOM as it was known, it became easy at the end of it all, that the AROS consequently arrogantly began to severe all links with their people of URUAN and thereby adopting Igbo as their native tongue till today.

Then surprisingly also the EFIK, now that they were being reckoned masters of the booming slave dealing effort pretended ignorance of URUAN their brothers and soon forgot all about URUAN from whom they sprang as their original parental stock and "their kith and kin". (Monday Effiong Noah, 27) In fact at the end of it all when the slave trade was abolished, the story went round that many EFIK chieftains had acquired well over two to five hundred slaves who could speak URUAN/EFIK language and now having become freed men, naturally the swelling up of their populations created a situation such that it was impossible to account for how many really had EFIK blood in their veins. To buttress this Rev. Hugh Goldie of the Scottish United Presbyterian Mission observed that "slaves greatly outnumbered the freemen in Old Calabar; hence he wrote that in Creek Town alone Igbo slaves formed more than half the population. He also recorded that about fifteen different tribes including the Fulani of Northern Nigeria were represented in the population of Calabar (Goldie H., 18). As if to corroborate this, Dr. Kenneth O. Dike said that when Creek Town was the leading community of old Calabar, Igbo slaves were its major population (Dike, K.O. 1958, 56). It was to command the flow of the slave trade that many EFIK chieftains and rulers acquired large numbers of slaves as well as canoes for naval as well as merchant purposes. The Rev. Hope Masterson Waddell, leader of the Scottish missionaries also wrote that King Eyo Honesty II of Creek Town alone had thousands of slaves with a captain and crew for each of this extensive trade with several puncheons of palm oil. King Eyo was said to have employed these slaves for reclaiming waste lands and planting oil palm farms and food crops which evidently gave him command of the rivers and channels of trade (Waddell, H.M., 320). This led to the popular derogatory soubriquet "ifun Efik" a title which was given to the Igbo slaves as so many of the ensuing citizenry were truly slaves or descendants of slaves. In deed all this had held sway till this day.

However just to keep people talking and the mind thinking and gazing, we can summarize that some of these myths and theories were propounded with gusto in regard to the origins of the EFIK as facts and fiction based on myths, legends and literature editions such that those issues became so muddled up and confused as to which exactly should be the true and correct stock from which the EFIK truly belong. But we should not be surprised why these claims and counter claims of EFIK origins so amazingly occupied the hearts and minds of those claiming to be Efik, especially in their claim of being distinct and separated from other ethnic groups especially from URUAN and even the so-called Ibibios. Anybody who studied the life and times of the EFIK between AD 1600 and 1902 when slave trade was officially abolished in the territory would certainly act and behave like the EFIK did. URUAN could only stare askance and miserably so. In fact, according to one Efik Chieftain, we (the EFIK) of the time and herein after have really spent our time and resources on providing day-dream evidences of the claimed Oriental and Jewish origins.

There is not a single tribal group in the world that evolved from a single organic source. Issues of autochthony and origins are mythologized to claim relevance and a sense of history. URUAN-EFIK peoples are simply autochthonomous communities. Even sub-nationalities like the Yorubas, Igbos, Ibibios, the Ijaw etc. and other Nigerian ethnicities never evolved from a common source. They are all including URUAN-EFIK, artificial creations historically held together by forces that have shaped them eventually into organic nationalities. In fact, two-thirds of URUAN-EFIK are not of URUAN-EFIK stock at all. They are mostly those disparate communities who had emigrated to URUAN-EGFIK territory and URUAN-EFIK being characteristically sociable, tolerant and accommodating absorbed them into her fold as part and parcel of URUAN-EFIK because they were law abiding and willing to accept URUAN-EFIK identity and culture. There is no single ethnic group which can claim to be a biologically homogenous breed anywhere in the world.

REASONS FOR EFIK ASCENDANCY
THE NEW URUAN NOW NICKNAMED THE EFIK OF ATAKPA

At the time when trade with the early Europeans was at its peak, EFIK hegemony was evident and they were on all accounts a superior African world class power both economically, educationally and culturally. As with the middle men, the EFIK controlled and acted as captains and middlemen between the European multinationals as also other African traders notably from Gabon, Fernando Poo, now Equatorial Guinea, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast (Ghana) and the Cameroun on the coast and URUAN/EFIK including the Igbo/Aros and Ibibio producers in the interior. They would allow neither groups to reach and negotiate in direct contact with the European Supercargoes one way or the other. URUAN counter action with them was simply to surrender and miserably say: "Mbufo mmefik owo emi", hence the word EFIK, a sobriquet which greatly amused, but delighted and emboldened them (EFIK) so to speak. Secondly most of the slaves were from these very people. How can a slave become equal to his slave dealer? No human being could tolerate that, so you couldn't blame or beat the Efik to it for being pompous, cocky and arrogant! Third, EFIK land was as it were, a dumping ground for convicts and outcasts from the Ibibio country and other parts of Nigeria like the Igbos, the Yorubas, Binis, and those others of modern South South Nigeria, the Ijaw, Edo, Ogoni, Okrika, Itsekeri, Asaba, etc. Fourthly, even after the abolition of slavery in 1842, first in Efik land on account of the maximum presence of the Europeans there, who had master-minded the ignoble trade and later embargoed it in their countries, the Efik promptly turned to legitimate trade in palm oil and kernels and continued in the monopoly thereof both commercially and politically. Fifth, the slaves even thereafter had to earn their living by working for their Efik Masters in the plantations and the new settlements opened up by the Efik across the length and breadth of the Cross River basin and the Atlantic coast. Such trading stations and settlements as observed before, spanned the entire territory between Calabar and the Ibibio mainland viz. James Town, Ibeno, Enwang, Idua Eket, Issiet Inua Akpa, Ntrukpum, Idu, Nwaniba, Ifiayong Beach a.k.a – Esuk Mbehe IDU, Ikpa, Mbiakong, Anakpa, Use, Issiet Inua Akpa, Nung Ikono Ufok, Ikpa Ene, Aquagune, Umon, Ikot Offiong, Etehetem, Nkpanak Uruk, Itu and into territories now in Rivers, the Ijaw kingdoms etc. of Bayelsa and Delta States especially Bonny to mention just but a few (Intelligence Report on Odot-Odiong Village Group. N/A; 9.).

The Efik had not only wealth in goods and in population as the actual number of slaves multiplied their populations many times over but also there was constant supply of food. A person like King Eyo Honesty II had over 400 canoes with thousands of slaves who were engaged in trade transactions and in the plantations. They brought in for the king foodstuffs, fish, bush and domestic animals for meat, etc.

KING EYO HONESTY'S CANOE CANNON ETUBOM COUNCIL WITH OBONG OF CALABAR UNDER CROSSED SWORDS

It simply meant that each EFIK house or trading association was enlarged both by natural increase and by the actual number of slaves they acquired. This also meant money power for the EFIK. In fact, the kingdom by then was organized into two economic groups as it were; the one made up of traders who boosted the economic base of the latter with cash farmers who in turn supplied the former with food. Trade competition between these groups therefore depended on good leadership and the success of their enterprises on the number of "heads" in an Uf?k household in order to man the business ie. see to the equipment and management of the ships/canoes depending on the finances available to each.

ORIGINS OF "ETUBOM IN URUAN-EFIK THE ETUBOMs AND THEIR SLAVES - NDIT? UBOM

Small wonder that in the course of time many slaves were needed by the various houses such that the head of the house or business enterprise as also founder became known as the "Ete-ubom" ie.

Etubom meaning father of the community/house since most of the enterprises were done by sea requiring the use of canoes and ndit? ubom –servants and paddlers. This gradually developed into calling the Efik Headship of a house/family ETUBOM, hence the different 'Houses' forming the entire Efik kingdom spectrum viz. Henshaw House, Archibong House, Ntiero House, Duke House, etc. This has continued till this day and even has been raised to a higher pedestal in Efik socio-political order, eg. the Etubom Advisory Council from among which members the Obong of Calabar is elected. Sixth, The EFIK community at this time was greatly heterogeneous because people from various communities in Nigeria and the Cameroons and from other coastal countries of West Africa, Ghana, Sierra Leone etc. had come to live among the EFIK. Also since Ibibio land had open frontiers with its neighbours viz. the Igbo to the northwest and west; the Ekoi group to the south, the Cameroun to the east and the Ijaw to the southwest, most of the traders from these parts naturally used the innumerable water ways along the tributaries of the Cross River, the Imo, the Kwa/Qua Iboe rivers and their tributaries which formed commercial arteries as it were, for EFIK business concerns on the river ports which they had opened viz. Nkpanak, James Town, Ebuhgu, Esuk Oron, Creek Town, Ikot Offiong, Mbiakong and Ikpa. Seventh, as with trade and in politics, the EFIK also controlled Western Education by prohibiting its spread into Ibibio land and other ethnic nations.

In fact, for over sixty years, 1846-1906 the United Free Church of Scotland were so controlled that their educational and social services were restricted only to the EFIK. In consequence of this and because the EFIK found Western Education to be a new source of power and wealth, they even preferred mellowing down on their Ekpe secret Confraternity to letting off the opportunity of getting the new power base. In 1860 for example, King Archibong II of Duke Town banned missionaries from going up the Cross River beyond Ikot Offiong because as said above, they had masterminded URUAN and took over the trading post there. Then much later on, they also took over Eman Ukpa, IKPA ENE, Ikpa Uruan near Mbiaya, Esuk Odu all in URUAN where the Missionaries headed by Rev. Alexander Cruickshank had established schools in 1858 and 1879 respectively (Cf. Talbot Amaury P., 208; Also Intelligence Report on Oku Clan. N/A Ibadan CS 026/3:27689).

No one therefore could blame the Efik for so desperately and arrogantly claiming and writing all sorts of concocted stories bordering on mythology to justify their authentic independent ethnic culture history and of their evolution even from Palestine and the Orient of which they knew nothing about. They were no doubt heads and shoulders above the Ibibio, the Igbos etc. at the time including URUAN from which they sprang.

ORIGINS OF ESSIEN ITIABA EFIK REVISIONIST TEXTS AND NEW CLAIMS OF EFIK ORIGINS ENIONG ELITE ASCENDANCY IN EFIK LAND

In his book Effiong Ukpong Aye, one of the EFIK elites claimed that the Hebrews were the progenitors of the EFIK (Aye, Efiong U.13.) According to E. O. Jaja, there have been many other historians who have also unsuccessfully employed literary methods to come to the conclusion that the EFIK should come to accept the IBIBIO and by implication, URUAN origin theory, whereas Aye had countered that there is nothing to be gained from imposing a pan-IBIBIO identity with EFIK (E.O Jaja, 1). Dr. E. N. Amaku had previously built his fiction on Igbo origins claiming that a marriage between an Igbo man, Okorafor and an Ibibio woman Atong Ama from Ikot Ntung in Eket had resulted in the birth of seven children who mysteriously formed the EFIK progenitors and the ESSIEN ITIABA EFIK of seven kingdoms. Amaku himself hails from Okpo village in Enyong just about six kilometres south of Arochukwu. One wonders why nobody from EFIK till today has the courage or bothers to take a trip to this village of Ikot Ntung which is less than ten kilometers from Eket ie. Oron/Eket road to enquire about the veracity of this because it would mean that those children from the couple viz. Eburutu – the ancestor of the EFIK; Mbang – the ancestor of Ibuno; Ukpabang – the ancestor of Akpakip Aro (ORON), Ikpoto – the ancestor of Efiat and Ebughu – the ancestor Ebughu are descendants of one Igbo man, Okorafor and by implication, all of them should be Igbos today. Isn't that so ridiculous to say the least! Okpo village is only about six kilometres from Arochukwu and very near to Ibom town which is still in existence, but to the extent to which URUAN refers to it as a large territory and as that extending from Old Bende to Ugep in modern Cross River State, then up to Afikpo in Ebonyi State. At a time, and between 1930 and 1970 ending the civil war and a little after, there were very many important personalities of Enyong extraction, men and women of great prominence like Dr. Amaku himself congregating in Old Calabar. Most of them were to be found either in the academia like Dr. Akpanyun of UNICROSS fame, in Religious circles there were priests like Rev. Onoyom Mbuk, in Politics people like Chief Etim James, Chairman, Cross River State Chapter of NPN, etc.

At the height of it all, Etubom Andrew Bassey became the Sole Administrator of what was to become the South Eastern State of Nigeria, before during and after the civil war and his influence was very well felt all over the land. The Enyong at this point in time were fighting a war of identity as it were, because they felt they were either ignored or marginalized and therefore sidelined in the scheme of things when the EFIK were in the ascendancy as discussed already. Whereas they regarded themselves as bona fide citizens of Efik kingdom parading themselves as descendants of EBURUTU and ready to do anything to appear to be in their best element whenever they succeeded in causing mischief of considerable magnitude as a means of publicizing themselves as men of letters and importance, ostensibly to sustain their tenuous relationship with the EFIK. This must have informed Amaku's legend of EBURUTU to keep afloat. It also became rife that some of these Enyong handful of educated persons who also could speak Efik fluently and had close links with non-Ibibios, in trying to do so greatly embarrassed the EFIK especially those of reputable families like those of Nsidung a.k.a Henshaw Town, the Archibongs and Duke families of Duke Town, the Ambos of Mbarakom and the Eyos of Iboku Esit Edik a.k.a Creek Town. These considered those of Enyong as ambivalent in their attitude being of mixed blood with non-Ibibio in preponderance, and therefore advised their EFIK kinsmen to exercise patience and restraint on these matters and try to maintain public order. In fact, some of the Enyong especially the newly arrived in the Municipality of Calabar who when among EFIK groups went to the extent of always regarding themselves as more Efik than a full-blooded well-born and bred EFIK man or woman until discredited. Some were so assertive like an empty vessel that must make the loudest noise in order to attract attention to itself; whereas to the average EFIK man or woman, any Enyong person was simply a distraction and an intruder who would like to have a double share at the expense of the EFIK people by tying to dig himself deep into the Municipality of Calabar at this point in time thereby having one foot in Calabar and the other at Enyong. It was an awfully embarrassing situation to say the least.

All this might or might not be so, but that was the attitude of the full-blooded EFIK towards an Enyong man or woman. My personal assessment of all this is however not to find so much fault for these people fighting a war of self-survival in a rather cosmopolitan world like the Calabar of those days. As a child I often noticed that everybody tried to observe the maxim "once in Rome, act like a Roman", so everybody was trying to speak Efik properly, what Justice Udo Udoma likes to describe as "the Ibibio language of URUAN dialect" (29-30) which by implication means what is now known as Ik? Efik. In order to prove their worth, they were to be found everywhere and holding one important position or another in Calabar at the time. But the EFIK on the other hand tried to play safe and fast too for fear of losing their position and status in the eyes of the whites and the gentry in Calabar who held them as very cultured, rich and noble personalities comparable to any among the international communities. As a matter of fact, one need not find fault with a typical Enyong man trying to seek relevance and fighting rather a war of survival in Calabar rather, by seeking succour under the umbrella of an EFIK group. Sandwiched in faraway Enyong in Ibibio mainland territory as it were, and in between the hostile and pugnacious Igbo of Old Bende/Ohafia region which traded in human beings during the infamous Ibritam Oracle a.k.a the Long Juju and slave trade, and because most of them also were victims thereof, any Enyong man or woman could easily develop a sort of phobia and inferiority complex before the peace loving Ibibio also seeking relevance in Calabar. In fact, that may well be the reason why an Enyong fellow would prefer to seek refuge and protection among an EFIK group quite remote from the mainland territory and across AKWA AKPA URUAN. Calabar naturally constituted a fortress for the fugitive and stranger elements whereas the core Enyong people in their land of abode are curiously not antagonistic towards their Ibibio neighbours. In fact, in recent times there are tales of violent skirmishes along the riverine fringes of Enyong/Ibibio borders of Akwa Ibom State involving towns like Obot-Akpabio and Ntan-Obu of Enyong. Perhaps we can now understand why a typical EFIK by reason of deep rooted conviction of full blooded Efik ancestry and the fear of his/her ancestors would rather vote for a full blooded EFIK woman to represent them but not to an Enyong indigene some of whom as noted already, were known to be the finest and most brilliant characters in Calabar.

ORIGINS OF ITU, ITU MBON USO a.k.a ITU MBUZO, ITAM, ETC.

Dr. Eyo Okon Akak in his interesting book traces the origin of the EFIK to Palestine tenaciously arguing that the name EFIK evolved from the Hebrew word APHEK or HEPHEK-pronounced EFIK (Akak, E.O., 16), because originally those who had escaped from Egypt from Pharaoh's tyranny were the ancient Nubians including the HEPHEK/EFIK who fled to Palestine until they were again driven by the inhabitants of Aram (Cf. Exd. 12:38; 1Kgs 20:26-30). These later fled into the city of Aphik/ Hephik and wandered till they arrived in Sudan. But leaving there, they finally moved southwards into the present area of Ghana and from there moving still south they landed at Benue, and from there arrived at the Congo region. The largest group among them subsequently entered Nigeria and settled first in the Igbo country of UTUTU from which the word EBURUTU is derived, then Umuahia, Itu Mbon-Uso a.k.a ITU MBUZO and finally Ibom in Arochukwu. But as everybody knows, ITU Mbon-uso are the people of ancient URUAN who were noted for their fine arts and artistic pottery works and ceramics. People can still recall the age-old pottery works of ancient Itu and environs who became the great artifacts of modern Akwa Ibom State. However, the question according to E. A. Udoh seems to be: "If the EFIK were from Palestine, why are they so lousy and lazy and not as hard working and prosperous like the Itu Mbon-uso or the Jews? And why are some of them, the EFIK, so decrepit today? Why did they not continue to worship Yahweh the God of the Jews or Chukwu, the Igbo God, yet they said they worshipped Abasi Ibom in Arochukwu before they finally migrated to URUAN?"

As observed already the true history of the origins of these border towns with Arochukwu can never be any other than that which sets forth the emigration of URUAN from IBOM immediately before the dawn of the Christian era AD. For just like the Efuts in their migration from USAHAEDET which part later became known as the Cameroun Republic, URUAN en route AKWA AKPA URUAN from Ibom during their stoppages in their sojourn must have certainly halted at certain Creeks with some expanse of land large enough to support their camping there as it were. They must have settled there long enough to recuperate since they were usually tired and worn out after much rowing through such distances. Their stoppages could also have been to enable them take care of their wives and children who must have fagged out during the journey. In fact, as often happened during such movements, some of them could no longer continue with the journey and having landed on these shores must have stayed put while the others moved on just as they had done in the case of those who founded the IBOKU ESIT EDIK a.k.a Creek Town as also ATAKPA, Calabar while others also continued to remain at AKWA AKPA URUAN till this day as we have seen. They must have settled long enough in the area of what is now otherwise known as ITU to be able to penetrate and deforest considerable areas of this settlement. Some could even have penetrated further into the thick forest land and swamps before them to found those areas bordering AROCHUKWU and ITU like IKPE IKOT NKON, those of EASTERN IBIBIO IKONO, viz. NKARI, USAKKA including ITU MBON-USO which has now been claimed by Abia State and renamed as ITU MBUZO etc. all of which were formerly within ITU territory as we shall soon discover.

Therefore, after founding and settling at these places for some time, and because the thick forest, gaping canyons and swamps before them were terrifying and very unconducive for habitation. Added to this was the fact that their settlement thereat had increased their populations and this had made them to continue to set sail further southwards through the tributaries to found what is now EAST ITAM which river is still part of the Cross River which runs as far as IDU a.k.a NWANIBA. All these go to explain why Itam people between the 1700s -1800s were so visible during the booming trade at ESUK MBEHE IDU ie. ESUK IKOT ETUONG as we have seen. In fact, it is this and all the other rivers (tributaries) which empty themselves right into what is known as the "RIVER CROSS" a.k.a CROSS RIVER today which was discovered and named by Sir John Beecroft as we are going to see.

ORIGIN OF EKIM ATAI & ESUK IKOT ETUONG GROUPS

The history of particular groups of Villages in URUAN viz. Idu, Ekim Enen, Issiet Ekim, Obio Ekim – Idu, Issiet Inua Akpa etc. can only be well established from the account of the two groups which sailed from separate routes as was always their mode of movements from AKWA AKPA URUAN to their present abodes in URUAN. Tradition has it that right in URUAN AKPE – USAHAEDET, most of the groups of villages now in existence not only in URUAN, but also across the length and breadth of Africa originated from a single founding father and this has been corroborated by great ethnographers and historians like G. P. Murdock, A. Grandidier, L. H. Greenberg, Paul A. Talbot, P. P. Okon, Henry Nau, Monday E. Noah quoted already. From URUAN history, we have it on authority that one of the founding fathers in URUAN AKPE was Ekim Atai from whom originated URUAN EKIM OFFIONG, the founding father of Ekim Villages viz. Issiet Ekim, Ekim Enen, Issiet etc. Many other groups of villages especially those of Mkpat Enin Local Government belonged to those leaders as founding fathers from which other groups of villages emerged moving independently to their present towns and villages of abode. It is the combination of groups like these that formed such large towns and villages in URUAN such as Ibiaku Uruan, Idu Uruan, Ikot Offiong/Ik?r?fi?ñg Nung Oku Uruan, Ndon Ebom, Nung Ikono Ufok/Obio, Ibiaku Issiet, Mbiakong, Mbiaya, etc. Another founding father in this direction was Ekim Offiong the progenitor of Etuong Udo Anwa Inyang Obiofiong, the founding father of Esuk Ikot Etuong a.k.a Idu as seen already. That is why Idu is holding tight unto the entire region of Esuk Ikot Etuong which have produced Nwaniba, Esuk Ifiayong, Ifiayong Usuk, Obio Nyan, Ikpa Ene, Ufak Effiong, Esuk Anakpa etc. till this day.

Other children of Ekim Offiong were Oto Inyie Akpan Obiofiong who founded Ikot Oto Inyie and others including Edo Atta Ekpa Obiofiong the founding father of Afaha Ikot Group of villages in Southern Uruan. Ukpa Obiofiong was the founding father of Eman Ukpa a.k.a Eman Ikot Ete Ekpenyong from Ekpenyong Ukpa progenitor. Inyang Etang Obiofiong founded Esuk Odu while Akpabin Akpa Ekwere Obiofiong founded Anakpa group of villages ditto Akpa Asak Abia-Ekong founder of Mbiakong. It is also worthy of note that all the twenty-two (22) Afaha groups of Villages in URUAN including Utit Uruan, Use Uruan, Ekim Enen, Ibiaku Uruan and others in Ibesikpo viz. Afaha Atai, Afaha Etok, Afaha Ikot Obio Nka, Afaha Ikot Akpa Edu, Afaha Ikot Ossom, Afaha Ikot Owop, Afaha Udo Eyop, ditto the Afaha groups of Villages in Abak and Essien Udim in Annang country viz. Afaha Obong, Afaha Esang, Mbebit, Afaha Ikot Ebak, Nsasak, Nto Nsek, Ikot Ada Utor, Ikot Akpan Essiet, Ikot Ese, Ikot Obong, Ikot Akpan Eda, Ikot Obio Okon, Ikot Ukpong Offiong, to mention but a few with Uruan Akpan as Headquarters. The Clans making up the entire Essien Udim include above all, Afaha Clan, Okon, Odori Ikot, Ekpenyong, Adiasim, Ukana East/West and Ikpe Annang.

RESOLVING THE CONTROVERSIES ON OBONGSHIP OF CALABAR THE A. K. HART'S COMMISSION 1964-65- ENUGU

On this account while testifying at the Hart's Commission Report, the Ambo Group of the EFIK represented by Etubom Ededem Ekpenyong Oku, contended that the name Abasi Ibom was first used by the EFIK at Ututu in Nigeria, the place that their progenitors first settled in Nigeria after migrating from Palestine, thus corroborating Akak's theory and countering Amaku's. They said that the town of Ututu was the first place in Igbo land in which the name Abasi Ibom was used and where they were called "Eburutu – a corruption of the word "Hebrew" and not in Ibom as stated by E. N. Amaku and others of his school of thought. They then moved and settled at Umuahia-Ibeku and finally at URUAN. Yet as late as the 1960s most of the Catholic teachers, some of whom were teachers and Headmasters in old Calabar Diocese including Anua and Idu Primary Schools came along speaking URUAN/EFIK language as some still do till today. The group also insisted that it was there in URUAN that the EFIK were nicknamed "Iboku" as a term of abuse meaning "the Igbo who hailed from Uku". How come, and the misconceptions, lies and confusions continue till this day! (Hart Commission Report, 1964, 65; 76-88). However, Akak still continued that on their arrival there, they established their homes and from there finally berthed at Ikpa Ene, an island on the Cross River, and from there they reached Creek Town. What a lovely story, mb?k! According to Chief Edem Obo Efanga representing a section of Obutong, Eburutu was a legendary hero from whom all the EFIK descend. They were called "Iboku" ie. Ibo Ukwu" which means talkative or quarrelsome Igbo by the Ibibios. Similarly, the Adak Uko Group represented by Etubom Ekpenyong Effiok stated that the EFIK were called "Eburutu" after the town "Burutu" in former Bendel State of Nigeria where they settled after arriving from Ghana. Referring to "Efik Iboku", he said one of the places to which the EFIK migrated was Oku Iboku near Ikot Offiong and they were called Efik Iboku there after the name of the town.

Still at the Commission at Enugu, the Chiefs of Old Town ie. Creek Town –Akani Obio, also stated that "Efik Eburutu" immigrated from Ibo-Oku, the capital of Oku Obio, a district of Egbo-sherry (translated "Ibibio", which was the name first given by the slave dealers to the Ibibios in the 1500s-1700s at the Ibibio creek). Among the progenitors of Efik Eburutu and others of the Ibo-Oku of Egbesherry was the legendary figure, Obong Otong Ama. In other words, Iboku was the capital of Ibibio land. But Chief Offiong Abasi Ntiero Effiwat representing Ntiero Group contended that the Efik tribal chieftain was Obong Atong Ama; both groups thus contradicting themselves whereas Amaku wrote that Atong Ama rather, was a wife to an Igbo man Okorafor, Eburutu being one of his four sons named Ebre Utuk. It was during their wanderings that they settled at Umuahia Ibeku where they were called Iboku as well as Eburutu. Whereas Chief Thomas Asuquo Effiom was content in stating that the Efik originated from Ibibio country and consequently was silent about the two names "Efik Eburutu" and "Efik Iboku" (Cf. Hart's Commission 1964; 65, 91-95, 105). Yet as everybody in URUAN/EFIK knows, Iboku is one of the highest Globes of Ekpe URUAN and by extension, one of the ancient tribes till this day, viz. URUAN North central comprising Eman Uruan Utit, Ibiaku, etc. There is also the concocted story that the EFIK stayed at URUAN for about two hundred years but had to leave as a result of their refusal to join in the worship of their ATAKPOR NDEM URUAN deity; and also another story about a quarrel between two women to wit: An Esuk Odu woman, and an Efik woman concerning the ownership and loss of an axe; the axe which was said to be owned by an URUAN-Esuk Odu woman was borrowed by the Efik woman and she broke its handle. That led to this quarrel which eventually brought bad blood between URUAN and the EFIK, then the exodus of the EFIK from URUAN territory. Whereas it has never been known to any blue blooded URUAN/EFIK that URUAN lived with any other tribe or race or went to war or had quarreled with any person or group of persons throughout URUAN culture and traditional history till this day. This wangled and muddled axe story gave the impression that the EFIK at the time were congregating in a cluster in one part and URUAN on another part. People then could wonder and ask so many questions like: On which part of AKWA AKPA URUAN were the EFIK congregating – to the Atlantic end or to the AKPA MFRIUKIM end which terminates at the now Cross River/Itu Bridge? Who was their chief or traditional Ruler at the time to have set up a council to settle the dispute or in annoyance ordered his people of Efik out of the territory to look for another settlement? etc. etc. The evidence at the A. K. Hart's Commission which settled these matters beyond any reasonable doubt in the Obong of Calabar dispute was not in support of this conglomerate story because there were no people by the name EFIK then (Cf. Hart Commission Report (1964), 65-7). The question has always been: akananam EFIK ye URUAN eduk ekw? edia are ifa ? Rather it is common knowledge that wherever there is EFIK deity, there is also Atakpor URUAN deity such that no matter wherever they settled in URUAN before they became EFIK, whether at Calabar or Ibibio country, according to Ibanga Nkenta's descendants, viz. the Henshaws, the Dukes, the Archibongs, the Eyos and Honestys, the Dukes, etc. the tradition was:

Atakpor Ndem URUAN enyene kpukpru URUAN Iso Atakpor ke Eburutu Efik; Atakpor ke Urua Aye Oron Enye ke Ikpa ye ke Opobo nte Essien URUAN

kiet; Ke Ndem Efik Iboku, Atakpor Ndem URUAN ke Ekuk! (Cf The Efik: A Brief History in Souvenir Programme of HRH Edidem Otu Ekpenyong Effa IX, Glad Tidings Press, Calabar, 1987, 20, Hart, A.K. Report of Enquiry over Obongship of Calabar, Enugu, 1964, 24-39 also Akak. E. O. The Palestinian Origins of the Efiks, Akak & Sons, Calabar, 1986, 54).

URUAN-EFIK NTINYA AND REGALIA OF ANCIENT HERITAGE

It is also common knowledge that in the Efe Asabo there is Atakpor URUAN, mark my words, and that URUAN for a long time and even into the early 20th century had always been part and parcel of the coronation of the Obong of Calabar because more often than not, an Obong was either maternally or paternally connected with a royal family in URUAN since the legal materials and traditions used at the EFE ATAKPOR in the coronation of the Edidem Atakpor URUAN were also the ones used for the coronation of the EFIK kings at the EFE ASABO at this their new settlement in Calabar. According to Dr. Edet A. Udo, one of URUAN historian luminaries who wrote the first ever comprehensive culture History of the Ibibio including URUAN in his Who are the Ibibio? He explained that contrary to what some Efik writers and Chieftains claimed that "the EFIK stole their regalia and coronation outfits from URUAN during their emigration to their present abode", it was not so. The point is, if they had stolen those items from URUAN, they could not have installed their Chiefs and Kings with them and hoped to survive a season. They did not steal anything, being bona fide sons and daughters of URUAN crown. That is why they have survived till today using the same replica of URUAN crown. Rather according to tradition, and whenever an Efik monarch was to be crowned, they used to invite URUAN chiefs and rulers for the installation. Then it fell to an URUAN chieftain so invited, to place the NTINYA on him at the ceremony of coronation as a sign of ratification and incorporation into the line of Efik kings. URUAN frowns at, and does not have the concocted version from those accounts and specifically from the comments of the Obong of Calabar concerning the progenitors of URUAN/EFIK, to wit, that Edidem Ekpo Efiom Ekpo Ibanga deputed to be the grandchild of the marriage between the grandfather Edidem Ibanga Nkanta of URUAN and Princess Ekei Atai Iboku of EFIK who took sides with the Efik people during the Uruan-Efik war. This is the man who has since been regarded as "the ancestor of a large group of the Efik people viz. the Henshaws, the Dukes, the Archibongs, the Ntieros, the Eyambas, the Honestys and the Ephraim Adams." These groups became popular in Efik History only from the 18th century when white slave traders started meddling in Efik Kingship Institution [24]. The Efik consequently but erroneously conclude that this is the only part of URUAN that the Efik people might be keeping.

But as I have always maintained, this story surfaced after mme Mbakara ema eked?k obot and within the last two or three centuries ago. The coronation in URUAN entails a perfect performance of the rituals: neither a rogue nor an impostor nor a non-blue blooded designate of royal URUAN/EFIK ancestry has ever sat on the Efik throne. That is why E. A. Udoh has continued to maintain that no group of people without any knowledge of the Chieftaincy or kingship coronation and institution of another people could steal such regalia and install their own chieftains without reprisals from the Ikan URUAN, namely, the dead kings and chieftains of URUAN INYANG ATAKPOR. Surely any kingdom or group that attempted such installation of the putative king/chief designates, their families and those who took part in the coronation ceremonies would never have lasted a season, and the EFIK knew this and believed so. The same is the case concerning initiations in the secret societies like Obon, Ekpe and Ekong kemba of URUAN. Therefore, the EFIK themselves at this point of their evolution were the same URUAN who were installed Kings and Chiefs by URUAN in those early years of their settlement. They had continued to be so coronated until they were later left alone to carry on by themselves at the new Efe Asabo where the Atakpor had similarly been installed thereat. Every blue-blooded descendant of royalty believes he is an URUAN/EFIK because a Chief or an Obong of Calabar was either maternally or paternally connected with a royal family in URUAN. (Udo E.A., 36-37) Even in the 19th century we can notice for example, that the mother of Etim Offiong Okon Eton Ani, the Obong of Mbiabo Edere was from Esuk Odu, similarly Eyo Nsa of Creek Town who became King Eyo Honesty II (1835 -58) was the grandson of Ansa Iboku Eyo of Use Uruan.

. But concerning their arrival at Ibom, Dr. E. N. Amaku himself has confirmed this in his book, (E.N. Amaku, 1949). Dr Eyo Okon Akak as noted above sees E.N. Amaku culture history of Efik origins as a piece of legendary literature just like those traditional stories of the origins of Rome in the legend about Romus and Romulus which was a classic mythology of Levy. (E. O. Akak, 16). Perhaps the best commentary on this is that by Etinnyin B. E Bassey (BEBS) who has remarked that in fairness, the EFIK see only minor distinctions between them and the EFUTS who also are of same ancestral stock with URUAN). But he also accepted the Oriental origins of the Efik when he opined that the Efik are known to have settled at Aro-Chukwu of Abia State and subsequently URUAN of Akwa Ibom State of Nigeria before moving to their present locations. He then consequently and correctly admits that USAHAEDET is the actual and primary source (B. E. Bassey, 19-21). However, this doesn't say much better than what Amaku and Akak have proffered. Yet still, Professor Afigbo (A. E. Afigbo, 280) also claimed that the EFIK are Igbo descendants maintaining that though the Efik speak a dialect akin to the Ibibio, this did not give any clue to their ethnic origin as a people because according to him and supporting Joseph H. Greenberg's argument, the current language of a people does not necessarily provide a solution to the problem of origin. He went on to cite two reasons in support of his argument. First, that the Onitsha people of Eastern Nigeria have a strong tradition of origin from the Edo of Benin but they now speak Igbo dialect. Second, that the Efuts of Calabar have lost their language and cultural traits to the EFIK, whereas according to Muri Edet Ndem, his title is not Obong which is for the EFIK, but MURI, which is the EFUT title for their Traditional Rulers. Similarly, the title for the king of Benin kingdom is Oba and not Obi, which is that of the Traditional ruler of Onitsha. As for the Efuts losing their language, Talbot has observed elsewhere that both URUAN and the EFUTS are of the same kindred being brothers and therefore speak a common language which has now become Ik? Efik.

. Therefore, one may be tempted to ask: Why all these? But in spite of it all, many notably the early European writers have continued to give testimony and to analyze the original ancestral history of EFIK to the effect that:.

> In fact, the natives of the chief Kalabar Towns originally came from URUAN of the Egbo Sheary (IBIBIO) country to carry on the slave trade at the time that the whole inhabitable country to the East side of the river belonged to the people of the Qua. The Qua people are therefore still owners of a considerable portion of the land to the East and South (ie. URUAN bordering Odukpani: Creek Town and Ikon-Eto) down to Duke Town which is gradually becoming absorbed by the OLD KALABAR Residents of the present day. (Cf. Thomas Hutchinson, 128-129)

Similarly, Hope Masterson Waddell writing a few years later precisely in 1863 expressed the same sentiments when he said that "the EFIK people came out of URUAN in the IBIBIO country simply because, as will be explained in the subsequent Article, the early Europeans regarded the entire territory as far as the Bight of Bonny (Biafara) as Qua/Kwa or IBIBIO country. This is perhaps the greatest testimony on this as also what Talbot had recounted:

> Soon afterwards (about 1600 AD), a section in URUAN "of the IBIBIO country expelled Either by the on-coming Igbo or in consequence of a defeat at the hands of a town of their own tribe (ie. IBOM) migrated to Old Efik Town near Ikon-Eto. to somewhat later, the greater part of them moved again to MBIABO and others to CREEK TOWN, most likely in order to get as large a share as possible of the profits from the slave trade. (Hope M. Waddell, 309).

WHAT THE NEW EFIK FAILED TO KNOW vis-a-vis WHAT THE EFIK SAY

EDIDEM IBANGA NKENTA AND SOME ROYAL PERSONLITIES IN URUAN 1928 - 1960

Yet in all these, we might profitably inveigh from the testimony of Etinnyin (Obong) Okon Umana Ibanga Nkenta, the surviving great grandchild of the legendary, H.I.M. Edidem Atakpor Ibanga NKENTA, the Nsomm of URUAN, what should be the true position of things on this matter.

EDIDEM IBANGA NKENTA AND SOME ROYAL PERSONALITIES IN URUAN 1928 - 1060

I had interviewed him in connection with the writing of this book and he admitted that indeed his great grandfather was the legendary Ibanga NKENTA (spelt NKENTA and not NKANTA). He married at least 37 wives including those from Ohafia, Inokon a.k.a Arochukwu, Ikoneto, Adiabo, Eniong and Obio Oko, a.k.a Iboku Esit Edik, ie. Creek Town. The wife from Creek Town could probably be the one the Efik have designated above as Ekei Atai Iboku with a son, Ekpo Ibanga being born out of the union. But URUAN has no history connecting Edidem Nkenta with this son as the progenitor of Efik princes and kings and therefore the Efik descendants from that marriage. Moreover, this was a very recent happening and that marriage has never been an issue coming as it did only within the last two centuries about 1846 - 1920. The simple truth is that those who are Efik today are the direct descendants of ancient URUAN, the founding fathers of Iboku Esit Edik - Creek Town, and Atakpa ie. Calabar, as we have always maintained throughout this book.

Etinnyin Umana further narrated to me that his great grandfather was a contemporary of the legendary icon, Mary Slessor who had met him on several occasions, because he, Edidem Ibanga Nkenta was the one who received her into URUAN kingdom and donated a piece of land to her for the building of the Presbyterian School at Mbiaya in 1902 under Rev. Alexander Cruickshank who arrived Nigeria in 1881. He it was who equally donated land to the RCM Missionaries in 1912. Mary Slessor is said to have demonstrated with him not to allow twins and their mothers to be killed any more. On the killing of mothers of twins, the Missionary had argued thus: "Why do you spare the husbands who impregnated the twin-mothers, but order the wives to be killed or banished into the evil forests? Is it just to do so?" Then from that time H.I.M. Nkenta outlawed the killing of twins and their mothers throughout URUAN territory and beyond. He was such a powerful king, respected and revered far and wide and throughout the entire Nigeria Oil Protectorate. On the selling of slaves, Mary Slessor had also taken the monarch to task by questioning the rationality behind the selling of fellow human beings as slaves. He led him to see how irrational, unjust and inhuman this action of his people was. She had asked the monarch whether it was just and proper to take both yams, cocoyams, fish, coconut, maize, goats, sheep, fowls etc. as well as men and women to the market for sale? Then why did he permit his citizens to sell fellow humans as if they were cartels like sheep and goats or maize and cassava? Soon after, this URUAN king had no choice but to place a ban on slave trade and slavery disappeared altogether in the land. Thereafter Mary Slessor noting how wisely, benignly and maturely Edidem Ibanga Nkenta ruled his people, decided to recommend and make it possible for his sons to succeed him as was obtainable in the British kingdom. But the monarch was quick to have turned down the offer saying that URUAN chieftaincy succession was by tradition not hereditary but was passed on from one part of Uruan to another, and from person to person so elected and accredited by URUAN citizens. He argued that such succession would lead to intractable lawsuits and brouhaha between brothers from royalty polygamous marriages which was the vogue, and as to who should be the rightful successor to the throne. Such succession could always lead to bad blood, rivalry, rancor and hatred, even blue murder of brothers and kins. King Ibanga Nkenta was one of the greatest Nsomms to have ruled URUAN in recent memory. His regime was marked by good governance, affability and justice. He endeared himself to the imperial colonial masters and was even coronated by them. They also contributed immensely to his funeral ceremonies and ordered the building of a befitting epitaph to his honour which still stands strong today.

Yes, but these testimonies which were written specifically at the time when some of the ethnic formations were still in progress and also when no ulterior motives were intended, do provide direct harmless evidence testifying to the EFIK origins from URUAN. For these Administrators and Missionaries who were all residing in Calabar could neither have dared nor tried to down-play, much less distort EFIK origins and culture history for any reason whatever, since after all, the EFIK were their landlords and hosts to a large extent and for whom they really must have had very cordial relations and a strong desire to court their favour and to please. In fact, the story of King Eyo Honesty who wrote to the Imperial Authorities in Great Britain, to send their people to "teach us book" (Cf. Ekei E. Oku, 56) is a case in point. That is why the development of this costal trade especially on slaves led to the various assumptions of and the new claims to the definitions of origins and ethnic identities. It should however be emphasized that ethnic claims can be so manipulated and distorted in order to enhance economic or even political advantage, and this has been happening the world over and over the centuries and in many places including even here in Nigeria, the situation of ORON and ANNANG with reference to the nationalities in the present AKWA IBOM STATE is a case in point.

But indeed and expectedly so, this new found wealth and ethnic nationalities have also given rise to claims of kingships even "kinglets" the credibility of which for that matter can only be sustained by a total break with their original ancestral stock so as not to betray their humble beginnings, which here is the case in point regarding URUAN/EFIK history. This should be enough for us now! Therefore, everybody can now see for himself from where Amaku, Akak and other Efik ethnic fabricators picked up their stuffs in order to reconstruct EFIK culture history and heritage the way they did. But they could have only succeeded in complicating and confusing matters if they were able, the whole of humanity watching and looking back in askance whether the TRUTH regarding URUAN/EFIK history and origins has not been distorted in the long run, a history which has been so clearly defined and well established through the generations. Whereas this could have helped to define, unite and keep them together for a greater tomorrow, such that those who would be learning as it were from these MASTERS viz. URUAN/EFIK sons and daughters of yore, since they were the pioneer school teachers, administrators, etc. on this part of the continent, are now the people to be ridiculed, buffeted, ignored and rubbished by those who were their "cutters of wood and drawers of water" before the split. Everybody knows that the history of Nigeria cannot be complete without the contributions of these great teachers like Dr. E.N. Amaku and Chief, the Honorable Nyong Essien for example, who bestrode the length and breadth of this great country imparting knowledge and writing books. Perhaps this is why they have been recently so abusively and derogatorily regarded as urua in Ibibio or afid in Annang which when translated into URUAN/EFIK tongue and language means ifu? which actually denotes "a confused and worthless people - KORO URUAN EMEKABARE URUANG". In fact Amaku was correct when he so humorously and derisively, but correctly described them URUAN/EFIK, as a pompous, self-conceited, lousy, snobbish, boastful, disdainful and egoistic lot, who pride themselves more than others see them and who like empty vessels, make the greatest noise about nothing all the time. They are those of whom also the saying of the celebrated Shakespeare at the time in question (1500-1600 AD) could be applicable: "it is a tale, told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing" (Cf. William Shakespeare in Macbeth).

The culture history of EFIK therefore, is tied up with the mushrooming of many recent ethnic groupings like the ofri Essien Oron a.k.a Akpakip Aro, ofri Essien Annang a.k.a Afe/ Ate Annang, Ibuno, Eket, (Cf. Ekit ed?di? -o! etc. Ekei E. Oku, 56, etc.) as part of the dynamics in the evolutionary process which has encouraged a sort of weaning from the establishment of Independence and from the seeming tiresome appendages to the pan-IBIBIO, which should not hold water in the case of the URUAN/EFIK at all. The reason is simple. The EFIK of Calabar were one of the earliest to assert this posture and rightly so. "Originally a branch of the Ibibio and principally from URUAN" (Kannan K. Nair 12) and based on so many testimonies and literature on EFIK evolution, they had peopled the estuary of the Cross River and parts of the mainland Ibibio, now Akwa Ibom State long before the Ibibio war, thus implying that URUAN had already settled in their present location, ditto EFIK for several millennia before this happened. URAN/EFIK antiquity in this location is also confirmed by many ethnologists and historians like Robert McKeon, M. D. Jeffreys and P. A. Talbot who remarked that "of all the Cross River peoples, EFIK are probably the URUAN NATIVE stock… from whom most of the small tribes in the Qua Iboe and Calabar have sprung" (McKeown, Robert S., 35). They also add that Efik people "may have been few in number who gradually migrated in trickles from their parent stock, URUAN, having descended from the Cameroon Highlands through a variety of routes and settled in various parts of Ibibio including IBOM, ORON and the estuary of the Cross River now known as CALABAR as well as other places," (Talbot Amaury P, 122-13), thus confirming what we said in sub-article 2 above.

What can be confirmed here is that the history of EFIK origins predates the rounding of the Cape of Good Hope by the Portuguese, Vasco da Gama in 1492 and the discovery of the West Indies - the New World of America by Magellan and Christopher Columbus respectively around 1400-1500 AD, which many historians and ethnographers of ancient EFIK history have tried to make us believe. The EFIK were an already organized and cultured people when these early explorers arrived in 1472 and every student of history from Primary to Secondary of our time could remember that it was in the early 15th century when Pope Martin V (1415-23) by the Papal Bull of Demarcation divided the world between Spain and Portugal, the then two world powers. This act enabled them to discover other empires and found new settlements in their imperial and mercantile quest to conquer the world of the astronomers. Kalabros/Calabar including Beny/Benin which fell within the axis of the Portuguese was one of the first within what is now Nigeria in Africa to be visited. In fact, it was later on that the British came and conquered Benin dethroned their monarch, Ovonramwen and exiled him to Calabar where he married some Efik women and had additional children partly of EFIK descent. All these are what every true URUAN/EFIK can and should recite from memory.

EFIK ORIGINS AND SETTLEMENT IN EFIK LAND

THE FOUNDING OF EFIK LANDS INCLUDING AKPABUYO/ABANA TERRITORY

What is true and certain is that after URUAN had settled at AKWA AKPA (URUAN) for centuries, they (URUAN) as notable sea farers could then explore both further South of the lower Cross River and the hinterlands. Later, and only later, after acquiring bigger water crafts and canoes capable of sailing across the Atlantic were they able to sail further up the Upper Cross River basin until they found themselves back unto the Cameroon coast viz first through ABANA now ceded to the Cameroun Republic, then up to Rio del Rey - Idombi (Barumbi), Buea, Mamfe even to Douala with which they were already familiar and previously well acquainted, founding along the line the great fertile forest peninsula of ABANA which has recently become the disputed BAKASI peninsula. All this goes to confirm that until the Nigerian civil war, hundreds of URUAN/EFIK, ORON, IBUNO etc. were still inhabiting and trading in these parts. Therefore as they were wont to do, many forward - looking, ambitious and enterprising ones still sailing along the many tributaries of the Cross River discovered, settled and built huts, water fronts and quasi-permanent houses on large expanse of lands along the coasts and on the creeks which they named, some after their families/ kindreds and even clans viz. Ine Archibong, Ikon Eto, Ube Mbat, Edik Ikpa (Ikpa Creek), Ikpa Ene, Ufak Effiong, Atabong, Ikot Ekpo, Urua Anakpa, Ikot Offiong, and previously as shown, Iboku Esit Edik (Creek Town) etc. which on account of its extensive land mass became another important URUAN settlement of note like the earlier peopled AKWA AKPA URUAN territory, but always returning thither to their original base for their celebrations and Rituals. That is why the former and the latter are named by blue blooded and bona fide URUAN/EFIK citizens as AKANI OBIO URUAN or simply, AKANI OBIO and OBIO OKO respectively till today.

Another aspect of this discovery and settlement we could say is the extensive land mass on another tributary of the Cross River. Everybody knows this tributary popularly called Calabar River which crosses CALABAR/ITU road meandering into IDUNDU (OJUK) RIVER to the south which goes across through the road to Calabar – Oban, up to the Cameroun Republic. It is the same tributary that meanders into ATIMBO. That land mass is no other than AKPABUYO territory, ie. "Akpa ebe" or in the olden expression= akpa-abiyo ie. "ebe-be akpa eka do", which means: "The river, ATA-AKPA has also crossed over unto that large land mass hence to get there one must have to cross the river we are seeing before us". This ie. extensive land terminates in IKANG on the Atlantic coast across to OBIO ABANA and into Cameroun Republic as discussed above. What does this entire panorama portend and where does it lead us to? Precisely, it is to establish what has been said all along: that the EFIK, URUAN also ORON are the only bona fide people who have occupied this contiguous coastal land mass and the Cross River basin and the areas along its tributaries ever since they left USAHAEDET in the Cameroun Highlands traveling by sea all the time, through the Cross River tributaries. The other facts of History need not detain us. Most of the concoctions and distortions which have truncated and disorganized URUAN/EFIK and ORON are of recent historical setting and have been masterminded by greed and political wranglings vis -a-vis the so-called development and modernization or properly so called 'CIVILIZATION' on account of the coastal trade involving the coming of the Europeans in the 16th century. This inevitably has led to those assumptions and new claims and definitions of origins and ethnic identities. But it should be noted that ethnic claims can be so manipulated and distorted to the point that the confusion to which it now gives birth can antagonize if not confound even compromise men and women of good will who readily fall into accepting their point of view without asking questions, such that if one were to believe them, then one could believe anything; and this has been happening over and over again for generations on end.

ORIGINS OF ABANA NOW BAKASSI IN CAMEROUN
ANCIENT ABANA (now) BAKASSI IN CAMEROUN REPUBLIC

On the de facto transfer of ownership of ABANA and the entire territory designated by the Federal Republic of Nigeria as BAKASSI Local Government Authority (LGA), is this not a desecration and travesty of the land of our ancestors, and who can deny that URUAN/ EFIK and ORON were inhabiting here for centuries and generations ever before the coming of the celebrated Portuguese explorers to the West Coast of Africa and later, the not-to-be-forgotten partition of Africa in AD1884 and the coming of the Europeans into African soil? The point is that they did that from their individual business interests. It is true that the packaging of Nigeria began immediately after the Lander Brothers Richard and John had discovered the lower Niger up to Ibusa and in 1849 the British Colonial Government began to take interest and swung in to acquire the territory. It is interesting also to note that it was this same Beecroft who discovered and surveyed the River Cross and gave that name when in his attempt to trace its source discovered that the river meandered and crisscrossed with many tributaries up to the rapids emptying itself in the Atlantic Ocean. Later still then residing at Fernando Poo, he was appointed Consul in-charge of the Bight of Benin and Bight of Biafara in the Equatorial Guinea transferred to Calabar as the new HQ, by then Lagos had been ceded and annexed to the British Colonial Government in 1861. The British in particular in getting their own share along the West Coast of Africa, to wit Nigeria, they first named the territory as the Royal West African Company and later the Royal Niger Company which they divided into the two Protectorates of Northern and Southern Nigeria until the earlier mentioned amalgamation by Lord Frederick Lugard who became the Governor General, his wife Lady Floyd had beforehand renamed the entire territory as NIGERIA.

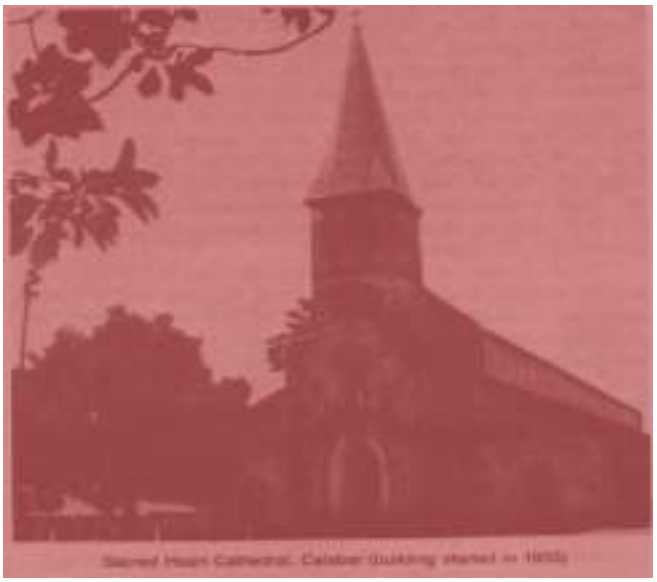
Everybody knows that what then constituted the packaged territory known as Nigeria was inhabited by thousands of communities who were living together in harmony, carrying on with their trading, marrying and inter-marrying but not as an integrated people. The British never brought the people together as a people but only the integration of the land mass to facilitate their agenda. And who has never heard nor even travelled through the Atlantic into Akpayafe "NDIT? -EKA IBA" waters of the Atlantic viz. the estuary and tributaries that divide the waters of Nigeria and the Cameroons – the one from Calabar or Ikang to ABANA which is deep blue; while the other to the Cameroun mainland on the Atlantic coast which is light green/blue. So why do we take delight in this denial and frustration of a people? From the beginning of the 15th Century AD, the shift in URUAN culture History and political hegemony in URUAN previously located in AKWA AKPA territory then moved to the peoples of the new sub-family, the EFIK, now comfortably settled in the territory that was later to become CALABAR. It was the early Portuguese merchant explorers who actually gave the name KALABROS ie. OBIO NNUNUNG, the land of mangroves to this territory as explained above. This was by reason of its strategic coastal position and importance to the Portuguese during their first coastal contact with this our land of promise since CALABAR is situated on the deep estuary of the Cross River and flows for some furlongs straight into the Atlantic Ocean through which these early European explorers came. Thus CALABAR became the Canaan and a Mecca of sorts making the EFIK the pre-dominant cultural unit of URUAN at the time and URUAN language which now transformed into Ik? Efik became the first and only language ever to be put into writing in the whole of Africa. The story of the original URUAN language which since then has now metamorphosed into Ik? Efik is as interesting as it is instructive. For when the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland Mission, (popularly abbreviated and called at the time C. S. M. and now PCN = Presbyterian Church of Nigeria) those great Missionaries, Reverends Hope Waddell and Samuel Edgerly who arrived in Calabar in 1846 set to work on the language, first recording the Vocabulary and then printing them in their lithographic press in 1849, which is still functional at the Hope Waddell Institute till today.



With the arrival of Dr. Hugh Goldie work on the comprehensive Efik Dictionary which was ready by 1874 began. In1931, the colonial Administrators under the Chairmanship of E. M. Falk, the then Senior Resident together with Professor D. Westermann, Revs. J. K. Macgregor, E. E. Pritchard, James Ballantine, Essien Archibong, Rev. Fr. S. Meehan, Chief E. E. Nkanga who authored the Efik Primer: Mutanda oyom Namondo (which I read in Std. I in 1945), Messrs J. W. Westgarth, Chief Ekpenyong Essien, Etubom Maurice Archibong, Dr. E. Henshaw and Dr. Ekpo Nta Amaku of the Edikot ? wed Mbuk fame all put the first finishing touches to the Dictionary. But in 1938 before his retirement, Mr. Gaskin with the able hand of R.F.G Adams, the Senior Education Officer with the support of the Missionaries produced the complete Efik- English, English - Efik Dictionary which was used in schools till the civil war along with the Primers mentioned above. In 1991 Chief Effiong U.Aye, the first African Principal of Hope Waddell Training Institute and later Senior Fellow, University of Calabar, my good friend and colleague who always deferred to me calling me "eyen Obong – ata eti eyen isong Uruan", to whom I also reciprocated: "Eyen isong Efik Eburutu", using the works of Rev. Hugh Goldie, Chief E.E. Nkanga, Dr. E. Amaku, Pastor E. E. Okon of the Apostolic Church, and Lady Mary J. Edet (ADIAHA URUAN) revised and enlarged the Dictionary into two volumes: EFIK - ENGLISH and ENGLISH - EFIK.

EFIK - CALABAR CHURCH THROUGH THE CENTURIES

SPOTLIGHT & BRIEF HISTORY OF PARISHES IN THE ARCHDIOCESE OF CALABAR: 1903 - 2018

SACRED HEART CALABAR DEANERY: SACRED HEART CATHEDRAL, CALABAR SACRED HEART CATHEDRAL, CALABAR

(a) ORIGIN: The story of the origin of the Calabar Mission and the opening up of the Sacred Heart Cathedral has already been captured above when the indefatigable and ebullient Mgr. Alexandre Leon Lejeune(CSSP) was appointed the 4th Prefect Apostolic of Southern Nigeria in AD 1900. On taking governance of the territory following the demise of Rev. Fr. Ren? Pawlas on March 15, 1900, he started penetrating further into the interior of then Africa Occidentale Meridionale a.k.a West Coast of Africa, and founded Calabar as the Central Mission down south as there was no such country known as Nigeria then. He did this having discovered Calabar as the strategic position and vital connection by sea between what came to be later known as Southern Nigeria and the rest of the world. The name "CALABAR" = KALABROS in Portuguese meaning: "LAND OF MANGROVES" had previously been given to this territory under discussion in PART I, by the Early Portuguese Explorers in the 15th Century AD. From the archives in Lyons, we discovered that this territory of primary Evangelization assigned to those early Holy Ghost Missionaries was given as MISSION DU SACRE COR JESU as the new nomenclature just as that given in the case of St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral Efut Abua, St. Michael's Parish Oban, Immaculate Conception Parish Ikot Ansa, etc. All these were names given to the Catholic Mission centres or simply Catholic Mission X, Y. Z. eg. Catholic Mission Eman Uruan, or Catholic Mission Ikot Ene, etc. But the territory was to cover the entire region of what are today known as Bayelsa, Rivers, Ebonyi, Cross River, Akwa Ibom States and parts of Abia State of Nigeria. This became known as the Prefecture of Calabar. Wherever a territory was carved out or assigned to the Missionaries, it was always given the designation of a Saint's name or of the Blessed Trinity as in the case of the former "Holy Trinity Cathedral" of Onitsha Ecclesiastical Province or Holy Cross Cathedral Lagos, etc. as noted above.

(b) 1ST. MASS/SERVICE: The first Holy Mass was celebrated here when Msgr. Lejeune left Onitsha for Calabar in the company of Fr. Patrick McDermott and was joined by Rev. Fr. Joseph Leon (Louis) Lena who had sailed from Gabon as the official head of the Mission. All three arrived Calabar on 3rd February, 1903. They landed at 19 Bocco Street, Marina Calabar where they said the first Holy Mass presided over by Fr. Lena amidst over 150 joyful and enthusiastic Catholic Faithful comprising of Lebanese, Portuguese, French and English nationals including the local people and other Europeans within the population of over 20,000 inhabitants in Calabar city at that time. This marked the official opening of the Calabar Central Mission now known as Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The location which now houses the present Sacred Heart Cathedral was acquired through the assistance of Edidem Nyong Adam Ephraim of Eyamba House, the king of Atakpa a.k.a Iboku Utan OR simply CALABAR because that was the nomenclature by which the town was known in ancient URUA-EFIK then. The first concrete Church building which also served as School was built by Fr. Lena in 1904 under Bishop Shanahan which still stands strong till this day as the Sacred Heart Primary School on Lagos Street.

The beautiful edifice called Sacred Heart Cathedral on 69 Egerton Street today, a street named after Sir Walter Egerton; the last Consul General of what later became known as Nigeria was started in 1926 by the indefatigable Fr. Leon Lena before his departure for good in 1928 with the moulding of blocks and assembling of other building materials as was customary in those olden days like wire gauze, timber, Mkpenek window and door frames, etc. But it was in 1933 precisely that the actual Cathedral Church building was kick-started by Rev. Fr. Charles Meehan CSSp, the superman popularly tagged by Calabar people and URUAN-EFIK as "FR. ? s? ? kp?-Ub?k" (1906 - 1977) and supervised by Rev. Bro. John Bermingham SPS (1909 - 1965). In 1934, when Monsignor James Moynagh then Parish Priest of St. Anne's Ifuho was appointed Prefect Apostolic of Calabar and began residing at Calabar, he spearheaded the completion of the Cathedral building. As noted by Kevin Longworth SPS, "The state of the half-completed Cathedral then was so painful to the Efik people that they began to wonder what Bishop Joseph Shanahan CSSp meant when he said in 1930 that "if Calabar had been neglected in the past, things were about to change with the coming of the Maynooth Volunteers" into the scene. But that of course indicated the arrival of Mgr. James Moynagh who was one of them. Bishop Moynagh's Reminiscences captures this thought very well: "The challenge was on me to change things. This I set out to do." The parishioners were now willing to contribute in time and resources towards the completion of the Cathedral Church building.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor James Moynagh himself by now the Prefect Apostolic blessed the foundation. The parishioners then were ready and willing to pitch in their money and labour. The Convent girls, Sacred Heart boys, women and men were all ready and willing to carry head-loads of sand from the beach while cement was purchased in barrels from Europe. The pillars in the half completed building originally started by Fr. Leon Lena were out of alignment and these had to be altered. Bro. John Birmingham was put in charge of the operations. He it was who had supervised the building of the St. Anne's Cathedral Ifuho beforehand.

Fr. Kevin Longworth further asserted that despite the many difficulties encountered, the work progressed and appeals by Moynagh for funds brought help from many sources. Towards the end of World War II, asbestos roofing sheets became available in Nigeria. The United Africa Company UAC was the stockiest and gave them on credit to churches. For some reason, the Cathedral Church needed a special type of asbestos which was unavailable and an urgent message was sent to Ireland. The required sheeting was bought in Ashy County, Kildare – Ireland, but the crating for shipping had to be made in Kiltegan. Fr. Longworth recalled with enthusiasm when he then in Kiltegan - Ireland as a student: "I had no idea that I would one day sit on the same asbestos roof prepared when I was on the team that did the crating, working day and night". But somehow the crates arrived Calabar with minimum breakages unlike those of the UAC in their shipments to Nigeria. Thereafter, Moynagh engaged a layman from Dublin, Mr. Edward Ryan and under him the final stages were reached. Rev. Fr. Augustine Gogarty was the supervisor of the ten carpenters and bricklayers who put final touches to the beautiful Church that was ready for dedication on June 6, 1948. It was a magnificent feat, considering that it was completed without all the modern construction aids available now. Much was achieved by managerial skills, goodwill, stamina and 'the can do spirit' and enthusiasm'.

The mosaic was another headache because the stained glass window depicting the Martyrs of Uganda was damaged in the area of the flames at the bottom left hand corner, but Mother Rosario of the Holy Child Convent came to the rescue having procured pieces of the negative photographic materials from a professional photographer, Mr. Sigismund and some from Van Heutens of the Cocoa Company Nigeria, Lagos.

With the scaffolding was prepared for her, she deftly painted those realistic pictures of the Mosaic that have remained in good condition till today. An Italian Catholic mechanic helped in importing the heavy marble slab for the high Alta while Mr. Emmanuel Williams, the Mission mechanic - Jack of all trades of sorts, supervised the team of men who put it in place amidst shouts of joy from the watching Catholic Faithful and admirers. It was another feat accomplished. Not to be forgotten in the Cathedral story must be included Mr. Peter Okeke the Mission carpenter who climbed the steel roofing beam to hang the sanctuary lamp hung over the altar as also Rev. Fr. Patrick Quigley and Fr. Hyacinth who erected the tower.

The Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar is of exquisite Gothic architectural design. The giant rounded pillars that uphold the imported Gothic rafters were each donated by devout Catholic individuals and families with their names engraved on each. The precious marble Station of the Cross was imported by Bishop James Moynagh. The front impressive arches of the high altar and the side altars of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Immaculate Heart of Mary were added by Rev. Fr. Matthew McGrath SPS - then Parish Priest of the Cathedral. The short tower controversy was solved by the architectural genius of Rev. Fr. Patrick Quigley SPS who added silver and canonical stage to it.

As observed already, the Solemn Blessing and dedication of the Cathedral with the Consecration of the marble Altar on 6 June, 1948 was a very grand function. All the Bishops and other religious Superiors of West Africa were invited. Rev Mother Rosario (SHCJ) and guests from Nigeria, England, Ireland and other West African countries attended. Bishop Rogan of Buea, Cameroun and Archbishop David Matthew the Apostolic Delegate to British East and West Africa were also in attendance while Archbishop Charles Heerey, CSSp gave the homily. During the Mass, Rev. Fr. Dominic Ekandem as first priest of the Vicariate of Calabar was specially introduced to the Bishops, the Religious, guests and Lay Faithful. Sacred Heart Cathedral named after the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus is one of the first Cathedrals in Nigeria. However, the day's festivities were concluded with the staging of the Operata HMS Pinafore by St. Patrick's College Boys at the Calabar Library under the direction of Fr. Noel Sandvoss.The Cathedral houses the first Pilgrim Statue of Our Lady of Fatima in Nigeria installed since 1976 by His Grace Archbishop Brian D. Usanga then Bishop of Calabar Diocese. In 1970, after his enthronement as the first indigenous bishop of Calabar, he erected the coloured windows. The very precious marble statue of the Sacred Heart in front of the tower is a generous donation by Mrs. Gordon the Irish sponsor and spiritual mother of Fr. Dominic Ekandem when he was a Seminarian on the occasion of his Episcopal Ordination as the first Indigenous Bishop of Nigeria and Anglophone West Africa in 1954. The second marble altar, the Baptistery, the outside Shrine of the Sacred Heart of Jesus are generous donations from the families of late Chief Joseph and Cecilia Nya (KSS) and the late Etubom Maurice Achibong (KSG). One of the marble lecterns in the Cathedral was donated by Chief Patrick Solomon. The beautiful stained glass above the high altar depicts the scenes of Nativity, the Magi, the Martyrs of Uganda, St Joseph, Holy family and St Patrick. They are well arranged to help the Faithful in Meditation on important religious events. The main floors at the entrance of the Cathedral were donated by generous benefactors: Architect Maurice Archibong and late Chief Lawrence Ene (BONG). The large central door into the Cathedral was donated by Dr. and Mrs. Thomas John and family.

IMPORTANT EVENTS AT THE CATHEDRAL

Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar has a singular honour of marking important ecclesiastical events in Nigeria and Anglophone West Africa. His Eminence Dominic Cardinal Ekandem was consecrated Bishop by Most Rev Dr. James Moynagh assisted by Bishop Peter Rogan MHM of Buea Cameroons and Bishop Paul Biechy of Congo Brazzaville. All the Nigerian Bishops from West Africa, Prelates from Ireland, England and Wales attended this historic occasion. On August 30, 1970, Bishop Brian Davis Usanga was enthroned the first Indigenous Bishop of the Calabar Mission in the Sacred Heart Cathedral by Archbishop Francesco De Nittis, Titular Archbishop of Cures. Rev. Isidore P. Umana was the first to receive the Sacrament of Holy Orders – the Deaconate in December 1952 at the Cathedral. Similarly, Monsignor Godwin P. Akpan (1960) and Fr. Michael U. Offiong (1972) were the first Calabar Diocesan priests to be ordained in the Cathedral. On August 27, 1994, His Grace Archbishop Brian Davis Usanga was installed the first Indigenous Metropolitan Archbishop of Calabar Ecclesiastical Province. On the same day, the Ecclesiastical Province of Calabar was erected by Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano then Apostolic Pro-Nuncio. He also ordained three priests: Rev Frs. Christopher Naseri, Charles Etim and Aloysius Eneyo in 1997 during his very memorable and fruitful pastoral visit to the Archdiocese. It could also be recalled that His Eminence Cardinal Loudersamy was received here with very impressive ceremonies when he was Secretary General of the Sacred Congregation of the Propagation of Faith – the "Propaganda Fide".

His Excellency Archbishop Jerome Prigione then Apostolic Pro-Nuncio to Nigeria visited the Cathedral on Pastoral Visitation in 1974 and in the name of the Holy Father knighted many Papal knights and gave Papal medals to those honoured by His Holiness. Archbishop Paul Tabet had a very warm reception here when also on his way to celebrate the fiftieth (50th) Anniversary of the establishment of St Luke's hospital, Anua. In the Cathedral was celebrated the first ever Religious Profession of the Congregation of the Handmaid of the Holy Child Jesus founded by Mother Charles M. Walker RSC under Bishop Shanahan CSSP, and canonically founded in 1947 as the first Women Religious Congregation in Nigeria and Africa by Bishop James Moynagh first Bishop of Calabar.

His Eminence, Dominic Cardinal Ekandem also ordained seven priests including Fr. Israel J. Ekpo in Sacred Heart Cathedral in 1977. Funeral Masses of all the foundation Handmaids Sisters of Holy Child Jesus - HHCJ took place here at the Cathedral viz. late Mother Ignatia Bassey, Mother St John, Mother Mary Aloysia and lastly the foundation Superior General, Mother Mary Gertrude Nwatuorucha. From this Cathedral was buried Most Rev. Dr. Brian Usanga first Metropolitan Archbishop of Calabar in 2005.

Sacred Heart Cathedral had in the recent times hosted the installation of Most Rev. Dr. Joseph Edra Ukpo (February 14, 2004) and Most Rev. Dr. Joseph Effiong Ekuwem (May 31, 2014) as second and third Archbishops of the Archdiocese of Calabar and Metropolitans of the Ecclesiastical Province of Calabar respectively. The Catholic Laity of Nigeria (CLCN) and the Bishops Conference of Nigeria (CBCN) had their second plenary sessions here in the Sacred Heart Cathedral in December 1989 and 2007 respectively.

The Cathedral is flanked by the shrine of Our Lady of Fatima and Immaculate Heart of Mary donated by His Eminence Edidem (Prof) Elijah Henshaw, the Obong of Calabar in honour of his Mother Chief Mrs. Martha Antia Henshaw which was roofed by Arch. (Dr.) Maurice E. Archibong and the Chapel of Perpetual Eucharistic Adoration, renovated from the former Cathedral Bookshop built by Fr. L. Lena CSSp. Till the end of time, day and night, prayers are being offered here, Holy Masses and Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament continue to take place in and around the Sacred Heart Cathedral to the greater Glory of God Almighty.

GREAT ST. CHARLES LWANGA PARISH, ESSIEN TOWN, CALABAR

OLD CHURCH

NEW CHURCH

(a)ORIGINS: From available records, Essien Town a.k.a "Enen Essien" has always been an Efik town from time immemorial, the founding father being His Highness, Etinnyin Essien Etim Offiong from the Royal Archibong House. Hence the Church there now named St. Charles Lwanga Essien Town, has always been part of the Sacred Heart Cathedral. Sequel to this, the people of Essien Town in spite of the fact that the first Open Air Mass was celebrated there at Chief Ekpenyong Otu Abasi's compound by the legendary Holy Ghost Fathers, viz. Fr. Franz Howell and Josef Kraft as early as 1915, chose to be attending almost all their Church Services and Devotions at the Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar until lately in the 1950's. As can be gathered from very reliable sources, most of the Holy Ghost Fathers used to celebrate Mass here for the people from time to time as they always did in their bush treks in the so-called Out- Stations. Some of these early CSSp priests apart from the Founder, the indefatigable Missionary Rev. Fr. Leon Lena (CSSp) included priests like Frs. Joseph Kraft and Franz Howell (1915), Fr. Louis Ward and James Mellette (1918), Fr. Edward Knaebel (1921) and Fr. Thomas Ronayne (1922). People should come to terms with the situation these early Missionaries found themselves as noted elsewhere and try to understand and also appreciate the fact that these Missionaries had to trek on foot through bush paths across forests, rivers and streams to bring the Gospel to the people. It could take even two days to come over from Sacred Heart Cathedral to Enen Essien. Where were the roads or means of transportation in those days? Were there cars or bicycles? And even if they were, were there roads? Just imagine as observed elsewhere that Calabar Metropolis up to 1950-1960 terminated at the General Post Office along what used to be called "Odukpani Road" in Qua language and passing through Qua forest territory because there was no such Street or Road called Calabar Road or Muritala Muhammed Road then. These early fathers usually travelled "by sea" through the Calabar River to the defunct Calcemco Cement Factory in order to arrive at "Enen Essien"! It was not easy at all, when also considering the fact that Sacred Heart Cathedral could have only one resident priest at a time and he alone had to trek and celebrate Masses also at St. Mary's Efut-Abua, Ikot Ansa, Ikot Ene, Creek Town, Adiabo, Ikon Eto, etc. since all these "Mission Stations" (in the language of the Church a.k.a "Canon Law") were canonically founded/established Churches. They were founded right within the first and two decades of their arrival in 1903 as seen already. As time went on the people began to appreciate the value of the Holy Mass whenever the Holy Ghost Fathers could conveniently visit the Station. It was possible for them to see the difference between Sunday Holy Mass and "MERE SUNDAY SERVICE" as they saw it; and quite a sizeable number preferred to trek to the Sacred Heart Cathedral to attend Mass on Sundays, even on week days. This was the situation until the coming of the St. Patrick's Missionaries in the 1930's. No sooner had the SPS Missionaries moved the St. Joseph's College renaming it "ST. PATRICK'S COLLEGE" to Ikot Ansa, than the Fathers teaching at the College began to celebrate Mass both for the Students and the people on Sundays at Immaculate Conception Church. This also led to many Catholics in Essien Town preferring to attend Mass there as also at Sacred Heart Cathedral instead of attending "mere Sunday Services" at their Station, Enen Essien. The attendant result was the near moribund of Essien Town Church in the intervening years.

But later on in the 1950's and with the arrival of the St. Patrick's Fathers as mentioned above, coupled with the relocation to Ikot Ansa of St. Joseph of Cluny College a.k.a S.P.C. formerly "Sacred Heart College" founded by Bishop Shanahan, but built by Fr. Louis Lena in 1911-12, the St. Patrick's Fathers also became regular visitors of Essien Town Mission Station then under Immaculate Conception Church, Ikot Ansa. That is why to still minister to the people, Rev. Father Kevin Longworth (Fr. D. Dolan's classmate), Fr. Oliver O'Sulivan (a.k.a Fr. O^{2}), Fr. Thomas Lucey, Fr. Maurice Hays, Fr. Patrick Quickley, Fr. Noel Hays and Fr. Denis O' Hara all SPS Fathers, came to be Administrators of both Ikot Ansa and Essien Town, in the first place. But the credit towards the revival and establishment of Essien Town in 1958 as a permanent Out- Station then relocated to Chief Frank Offiong's verandah must go to Ete Leo Etim Udoh of Ikot Etim in Nsit Ubium LGA of Akwa Ibom State. He was one of the most indefatigable Legionaries of Sacred Heart Cathedral till his last days on earth in 2008. Ete Leo Etim Udoh, the biological father of Rev. Fr. John Leo Udoh, had been resident in Calabar since his youth and with his co - Legionaries at Sacred Heart, brought Essien Town back to life as it were, making it the new autonomous Church under Sacred Heart Cathedral. In 1958 precisely, Chief Frank Offiong readily acquiesced and joined hands with Ete Leo to construct a modest "Iboto hut" to serve as a small Church ostensibly to ease the journey of the elderly Catholic men and women who could no longer trek to attend Church Services either at Ikot Ansa or at the Sacred Heart Cathedral. One of the first prominent members who worked with the Legionaries to perform this feat was Ete Lawrence Umoessen, a bicycle repairer a.k.a "Engineer", from the great Umoessen Royal Family of Essene Town in Ikot Abasi LGA a.k.a "Nnung Asang". He was a tenant of Chief Frank. He helped in securing the building materials: sticks, bamboos and the "Iboto" mats for the constructing of the Church for Church services there. He became a founding Father of sorts and a prominent member of the Enen Essien Church. Then later in the 1960's, Kgt. Chief Frank U. A. Offiong (KSG), Chief Etta E. E. Offiong and Madam Aka E. Offiong signed for and obtained a piece of land nearby to his house on behalf of Essien Town people for the construction of a permanent Church there. Providentially, Chief Frank is the grandson of the founding Father of Essien Town a.k.a "ENEN ESSIEN" mentioned above as also the father of late Fr. Michael A. U. Offiong, Rev. Srs. Immaculata and Elizabeth Offiong both (HHCJ). The actual construction of the new permanent Church was kick-started by the indefatigable Fr. Denis O'Hara (SPS) who had been assigned by Bishop Moynagh as Father In-Charge of both Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa and Essien Town.

In 1962 while a Seminarian on Apostolic Work thereto, the Author also helped in the refurbishing of the modest "mud-Iboto" Church since the population of worshippers had increased and considerably more so, as a result of the Retreats and Torch Light Rosary Processions organized by the Author to attract more new members. Fr. Patrick Quickly, the Principal of St. Patrick's College then and Fr. Denis O' Hara preached the Retreats and baptized quite a large number of Candidates. Many also received their First Holy Communion during the Rally. These were the humble beginnings of the rebuilding of Enen Essien Catholic which later was christened "St. Charles Lwanga, Parish Essien Town" in 1976 by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga with my humbleself as the first Parish Priest. This is the Church that we have come to admire today as "GREAT CHARLES LWANGA".

(b) CHURCH BUIILDING: As noted above, the first Church buildings in 1958 and 1962 were temporary ones for the local population and elderly people. But in the later 1960s Rev. Fr. Denis O'Hara of SPC started building a modest Church using "fancy blocks" to serve as windows since the Church was still at its infancy and principally meant for the local elderly people and some strangers living nearby. When the civil war broke out, there was an influx of refugees into the town coupled with the creation of the South Eastern State among others by the Gowon Military Government in 1967. But most eminently the construction of the MCC Road and State Housing Estate had made many civil servants and indigenes from the State who were originally working in Enugu to rush into the town as tenants before the Federal and State Governments could complete those low-cost houses for them in what came to be known as Federal/State Housing Estates in Calabar. In fact, this development led to the quartering of many prominent persons around the town including Emmanuel Engr. Peter Umana, the younger brother of Fr. Isidore P. Umana who later became the State Commissioner for Industries and also Hon Fidelis Nnang who also became the Deputy Governor to Governor Clement Ebri (1993-1995). Thus these developments greatly catapulted and also increased the Church population. It was the situation such as this that prompted and encouraged Fr. Denis O'Hara (SPS) to start the building of the first concrete Church in the first place. That Church building continued to serve the needs of the Catholic members until well into the 1990s.

Precisely in March 1976, Bishop Usanga officially detached the Church from Sacred Heart Cathedral and raised it to the status of a Parish with the title ST. CHARLES LWANGA PARISH, ESSIEN TOWN with the Author as Parish Priest thereof but still then residing at Sacred Heart Cathedral. In the prevening years the population of the Church had grown so considerably and there was the compelling need to expand the Church to contain the teeming population. In 2003 when Fr. James Golden Ekpe came in, he knocked down both sides of the walls of the Church for the expansion. In 2012 under Fr. Venatius Orok as Parish Priest, the whole Church was completely pulled down giving way to the gigantic magnificent Church that has prompted its new name tag of "Great Charles Lwanga".

HOLY TRINITY PARISH, NAVY BARRACKS – AKIM, CALABAR

(a) ORIGINS: Holy Trinity Chaplaincy, Navy Barracks Akim, Calabar was established at the instance of Archbishop Brian D. Usanga to decongest the C.K.C Army Church and specifically for Catholics among the Navy as he had come to notice that the CKC Chaplaincy, Army Barracks was actually meant for the Military and not necessarily for the entire Armed Forces of Nigeria stationed in Calabar Metropolis. This is because each of the Army Units is distinct by reason of orientation, organization and administration. Before this, quite a number of the Navy Catholics used to attend Mass either at CKC or Sacred Heart Cathedral or St. Bernard's Parish, Marian Hill. The arrangement for the establishment of a separate place of worship for the Navy Catholics was championed in 1988 by the Commander, Cmdr. Raymond Acholonu, then Second in Command to the Military Administrator and Governor of Old Cross River State Cpt. C. Elegbede. When the Archbishop acceded to the request of the Navy for the establishment of a Chaplaincy for them, they were then able to allocate a piece of land within their Barracks along IBB Avenue, Airport Road Calabar for the place of worship. At the beginning, the Serving Priests administering to the Parish, then only a Chaplaincy, were appointed by the Archbishop. The Author also ministered here to the Catholic Faithful and the Navy before the Navy Authorities began to appoint their own Navy Officers as Chaplains beginning with then Navy Recruit, Rev. Fr. Damian Udonsek. Sometime later on, Rev. Fr. Joseph Edem an indigene of the Archdiocese, who was recruited into the Navy, was also appointed here. Thereafter the Navy continued to appoint their Chaplains but Fr. Udonsek whose appointment in the Navy was never ratified by the Navy Command, continued to serve in the Church until he succeeded in initiating and building a gigantic and magnificent Church for the Navy Chaplaincy. With the appointment of Bishop Joseph Edra Ukpo as the new Archbishop of Calabar, the Chaplaincy in 2008 was upgraded to the status of a Parish.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: When the Navy Chaplaincy started to function as an autonomous Station in the Archdiocese of Calabar, provision was made by the Navy Authorities to apportion a piece of land near to their Navy Barracks. As observed above, with the authority and direction of the Military Commander and Governor of the State, it was easy to obtain a piece of land for the building of the Church. The first Church building was a large, sort of "Prefab", big enough to contain the large congregation which at the time numbered almost one thousand members. But when Fr. Damian Udonsek was recruited and appointed the new Chaplain, he nursed the idea of pulling down the old structure to build a befitting church. Since he was very capable and equal to the task, he was assigned the duty of starting the construction of the new Church in 1992. He was able to organize and mobilize the Catholic Faithful of the Archdiocese and others far and near including prominent members of the civil society and Protestants who used to flock into the Chaplaincy to attend the Parish Harvests, Bazaars but most especially his "Wednesday Mass and Anointing Service". With such Church programmes, he was able to galvanize the Congregation who made such generous Tray Collections that within a few years he was able to raise sufficient funds to build the magnificent Church for the Navy Parish we are seeing today.

HOLY FAMILY PARISH, BIG QUA TOWN – CALABAR

(a) ORIGINS: Holy Family Parish as with every other Catholic Church within the Calabar Metropolis was formerly a Mission Station of the Sacred Heart Cathedral right within the first decade of the foundation of the Sacred Heart Mission. It was such a great Qua Station that it produced the legendary gem Rev. Mother Mary Ignatia, pioneer Religious of the Handmaids of the Holy Child Jesus (HHCJ) under the indefatigable Mother Mary Charles Walker (RCC,1881-1966). Some officials of Sacred Heart Cathedral eg. Kgt. Chief Sylvester Henshaw (KSM), the former Commissioner for Finance in the defunct South Eastern State, were from Big Qua Town. It was the last station to be excised from Sacred Heart Cathedral and created an autonomous Parish sui juris by Archbishop B. D. Usanga in 1988 with Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. P. Ekarika as the first Fr. In-Charge and Chief E. E. Eno as first President of the Church. In 1989 arrangements were in top gear and fund raising functions organized for the construction of a new permanent Church at a new site at the instance of the Author. But before moving to the new Parish Church, Masses and other Church Services were always held at the Government Health Centre, Big Qua Town along Old Ikang Road. The first priest to celebrate Masses and conduct other Church functions in the new Church which was still under construction but up-to-date enough for Masses etc. was Rev. Fr. now Rt. Rev. Msgr. Emmanuel Umoetok in 1992.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As observed above, the Church building started when some of the members were still attending the Sacred Heart Cathedral while the majority, mostly the elderly attended the Big Qua Government Health Centre OPD Hall. The piece of land for the Church building was donated gratis and in perpetuity by the Ndidem of the Quas in-Council as a major project in recognition of the contributions of the Catholic Mission towards the development and progress of Qua land with Big Qua as its Capital city. The construction of the Church which also involved the building of an underground basement was estimated at Ten Million Naira (N10,000,000) as at then. Nowadays it would cost more than ten times that. The brain behind both in animating the members as also in the sourcing for funds was the indefatigable Church President, Ntoe (Chief) E. E. Eno. The building plan of the Church was carefully mapped out in stages such that by the time the walls were completed the rear of the Church and the "Choir" a.k.a gallery were still in the waiting. In 1997, the Church building was completed and commissioned by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga amidst pomp and pageantry, trust the Quas! All the top members in the echelon of the Qua Constituted Assembly were present including the Ndidem of the Quas, HRM Ndidem (DR.) Thomas Ika Ika Oqua III, himself a staunch Presbyterian to the core. It was really both the Quas gentry as also the Calabar Archdiocesan affair at which the Clergy, the Religious and Laity Council members including parishioners from far and near were all in attendance.

HOLY GHOST CHAPLAINCY, NAVY BARRACKS – ATIMBO

(a) ORIGINS: Holy Ghost Chaplaincy, Atimbo Navy Barracks - Calabar was established at the instance of Archbishop Brian D. Usanga alongside the Holy Trinity Baracks treated above, but at first the Navy Barracks only enjoyed the services of the priests of the Archdiocese of Calabar before the official appointment of Navy Catholic Chaplains by the Navy Command Headquarters Abuja. This was much later on after the new Navy Chaplain Headquarters had noticed that the new Atimbo Navy Barracks had no Catholic Navy Chaplains to attend to the Catholic Community there. To this end, the Archbishop of Calabar was contacted and he granted permission to open up a separate Chaplaincy for the Navy and lay Catholics around. This Chaplaincy was established in June 1997 and was instituted solely for the Navy. Thereafter, the Navy took the responsibility of providing all the logistics including the place of worship. All the other aspects concerning the Holy Trinity Barracks apply to the Atimbo Baracks because initially, the Navy Chaplain of that Chaplaincy also served as the Atimbo Chaplain having been provided accommodation there at the Chaplaincy Atimbo Barracks to serve both Holy Trinity and Holy Ghost Navy Barracks as well. It remained so until very recently when the Rev. Father's Rectory was built grace ? la the then Commanding Officer of NNS Anansa now NNS Victory, Cdre. Noma Ebueku and the contributions of the good people and Navy men of the Holy Ghost Chaplaincy. It was built within the Navy Barracks with Rev. Fr. Damian Udonsek as the first Chaplain thereof.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As observed above the Atimbo Barracks Church building started while some of the members were still attending the Holy Trinity Navy Barrack's "Prefab". In 1997 when the Holy Ghost Chaplaincy came into being, the Navy Command constructed a very modest and beautiful Chapel at the Atimbo Barracks which has continued to stand strong till today. When Fr. Udonsek came in, he organized the Catholic Community and constituted the Chaplaincy Council with the Exco. FSG, Cdr. Ekutegbe serving as the pioneer President and Chairman of the Church Council. In 1999, Mr. Agim Takon was appointed the new President. In 2002 Rev. Fr. Chris Agboola was posted to the Chaplaincy to replace Fr. Damian Udonsek. In 2005 Fr. Chris Agboola was redeployed to the Navy Chaplaincy Lagos, while Fr. Robert Oparaji was posted to Calabar. On his arrival, the Church was relocated to the present site and with the proceeds of the successful Chaplaincy Harvest and Bazaar organized in December that year, funds were raised to kick start the construction of the beautiful Chapel we are now admiring.

It all happened that on Pentecost Sunday 2006 which incidentally is the Chaplaincy Feast day, Rear Admiral Sunday Baje, the FOC of Eastern Naval Command was invited to lay the Foundation for the construction of the new Church. With this epoch making and landmark event and through the Harvests and Bazaars organized in subsequent years, the construction work was brought to its logical conclusion and the Church building was completed in 2008. On the Church's Feast day on Pentecost Sunday 2009, the indefatigable Fr. (Cdr) Robert Oparaji commissioned the Church with fanfare at the Solemn High Mass celebrated in the Church for the first time to complete the relocation to the new Church. In 2013 the Church floor was tiled and the ceiling put in place under Fr. Ethel Owelu who had been posted to replace Fr. Godwin Idoko who was sent for Further Studies and Training. In 2014 Fr. Cyril Ogedengbe who took over from Fr. Ethel donated an Altar to the Church to support the ongoing developments in the Chaplaincy. Between 2012 and 2015 HGCC Atimbo was jointly administered by the above mentioned Chaplains and this in a way had affected the ever-forward looking Church, but on August 29, 2015 Fr. Raphael Adelana was posted to take sole responsibility of the Chaplaincy. Lately Rev. Fr. Peter Ekpenyong of the Catholic Archdiocese of Calabar has been posted to the Chaplaincy.

(c) SERVING PRIESTS IN THE HOLY GHOST NAVY BARRACKS – ATIMBO.

Until recently as noted already, the Chaplains ministering to the Catholic Faithful and the Navy of the Chaplaincy of Holy Trinity Navy Barracks were also serving the spiritual needs of members of the Holy Ghost Atimbo Chaplaincy Atimbo Chaplaincy with the establishment of the Holy Ghost Atimbo Chaplaincy and others residing thereat. The serving priests of the Chaplaincy had continued to be the same until Navy made a new arrangement, namely appointing new Chaplains to serve only the Atimbo Chaplaincy Barracks sui juris. Hence the following local priests and Navy Chaplains have served here either as Visitors, Assistant or Parish Priests (Chaplains) to-date:

FR. DAMIAN UDONSEK 1992-1994	FR. CYRIL UDO UDO 1994- 1996	FR. CHRISTOPHER AGBOOLA1996-1998	FR. ROBERT OPARAJI 1998-2000	FR. LT.JOSEPH EDEM 2000-2004

ST. MARY'S EFUT- ABUA DEANERY
ST. MARY'S PRO-CATHEDRAL EFUT ABUA (1906-2018)

OLD CHURCH NEW CHURCH

(a) ORIGINS: Efut land received the Gospel Message of Christ precisely in 1906 just immediately the first pioneers, viz. Frs. Louis Lena (CSSp) and Mc Dermott (CSSp) planted the Catholic Church in Efik soil at Calabar. Efut land at the time was a thick forest area, very prone to leopard attacks. The Catholic Church established here was one of the out-stations of Sacred Heart Cathedral after Immaculate Conception, Ikot Ansa which was first visited in 1904 and after that St. Joseph's Ikot Ene (1912) according to available records. From then on the Church was regularly visited and Masses said for the people on Sundays by the Sacred Cathedral Holy Ghost Fathers. In 1954, a young priest, Fr. Edmund Fitzgibbons who was previously posted to the Anua Mission in the Mainland and recently being re-assigned to the Sacred Heart Cathedral was appointed to regularly administer the Efut-Abua Church, a.k.a Efut Ikot Ekpe as it was then known. Thereafter it was constituted an autonomous community and detached from the Sacred Heart Mission and then raised to the status of a Parish sui juris in 1962.

© CHURCH BUILDING: Fr. Louis Lena having met with the Efut Ikot Ekpe Chiefs was willingly and readily offered a piece of land and as usual, Fr. Lena constructed a large mud-brick building to serve both as Church and school. In 1908 as both the school and Church attendance increased, Fr. Lena laid the foundation of the first ever permanent building which was to serve both the Church and School. When Fr. Josef Kraft (CSSp) the newly arrived priest from France was first assigned to the Sacred Heart Mission Calabar and just before he was posted to the Anua Mission the following year, it was to him Fr. Lena as the Superior entrusted the completion of the Church building. Fr. Franz Howell (CSSp) also on arrival added a second school block in 1912 as the population of the school increased. It will be recalled that for years St. Mary's School Efut Abua remained the most populated school in Calabar Metropolis coming second after the Holy Child Convent Calabar with a school population of 2000+. On April 30, 1967 before the beginning of the hostilities of the Nigeria-Biafra fratricidal war, Bishop James Moynagh laid the foundation for the permanent Church building which was taken up shortly after the war by Fr. Vincent Hannigan, SPS. It was to take the same shape as the College Chapel Adiaha Obong Commercial Secondary School– Eniong Offot, Uyo and that of St. Patrick's College – Ikot Ansa with a conical roof. But it was subsequently modified by Fr. V. Hannigan for obvious reasons, ostensibly due to its size as this was meant to be a Parish Church accommodating thousands of worshippers. During the war, the entire Western Calabar Catholic Mission territory comprising what now constitutes St. Mary's Adiabo, Stella Maris Creek Town, St. James Okpok-Ikpa including also Akamkpa and Biase territories viz. St. John the Baptist Parish, Akamkpa, St. Paul's Uyanga, St. Anthony's Parish Iwuru, etc. became administered from St. Mary's Efut-Abua Mission. After the war the building work continued through the 1970s and was completed and commissioned in grand style and fanfare by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga in 1980. In 1983

the Church was expanded by Mgr. Joseph P. Ekarika and the leaking roof which actually prompted the expansion was later completed by Rev. Fr. now Archbishop Joseph Ekuwem who then was returning to the Archdiocese from Further Studies abroad. In the Marian Year of 1987 also the year of the creation of Akwa Abasi Ibom State by the Military Government of Ibrahim I. Babangida, the main gate, sign post and the Marian shrine were constructed and dedicated by Archbishop Usanga to further embellish the Church. In 1992 Rev. Fr. Bernard Okokon completed the beautiful perimeter fence begun by Fr. Joseph Ekuwem, recently raised to the dignity of the Episcopate as the Lord Bishop of the newly created Uyo Diocese by Pope St. John Paul II. In view of this Archbishop Brian Usanga also raised the Parish to the status of a Pro-Cathedral now tagged St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral, Efut – Abua. In 2010 with the grumblings about the unsatisfactory nature of the "Fr. Hannigan/Msgr. Ekarika Church" growing louder and louder as it were, there was need to pull down the Church and replace it with a new Church more befitting of its status as a Pro-Cathedral. This was fine, but as for an Elder like the Author, it is worthy of note that the Church building should have been spared for posterity and converted to something else useful or simply left as a museum. It should be noticed that civilized peoples always leave Monuments intact as Legacies and Museums for the generations unborn. The same old story is replicated in St. Charles, Lwanga Essien Town (1965), Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa (1928), St. Augustine's Ikot Omin (1967) and to cap it all and to the Elders discomfiture of course – and worst still St. Joseph's Anua, built by the great Patriarch of the Calabar Mission of yore, Dominic Cardinal Ekandem's "Cathedral constructed in (1957). St. Patrick's Fathers (SPS) of the Calabar Mission for example had rationalized not to pull down the Fr. O.O. Sullivan's Church building but decided to expand it how-be-it, not very satisfactory, but just to keep the building intact for posterity and for the records. There is sufficient land in St. Patrick's grounds large enough to build even a Basilica, mind you! St. Mary's grounds are large enough, even larger than the Sacred Heart Grounds, because as of now the site earmarked for CWO building is still un-built. This should help people to understand the extent of the St. Mary's Mission land generously donated by the good Efut peoples over a hundred years ago. But notwithstanding, it was Rev. Fr. Evaristus Bassey who championed this cause and laid the foundation of the magnificent Church that stands strong to adorn the entire St. Mary's landscape today. With the appointments of Frs. Charles Etim and Robert U. Ekpe in 2010 and 2014 to the Parish, a new momentum was added to the work of the new Church building which was dedicated and commissioned amidst fanfare, pomp and pageantry in 2017. To cap it all Fr. Joseph Agbor has added another dimension to the adornment of St. Mary's grounds with two States of the art Galleries and structures viz. the gigantic Amphitheatre structure with corrugated roof for large Congressional Celebration and a Two-in-One Chapel of Our Blessed Lady and St. Joseph her most chaste Spouse.

The St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral to-date has as it were, given birth to many children, grandchildren and great grandchildren including children like St. Bernard's Parish, Marian Hill (1967), Christ the King Chaplaincy Akim Barracks (1968), Regina Caeli Anantigha (1979), St. Joseph's Chaplaincy CRUTECH (1980), St Vincent de Paul (1984); grandchildren viz. Our Lady Queen of Angels, Air Port, a.k.a Edim Otop (1992); St. Peter's Parish, Ediba (1992); great grandchildren viz. Holy Trinity Akim Navy Headquarters Parish, Calabar (1994) and Church of Ascension Njaghasang (2012).

In 1992 the St. Mary's Parish Efut-Abua was elevated to the status of a Pro-Cathedral by Archbishop Usanga and in commemoration thereof, Kgt and Lady Sylvester S. E. Udoeyop (KSG) presented the Church with a marble altar while Kgt. Emmanuel Nya (KSG), Engr. Peter Nya and Barr Theresa Nya (Chief Joseph Nya's children), also donated a marble Baptistery on behalf of Nya Family to the Church. Two of the greatest events that took place here in the Parish Church were the priestly Ordination of Rev. Fr. Malachy Ephraim on 6th June, 1987 as the first indigenous priest of the great Efut peoples. The second was the Thanksgiving Profession Mass of Rev. Sr. Bernadette D. Amimi as the first ever Religious in the Parish. It is also worthy of note here that the Parish has produced from her serving priests two Bishops, viz. Bishop Edmund J. Fitzgibbons – erstwhile Bishop of Port Harcourt in 1974 and Bishop Joseph Ekuwem, then Bishop of Uyo in 1989 with same as the new Metropolitan Archbishop of Calabar.

ST. BERNARD'S PARISH MARIAN HILL

(a) ORIGINS: Until 1976, St. Bernard's Parish Marian Hill was a quasi-Catholic Community and station under St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral Parish owing to the circumstances surrounding its emergence as a Mission Station in the Catholic Church. It was born as a child of circumstance. During the civil war, so many people were displaced from both the now Cross River State and Akwa Ibom States and most of them especially those who could find their way into the erstwhile Head Quarters of the Defunct South Eastern State, Calabar after the liberation of Calabar suddenly found themselves as emergency Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), and became instant but popularly tagged REFUGEES. The Catholic Mission in particular was worried about the situation and from the resources obtained from the Catholic Foreign Agencies which were equally concerned about the plight of suffering Nigerians during the war, viz. the Misereor, Caritas International, etc. vouchsafed by the indefatigable Bishop Moynagh, gathered some of them into the Government School compound – Atu Street here in Calabar. They were looked after but most importantly, their spiritual needs were also to be similarly looked after, hence the celebration of Sunday Masses in the School compound.

Quite a good number of them attended these Masses including non-Catholics for obvious reasons – Cf. the Essencos. Bishop Moynagh assigned Rev. Fr. Dominic Inyang the only indigenous priest available and authorized by the Nigerian Military Authorities to be offering the Masses for them there. Later, Bishop Moynagh appointed Msgr. then Rev. Fr. Francis X. Una as the permanent Father in-Charge of the now quasi Catholic Community. This was the position of things such that when things began to normalize, Atu Street School became a quasi-Mission Station of sorts. When a number of Catholic members living around the area noticed this, they also began to join in the Masses celebrated there. At the end of the war in January 1970, most of the "REFUGEES" found their way back to their places of origin and those that remained continued to worship at Atu Street. When the Nigerian Soldiers left the premises of Holy Child College Calabar, it was found more convenient to move there as the "Catholic Community" had also thinned down considerably. Then a number of prominent Catholic members including Chief Linus Okom, Chief V.M. Udosen, Mrs. Bernadette Bekomson, Kgt. Pius D. Obot, Lady Marie Obot, and Dr. Patrick O. Bassey etc. started attending Church Services there also. But no sooner had Church functions begun to regularize there than a serious and ugly problem manifested when powerful elements of the Brotherhood of the Cross and Star used their equally powerful members in the Government of the Day to disrupt the functioning of the Church with the claim that Holy Child College was there and then Government property with the "Take-over of Mission Schools", and that they had got official permission from Government to use the Holy Child Assembly Hall which was the actual venue of Catholic Services then. Pronto, and in a Gestapo manner, Soldiers invaded the premises and ransacked everything and almost tore down the Holy Child Stature mounted in the Hall. It was almost a miracle as they could not break it and wisdom prevailed as they allowed it to be. Soon after, the Brotherhood and Star moved in and occupied the Hall.

By this time the Author had been appointed to replace Msgr. Francis Una by Bishop Brian D. Usanga who had recently been released as the General Secretary of the Catholic Secretariat Lagos and returned as substantive Bishop of Calabar in the place of erstwhile Bishop Moynagh in 1970. Meanwhile, the Public Complaints Commission, S.E.S had just been constituted with Ntisong V.D. Uwemedimo as Chief Commissioner and the Author used the opportunity to present the matter to the Commission. Very providentially, the case received prompt attention and action was taken. Just within three months, an official Descript was sent to the Bishop authorizing the Catholic Mission to use the Holy Child Hall as it was never part of the School but the place of worship for Catholic students in the College. This summarizes as it were, the humble beginnings of St. Bernard's Catholic Church, Marian Hill as a Mission Station under St. Mary's Efut Abua. By 1979, and with increase in the population of attendees to the "Holy Child Church", there was acute problem of accommodation and Bishop Brian Usanga promptly acquiesced to the request for land for the building of a Church nearby and providentially within the same piece of land originally acquired by Bishop Moynagh.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Yes, there should have been no problem about land for this purpose because excepting the adjacent piece of land which according to known sources had also been earlier acquired by the Apostolic Mission for the construction of their Secretariat which also housed the Rectory of the erstwhile First Indigenous President General, Pastor E. E. Okon of Creek Town, the entire piece of virgin land measuring about 20 hectares was acquired by the legendary indefatigable and erstwhile Bishop Moynagh of the Catholic Mission Calabar in the 1940's. It was for the purpose of erecting what later materialized into the Holy Child College, Marian Hill. Holy Child College popularly tagged Cornelia Connelly College (CCC) Uyo had earlier been built in 1942 on the "MAINLAND" now tagged AKWA IBOM STATE. But Bishop Moynagh then was under pressure to establish a Girls' College in Calabar Metropolis too. He had even been contemplating also building a Girls College in Calabar, hence the acquisition of this virgin land from the Ndidem of the Quas In-Council towards this end. It should be instructive also to note that his successor, Bishop Brian D. Usanga had similarly acquired numerous pieces of land earmarked for Catholic projects throughout the entire old "Diocese of Calabar" then including the site which has now become MOTHER IGNATIA VOCATIONAL CENTRE, Ikot Ansa – Calabar right in the 1970's and 1980's. This piece of virgin land located on a hill and targeted for an All-Women Institution was named after the Blessed Virgin Mary, hence the entire area being known as "MARIAN HILL- CALABAR". Later on, and with the opening of the famous Road by the Government of the day, the road became known as "MARIAN ROAD" till today, the extension part thereof which was constructed by the Cross River State Military Government being renamed as USANG-ISO AVE after the legendary Edidem Usang Iso, the Ndidem and Paramount Ruler of the Quas in the 1980's. It was crowned with the opening also of the USANG ISO popular market known as IKA–IKA UQUA. It is also note-worthy that there was nothing like Calabar Road, Muritala Muhammed high Way, Marian Hill Road to be found anywhere before the 1960s. The entire Calabar Metropolis ended at the General Post Office. Any other Colonial Government Roads excepting Goldie etc. were those terminating at the Calabar Beach and Elder Dempster Lines Agencies. The rest was forest. The people nowadays, though innocently, often delude themselves that Calabar could be accessed from any part of the MAINLAND from Aba or elsewhere including Northern Cross River after Akamkpa and Biase territories. There was nothing like that. To ever have access and come to Calabar, one had to access it by canoe and other marine means of transport. Even after the General Post Office, the only paved road thereof was Odukpani Road which terminated in Akampa axis as noted above. To access the other parts of the Old Calabar Province then, one had either to go by or hire a bicycle at the General Post office at 3Pence per hour.

The problem of using the Marian Hill land for the construction of the Church arose in the context of the Government "Take Over" of Mission Schools. Discerning readers of this book can easily discover that with the "Take Over" of Mission Schools, the "Take Over" of everything belonging to the land within sight of the school was also inevitable, hence the "Take Over" of the entire Marian Hill Mission land. This led to the famous civil war and military era dictum by Bishop Brian D. Usanga: "Akaap anyin iyak, ibe?eke andinyie" (literally translated eating the bought-fish' eyes without taking permission from the purchaser and owner) thus implying that no Government should have presumed to forcefully acquire a.k.a "take-over" Mission Schools without the permission of or at least consultation with their Proprietors. Indeed, as it did happen, Bishop Usanga went to court with the S.E.S Military Government of Brigadier Udokaha Jacob Esuene and using powerful superior arguments, won back the "Take Over" Marian Hill Mission land. With this development it became easy to appropriate part of the adjacent piece of land to site the new prestigious and magnificent Church now known as St. Bernard's Catholic Church Marian Hill.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE CHURCH BUILDING: Precisely in 1979, the construction of the Church building began with the erection of the gigantic pillars by Mazi Athanasius Ezeji of Naze town Owerri. On finishing the pillars, the roofing of the church followed straight away and the roofing materials as also part of the roofing with long pan. This was carried out by Senator Victor Akan's EXCELL Roofing and Construction Company Ltd. It was only after that, that the construction of the walls began in earnest under the supervision of Kgt. Pius D. Obot, the erstwhile Parish President. Takings from Sunday Tray Collections in addition to the Annual Mission Harvest Festivals and Bazaars formed the main source of revenue for the prosecution of the work. By 1985 the church building was completed and in 2006 under the able-hand and supervision of Chief Linus Okom an erstwhile President of the Parish, the tower work was also completed to the greater Glory of God.

REGINA CAELI QUASI - PARISH, ANANTIGHA

(a) ORIGINS: Regina Parish - Anantigha in the Capital Town and Headquarters of Calabar South, was absolutely and certainly so, the grand brain child of and conceived by the indefatigable Legionary, Ete Leo Etim Udo, the father of Rev. Fr. John Leo Udoh of Ikot Etim – Ikot EtoboParish in Nsit Ubium LGA of Akwa Ibom State. He equally after becoming priest "like father – like son" got into the big shoes of his father and obviously followed his footsteps by also conceiving and materializing his father's erstwhile dream and plan to establish the Church in Kasuk territory, precisely at Asari-Iso axis. Fr. John Leo has succeeded in acquiring land and constructing the magnificent Church of the Parish of Ascension at the Calabar Bye-Pass in Kasuk land. But Ete Leo had settled here as a young worker in Calabar metropolis since the 1950s. He was the pillar of the Legion of Mary in the Sacred Heart Cathedral of the then Diocese Now Archdiocese of Calabar. After founding and physically constructing a number of Mission Stations including St. Charles Lwanga Catholic Church, Essien Town (1959), St. Vincent de Paul, Mbukpa (1968), St. Patrick's Asabanka and Akansoko (1969), Queen of Angels Airport - Edim Otop (1970) etc. through the assistance of the Legion of Mary members of the Sacred Heart Cathedral, these Mission stations have hitherto become new Parishes in the Calabar Metropolis. Regarding the issue at hand, he had embarked on acquiring a piece of land in the new developing area of Calabar metropolis popularly tagged "New Air Port City" which was opened up by the Military Government of the defunct South Eastern State under the indefatigable no nonsense Military Governor, Brigadier Udokaha Jacob Esuene. But this did not materialize until later on with the assistance of St. Mary's Efut Abua Legionaries as he could not actually erect a Church building there because he was hard put to it in finding and securing a site and more so the funds for it.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Then in 1978 the feat was accomplished but by also a Legionary companion, Mr. Christopher Ekpo who used his own house veranda for Church services at the time before acquiring a temporary site for the Church near his house and building a church there. He was later appointed a Church Warden in St. Mary's Efut Abua by the Author in 1979. This church building continued to serve the needs of the Station until the population of worshippers catapulted thereby prompting the felt need of acquiring a more specious and befitting site for a new church building. In 2003 and with the second-coming appointment of Fr. Bernard Okokon as the substantive Fr. In-Charge of the station, himself being the Parish Priest of St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral, Efut-Abua, a permanent site was acquired and paid for by the erstwhile Archbishop Brian D. Usanga through the agency of the Efut Assembly, the umbrella of the Traditional Council of the Efuts. Archbishop Usanga consequently also detached the station from St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral, Efut -Abua, raising it to the dignity and status of a Quasi-Parish with the new name tag of Regina Caeli Quasi-Parish – Anantigha with still Rev. Fr. Bernard Okokon as the first Parish Priest. With the full co-operation and support of the Catholic Community of Sacred Heart Cathedral and St. Mary's Efut Abua, the church building work began in earnest. The church pillars were first to be raised followed by the construction of the roof in order to provide immediate accommodation for Church Services as well as other Church activities. Some donors offered the sum of Ten Thousand Naira (N10, 000) as a minimum cost of the pillars and the Author similarly donated (N10, 000) for the construction of a pillar to the memory of Ete Leo and also a bundle of zinc for the roof as part of his humble contribution towards the church building effort. He had previously obtained the Papal Blessing Card from the Vatican with which Archbishop Usanga also honoured Ete Leo Etim.

When Rev. Fr. Bernard Okokon left the scene as the Administrator of the Pro-Cathedral Parish, Fr. Charles Etim was appointed Administrator of the Pro-Cathedral while Fr. Matthew Onyejimbe the Curate was appointed Fr. in- Charge of Regina Caeli and Assistant priest to St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral. Fr. Charles Etim took the work in earnest and with zest. He, with the assistance of Fr. Matthew completed the roof while the construction of the walls followed quickly after. It is instructive to note that the Parish Priest or Father In-Charge of the Pro-Cathedral Parish was always appointed Fr. In-Charge and the Assisting Priest in St. Mary's as the regular administrator of the Regina Caeli station before then, while the Church was only yet a Mission Station. In 2008 the church building was completed and commissioned by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

(c)SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of Regina Caeli Anantigha both formerly as a Mission Station and afterwards as a Quasi-Paris sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

ST. PAUL'S PARISH, UNIVERSITY OF CALABAR (UNICAL)

ORIGINAL PLAN

NEWLY COMPLETED

CHURCH ORIGINS: In the 1974/75 Academic Session, the Federal Military Government of General Yakubu Gowon established a new Campus of the University of Nigeria, Nsukka at Calabar using the premises of the Duke Town Secondary School at Etagbor Street in Qua territory as the location of the University. Following this development, Archbishop, then Bishop Brian D. Usanga appointed Very Rev. Fr. Sean Barry (SPS) to look after the spiritual needs of the Staff and students of the newly established University Campus as Fr. In-Charge and Chaplain with Very Rev. Fr. Francis O. Mbaba as the Assisting Priest in what was then known as the "Catholic Community of University of Nigeria, Calabar Campus". In 1976 following the new Decree of the Muritala Muhammed Military Administration that established six new Federal Universities to wit; the University of Calabar - UNICAL, the University of Sokoto, the University of Maiduguri, the University of Ilorin, the University of Jos and the University of Port Harcourt, the then Bishop Brian D. Usanga raised the Catholic Community Church which Church Services were held at the University Assembly Hall now Senate Assembly, to the status of a Chaplaincy, the equivalent of a Quasi- Parish with Msgr. then Fr. Joseph P. Ekarika as Chaplain. The doors of the new University being thrown open to the new Freshmen and Women including the UNN Campus Students + new Staff, this catapulted the populations both of the new University Staff and students as also the Catholic worshippers. A little while later on, the venue for the Christian Worship both for Catholics and Protestants was shifted to the new Social Sciences Lecture Halls = HALL TWO, for ample accommodation. The Catholic Schedule for Mass was re-fixed at 8.00 am on Sundays for the Catholics while that of the Protestants was fixed at 10.00 am for their Sunday Services.

© CHURCH BUILDING: As it was inevitable since the number of worshippers including Catholics from nearby and adjacent towns and streets around the University was growing from year to year as the University also developed, there was need for a separate Church building because it was obvious no common Hall shared by all Denominations could be large and convenient enough any longer especially considering the logics of the Catholic Religious programming and Services such as the requirement of a Sacristy, Communion Rails, Stations of the Cross, Pulpit etc. and most importantly a suitable locale for the preservation of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The Muslim Faithful were equally not comfortable with the common Hall arrangement and also were pressing for a separate convenient place of worship to build their Mosque. Thus after making a few contacts mostly with the Muslim Faithful who were sure to be favoured as the ruling Federal Government Authorities owing the Universities were mostly Muslims, a deal was struck in agreement with the Protestants to have audience with the Vice Chancellor. Each worshipping group was to contact its own ranks in the University Staff and Administration as also the VIPs in the metropolis with a view to joining the delegation which would meet with the Vice Chancellor. The groups finally had an appointment with Professor Emmanuel Ayandele, the then Vice Chancellor with a request letter captioned "PLACES OF WORSHIP COMMITTEE - APPLICATION FOR SITES ON CAMPUS: ISLAM, CATHOLIC AND PROTESTANT FAITHS". The long and short of it was that by the end of 1979 after a series of Meetings, the Vice Chancellor acquiesced and a very strategic location was eventually granted to be shared among the three groups, the Catholic Church being granted the first portion, the Protestant the middle and the Muslims the last portion. Meanwhile Arch (Dr.) Maurice E. Archibong MD, together with his Director had provided the building plans by 1980 (Cf. Original photo Plan above).

In 1981 the final arrangements and launching of the Catholic Chapel were on top gear. In May the Event took place in grand style at the University Temporary Pavilion directly opposite the Catholic Chapel grounds with Dr. Matthias Afoboche, the Deputy Governor of the Old Cross River State as Chairman of the occasion, Dr. Clement Isong as Guest of Honour and Archbishop Usanga as Chief Host. Chief (Dr.) M. K. O. Abiola was to be the Chief Launcher while Senator Victor Akan was to be the Master of Ceremonies. The rest is history as they say, except that it is worthy of note that the Old Cross River State Government failed to pay the One Hundred Thousand Naira Launching Fund which she had pledged till this day whereas Government is supposed to be a continuum. At the time, that amount was a big sum of money and could have brought the building construction to a very manageable state: Cement cost price was only N3 and a tipper load of sand cost N50,00 at the time. But while waiting to start the construction of the Chapel knowing that it would take some years to complete, and as the Catholic population was increasing by the year, Arch. (DR) Maurice E. Archibong and Chief Michael Archibong (BONG), two great Patrons and Benefactors of the Chaplaincy, decided to construct a modest building for use as Chapel for Morning Masses and other Church Services while Sunday Worship still continued but this time around, at the newly completed University Auditorium a.k.a Philosophy of Arts Theatre which the University Authorities permitted for use on Sundays by both the Protestant and Catholic Chaplaincies with agreed schedules of worship. In 1982 the foundation was dug 5ft deep and concreted. Meanwhile Archbishop Usanga had also upgraded the Chaplaincy by renaming it with the Patron Title of "St. Paul's Catholic Chaplaincy UNICAL" after that official laying of the Foundation to kick-start the Church building project under Msgr. J. P. Ekarika.

With the funds garnered at the 1981 Launching Function, Annual Harvests, Bazaars, Sunday Tray Collections and generous Donations from Appeals, the Construction of the Chapel started in earnest in 1984 with Engr. (Chief) Joseph Duke & Co. as chief builders under the new Chaplain, then Fr. Joseph E. Ekuwem who had recently returned from Further Studies Overseas and was being appointed Parish Priest of St. Mary's to take over from Msgr. Joseph Ekarika who was due for Sabbatical leave that year. Late Fr. Augustine Kokoette Bassey was also appointed Assistant Priest to Fr. Joseph Ekuwem but suddenly died that same 1984. In 1990 Rev. Fr. Linus Effiong who previously had been Parish Priest of St. Joseph's Parish, Ikot Ene and was appointed the first official Parish priest of the newly created St. Patrick's Parish Ikot Ansa by then Bishop Brian D. Usanga handed over to Very Rev. Fr. D. Dolan, Vicar General of then Diocese of Calabar recently transferred from Anua following the creation of the new Diocese of Uyo in Akwa Ibom State in December 1989. Then Fr. Linus Effiong was subsequently transferred to St. Paul's UNICAL and continued the Church building from where Fr. Ekuwem recently appointed first Bishop of the new Diocese of Uyo had stopped. In 1995 Fr. Linus was appointed Rector of the Junior Seminary Mfamosing and handed over again to Msgr. Joseph P. Ekarika. By 1996 the Church building had advanced to the roofing stage and Msgr. Ekarika placed orders for special timber for purlines and rafters from the Cameroun Republic for the roofing of the Church while the Excel Company supplied expanded metal zinc and also completed the roofing work under Rev. Fr. Cyril Udoh Udoh, a post graduate student of Ikot Ekpene who had been granted approval of residence in the UNICAL Parish house by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga.

With at least the roofing work completed though the Church building was still under construction, the building was good enough for use for the celebration of Mass and other Church activities by December of that same year. After completing most of the walls, the Chapel was commissioned with other finishings coming up in their proper time. The tower work was completed in 2002, thanks to the good work and able hands of the part time Graduate Student-Rev. Fathers viz. Fr. Cyril Udoh Udoh and afterwards Fr. Julius Adah from Ogoja Diocese approved and appointed to reside at the UNICAL Parish House by Archbishop Usanga. Both of them were serving under Fr. Felix H. Ojong as the substantive Fr. in-Charge and Chaplain. It is noteworthy to also acknowledge the co-operation both of the Nigerian Federation of Catholic Students (NFCS) UNICAL Branch as also the Catholic Staff including Parishioners mostly from Sacred Heart Cathedral towards the Church building project, viz. Chief S. O'Neil a one-time President of the Catholic Laity Council of Nigeria, Messrs. Daniel and Joseph Nyambi both seasoned Government Officials and Administrators; the former a one-time Commissioner of the Public Complaints Commission and the latter a one-time Clerk of the Cross River State House of Assembly, Bernard S. OUR LADY QUEEN OF ANGELS EDIM OTOP, (a.k.a) AIRPORT PARISH ORIGINS: Queen of the Angels Airport Parish, a.k.a Edim Otop is a gift of the Nigerian civil war because the war brought into the area such an influx of refugees of all categories of people – the high and low, the poor and the needy, the wounded and the marginalized otherwise called" Internally Displaced Persons" (IDPs). On another account, it was a very notorious area. It was a jungle bye-pass across Atimbo River to Akpabuyo countryside and people feared passing through the area. EDIM OTOP in Qua language means a "BIG SQUARE". But a big square of what you might ask? For the Efik a.k.a URUAN/EFIK, it was nothing but a very large and expansive jungle square/area, for so it seemed to the Efik who first discovered this jungle land in the large equatorial forest traversing through it from the Atimbo River. The Efik had observed before them this large swamp area and trust URUAN/EFIK, they decided to deforest and explore it to its logical conclusion. Lo and behold it was a habitable area down south occupied by the great Qua peoples, but only very few humans actually inhabited it. Further deforestation into the interior linked them up with their kith and kin of the URUAN/EFIK Atakpa nation ie. Calabar city at the time. One can only imagine the joy of the discovery of such an arable piece of land, an almost inhabitable territory linking up the same generation of people north and south as it were; and by implication a jungle linking up the Efik of AKPABUYO = a piece of land crossing the river/sea ie. "AKPA" from one end of Akpabuyo to the other side, ie. Calabar. Till today apart from the town now becoming a cosmopolitan town, 90% of the original inhabitants before the war were Efik till today. Readers can check this for themselves. But as observed above, after the war, all sorts of business concerns were carried out here along the borders especially along the forest area including timber and gin.

However, and subsequently after the war, a number of Catholics among the refugees settling here used to worship with their group at Otu Street. This was a pretty long distance. But when the Sacred Heart Legionaries led by Ete Leo Udo traversed the area and discovered there were quite a considerable number of Catholics living in the area, they decided to provide a modest bamboo Church which was handy at the time. The place was first visited by Fr. Vincent Hannigan who celebrated the first Mass there in 1968. Soon afterwards it was visited by Mgr. Francis Una and Fr. Sylvester U. J. Udoh on Sundays. Since Fr. V. Hannigan had been posted to St. Mary's in 1968, it became a Mission Station under St. Mary's Efut Abua until the later 1970s when it was ceded to St. Bernard's Parish, Marian Hill with the Author as Father In-Charge. One of the programmes of primary evangelization organized by Msgr. Ekarika to mobilize the people was the popular "NDIANA EDERI" a.k.a Combined Service. This was a very grand Service popularized by the Protestant Churches in the Mainland of what is now called Akwa Ibom State. This glamourized programme effectively brought both members and non-members of other denominations into attendance and there was always plenty to eat and drink as part of the function. Msgr. Ekarika had previously perfected this while at Christ the King Parish Uyo and Assumption Parish Ndon Ebom in order to promote popular participation among the Faithful in their different zones viz. Obio Offot Zone, Mbiokporo Zone, Itam zone and Uyo Zone; similarly, Ndon Ebom Zone, Nsit Zone, Ibiaku Zone, Nung Ikono Zone and Nung Oku Zone, all of which have become Parish centres today. It was always a grand success. Hence in 1976 he organized a grand "Combined Service" involving St. Peter's Ediba Church and St. Michael's Church, Ibesikpo with SS Peter and Paul Edim Otop as it was then called as Service Centre. The idea was to raise funds towards the construction of a permanent Church building there at Edim Otop in what has now become known as "Queen of the Angels' Parish, Edim Otop – or Air Port Parish".

(c) CHURCH BUILDING: At the time, the Mission Station started with mostly the refugees and the few Legionaries led by Ete Leo from Sacred Heart. The station had no place at all for worship and other religious activities, not to talk of a Church. It was Ete Patrick O. Obong, the Father of Rev. Father Francis Obong, then a young man residing in the area and working in the city, who first offered his veranda for use. Thereafter and together with the Legionaries championed by Ete Leo, the Catholic Community built a modest thatched Church which lasted into the 1970's. In 1976, the members of the Church then christened SS Peter and Paul Church - Edim Otop, organized a "Combined Service" with St. Peter's Ediba and St. Michael's Ibesikpo Stations to raise funds for a permanent Church structure. In 1982 the Church was expanded and by this time regular Sunday Masses were celebrated for the people. In 1992, the tail end of the Church and the frontage were knocked down for the expansion of the Church. This aspect of refurbishment added great grandeur to the Church because the entire frontage was completely restructured with raised columns and footsteps while the rear provided the Sacristy. That same year Archbishop Usanga raided the Church to the status of a Parish and renamed it "Our Lady Queen of Angels, Airport Parish" with the Author as first Father In-Charge, a.k.a Parish Priest. In 2002, Very Rev. Fr. Michael U. Offiong built the first Fathers' Rectory which was later completely renovated by Fr. Geoffrey Akpabio. In 2008 Fr. Emmanuel Iwuagwu a.k.a "FATHER ETI-OWO" who's good and godly nature was admired by all, and in order to present a more commodious and befitting Church pulled down the entire structure to give way to the marvelous magnificent structure he started and completed in recorded time. In 2014 the beautiful Church was commissioned amidst pomp and pageantry by His Grace, Most Rev. Dr. Joseph Edra Ukpo to the admiration of the worshipping community both Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

(c) SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of Queen of Angels Parish both formerly as a Mission Station under the title SS Peter & Paul Edim Otop, and afterwards as a Quasi-Paris sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

ST. JOSEPH'S CHAPLAINCY CRUTECH

ORIGINS: In 1974 the Gowon Military Government by a Decree established twelve Colleges of Technology in all the 12 States he had earlier created in 1967 viz. North Western State with HQ. at Sokoto, North Central State, HQ. Kaduna; Kwara State, HQ. Ilorin; Benue Plateau State, HQ Jos; North Eastern, HQ. Maiduguri; Gongola State, HQ. Yola; Lagos State HQ. Ikeja; South Western State, HQ. Ibadan; Bendel State, HQ. Benin; Rivers State, HQ. Port Harcourt, South Eastern State, HQ. Calabar and East Central State, HQ. Enugu in addition to the Yaba Polytechnic, Kaduna Polytechnic etc. which had been established and functioning before the civil war. One of these new Colleges of Technology (COT) was the South Eastern State College of Technology, Calabar. The grounds at the tail end of Ekpo Abasi Street were acquired by the U. J. Esuene Military Government for the establishment of the Tertiary Institution. These Institutions at the time were to run a 3-Year Programme lasting three years, ditto Colleges of Education whereby students who passed the required Teacher Training Examinations and similarly Technology Examinations and obtained the NCE Certificate and Diploma Certificate in Technology respectively would be qualified to go for the National Youth Service which was also established by Decree the year before. To meet the spiritual needs of the Students and Staff, the Institution's Assembly Hall was assigned to be used by both the Catholic and Protestant Faithfuls. Catholics were allowed to conduct their Sunday Services at 8.00 AM while the Protestants conducted theirs at 10.00 AM. Rev. Fr. Emmanuel O. Akpan was appointed Fr In-Charge and later assisted by Msgr. J. P. Ekarika. In 1976 Fr. Akpan was re-assigned as Bursar to the newly opened Bigard Major Seminary, Ikot Ekpene Campus and Msgr. Ekarika took over as the substantive Fr. In-Charge with the Assisting Priests coming from St. Mary's Efut Abua. In 1977 Archbishop, then Bishop Brian D. Usanga approved and named the Church St. Joseph's Catholic Chaplaincy - College of Technology, Calabar.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: In 1989 the Chaplaincy applied to the College of Technology Governing Council with Mr. R. E. Ekanem as Rector for a Church building site for the Chaplaincy and a very strategic site immediately adjacent to the College Entrance was allotted to the Catholic Chaplaincy. To this end, Very Rev. Fr. Francis Mbaba was assigned to take charge of the Church building and he immediately commenced the moulding of blocks for the Church building. But in 1992 and with the appointment of Chief Ukorebi Ukorebi Asuquo as the new Rector of the Polytechnic, the original site donated to the Chaplaincy was annulled and the issue of acquiring another site ended there. In 1997 with the Pastoral Visit of the Papal Ambassador to Nigeria, a.k.a Papal Nuncio, His Excellency, Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano, to the Chaplaincy at which most of the Institution's Authorities were present to formally accord the august Visitor a rousing and befitting welcome, an arrangement was made to include the issue of the Chaplaincy Church in the Address of Welcome to the august Visitor. During his Apostolic Pastoral visit to the Institution, the Nuncio among other things in response to the rich and well-worded Address given to him, promised a generous donation of Fifty Thousand Dollars (S50,000) for the construction of the Chapel thereat. Meanwhile Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Iwagwu, the Assistant Priest at St. Mary' Pro-Cathedral, Efut Abua was appointed substantive Fr. In-Charge and Chaplain of St. Joseph's CRUTECH to kick-start the building of the new Chapel.

With this money in hand, the Chaplaincy Authorities approached the new Head of the Polytechnic recently converted into the Cross River State University of Technology (CRUTECH), Professor Kevin M. Etta, who in consultation with the new Governing Council of the Institution acquiesced and donated a piece of land down the ravine at the tail end near the Graduation Grounds for the construction of the new Chapel. Following this, Fr. Emmanuel Iwagwu re-organized the Chaplaincy Pastoral Council and appointed a Building Committee to champion the cause. In no time, the Committee set out to work by clearing the dumps, filling the gullies, grooves and digging the foundation to kick-start the construction of the church with the proceeds from Harvests, Bazaars and Donations coupled with and including the Papal Gift, the beautiful Church we are now admiring was completed and commissioned by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL PARISH, MBUKPA

ORIGINS: Like all the other post-civil war Churches constructed by Catholic refugees and some converted natives living on the outskirts of the Calabar Metropolis, the first Church buildings were constructed by the Legionaries of Sacred Heart Cathedral with the indefatigable Ete Leo as leader during the civil war (1967-1970). These Churches include St. Peter's Ediba, St. Theresa's Akansoko, St. Patrick's Asabanka, Queen of Angel's, formerly SS Peter & Paul Edim Otop, etc. What is now called St. Vincent de Paul as one of them was formerly known as St. Michael the Archangel Church, Ibesikpo founded in 1968. It is situated along the tail end of Edibe Edibe swamps. As noted elsewhere, very many people who were displaced during the civil war from the Mainland, now Akwa Ibom State and Abia State, etc. found their way into the ancient Canaan City of Calabar. Not having any possessions except their brute man power and the strong will and hope to survive, they were ready to endure all odds for survival as refugees a.k.a "Internally Displaced Persons" (IDPs). Most of them found their way to the unoccupied swamps and ghettos of Calabar beaches. One such people were the citizens of Ibesikpo/Asutan indigenes. On their arrival, they were lucky to discover a massive un-inhabited swamp along the tail-end of Edibe Edibe. Most of them were Catholics. They deforested the area and as it were, "took possession" of the place which stretched as far as Modern New Airport founded by the Governor U. J. Esuene Military Administration, a.k.a Anantigha. As observed already, the Sacred Heart Legionaries set to work by exploring these areas during their compulsory Weekly Legionary Visitation and Visitation of the needy, the sick, the poor and handicapped peoples under the Sacred Heart Cathedral Parish.

At first the Ibesikpo Catholic elements used to hold their Sunday worship on the verandah of one of their Ibesikpo kin, Ete George Bassey. Prompted by their docility and fidelity to their Faith, the Legionaries promised to help them in whatever way possible. As their numbers grew through the work of the Legionaries, they needed a roof over their heads during Church services. The Legionaries secured a piece of land along Dr. Deen Street where they built a little mud Church. It was here they really started seeing themselves as a worshipping Catholic Community.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: In 1969 when the Catholic Community was gradually increasing in numbers, they decided to look for a more comfortable and larger piece of land for the accommodation of their Catholic Community and to build a modest Church thereat . Because they were looking for a piece of land large enough to accommodate a Church building, there was no way they could get this free of charge. They had to contribute money and buy the piece of land. But where they had a good offer was a jungle swamp at Edibe Edibe tail end of the Road which they purchased for £25:0:0 from Ete Michael Eyo Eyo Nsemo, an Efut man. This really was a big sum of money in those days especially at war time. With the assistance of the Legionaries and spirited individuals they were able to buy the land and set out to work on it. It was a sizeable piece of land but a very difficult terrain to make use of on account of wild animals, snakes and crocodiles that infested the area. Together with the Legionaries under Ete Leo, they prayed to the Almighty Father, and implored the intercession of the Archangel Michael, the conqueror of evil and Satan, the one that can annihilate impossible situations to come to their aid. Having deforested and cleared the swamps, they put up a modest thatched Church structure and named it St. Michael's Catholic Church, "Ibesikpo Street". This Church is situated at the tail end of Edibe Edibe Road and "Ibesikpo" happens to be the name of their home-land, a Clan in Akwa Ibom State, formerly under Uyo Local Government Area, but now an autonomous LGA.

In 1972 they knocked down the mud church and constructed their first permanent church building which was later expanded and renovated by Mgr. J. P. Ekarika, the erstwhile Father In-Charge and Parish Priest – a building which has stood still today. In 1984, Archbishop Brian D. Usanga raised the Church to the dignity of a Parish and renamed it St. Vincent de Paul Parish, Mbukpa with Ntisong Vincent D. Uwemedimo as Patron and benefactor in-Chief. Consequently, the Church grounds were moved to the adjacent No. 12 Iman Street close to the Ntisong's "Hillside Residence and School". But these grounds and the piece of land at Iman Street had already been acquired a long time ago by the Sacred Heart Women's Organization for their Poultry Farm Project. It was leased land for twenty-five years and the Sacred Heart Women Organization had taken possession of it for several years for their Poultry Farm Project before abandoning it. However, as soon as the land owner Chief Ernest Bassey Ene discovered that part of the land had been handed over to the new Parish, he immediately placed an "EKPE INTERDICT" which by implication an is "Ekpe Proscription and Prohibition Injunction" as a ban on its use. He planted Ekpe trees on the land to stop it from being used by the Church or anybody or group for that matter. Thus this automatically rendered the piece of land an unlawful and a "a no go area", and therefore out of bounds. Consequently, it became impossible for anybody to step into the grounds any more. However, to cut the matter short and because Mgr. Ekarika being one of the kindred and an Ekpe chieftain, he was permitted to make a new lease covering 99years, and the amount for the new lease was promptly paid for. The first building was constructed with the assistance of Sacred Heart Women and Ntisong Uwemedimo but a greater part of the funds came from the Launching Function and Bazaars that were organized year by year for the purpose. St. Mary's, now Pro-Cathedral Parish also supported the project.

To make sure that the progress of the Parish would be sustained, Seminarians who were usually sent on Apostolic Work to the Parish were deployed for the built-up towards the opening of a Nursery/Primary School there as a pilot project of the Parish. Some of those Seminarians included Rev. Mr. Cyprian Ikpo, a Deacon to-be, who on the eve of his Deaconate Ordination got involved in ghastly road accident which rendered him completely maimed while travelling to Uyo to purchase his vestments at the Uyo Diocesan Pastoral Centre. He became incapacitated and consequently could not be included among the Candidates who were to be ordained by the Nuncio who was on a pastoral visit to the Archdiocese at the time. These Seminarians usually went from house to house canvassing for pupils for the new school that was to be opened on the grounds. In fact, this exercise yielded much fruit because the venture became a veritable source of attracting funds for the completion and furnishing of the school building, etc. A lot of work was done including the deployment of some prisoners nearby to work on the grounds. With the construction work concluded the school took off in September 1992.

In 2002 a new Church building was to be constructed on the site under the Claretian Congregation (+CMF) to whom Archbishop Usanga had wished to hand over the Parish since the piece of land was large enough to accommodate the building of a Church and School. But most unfortunately this was not to be, because when the Claretians arrived, the Local Superior suddenly took ill and the whole arrangement was stalled. Consequently, the Parish was handed over by Archbishop Usanga to the Vincentian Congregation with Fr. Augustine Iwok (CM) as the new Parish Priest. As the school had taken off with earnestness and dynamism, there was the need to construct a separate building for Church Services. Funds were raised and the Church building was started in 2004. It was completed for commissioning in 2007 by Archbishop Joseph E. Ukpo with solemnity and fanfare. Since then, three generations of the Vincentian Congregation priests have served there until in 2017 when the School was to revert to the Archdiocese under the new dispensation of Archbishop, Most Rev. Joseph E. Ekuwem with Fr. Clement Chinedum Kafor (CM) as Parish Priest.

CHRIST THE KING CHAPLAINCY-AKIM BARRACKS

(a) ORIGINS: Christ the King Catholic Chaplaincy, Akim Barracks is situated right within the precincts of the 13th Brigade Army Barracks on Barracks Road – Calabar. This barracks is perhaps the oldest barracks in Nigerian history because it was the colonial Army Barracks of Calabar, the first Headquarters of Colonial Nigeria since 1890 with some of the colonial buildings still standing strong today. In 1906 the colonial Headquarters of Nigeria was moved together with the Governor General, Sir Walter Egerton from Calabar to the Colony and Protectorate of Lagos as the new Headquarters by Imperial Britain. But this Barracks continued to remain as the stronghold of Imperial British Frontier Force until the Nigerian civil war when it first quartered the Nigerian 14th Brigade Armed Forces of Nigeria which overthrew the Biafran Armed Forces and took control over the entire region covering what is now Cross River State, Akwa Ibom State, Rivers and Bayelsa States. With the fall of Calabar then under the Biafran Armed Forces on 18th October 1967 to the Federal troops, the 14th Brigade front-line fighting Army moved on and captured Uyo, Port Harcourt etc. giving way to its occupation by the 13th Brigade which carried out mopping up operations and stayed put till today. In 1971 soon after the civil war (1966-1977), the Director of Army Chaplain Services, Mgr. Col. Pedro Martins applied to Archbishop Brian D. Usanga, the then Bishop of Calabar to send his priests to administer to the spiritual needs of the 13th Brigade military, their wives and dependents at the Military Barracks. From then on after the departure of the pre-independence Colonial Armed Forces Chaplain, Rev. Fr. (Maj) Cyril Donnelly OP (1890-1966), the CKC Akim Barracks has continued to be under the Directorate of the following Directors of Army Chaplain Services of Nigeria (1966-2017) to wit:

MGR. (COL) PEDRO MARTINS 1966 - 1977	FR. (BRIG) P. O. EMONYON 1978 - 1988	MGR (COL) JAMES F. IYIRE 1989 - 1996	FR. (BRIG. GEN) M. A. NGIRIKA 1996 - 2002
FR. (BRIG.GEN)C. S. EMEKAKWE 2002 - 2004	FR. (BRIG. GEN) A. F. BAKO 2004 - 2007	FR. (BRIG.GEN) C. S. AINA 2008 - 2010	FR. (COL) C.C. IROEGBU SVCS 2010 - 2018

Rev Fr. (Prof) Justin S. Ukpong was first appointed to serve as Chaplain of the Catholic Community. With the coming of Mgr. Joseph P. Ekarika then Secretary of the then Diocese of Calabar the Army Community Church was named Christ the King Catholic Chaplaincy ditto St. Paul's Catholic Chaplaincy UNICAL and St. Peter's Catholic Chaplaincy UNICROSS, Uyo. Bishop Brian D. Usanga sanctioned the renaming of the hitherto "CATHOLIC COMMUNITIES". Then followed other appointed Chaplains to CKC viz. Rev. Fr. Aloysius N. Ebong, Rev. Fr. Francis Mbaba etc. all of whom were serving priests of the Sacred Heart Cathedral until the appointment of a substantive Military Chaplain beginning with Rev. Fr. (Col) James F. Iyire who later became the Director of Army Chaplain Services after the retirement of Mgr. Col Pedro Martins.

Then in 1989 when the then serving Chaplain Fr. (Maj) A. F. Bako was transferred before another Military Chaplain could be sent, Archbishop Usanga appointed the following to administer to the needs of the Chaplaincy viz. Rev. D. Dolan (SPS), Rev. Fr. Venatius Orok, Rev. Fr. Chris A. Okpu, Rev. Fr. Malachy Ephraim, Rev. Fr. Robert Ekpe, Rev. Maurice Etim and Rev. Fr. Damian Udonsek. Between July 2003 and May 2004 the post of Military Chaplain was again vacant and Archbishop Joseph E. Ukpo appointed Rev. Fr. Joseph Umoh and Rev. Fr. Innocent Inwek under whom also served Rev. Fr. Ben Obiezu from Awka Diocese, Rev. Fr. Michael Ukah and Rev. Fr. Bona Ozugbo from Umuahia Diocese all Post Graduate Students at UNICAL who providentially joined the Chaplain Services (RC) as relief priests. Two Holy Child Rev. Sisters viz. Sr. Theresa Umana (SHCJ) and Rev. Sr. Duru (SHCJ) teaching at the Holy Child College were also serving at the CKC Chaplaincy, similarly Rev. Sr. Amaranna who was also a student Undergraduate at UNICAL.

Perhaps it is important to note that the Catholic Faithful as worshippers in the Christ the King Chaplaincy, Akim Army Barracks Calabar are soldiers with their family members and also civilians made up of men, women, youths and children. The Catholic Faithful are from different ethnic groups as obviously the soldiers and their families come from the different nationalities in Nigeria thus symbolizing the universal nature of the Church. They cut across all the geo-political zones of Nigeria: South South, South East, North Central, North East, North West, South West and even some from the Cameroun community residing in Calabar metropolis.

There are in fact at present four Chapels under the CKC Army Barracks Chaplaincy viz. St. Francis 146 Battalion Chaplaincy – Eburutu Barracks, Calabar, St. James 245 Recce Battalion Chaplaincy Ikom Barracks, St. Albert's 341 FAR /130 Battalion Chaplaincy Ogoja Barracks and Takum Chaplaincy which has recently been re-assigned to Makurdi Diocese. All these were under the CKC Chaplain at the Brigade

Headquarters, Archdiocese of Calabar. Due to distance the Bishop of Ogoja has similarly been appointing priests to minister to three Army Chaplaincies within Ogoja Diocese. Nevertheless, the CKC Brigade Chaplain visits these formations at least once a month to show solidarity and give them a sense of belonging. At least once a year, the Director of Army Chaplain Services since the time of Mgr. (Col) Pedro Martins has been going on tour of all the Army Barracks in Nigeria to meet with and address the members in their various formations. I can still vividly remember when Mgr. Pedro Martins visited these formations both at Akwa Ibom and Calabar when the Author was their Chaplain thereof. It is also worthy of note that in the 1970s and 1980s other members and wives etc. in Units of the Armed Forces, namely, the Navy, Air force, Road Safety, Fire Service Personnel as also the Police with their families were also worshipping here at CKC Army Chaplaincy. Today the CKC Brigade Chaplaincy as it were, has given birth to three other Chaplaincy Services (RC) viz. Holy Trinity Navy Chaplaincy Akim, Holy Ghost Navy Chaplaincy Atimbo and recently St. Rita's Police Chaplaincy – Ikot Enebong, all in Calabar Metropolis.

The Holy Trinity Church was built by Fr. Damian Udonsek when he was a Navy Recruit while Holy Ghost Atimbo was built by Bishop Joseph Egerega of Bomadi Diocese, then Chaplain of both CKC and Navy Barracks Atimbo. Similarly, and just of recent, Rev. Fr. (ASP) Martin Akinyemi formerly serving at CKC went on to build the St. Rita's Chapel, Ikot Enebong (Cf. Joe Ameke, Chuks Biz Ventures Calabar, 2012, 9-14).

(c) CHURCH BUILDING: Quite before the appointment of Rev. Fr. (Prof) J. S. Ukpong then Assistant priest at Sacred Heart Cathedral serving as first Chaplain to offer Masses and minister to the spiritual needs of the Catholic Community at the Brigade Headquarters, some Catholic members mostly women, had formed themselves into a worshipping community of the Catholic faithful under the direction of the Catechist then appointed by the Military Authorities. The Author happened to know this because while the war was still raging between 1968 and 1969, when what was then known as South Eastern State of Nigeria, but is now split and renamed as Cross River State and Akwa Ibom State respectively, became the liberated areas by the Federal troops, Catholic as also Protestant worshipping communities were organizing their "Sunday Services" and worship within the military centres such as Odot, Ikot Use Ekong, Ibagwa etc. in Akwa Ibom State then in the South Eastern State of Nigeria which embraced the above mentioned States. The Author also happened to minister at these worshipping centres then with the military Catechists in-charge of other church activities as leader In-Charge of the centres. Priests sent to these Catholic centres in the Military Barracks were also to serve under their direction and take responsibility of the tray collections made at Masses and other Church activities. But here at the Brigade Headquarters Calabar, most the members of the Catholic Community were wives of soldiers whose husbands were either at the war fronts or on mopping up operations as discussed above. Consequently, these women formed themselves into a formidable prayer group, the "ZUMUTANMATA WOMEN ORGANIZATION" and began to organize prayer sessions and choir practices in different languages, English, Hausa, Tiv, Idoma, and Yoruba etc. They did this ostensibly and without regard to any denomination, to thank God for success of the war and also pray not only for peace but also for their husbands who had survived the war. They also prayed for the souls of those soldiers who did not come back including women and children.

By 1971 and with the permission of the Brigade Commander, other groups of people living around the area especially along Marian Road were allowed to attend Sunday Services and prayer worship at the centre. They organized and built a mud Church at the present site of the Army Medical Services (AMS) 13 Brigade but this was short-lived as the settling Army decided to use the place for the building of the Army Medical Services mentioned above. With this development, they moved and built another hut near the

"COLONIAL UPSTAIRS BUILDING" built in 1903 just the same year of the arrival of Mgr. Lejeune (CSSP) and the other Holy Ghost Fathers who had arrived Calabar that year to establish the CALABAR MISSION which has today become the Archdiocese of Calabar, Port Harcourt, Ikot Ekpene, Uyo, Ogoja and Abakaliki dioceses. That building is still standing strong today. Unfortunately, within a short period of time the women were also asked to vacate since the place was to be used for the construction of the QUARTER GUARD and THE ARMY NURSERY AND PRIMARY SCHOOL which are still standing strong this day. It is to be observed that all these happened before priests were appointed from the Sacred Heart Cathedral to administer to the Catholic Faithful there because things were very fluid and the situation, though the war had ended was still hazy. It is also worthy of note that this was a completely Christian and Muslim Faithful arrangement among themselves but the worshipping community cut across all denominations. However, as the gathering increased in numbers the group saw it necessary to split and the Protestant worshippers left the common hut for the Catholics and went to build their own at the T junction to the north of THE MAMMY MARKET while the Muslim Community went and built their Mosque some distance from the "COLONIAL UPSTAIRS BUILDING" which has served as the Brigade Commander's Guest House till this day. For now, that building is still in use and is reserved for the Brigade RSMs. It had earlier served Col Benjamin Adekunle and Col A. F. Vatzsa during the civil war. Then at a time, this refurbished Commander's building had served RSM Joshua Ajang, RSM Dominic Kwen, RSM Sunday Arukwe and Col. A. Waziri who were serving Brigade Commanders. But as the Christian Faithful relocated this time which was around the later end of the 1970s, and with the growth of Chaplain Services, the Brigade Authorities mapped out these distinct sites for the different worshipping communities. I could recall that we were always shifting halls for Sunday Masses at the centre while the communities continued to hold their prayer groups and assemblies at the hut because the hut was not conducive for the celebration of Mass. The third block which was actually a fabricated building was constructed with a beautiful sign board for Catholic Chaplaincy Services (RC) right at the entrance of the main gate of the Brigade Barracks.

Providentially in 1981, the indefatigable and charismatic Fr. then (Capt) E. F. Bako was posted to Calabar to relieve Fr. (Col) James F. Iyire who was re-assigned to the Headquarters, Lagos. He it was who actually kick-started the construction of the permanent Church on the grounds of the third fabricated building which by then was suitable for the celebration of Holy Mass and other Church ministrations. The Brigade Command donated forty thousand Naira (N40, 000) each to the three Denominations. With that sum Fr. Bako in 1984 proceeded to redesign and build the first permanent Catholic Church at the Brigade HQ which served the Chaplaincy for nearly twenty years. That Church is now being used as the Parish Hall. Today plans are in top gear to renovate and refurbish it for a modern and befitting Parish Hall. But between 1988 and 1989 before his transfer, Rev. Father Bako restructured the Church building by expanding it on the left side. In 1989 Bishop, then Fr. (Navy Lt.) Joseph Egerega was posted to the Chaplaincy. In 1996 he also started the reconstruction of the Fr. Bako CKC Church building by further extending it on the right wing. He also built a hall with glass windows behind it. In 2000 when Fr. (Lt) A. F. Maimagani was posted to CKC, he decided that a new Church be built at the site as there was no room for further extension of the Church anymore. A plan was drawn up to restructure the entire Church building not only to modern standards but for greater accommodation. With funds from their Annual Harvests and Bazaars, millions of Naira was raised to extend the Church building as well as maintain, equip and furnish the Chaplains' house. Fr. Bako then the new Director of Chaplain Services (RC) was invited, and he it was who laid the foundation for the reconstruction of the new church building in early 2003. The launching function and the architectural design were carried out during the time of the new Chaplain, Rev. Fr. (Maj) C. C. Iroegbu with the assistance of the "CHURCH WORKS COMMITTEE" of the Pastoral Council under Engr. Cletus Ibu.

Meanwhile Fr. C. C. Iroegbu was sent for Further Studies Overseas and was succeeded by Fr. (Maj) Emmanuel Nweke who took over the construction work of the new Church measuring about 40 by 25 sq. metres. Engr. Charles Chilokwu of "C. CUBE CONSTRUCTION COMPANY" Calabar, directed the construction of the new Church with "MESSRS FECO CONSTRUCTION COMPANY" as Consultants. The new Church was raised with 20 iron pillars and stanchions with green oven-baked aluminum roofing sheets while the steel works were done by FECO Construction Company. The block work was undertaken by "MESSRS HILASCO BUILDERS, (NIG.)", Calabar. All the floors and offices were paved in terrazzo with a porch measuring 12.5 sq. metres and a metal Cross designed by Kgt. Joe Ameke (KSM). The church has fifty-six glass windows and a gallery for the Choir. Mr. & Mrs. Ekene Odinka provided the marble lectern and some pillars while "THE MALDINI GRANITE COMPANY" erected the marble pillars. Between August 2004 and May 2005 the actual church building was literally completed and the foundation stone was personally laid by Fr. (Maj) Emmanuel Nweke. Rev. Fr. D. Dolan (SPS) presented a golden tabernacle to the Church. The arrival of Rev.Fr. (Cpt) N. I. Saleh in May 2006 saw to the planning of a well-organized Harvest Thanksgiving and Bazaar, the proceeds of which were used in purchasing the already envisaged generator and rewiring of the church. In 2009 the new church was further extended by 12.5 meters and this included a gallery with railings constructed with aluminum profiles and fancy glasses. Mr. & Mrs. G.A. Ufono donated the Stations of the Cross to the Church on plagues to match with the new marble altar.

It is also worthy of note to mention as part of this profile of the Church, that at the front of the church is the statue of Christ the King sitting and holding the Globe indicating that Christ is indeed the King of the universe: the King of Kings and Lord of Lords! This statue was equally donated by Kgt. Joe Ameke (KSM) and was dedicated by Bishop (Navy Cpt.) Joseph Egerega on his first pastoral visitation to the Chaplaincy in 2006. It would be recalled that it was while here as the Military Chaplain of CKC, Army Barracks Calabar that Pope St. John Paul II appointed him first Bishop of the newly created Diocese of Bomadi. (Cf. Ameke Joe, op. cit. 62-66)

(d) INDIGENOUS PRIESTS TO-DATE

Since its inception the Parish has been blessed with Rev. Fr. Emmanuel A. Ihwo (SPS) as the Indigenous Priest yet. He is the 4th son of Supol Jonathan Ihwo of the Nigeria Police who was a foundation member of Christ the King Chaplaincy in the early 1970s. He was ordained by Bishop John E. Ayah then Catholic Bishop of Ogoja at St. Patrick's Parish Church, Ikot Ansa Calabar on April 21, 2012. He is perhaps the first ever to be ordained from any Military Chaplaincy in Nigeria.

(e) INDIGENOUS RELIGIOUS OF CKC CHAPLAINCY
Since its inception the parish has not been blessed with any Indigenous Religious of the Chaplaincy yet.

(f) SENIOR SEMINARIANS IN TRAINING OF C.K.C PARISH
There has been no Senior Seminarian in training from the CKC Parish at the moment and ever since its inception to-date. Consquently, Administrator and Chaplains of the Parish should as a matter of urgency and grave concern organize prayer vigils constantly for Divine Vocations both to the Clerical and Religious Life. This should be encouraged through Homilies, Vocation Prayers and even Rallies for Vocations from among children of the Military together with children of the Navy and Police nationwide.

(g) SERVING CATECHISTS OF CHRIST THE KING PARISH
The following have served as Catechists of the Parish since its inception to-date:

(h) CHRIST THE KING PARISH CHOIR ASSOCIATION
The Christ the King Chaplaincy has three Choir groups. The most interesting and captivating aspect of Christ the King Chaplaincy Choir Association is the Zumutanmata Hausa Women's Choir. Perhaps the example set by this special choir should be emulated by all our Churches in the Archdiocese. It is an all-indigenous language Choir group.

CHURCH OF ASCENSION NJAGHASANG

ORIGINS: Tucked in within Akim Qua Clan of ancient Qua territory, this forest land was quite unknown to many in Calabar Metropolis until recently. I first came in contact with this area when one Mrs. Elizabeth Etim Okon nee Lucy, of St. Bernard's Parish, Marin Hill was to make school sweaters - cardigans for the boys of Immaculate Conception Seminary Mfamosing and Sacred Heart Int'l Girls' Secondary School, Marian Villa. When she proudly announced that she was residing at Njaghasang, the natural and logical question was where is the place situated? She informed me that the place is situated within the hilly Atimbo Axis of Akim Qua accessed either through Queen of Angels Road, Air Port Parish Akim Qua or through Air Port - Atimbo Road. On several occasions I had to go to her there to check on the cardigan vests assignment. But that seemed a long time ago yet it was precisely in the 1990s. However, and very providentially though, together with some other few others like Mr. Augustine Inyang, a prominent former Promoter of the Blue Army of Our Lady of Fatima, Mr. Dominic Edet, Miss Christiana Raphael, Mrs. Bernadette Augustine, Mr. Denis Udoh, etc. all of whom were attending St. Bernard's Parish Marian Hill, she expressed the need of opening up the place as a primary centre of evangelization viz. Mass Station. But it was actually through the impetus of the erstwhile Archbishop of Calabar, Most Rev. Dr. Joseph Edra who had at the 2008 Archdiocesan Synod given an order to Parishes within Calabar Metropolis to re-group and strategize on how they could establish and build new Parishes that the mooted project began to make sense. Before this and not very long, the Author was on transfer and Rev. Fr. Malachy Ephraim, the newly appointed Archdiocesan Chancellor and Parish Administrator of St. Bernard's Parish taking over from the Author in 2004, was full of zest and enthusiasm and in no time together with his Curates notably Fathers Cyril Essien, Jose-Maria Eyo, Ignatius Sam, Christopher Enang and lately Fathers Raphael Akpan and Kufre Emmanuel (MSP) began celebrating Sunday Masses for the people of the area. Fr. Malachy celebrated the first "Open Air" Mass on Njaghasang soil on Easter Monday March 24, 2008. However, it was not as simple as that because only people like Fr. Malachy Ephraim himself but most appreciably the erstwhile Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo, who's first Parish as Archbishop of Calabar he had ever established was the Njahasang Parish; they alone could tell what actually transpired and how it was like contemplating opening up a Catholic Church and a Catholic Parish for that matter in this God-forsaken territory. Among other things, this is what the Archbishop himself answering a question as to why he had established a Catholic Church in such a place had to say:

Well, I will take you back to the guiding principles of Canon Law (CJC 374) which among others direct that:" Each Diocese is to be divided into distinct parts or Parishes". Now, a parish is a certain 'Community of Christ's Faithful who are stably established' (not a proxy thing) with a particular Church …. and the care of the Parish is to be entrusted to a Parish Priest as Pastor under the authority of the Bishop. Before my arrival in the Archdiocese of Calabar, Njahasang was just a Mass station and I then immediately said 'let us raise it to a Quasi - Parish.' But even as a Quasi - Parish there was no timing, because there are some circumstances and requirements to be met before a Church becomes a Parish. A Quasi - Parish means "NOT YET ESTABLISHED AS A PARISH BECAUSE OF SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES" (Cf. CJC 516; Ascension Magazine, Vol 1, 2015,5).

Canon Law among others impresses upon Bishops to establish Christian communities wherever there is a stable Christian community and one needs to visit the Church of Ascension Njahasang today to see how stable and "what marvels the Lord has done, and this is the Lord's doing and is wonderful in our eyes; indeed, we are glad" (Cf. Ps. 126:3; Mtt 21:42). To make sure this task which ought to be done, was accomplished the Archbishop first set out to lay the responsibility of getting Njahasang off the ground by impressing upon the stronger and nearer Parishes around viz. Queen of the Angels Airport Parish, Parish of the Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa, St. Paul's Parish UNICAL together with St. Bernard's Parish Marian Hill as the major participant, to undertake the task. That was the leit motif and strategy. As to why such a Mass Station in the outskirts of Calabar should so quickly be established as a Quasi-Parish, the Archbishop simply reasoned that there was no need to wait where there was such an enthusiastic and willing people and most importantly, a fertile ground even though his principle was that no Parish could be created except there was a Church building, a priest's parsonage ready for the take off and most importantly the possibility of paying the Catechist's allowances. To cap it all, the Archbishop with speed as it were raised it to the status of a Quasi-Parish Parish sui juris on Ascension Day 2010, since this was the first Parish he ever had to establish on his transfer to the Archdiocese of Calabar from Ogoja Diocese. He then handed it over to administration of the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer – the Redemptorists' (CSSR) who were ready and willing to come on board and administer such a place as Njahasang.

This Church of Njahasang we are talking about started precisely with the first "Open-Air" Mass celebrated at the present site on Easter Monday, March 24, 2008 with the use of rented canopies and chairs for the Altar while the members made do with bamboo and palm fronds sheds. Then while on a pastoral visit to the place on Ascension Day April 24, 2013, Archbishop Joseph E. Ukpo raised the Church to the Parish status with the new tag "PARISH OF THE ASCENSION, NJAHASANG". Then he went on to appoint Rev. Fr. Johncross Nkanta (CSSR), as the first Parish Priest thereof. Thereafter, on December 24, 2015 the eve of Christmas while on pastoral visitation of the Quas-Parish, Archbishop Joseph Effiong Ekuwem who had taken over the administration of the Archdiocese of Calabar following his transfer thither from Uyo Diocese by His Holiness Pope Francis in June 2014 of that same year, donated a magnificent Tabernacle to the Church and at the same time confirmed the Parish with the new title of "CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION, NJAHGASANG" to the glory of God.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: It is always interesting to notice the marvelous ways of God because this church came into being "just like that" as people are wont to say. At first Rev. Fr. Malachy Ephraim, the St.

Bernard's Parish Administrator decided that using canopies and palm fronds shed for years since 2008, it was time to construct a modest thatched hut straight away instead of continuing to organize Church Services at "Open Air". Soon the population grew beyond expectation and even some Catholic members residing in the area but who previously had been attending Masses at St. Bernard's Marian Hill and the Holy Ghost Navy Chaplaincy some distance away, began to flock into the new Church. Then there was the compelling need to plan for the construction of a modest church to accommodate the ever increasing number of the Faithful. The opportunity to showcase the existence of this seeming novel Church, tucked away in the interior outskirts along the Atimbo axis of Calabar metropolis came in 2012 on the occasion of the Silver Jubilee Celebration of Fr. Malachy Ephraim, the St. Bernard's Parish Administrator cum Chancellor of the Archdiocese of Calabar. The celebration attracted quite a large attendance with Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo also in attendance including hundreds of priests, the Religious and thousands of the Catholic and Protestant Faithful far and near. Rev. Fr. Malachy in a heart - renting and emotion-laden appeal narrated the existence of and the need to build a Church at Njahasang. Then he went on to show them the plan of the new church and exhorted the congregation to assist in the construction of the new church. In response the people as also the Archbishop in tow promised see to it that the construction of the church started as soon as possible. There after the St. Bernard's Parish donated Five and a half Million Naira (N5Mlln) to kick start the work which was completed on schedule and commissioned by the Archbishop with great pomp in 2014 with the new title of a Quasi Parish of Church of Ascension Njahasang to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

OUR LADY OF PERPETUAL HELP CHAPLAINCY, UCTH

ORIGINS: In 1982 the University of Calabar a.k.a UNICAL was granted the accreditation to open its doors for a new intake of freshmen and women to usher in the new Faculty of Medical Sciences known today as the School of Medicine UNICAL. With this scenario a new Hostel accommodation was constructed for the Nurses' Wing of the Faculty within the Faculty grounds along UNICA Hotels and Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida Bye-pass. Instead of attending Morning Masses with the other Catholic students of the University in their hostels especially in Hostel Six as at the time, the Author decided to grant the Catholic nurses one Mass a week at their hostel grounds. This seemed to have remained so as certain other categories of Catholic students opted to attend Masses there too. But in 2012 when Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Bekomson was appointed the Chaplain, he first began by using canopies to provide accommodation for the celebration of Masses there beginning with the first Open Air Solemn Mass celebrated by his humbleself with 45 members at noon with canopies on Ash Wednesday February 13, 2013. The first Sunday Mass was celebrated on Sunday September 8th 2013 with 130 members at 8am. On October 20th the first chaplaincy harvest was held with Mrs. Helen Bassey as Chairperson of the Harvest Committee. On January 2nd, 2014, the first Infant Baptism was celebrated for three Candidates while the first Adult Baptism came up on April 19th 2014 with six Candidates on April 20th. At that same Solemn Mass, 11 Candidates received their First Holy Communion in the Chaplaincy. Thereafter there was the compelling need to provide a befitting separate Chapel for the Medical students of the University. He made appeals and organized functions inviting friends, some VIPs and well-wishers who donated a substantial sum with which he started the construction of the new Chapel. His Lordship Most Rev. Dr. Joseph Edra Ukpo sanctioned the opening of the new Chaplaincy with the canonical name tag of "Our Lady of Perpetual Help Chaplaincy, UCTH – Calabar.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: According to Fr. Bekomson himself, the Chaplain, to kick start the construction of the new Chapel he had to begin with a modest sum of (N5,000,000) which he garnered from Functions, Bazaars and Donations as stated above and on March 3rd 2015 Archbishop Joseph Effiong Ekuwem laid the foundation stone for the construction of the chapel. At completion, about Five Million Naira (N5,000,000) was gathered and ploughed back towards the completion of the furnishings. With its construction completed, the Church was dedicated and commissioned with a 21st Century Sacristy an ultra-modern rest room, a breastfeeding room, a digital studio and a technical room for sermon recording and projection. This Modern Chapel also has in tow a Modern Chaplain's office and a beautiful Chapel of Perpetual Adoration to the greater Glory of God.

Emmanuel Bekomson has been the sole Father In-Charge, but the following Priests have also served in the Chaplaincy at the special invitation of the Father In-charge or as Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed by him.

ST. PATRICK'S IKOT ANSA DEANERY
ST. PATRICK'S PARISH IKOT ANSA, CALABAR

O L D C H U R C H N E W C H U R C H

(a) ORIGINS: Quite until the 1980s, what is now called Great St. Patrick's Parish, Ikot Ansa Parish - named after the great Apostle of Ireland, St. Patrick (386-461 AD) and perhaps more so, on account of the very existence of St. Patrick's College–Ikot Ansa, the worshipping community of which were originally the Catholic Student's whose Chapel known as St. Patrick's Chapel was their place of worship. Therefore, we can very correctly say as we were wont to in our Geography Lesson days to the effect that just as: "Egypt is the Gift of the River Nile" so also today the "St. Patrick's Parish Ikot Ansa, Calabar is the Gift of St. Patrick's College, Ikot Ansa Calabar (SPACO)". According to Rev. Fr. Patrick Corcoran SPS, the origins of St. Patrick's Parish, Ikot Ansa, Calabar are to be found in the history of St. Patrick's College Chaplaincy. In 1935 according to records, the erstwhile St. Joseph's College of Cluny a.k.a Sacred Heart College Calabar, which was established under the legendary Bishop Shanahan as Prefect Apostolic of Southern Nigeria and by the indefatigable Fr. Louis Lena (CSSp) in 1911/12 was transferred from Sacred Heart grounds to the present site and renamed St. Patrick's College, Ikot Ansa with Rev. Fr. Patrick J. Costello as the first Principal. With the establishment of St. Thomas; Ogoja in 1937, Fr. Costello was reassigned thereto as the first Principal of the Polytechnic cum Higher School but in 1939 he had to return to Ireland to take over as the new Superior General of the SPS and successor to Mgr. Patrick Whitney. Back in Ireland, he assisted a lot financially towards the construction of the permanent building including the Main St. Patrick's College Block/Chapel. But it was Fr. Charles Meehan CSSp, a.k.a "Fr. ? s? ? kp?-Ub?k" who championed the prospecting of the land in 1937 for the construction of the permanent buildings including the Main College Block to replace the mud and "prefab" buildings of the early 1930s as the students' in-take catapulted. In fact, this also must have been the reason behind the establishment of Holy Family College (HFC) in 1943 to take the load off SPC as most parents preferred sending their sons and daughters to the "Catholic Mission Schools". It is worthy of note that "Fr. ? s? ? kp?-Ub?k" was tipped to take over from Bishop Shanahan as Vicar Apostolic of Calabar - Southern Nigeria, but Bishop Moynagh was the preferred choice by his colleagues viz. Bishop McGettrick and co. He later left for America because he was only a Volunteer of the Nigerian Mission. Much later, Fathers Hugh MacNelly and James Charles Hagan (SPS) completed the permanent Fathers' Rectory in 1939-1940 which still stands strong till today. The constructions of SPC buildings could only be completed in 1942 by the indefatigable Bro Birmingham, the Mission Architect and builder because building materials were scarce during the Second World War (1939-1945). He it was who also built Sacred Heart Cathedral, all of which are still standing strong today as noted above (Cf. T. Kiggins 172-6). The College Main Block with class rooms had the Chapel on the first floor "UPSTAIRS". It is also worthy of note but more so providential that Fr. Joe Kilmartin (SPS) while yet a secondary school pupil was so fascinated by the St. Patrick' Missionary Society that he joined the Society after his secondary school. Then while still a student of All Hallows, Maynooth in the Society and immediately after his Ordination, he was posted to Calabar where he became the second Principal of the College in 1939 after Fr. P. J. Costello. Thereafter he was appointed the Supervisor of Catholic Schools in the then Diocese of Calabar.

The St. Patrick's Chapel remained so until the 1960's when the last as it were of the Missionary Principals of the College, Fr. Oliver O'Sullivan popularly known as "OO" or O^2 was posted to the College by Bishop James Moynagh. He it was who began the construction of the first ever official and separate Chapel of the College in 1965. But the Chapel also could not be completed due to the civil war (1967 -1970) until 1985 when at their celebration of the Golden Jubilee of the Foundation of St. Patrick's College (1935 -1985), the St. Patrick's Old Boys Association contributed money to complete the work. On completion, the Chapel was dedicated and commissioned by then Bishop B. D. Usanga with pomp and fanfare to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As noted already, the Church building of St. Patrick's College Chapel which by implication has also become the St. Patrick's Parish Church today, was started by the Principal Fr. Oliver O'Sulivan (SPS) in 1965 as discussed above. The bulk of the expenses were borne by the Teaching Staff of St. Patrick's College. Another great source came mostly from the Mass Stipends received by the Missionary Staff from Ireland over the previous years. In fact, the concrete foundation and pillars were almost completed before the civil war. The necessary roofing materials had earlier been purchased even before the foundation because this was the vogue in those days. Nobody even "native" private individuals ever started a "permanent building" in those days without first making sure that most of the necessary materials were on ground viz. the blocks – usually molded on site and left "to mature sometimes for years", doors and window frames, purlines, rafters etc. Sometimes the zinc for the roof also would have been purchased beforehand. For example, my uncle, Chief Lawrence Mbat had purchased the zinc for the new family compound years before the civil war, but the building was completed by his children only in the 1980s after his demise. In those days before reaching the window level, the frames of doors and windows would have to be fixed first and "concreted" before continuing to the wall-plate level. All this is to show how the St. Patrick's Fathers were painstaking, meticulous, systematic, and methodical in their undertakings including undertakings like buildings and constructions of the "SPACO" buildings we have come to admire now and before.

The effect of the war took its toll especially as St. Patrick's grounds became a veritable Army Barracks both for the Biafran military and subsequently the Federal Army Contingents. When things normalized it was discovered that all those materials had gone without a trace with lootings characteristic of the war. Then worse still, with "Government TAKE OVER" of Schools, the whole project was completely stalled and the students had to continue using the "Upstairs" Chapel as before. Providentially and as they say: "kpukpru ?kp? idige idi?k, koro eti ?kp? ediw?r? do", because while as always, hope was seen not to be completely lost, something very good always came out of it. In 1982-83 School Session and with the resuscitation of a very virile and dynamic St. Patrick's Alumni a.k.a "St. Patrick's Old Boys Association" under the Presidency of Joseph Nyambi erstwhile Clerk of the Old Cross River State House of Assembly, one of the 1943-1948 College Set, as also Archbishop Usanga's classmate including His Royal Majesty, Amanyanabo (Senator) Francis Ellah of Port Harcourt, the "Old Boy's esprit de corps and Cammeradie was greatly fired and enkindled in them, and with the up-coming Golden Jubilee of St. Patrick's College in the air, they were roused to action. One of the cards on the table as a commemorative project for the epoch making Celebration was the completion of the St. Patrick's Chapel. Another great champion of the cause – another blessing one could say, was another "Old Boy", the Hon Sylvester Umezeoke, Speaker of the House of Representatives in the Second Republic (1979-1983). Incidentally, Joseph Nyambi was also his counterpart as Clerk in the Cross River State House of Assembly as commented above. With an array of men of timber and calibre like these, the project became a fait accompli. Another saving grace was that Fr. Michael Golden and Fr. Sean O'Dowd, themselves too, St. Patrick's Missionary Priests were also teaching in the "TAKE-OVER" St. Patrick's College. These two succeeded in appealing to the Dutch/Irish Firm – the Royal Netherlands Harbour Works, overseeing the Construction of the Calabar Harbour Works at the time to provide skilled labour for the roofing of the Chapel. The Chapel was completed in time for the Golden Jubilee Celebration of the Foundation of the College in 1985.

In the intervening years, it so happened that when the civil servants living close by in the newly completed Federal Housing Estate observed that Fr. Sean O'Dowd would be celebrating the Easter Ceremonies and Masses in the Chapel in English, they began attending the College Chapel, their numbers increasing day by day. However, it is also worthy of note that during the 1950's and 1960's the lay Irish well qualified Catholic teachers and Irish Graduate Teachers of the College were co-opted into the school system by Bishop Moynagh and these have also been acknowledged below as notable WHO IS WHO members of St. Patrick's Parish congregation who generously contributed towards the building of the Chapel while the College was yet only a Chaplaincy.

With this scenario, Archbishop Usanga raised the status of the Chapel to that of a Quasi-Parish with Fr. Linus Effiong as first Canonical Fr. In-Charge a.k.a Parish Priest. He was also appointed Tutor to also teach in the College. Fr. D. Dolan (SPS) succeeded him in 1990 and retired both as Vicar General and Parish Priest in 1999. However, he continued to assist in Communion Calls and Visits to the sick until 2012 when he bade "Good Bye" to his second home of Calabar amidst tears from admiring Parishioners and the Efik people. Fr. James Kelleher, SPS who succeeded him in January 2000 expanded the Church building and completely renovated it. He also established the St. Patrick's Nursery School using the defunct Higher School buildings and grounds. In 2010, he was succeeded by Fr. Patrick Corcoran, SPS but has continued to live and work there as THE ST. PATRICK'S RECTORY has since become the "MOTHER HOUSE" AND CENTRE FOR SPS SOCIETY PROMOTIONS AND DIRECTORATE FOR ST. PATRICK'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY ASPIRANTS RECRUITMENT for East and West Africa.

Another good thing that worked out for the Catholic Archdiocese of Calabar as also Ogoja Diocese and vouchsafed by St. Patrick's Parish was over the issue on the "RETURN OF SCHOOLS" "which has turned out to be another contribution so to speak of St. Patrick's Parish towards the growth of the Catholic Church and School in Calabar and Ogoja. But why and how? In 2001 there was a grand marriage ceremony here in the St. Patrick's Church at which a priest friend of the groom had come all the way from the Diocese of Lafia in Nasarawa State to participate at the Wedding. On his arrival, he happened to meet Mr. Fabian Odu, then Tutor in the College but now the serving Catechist of this Parish. The priest visitor on arrival was lucky to have met Mr. Odu in the Colleges premises that day as there was nobody around to assist him. After introducing himself, Mr. Odu took him to the Father's house to arrange for his lodging. Then after the Wedding, he reconnoitered round the compound and was very attracted and captivated by the beautiful lay-out of the compound and what he saw. The following day as he was interacting with Mr. Odu, he was flabbergasted over the issue of Government "TAKE OVER" of this beautiful compound built by the Catholic Church. He, being a Northerner and acquainted with some top shots in the Federal Government, there and then promised to assist in introducing the Catholic Authorities in Calabar to the Federal Government to commence procedures for the return of their schools. Mr. Odu even had to go over to him at Lafia after informing Fr. Kelleher of his interaction with him.

Then Fr. Kelleher who had just taken over from Fr. Dolan decided to contact the Archbishop on the issue. Sponsored by Archbishop Usanga, Mr. Odu set out for Lafia and afterwards Makurdi Diocese, still to get briefings concerning the matter. He came back armed with cartons of documents on how to set about the proposal. Providentially, it was just at the time the issue of the "Return of Schools" was being debated in the Cross River State House of Assembly. This became an added impetus and a fillip to the Catholic Committee set up by Archbishop Usanga which also greatly involved Mr. Odu. In fact, it was this Committee that spearheaded the setting up of the Government Committee on" THE RETURN OF SCHOOLS" in the first place. However, the Protestants were jittery and almost refused to have any part to play in the whole affair. But Governor Donald Duke was completely interested as seemingly not belonging to any Denomination as everybody could notice. Secondly, the Protestants had very few schools in the State and saw nothing as a big deal here. For them, knowing that most of those in Government were "their" Protestant Government Officials and Administrators, hence their nonchalant attitude and having nothing to worry about.

However, an enlarged Committee which brought in the Protestants as well as Ogoja Diocesan Representatives of Northern Cross River was set up by Government. The Protestants had no choice but to see themselves, notably the Presbyterian Church of Nigeria as stake holders. This moot point should not be lost to our readers because there is always "no smoke without a fire beneath". The long and short of it was that the Governor agreed to sign the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between Government and Mission Schools Proprietors which had led to the eventual return of schools and granting of a TAKE-OFF GRANT OF FIVE MILLION NAIRA (N5,000,000) to be given to each school returned by Government. But it is sad to observe and declare here, that till this day only one Catholic School in Calabar, namely SPC received the Grant. The rest is history as they say. But without the Catholic Church and the impetus of the visiting Lafia priest, perhaps we would still be pressurizing Government for the "RETURN OF SCHOOLS" back to their Mission Proprietors till this day. It is also instructive and very plausible to surmise that it was this issue that prompted the Government of Anambra State under Governor Peter Obi, himself also a devout Catholic to the core, to return schools in that State within that time.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION PARISH, IKOT ANSA

ORIGINS: Immaculate Conception Parish Ikot Ansa was first visited and given that tag Name after the Blessed Virgin Mary in 1904 as an "Out-Station" of Sacred Heart Cathedral by Fr. Patrick McDermott grace Ü la the legendary Fr. Louis Lena (CSSp) the pioneer Missionary and Head of the Calabar Mission according to records, with Chief Thomas O. Effiom as the first teacher and Catechist thereof. There were initial problems rearing their heads as often happens with every good thing that occurs in life, and most poignantly by the Presbyterian Mission, the pioneer 1846 Missionary Church in the land which never wanted any rivalry or competition in the Calabar Church a.k.a CMS. The Ikot Ansa Qua community was also another snag and resistant to the new paradigm and NOVEL CATHOLIC CHRISTIANITY CULTURE which they feared could pose a grimace to their Ekpe Confraternity. Even as late as the 1960s there were still problems as I could recall my encounter as a Senior Seminarian thereat in 1962 while addressing the people on the position of Christian members in the Catholic Church and membership in Ekpe Society following the Retreat that was preached by the indefatigable pioneer Vincentian Missionaries whom Bishop James Moynagh had invited from Ireland to evangelize in the Archdiocese. Ekpe culture and artifacts coloured the entire life of the GREAT NKONIB PEOPLES OF IKOT ANSA. In fact, the first "Church Bell" to summon the people to come to receive the Missionaries was rung from Ekpe Shrine. In time, things leveled out and the people discovered to their great amazement and delight, that CHRISTIAN CATHOLICISM a.k.a "ROMAN CATHOLIC MISSION" as it was tagged in those days was afterwards people friendly, and Ikot Ansa citizens and gentry acquiesced in very magnanimous gestures. That is why even today, there is still a sort of symbiosis and cooperation especially among THE GREAT NKONIB PEOPLES OF IKOT ANSA and also between the CATHOLIC CHURCH and the Leaders of the town. The gigantic Church construction currently going on in the town bears eminent testimony to the goodwill of Ikot Ansa people. On account of this and not much later, the Missionaries added to upliftment of the town in 1912 THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION SCHOOL which was opened on the land donated by the Ntoi in Council at the furthest end of the town near the Cemetery, thanks to the Assistant Chief of the town, Ntoe Iso Ekpo Iso I, who had accepted the Gospel, got converted and was already a baptized Christian.

As a child, my father specifically narrated this important event to me because what everybody knew or heard about then was THE SACRED HEART CATHEDRAL. My father was a pupil of Chief Thomas Effiom at the Sacred Heart School and since then, I have never forgotten that fact. Also I served as a Senior Seminarian in 1962 as noted above at Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa on Apostolic Work, but it was only a Mission Station under Sacred Heart Cathedral then. Thirdly, my first love and choice was St. Patrick's College Ikot Ansa while taking the 1950 RCM Schools Common Entrance to the College having been encouraged and prodded on by my mother. Therefore, I seem to have had a very clear and early knowledge about Ikot Ansa in the first place but it was bush, bush and bush - from the General Post Office along the Old Odukpani Road through Ikot Ansa. As can be garnered from very reliable records, most of the Holy Ghost Fathers then used to celebrate Mass there for the people from time to time as they always did during their bush treks to the so-called Out- Stations. Some of these early CSSp priests apart from Frs. Louis Lena and Patrick McDermott who were the pioneer priests and founders of the Sacred Heart Cathedral in 1903, include Bishop, then Fr. Josef Shanahan (1906), Fr. Louis Ward (1907), Fr. Joseph Kraft (1909), Fr. Franz Howell (1915), Fr. James Mellette (1918), Fr. Edward Knaebel, (1921), Fr. Thomas Ronayne (1922) Fr. later Archbishop Charles Heerey (1925), Fr. Charles Meehan(1932) a.k.a "FR. ? S? ? KP? UB? K" as he was fondly called by the Efik people for being so enigmatic, ebullient, energetic and charismatic, etc. People should come to terms with this sort of situation and impression as noted elsewhere and try to understand that most of these early Mission Stations could be visited only a few times and sometimes in years. The first and most serious reason was due to the paucity of priests; for example, Fr. Lena had to schedule his visits to such places as Ikot Ene in Akpabuyo territory which he founded in 1908. Then consider far away St. Michael's Oban (1914) or more so, Use Uruan and IDU (1906) Anua (1909) etc. on the Mainland. They were traversing through thick forests and jungles, through rivers and rivulets. Well, since they had no power of bilocation, they could not be in many places at the same time, but only one place at a time. Hence it was near impossibility that any other station, no matter how near to Sacred Heart Cathedral, could ever be visited for months or even years coupled with the fact that the best option for them was to go by canoe to the nearest station on the river or near a river. Then one can understand why places like Mpot in northern Oban as far as one could recollect, had only been visited once by the Author in the company of Archbishop Brian D. Usanga throughout his over thirty years administration of the Archdiocese of Calabar. This place was equally visited by Archbishop Joseph Ukpo only in his first arrival here; ditto, Archbishop Joseph Ekuwem, similarly on his arrival in Calabar Archdiocese too. Consider also that places like Iko Ekperem in Akpet Central - Biase, some miles from Umon and border town with Ebonyi State, has not been visited since 1987 till today. But why? Your guess is as good as mine!

But being one of the most important towns after Sacred Heart Cathedral and Efut Abua, Ikot Ansa is also one of the oldest Mission Stations in the history of the Calabar Mission in Qua land and was regularly visited later on by the Holy Ghost Fathers and subsequently by the newly arrived St. Patrick's Missionaries from Ireland including Fr. Matthew McGrath, Fr. Philip O'Connor, Fr. William O'Donnel, Fr. Patrick McKenna, Fr. Thomas Fitzgerald, Fr. Kevin Longworth, Fr. Maurice Hayes, Fr. Oliver O'Sullivan and Fr. Denis O'Hara to mention but a few. It was because of that same enthusiasm the people exhibited that fired their zeal to promptly come out not only for Sunday Services but also to attend Bible and Catechism classes. At one point Tata Obong Effiom Okon Effiom a member of the Ntoe's Council offered his premises which later became the site of the first Church building. Many women and children were drawn to the Church and a number of them attended Catechism classes and received Baptism and First Holy Communion. Some of the chiefs baptized between 1904 – 1911 included Ntoe Nyong Agbor alongside Chief Ansa Eno, Tata Obong Okon Effiom himself with his children, one of whom Denis Okon Effiom became a Seminarian who could have been the first priest before Cardinal Ekandem. As their numbers increased and by this time with the arrival of Fr. Thomas Ronayne as the Cathedral Administrator, a new site was acquired in 1928 for the building of a permanent structure which was later completed by Fr. Charles Meehan in 1938. In 1934 Immaculate Conception was raised to the status of Head Station – a sort of Quasi Parish and remained so till 1976 when it was officially detached from the Sacred Heart Cathedral and created an autonomous Parish by the indefatigable Archbishop Brian D. Usanga with Chief Gregory Effiong as Parish President and Madam Lucy Okon as the first Eka Iban - Woman Leader. Fr. Francis was appointed later in October that same year to take over from me as the official Parish Priest while I was simply Father In-Charge in the pre-Vatican II position. From this great ancient Church, Immaculate Conception has as it were given birth to the erection of St. Patrick's Parish - Ikot Ansa, St. Charles - Lwanga Essien Town, St. Francis Chaplaincy - Eburutu Barracks and St. Joseph's Parish - Esuk Utan. Other highlights in the chronology and growth of Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa was the construction of the permanent Father's Rectory with the Foundation laid in 1986 by Fr. Patrick Ene Etim and which Foundation Stone was later blessed in 1997 by Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano, the Apostolic Pro-Nuncio to Nigeria during his pastoral visitation of the Archdiocese.

Other most important events of Ikot Ansa Church came about in 1989 with the expansion of the 1928 Church by Mgr. Emmanuel Okon Idem as also the building of the Parish Hall adjacent to the Church. In 1993 Fr. Michael U. Offiong constructed the perimeter fence of the Church while in 1995 Fr. Charles Etim saw to the pulling down of the old Parish Hall and laying the Foundation of the Archbishop Ukpo Hall which was completed within recorded time. In commemoration of Archbishop Edra Ukpo's 75th Birthday in 2012, the 1928 Church was completely pulled down to give way to the gigantic ultra-modern Church still under construction. That same year on March 11, 2012, Fr. Felix Eja Ojong dedicated the St. Vincent de Paul Chapel of Adoration in honour of late Ntoe Vincent Otu Iso. Finally, ten years later in 2015, the Fr. Charles Parish Hall was demolished to give way to the two-storeyed magnificent "MATER IMMACULATA HALL" for the Catholic Men Organization of the Parish. It is hoped that with the completion of such state - of - the art new Basilica Church thanks to the magnanimity and munificence of the great Nkonib Clan citizenry, under the leadership of HRM Ndidem Dr. Patrick Inok Oqua Agbor V, the Paramount Ruler of the Calabar Municipality and Grand Patriarch of the Qua Nation, the Authorities of the Archdiocese of Calabar will do well to raise this ancient premier Church in Qua land to the dignity of a PRO-CATHEDRAL, sui juris.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: From available records the Ntoi in Council generously arranged for the donation of the land both for the Church building and for the School, but since the school came much later on, the land donated for the Church building could not accommodate the school buildings. That is why both of them were not sited together in the same premises as is the norm. It is the same thing that happened to many stations in the course of their history. Some stations where the school building also served as Church had to provide another site specifically for the building of the Church and vice versa. In Ikot Ansa, the Church building came first for obvious reasons especially for lack of personnel since the Holy Ghost Fathers were stretched beyond limits. They were looking after "the whole world" as it were and could not afford Ikot Ansa the luxury of a school at the time. Therefore, Ikot Ansa children had to attend school at Sacred Heart and the Convent. By the time St. Patrick's Missionaries arrived, they made education their primary focus as noted above. In the instances of both Bishops Moynagh and McGettrick, they deemed it fit to provide Ikot Ansa with a school which was sited "far away from the town" as it appeared, because Immaculate Conception School grounds were donated well after the main residential area of the town ie. near the old lkot Ansa Cemetery. Today the town has swallowed up all that including the new Ikot Ansa Town Hall/Assembly. But as noted already, in 1926 the Holy Ghost Fathers under the indefatigable Fr. Francis Howell who completed the construction of St. Mary's "Church School" Efut Abua, the foundation of which had been laid by the legendary Fr. Josef Kraft also laid the foundation of Ikot Ansa Church having taken possession of the strategic piece of land the Chiefs of Nkonib Clan - Ikot Ansa donated them. The Church foundation was laid as noted above in 1928 and was completed ten years later in 1938. It was a very magnificent Gothic Church building judged in the context of those ancient days of the Church's history in Calabar. In 1982 under the ebullient Msgr. then Fr. Emmanuel O. Idem, the Church was expanded from the two side wings with additions to the right and left of the old Church, thus making it into a form of the Cross. In 1984 Fr. Patrick Ene Etim laid the foundation of the Rectory building and in 1997 Fr. Malachy Ephraim completed the Father's house and renovated the Church for commissioning with the Plague blessed by the Apostolic Pro-Nuncio, Most Rev. Dr. Carlo Vigano Maria. In 2012 with the phenomenal increase in the Church's population, the beautiful Church was completely pulled down for the reconstruction of a new and much bigger Church by Fr. Felix Eja Ojong to the greater Glory of God. But this notwithstanding, it looks a bit naïve to pull down a monument of a century, and as noted elsewhere, it borders on insensitivity to the goodwill and honour of the Elders of the town as they behold their idol turned into a rubble and debris. The memory of such a Century Church is being lost to generations yet unborn. Why not make a profitable use of it as a Parish Hall, or in the alternative turn it into a veritable museum!

HIGHLIGHTS, PESONALITIES & DEVELOPMENT TRENDS IN IKOT ANSA PARISH

In October 1978 and with the arrival of Rev. Sr. (Dr.) Ruth McSweeney of the Medical Missionaries of Mary (MMM), there was a sort of paradigm shift in some postings made by the indefatigable Archbishop Brian D. Usanga. Rev. Sr. Ruth took over from Fr. Francis O. Mbaba as the new Editor of the Premier Nigerian Catholic Magazine: CATHOLIC LIFE while Fr. Francis O. Mbaba took over from me as the first Parish Priest of Immaculate Conception Parish. Then I had to take over full responsibility of the Premier Catholic Press: St. Theresa's Press as General Manager thereof while Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Okon Akpan the Assistant Manager was appointed Bursar of the newly opened Bigard Memorial Campus of the "ENUGU" Eastern Nigeria Major Seminary which later metamorphosed into St. Joseph Major Seminary Ikot Ekpene. Rev. Fr. Justin S. Ukpong (1974-1975) was given a Scholarship to study Sacred Scripture at the prestigious Gregorian University, Rome, while Rev. Fr. Aloysius B. Ebong took over as the Administrator of the Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar. Being divinely endowed with wisdom, Fr. Francis Mbaba plunged himself into the work of conversion and many souls were added to the Ikot Ansa Church with numerous Baptisms including Marriages. With great zeal and focus, he saw to the complete reorganization and phenomenal growth of the Catholic Women Organization (CWO) which brought hundreds of women young and old and even girl children to the Church including of course, the legendary premier Nigerian Library Curator, Lagos, Chief Mrs. Regina Ekei Oku and this eminently brought about the phenomenal increase in Ikot Ansa Church population (Cf. URUAN-EFIK Landmarks & Contributions to NIGERIA, xxxv). Rev. Fr. Michael Ekpenyong (1979 -1981) ordained together with six others by the legendary Dominic Cardinal Ekandem who took over founded as it were, the Lay Apostolate Association of the Sacred Heart which assisted the Church in many areas particularly in the sanitary condition of the Parish premises. He was also instrumental to the establishment and growth of the Catholic Youth Organization of Nigeria (CYON). He employed the Organization to organize carnivals which served as a veritable medium towards the conversion of the young and children in tow. He also commenced and laid the foundation of the Reverend Fathers' House. Rev. Fathers Edmund Fitzgibbons (1951-1954) and Michael Golden (1981- 1982) exhibited both in their personal spiritual life and piety the maintenance of harmony, cooperation and unanimity of purpose among the parishioners which endeared them to many Ikot Ansa citizens at home and abroad.

The Rev. Fathers of the 1980s Fr. Sylvester T. Mfon Obong Udo, Fr. Augustine Kokoette Bassey, Fr. Pius Okon and Fr. Patrick Ene Etim (1982-1988) were all equally instrumental to the completion of the Rev. Fathers 'House from the foundation. They established and re-organized the Parish Choirs into three choir groups which culminated in their participation at the Archdiocesan Choir Carnivals and Choir Competitions. Under their administration the CWO attained an enviable standard winning Trophies in cooking and other activities. Rev. Fr. Patrick Ene Etim in particular singled out himself in his eloquence and preaching which converted and brought many into the fold of Christ. He was likewise instrumental to the establishment and re-organization of St. Joseph's Esuk Utan as an Autonomous Mission Station which has now grown into an autonomous Parish. This led to the introduction of the Wednesday Devotion and Immaculate Conception Fellowship. Mgr. then Fr. Emmanuel Okon Idem's achievements (1988-1991) were astronomical, appreciative and commendable. First, he was instrumental to the completion of the Rev. Fathers' House as also the extension of the 1928 Church from the two wings as stated above. Second, he equally restructured the Church activities by introducing a number of Spiritual exercises viz. Lay Apostolate Associations; Legion of Mary, Blue Army, Charismatic Renewal, St. Vincent de Paul, St. Anthony's Guild, etc. Third, He expanded the Sacristy and constructed special pews for Oratory Masses in private, for persons who needed such special attention and services. Fourth, he also constructed the Senior Seminarians' house. Fifth as the first indigenous Priest of the Parish, he organized world-class retreats which attracted both the Ministry of numerous priests and Professionals to preach, administer or give talks where necessary. These activities attracted not a few and many were converted and received the Sacraments of Baptism and the Blessed Eucharist. Being interested and committed to the welfare of the Ikot Ansa community, he brought much peace and good fellowship among the various segments of the community as he mediated in their disputes and problems between elders, women, youths and even individuals. He later ended up converting his Protestant Presbyterian parents into the Catholic Faith.

Some of the Officers of the Catholic Men's Organization (CMO) and the women's counterpart the CWO, made great contributions towards the growth and welfare of Ikot Ansa Church. Between 1998 and up to the present day, the Catholic Men's Association which was the nomenclature up till the late 1970s became registered as the Catholic Men's Organization and had among her premier Presidents, Ntoe Lawrence Ekpo Iso (1988-2001) and Sir Christopher Ekpenyong Iso (2001-2003) who's tenure increased the numerical strength of members to a reasonable size due to constant home to home visitation of both new and prospective members. The construction of the Parish Hall which then served as Church for Masses and other Church activities was planned and executed during their regime. Equally during the tenures of Sir Michael Egbudu (2003-2006), Engr. Francis Ekpo Archibong (2006-2012) and finally Prof. Ayuk Essoka (2012 -2018), the Ikot Ansa Parish CMO was divided into nine Family groups or “Saints; viz. St. Anthony, St. Charles, St. Francis, St. Michael, St. Patrick, St. Joseph, St. Paul, St. Peter and St. Raphael groups respectively. They have their counterparts in the Parish CWO also and these groups among other things were programmed to see to the growth of their various interests and also foster competitions among them. The Mater Immaculata project mentioned earlier came specifically during Engr. Francis Archibong's tenure a “Water Project” to secure water both for the use of the Rev. Fathers, inmates around the Church premises and the community at large. In particular, Prof Essoka (2012 -2018) saw to the erection of a beautiful structure to embellish the environment and make it attractive such that many in the community passing through the Church patronize the Water Project” thus raising a substantial revenue into the Parish coffers. This welfare scheme has also come handy towards relieving the situation of bereaved members, those embarking on marriage and other social benefits. On the other hand, as the mantle of leadership has fallen on the new President of CMO, Mr. Dominic Essien Ene, it has been his dream to prosecute the Mater Immaculata Project to its logical conclusion as well as assist their CWO counterpart in their numerous welfare projects for their womenfolk as also for beneficiaries in Ikot Ansa community and environs. Mr. Ene's regime was inaugurated in April, 2018 for the service of God and humanity.

(c) SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of Immaculate Conception both formerly as a Mission Station and more so since the time of the 1940's during which St. Patrick's Fathers were teaching in SPC, then after the elevation to the status of a Parish sui juris in 1976, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

[COURTESY OF VERY REV. FR. CHRISTOPHER OKPU & CATECHIST MALACHY EDEM]

ST. PETER'S PARISH – EDIBA QUA TOWN

(a)ORIGINS: Until 1977, St. Peter's Catholic Church Ediba was under what is now known as St. Bernard's Parish, Marian Hill while the latter was still not yet an autonomous Parish but an established Mission Station administered from St. Mary's Efut Abua. Ediba Catholic Church as it were, was founded by the indefatigable Legionary, Ete Leo Etim Udo then a prominent Legionary of note in Sacred Heart Cathedral. During the civil war (1967-1970), many refugees from the Mainland now Akwa Ibom State, who could summon courage and manage to cross to Calabar as there was no way anybody could come thither by land, swarmed into that whole area of the Calabar Metropolis, especially into the slums and undeveloped areas. They opened up bush paths in order to settle there in safety. This area at the time was administered under St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral Parish owing to the fact that most of the foot paths crisscrossed and meandered into Efut territory. As it so happened some of these "refuges" a.k.a Internally Displaced persons (IDPs) who were Catholics soon discovered to their eternal delight that there was a booming Catholic Church there within Efut land with so many others equally displaced from the Mainland. They therefore registered to frequent Church Services there especially for Sunday Masses. On discovering such a large influx of "stranger" elements in their midst, the Legionaries set to work visiting those members at their places of settlement. It soon dawned on them that if a suitable church could be procured; the "strangers" would very gladly prefer attending Church services within their slum areas. That was what motivated Ete Leo and his co-Legionaries from Sacred Heart Cathedral and St. Mary's Efut Abua to seek for a suitable place to establish a church there. This paid off as they discovered a piece of land at the tail-end border of the Airport far along Ediba Road. This explains in a nutshell how St. Peter's Ediba Church came into being. In 1977 after a befitting Church had been built on Ediba Road adjacent to the Calabar Airport. Priests were sent there on regular visitation to the Station and regular Masses were offered there on Sunday and Feast days for the Catholics of the community.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As can be gathered from the foregoing, Ete Leo with the help of other Legionaries mostly from Sacred Heart Cathedral contributed money and bought wine, fish and a goat to go meet the Chiefs of Ediba and request them to allow them build a little shed for Church Services where they had discovered a free piece of land just outside the fence of the Airport. The Chiefs were pleased with their gesture of goodwill and tradition and promptly gave them authority to build a church on the land. According to Ete Joseph Okon of Ediba Town who later became the first President of the Church a.k.a "Church Headman", the Legionaries were shown where to purchase "Iboto" raffia mats which they readily bought and constructed the "pre-fab" Church of sorts. For benches and chairs, just as he did when he constructed the first Church at Essien Town, he prepared bamboo benches and chairs and got a carpenter to make a table and a chair for the visiting priests. The author was a witness to this when Ete Leo built the first Church at Essien Town in 1959. It was the same method he used and this paid off. After the war, many people returned to their villages and towns in the Mainland, but quite a number who were either civil servants before the war or got engaged in profitable ventures stayed back and continued at their work places. It was this group of permanent inhabitants who promoted Church work and attendance with the result that there cropped up a genuine felt need for the construction of a much more befitting and permanent Church building.

Since the already acquired piece of land was large enough for this purpose, Ete Leo was informed and he mobilized the Legionaries for their usual support and assistance. In 1975, the foundation for a modest permanent Church building was laid and blessed by Fr. Vincent Hannigan. The building continued to be used until well into the 1980s. Then in 1982, the Airport Authorities informed the Catholic Mission that the Calabar Air Port was to be upgraded and expanded for larger and regular flights and that as such, the Airport extension would swallow up the grounds of the Church Building. Archbishop Usanga signed the Agreement and the sum of Twelve Thousand Naira (N12, 000) was paid by the Nigeria Airways as compensation for the land after the official documents of the Church building were tendered to them. With this money the Author together with Fr. Hannigan approached Ediba Chiefs again after the Station members had visited them with the traditional "kola" and goat + wine offerings. To this end, an acre of land still along the Ediba Road though smaller than the former Airport grounds was donated by the Chiefs of Ediba. A small amount of compensation was also paid to the original Ediba native land owner. By this time the Station had been transferred from the administration of St. Mary's Efut Abua and St. Peter's Ediba became a Mission Station under the Administration of St. Bernard's Marian Hill, ditto SS Peter and Paul Edim Otop as it was then called.

The construction work on the Church building started in earnest with communal labour under Mr. Christopher Ekpo of St. Mary's Efut Abua as the architect and chief mason. The Church was completed within recorded time for use and Archbishop Usanga commissioned it in 1989. In 1992, Archbishop Usanga detached the Ediba Mission station from St. Bernard's Parish and raised it to the status of an autonomous Parish with Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. P. Ekarika as the first substantive Parish Priest. In 1995 Fr. Marcus Chukwu with the able hand of Dr. Bede Ekpenyong Okon, the then Parish President of the Parish renovated the Church and put up the ceiling together with ceiling fans. In 2015 further renovation was carried out with the extension of the Church to the verandah as we now have it.

CHURCH OF ANNUNCIATION, KASUK-QUA TOWN

ORIGINS: The Church of Annunciation started in 2015 in Kasuk Qua Town for Church Services. At first it was only a handful of the Catholic Community some of whom were originally parishioners of St. Patrick's Parish, Ikot Ansa who attended the Church Services. Some others were also attending other Parishes around. The Services were held at the verandah of St. Francis' Nursery School belonging to a prominent Catholic Mr. Francis Okon from Akpabuyo who as the Proprietor of the School was living in the area. He generously granted permission for the use of the place. As the number of devotees increased, there was the need to find a befitting accommodation for the Church attendees. With the assistance of another prominent Catholic, Ntufam Nkiri Afadeh, the members were able to procure a place along the Calabar By-Pass, but it had to be paid for. Archbishop Edra Ukpo promptly paid for the land estimated at Seven Million Naira (N7, 000,000). Originally the Church was named St. Leo's, Kasuk Town, after the indefatigable Legionary, Ete Leo Etim Udoh of Ikot Etim, in Nsit Ubium LGA, who was the brain child of the proposal. Rev. Fr. John Leo now Fr. In-Charge of the Parish, ostensibly to honour his father so named the Church, because in his limited capacity his father, Ete Leo had done everything in his power to establish the Catholic Church in Kasuk land either in Asari Iso territory or further up MCC Road, but this plan never materialized.

CHURCH BUILDING: Nevertheless, thanks to Divine Providence that Fr. John Leo his son who while yet a young Mass Server, had treasured this thought in his heart and was able to make good his late father's wish by performing this accomplishment and feat single-handedly as it were. Thanks also to Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo who hearkened to the appeal to perform this deal, by supplying the necessary logistics including the funds to prosecute the deal. This Church is set in a very strategic area of Calabar Metropolis – along the By-Pass masterminded by erstwhile Governor nor Donald Duke and brought to its logical conclusion by his successor, His Excellency Governor Liyel Imoke, who, "like father, like son," the son of the legendary Dr. S. E. Imoke, erstwhile Minister of Education in the defunct Eastern Region of Nigeria in the 1960s is also a great citizen of Cross River State and an achiever of note. He it was who completed the construction of the BYE-PASS. In 2016 the church building was completed and commissioned by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

ST. FRANCIS CHAPLAINCY, EBURUTU BARRACKS

ORIGINS: St. Francis Chaplaincy, Eburutu Barracks Calabar except for the name which was given to it by the Archbishop of Calabar, Archbishop Brian Usanga was established at the instance of the Military Command Headquarters, Lagos because immediately after the war, the Federal Armed Forces of Nigeria decided to establish a Military Command in each of the then 19 States Headquarters of Nigeria. In each of the Commands, they also established "Religious Institutions" the Mosque for the Muslim Community, the Protestant Chapel for Protestants and non-Catholic Assemblies and the Catholic Chapel for the Catholic Church. The structures were all built by the Nigerian Army Headquarters, Lagos, but each unit was to furnish its Mosque or Chapel with its peculiar outfits and other paraphernalia. The Chapel of the Catholic Church, St. Francis Chaplaincy was completed in 1978 with my humbleself as the Chaplain with a Military Catechist to take care of other aspects of Catholic Worship, ditto for the Protestants and an Imam for the Mosque in the case of the Muslims.

Later in the early 1980s, the Military supplied their own Military Chaplains from Army Headquarters sanctioned by Rev. Fr. Lt. Col James F. Iyire who had succeeded Col (Mgr) Pedro Martins rtd. In St. Francis Catholic Chaplaincy, weekly Sunday Masses were celebrated for the Catholic Community but interested civilian Catholics especially those living nearby including visitors and others residing in Calabar Metropolis were allowed to attend Sunday Services there. In fact, it was notably this group of worshippers that contributed in kind and cash towards the equipping of the Chapel. As noted already, at the beginning, the Serving Priests administering to the Parish, which then was regareded only a "Catholic Community Church" at that, were appointed by the Archbishop. In 1982, the Archbishop raised it to the status of a" Chaplaincy" but under Christ the King Church.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The "Catholic Chapel" was built by the Nigerian Army Command and completed for use in 1978 within the Army Battalion Headquarters, Ikot Ansa Cantonment. As noted above, most of the furninshings including furniture were provided by the Congregation.

(c)SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of Francis Chaplaincy, Eburutu Barracks both formerly as a Mission Station "Army Catholic Community", and afterwards as a Quasi-Parish or Catholic Chaplaincy sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Chaplaincy either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including Catholic Army Chaplains appointed by the Army Headquarters. Since the "take-over" by the Catholic Army Chaplains, right from the Initial stage, the Chaplain of Christ the King Army Barracks also serves as the Chaplain of the St. Francis Chaplaincy.

OUR LADY OF MT. CARMEL CHAPLAINCY, FGGC CALABAR

ORIGINS: In 1974 the Federal Government of Yakubu Gowon established two Federal Government Colleges in each of the twelve States of the Federation he had created in 1967 one of which was to be an all-Girls Institution to encourage the girl-child education in the country. In the defunct South Eastern State of Nigeria, with Calabar as Head Quarters the Federal Government Girls College (FGGC) Calabar opened at the grounds of Holy Child College which had been "taken-over" by the South Eastern State Government of Col. U. J. Esuene, the Military Governor of the State. Following on this, Archbishop, then Bishop Brian D. Usanga appointed Rev. Fr. Sylvester U. J. Udoh, the Cathedral Administrator as Fr. In-Charge to offer Sunday Masses and administer to the spiritual needs of the Catholic Girls in the newly established FGGC, ditto Rev. Fr. Sean O'Dowd then resident at SPC. In 1976 the buildings on the permanent grounds of the FGGC on I.B. B. High Way - Airport Road Calabar, were ready and the Students and Staff moved into the College new quarters. The Bishop continued to appoint Frs. in Charge and Assisting Priests to minister to the Catholic Students and Staff of the FGGC Community. In that very year the Bishop officially approved and named the newly established Catholic Church "Our Lady of Mount Carmel Chaplaincy", Federal Government Girls' College – Calabar, sui juris with Mgr. J. P. Ekarika as Chaplain. Thereafter, the College girls started attending Sunday Masses at the Assembly Hall of the University of Calabar with the University Students in tow until the Principal, a nice Anglican apportioned specific Halls to be used as venue for Catholic Services ditto Protestants and Muslims and this has continued till today. One of the members of Staff Mr. F. N. Awa was appointed Catechist and Chaplaincy Provost. The Executive Council of the Chaplaincy was also formed with Sir (Kgt) Onye as Chaplaincy President or "Headman" of the Catholic Community while one of the college girls in tow was appointed as "Head Girl" of the Catholic Chaplaincy. Other members of the Council were equally constituted and this arrangement has continued till this day.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Since this is a Federal Government Institution, no permission was granted for the official construction of a Church building or Mosque. But true to the Federal Government practice and modus operandi, the Government of General Gowon made sufficient provision for places of Worship for the conduct of Christian and Muslim services in all these Unity Schools as they were called because it was the Federal Government policy and responsibility to do so. A separate venue was always reserved to serve as a Mosque in the Institutions to cater for the needs of Muslims, while as often happened in most predominantly Christian States, venues were reserved for both Protestant as well as Catholic Students and Staff within the Institutions. The Author personally noticed this in Cross River, Akwa Ibom and Rivers States where he served as Chaplain in these Unity Colleges. In fact, as did happen, the Government went further to construct states of the art and imposing edifices for various needs in these Colleges as this was the time of Nigeria's "OIL BOOM" in the 1970's and early 1980's. But by the middle of the 1980s Nigeria experienced the greatest set-back in her economic history as everything plummeted due to the "oil glut" experienced worldwide and Nigeria's "OIL BOOM BECAME OIL DOOM". Most of these imposing structures including those in the six post-war Federal Universities of UNILORIN, UNIMAID, UNIPORT, UNI-SOKOTO, UNIBEN and UNICAL had almost reached in some cases 50% – 80% of completion. A good example is the imposing world-class UNICAL LIBRARY. It was a masterpiece, and construction companies including the French FUGEREOL Company, the British Reynolds (RCC), the German Strabagg Company, etc. which just abandoned their construction centres and vamoosed into thin air. It was pathetic and frustrating to say the least. On account of this, it was inevitable the Catholic Church in particular would pressurize the FGGC, Calabar Administration as also the Federal Unity Schools Authorities to apportion a site within the Institution for the purpose of erecting a suitable and befitting Church for the worshiping Catholic Community of FGGC without delay. Most importantly, Catholics needed a special and separate edifice for the reservation of the Most Blessed Sacrament which they could not share with other Denominations. Further pressure and remonstrations yielded fruit during the regime of the Catholic-born Principal, Mrs. R. Nsemo who pulled her weight behind the Catholic Mission Authorities because this would have been near impossible if not ANATHEMA to the no-nonsense Qua Iboe-born Mrs. Affiong Abasi-Atai during her regime previously.

With Sir (Kgt.) Sylvester U. Onye - KSM as Chaplaincy President, Mr. A. D. C. Egwuyenga as Catechist and Mr. P. E. Iheagimaha, Secretary, the Federal Unity Schools Administration Authority acquiesced and consented to the appeal yielding to their donation of an imposing and commanding site behind the Science Block to the Catholic Chaplaincy. Then arose the problem of raising funds to kick-start the project. The first response to the nagging situation was the providential appearance on the scene of a very prominent benefactor, Engr. S. E. Udoeyop with his benevolent American wife. They became regular worshippers in the Chaplaincy. In order to make Catholic Sunday Services attractive and bring in more worshippers into the Catholic Community, Engr. Udoeyop, then an officer in the Nigerian Customs Services, donated the first set of choir band and outfits with a loud speaker facility to boot. He also presented choir robes to the choristers. Thereafter, he donated Catholic Hymn Books to the Chaplaincy and continued to make generous cash donations to the Church whenever the Chaplaincy organized fundraising Functions. By their presence many other prominent Catholics in the metropolis were also attracted and became regular attendees at Catholic Functions in the Chaplaincy. This also boosted the moral as well as encouraged the kick-start of the Chaplaincy construction effort. But it was really in February 2007, when the Emeritus Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo performed the foundation laying ceremony with a token donation of a handsome sum of Four Million Naira (N 4,000,000) from the Archdiocese to kick start the construction of the Chapel. But work has been stalled due to lack of funds and patronage and nothing is happening there ever since the foundation level. It will be to the Eternal and greater Glory of God if the sitting Metropolitan Archbishop of Calabar, His Grace Dr. Joseph E. Ekuwem together with the Archdiocesan Finance Council but most poignantly the amiable Professor Benedict Ayade no nonsense and workaholic Governor, who wants to continue to keep "Cross River State Working", look into this abandoned edifice and make what is still standing there for "so many years at the foundation level working" by making sure it is completed without further delay and shame. Meanwhile the College Catholic Chaplaincy Harvests are on-going to also garner funds to continue the work, but this is always very meagre and negligible. It is also envisaged that the situation of the Regina Pacis Atimbo Police College Catholic Chaplaincy Chapel should be equally looked into.

ST. JOHN DE BAPTIST - AKAMKPA DEANARY

ORIGINS: Steeped in the heartland of the defunct Eastern State of Nigeria, now renamed Cross River State by the Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida Military President (1985-1993) is Akamkpa town, the Headquarters of Ejagham Local Government Area. It was discovered and named Akamkpa by the ancient URUAN-EFIK peoples who traversed this vast virgin Equatorial forest land in the 17th century. This group of URUAN-EFIK, mostly of the core ancient URUAN stock continued in their emigration and went on to discover and inhabit what is now called OKOYONG which was later, precisely in 1703 invaded and occupied by the OKOYONG of Western Cameroun now occupying there till this day. The latter moved on and founded Adadia, Issiet, Ibeno Uruan, Use Isiet Ekim, etc. and occupied there in what has become the core of Southern URUAN till today. But why name the place Akamkpa? In fact, the word AKAMKPA is coined from two URUAN-EFIK words AKA - MKPA which literally translates into "aka mkpa?" = "do you want to go there and die?" Because whenever and wherever the word Ejagham which is the tribal name for the territory is mentioned the inexorable re-action would evoke in the people and prompting them to hold up their two hands above the ears and swirl them away sideways in utter trepidation and awe as if one should never mention such a place and say: "nsa mmi-o = not me-o! "I cannot go there and die-o!" Then what one utters with real dread and apprehension if not dismay is the obvious reaction "aka mkpa?". But again why if one may ask? Because to the URUAN/EFIK the unmitigated antonym ATA – AKPA a.k.a ATAKPA = C-A-L-A-B-A-R which is the acronym for: "COME AND LIVE AND BE AT REST" is the raison d'être for the reaction: the land of the living flowing with milk and honey in contradistinction to "A - K - A M – K – P – A"= which translates into "GO AND DIE". This name which before then just as the nomenclatures of Cross River State, Anambra, Kebbi, or even NIGERIA, never had existed before in the first place. The alternative name for "Ejagham" is "Ekoi" in URUAN – EFIK tongue, which as noted in connection with the "QUAS" means a people with a different "tongue"/ language since on their first contact, it was a language which they could not understand when coming face to face with each other. On account of this, they began to so regard them as people living far away from the city, hence "EKOI" which also connotates the land of thick forests far out into the interior.

Akamkpa in Ejagham region is a massive forest territory in the Equatorial rain belt, the habitat of snakes, lions and "OKUKUBARAKPA" in URUAN–EFIK or "UKARAKPA" in Ibibio – Annang. It was seen as such a region that should anyone venture to go there or miss his/her way thereto, or wander into this terrain, he/she would surely not come back alive. He/she would be swallowed up either by the thick forest itself or the wild inhabitants that abound thereat. From Oral tradition Ejagham peoples were very brave and skilled warriors but they lived peacefully for the most part with their neighbours. From the 1600s they had to face slave raiders and traders hence their pugnacious and belligerent nature. CALABAR was therefore by implication the land of the living, while EJAGHAM a.k.a AKAMKPA which happens to be the Headquarters of the region as noted above meant the "land of the dead". Go East it is "aka mkpa?"; go West it is inevitably "aka nso ko?" = why are you going there to die? Heads or Tails: that is Ejagham for you - either "aka – mkpa" OR "aka - nso – ko"! Ejagham language as also the language family of the territory is "Niger-Congo" or "semi-Bantu" which is also spoken in modern Cameroun Republic.

But according to my informants including Rev. Fr. Paul Eneamenge Offiong, his mother and also Ejagham tradition and folklore, the history of the Ejagham nomenclature "AKAMKPA = (akãm kpã)" in their dialect does not actually mean "aka mkpa?" as inteprpreted by URUAN-EFIK people who first came in contact with this vast territory before the advent of the early Europeans to the West Coast of Africa as commented above. The nomenclature according to Ejagham cultural history came about as a result of their encounter with some Cameroonian travelers who seemingly had missed their way and wandered into the territory. Then, as they decided to take a bit of rest being tired and worn out as also being famished from their long journey, they encountered soldiers also travelling through the same area. On seeing the soldiers and beign scared and frightened, in their desperation and exasperation they began to wander whether it was better and safer to run for their dear lives or to stay and seek refuge from their new hosts of Ejagham. As they were contemplating what to do, one of them had suggested: "let us ask them (Ejagham) if we can stay and "LET THEM ACCEPT FIRST" …ie. = "akãm kpã", when translated. Yes, from their desperation: "akãm kpã", which when translated means "LET THEM ACCEPT FIRST" …to be our hosts, the place and by implication the territory came to be known as "AKAMKPA". However, considering all this, every discerning reader of this Book can discover for him/herself that this looks like a revisionist bit of history to counter what URUAN-EFIK had said already.

On all counts it would appear there was never any such nomenclature "AKAMKPA" = translated "akãm kpã" before the unkown soldiers and the Cameroonians came calling in the first place, talkless of the name pre-existing as AKAMKPA before URUAN-EFIK peoples who first encountered them. Head or Tail, it is "akãm kpã" and this should confine all further options on the matter.

With the establishment of the Catholic Mission at Calabar, Akamkpa became one of the territories evangelized during the first two decades of the 20th century of the arrival of the second set of the Holy Ghost Fathers in Calabar. It is on record that Rev. Fr. James Mellet (CSSP) and co. were the first Missionaries ever to set foot on Akamkpa and Mbarakom territory travelling from Ogoja which they had evangelized in 1921 through Oban en route Calabar, the centre of their Mission. As their custom was, and because they had acquired proficiency in Ejagham Oban language by this time, they had no difficulty trekking through the villages and presenting the Gospel Message while also baptizing as many adults and children as possible who had expressed their willingness to embrace Catholicism and receive the Gospel of Christ. But it was later on and well into the 1940's with the arrival of the St. Patrick's Fathers from Ireland since 1930, that the complete catechization of the crowds responding to the Gospel Message received a great boost.

Then as commented already, all those older Mission Stations established and erected new Parishes by Archbishop Brian Usanga within the post-civil war (1992- 1998) under St. John the Baptist Akamkpa Deanery were under the larger St. Mary's Parish Adiabo, ie. before the civil war. It means that St. John the Baptist Akamkpa was one of its Mission Stations established by the Holy Ghost Fathers as noted above. From then onward Akamkpa station was visited once in a while as was the case with distant and bush track countryside towns and villages until St. Mary's Adiabo was raised to the status of a Parish in the 1940's but was effectively administered under Arochukwu with Fr. Patrick Hannelly as the first Fr. In-Charge. He became a regular visitor and administrator of the station before Akamkpa gained Parish status after the war. In 1982 St. John's Akamkpa was raised to the status of an autonomous Mission Centre OR Quasi-Parish with all those Stations beyond Akampa including Old Netim as its Mission Stations viz. St. Theresa's Mbarakom, Our Lady of Lourdes COE Chaplaincy – AWI, St. Paul's Uyanga, St. George's Old Netim, St. Michael's the Archangel Obung, St. Anthony's Iwuru, St. Dominic's Akpet Central and St. Therese of the Holy Child Jesus, Ojor with Fr. Thomas Ryan (SPS) and soon after Fr. Francis O. Mbaba and Fr. Emmanuel C. Nyong as the first Fathers In-Charge, a.k.a Parish Priests but still administering from St. Mary's Adiabo. In 1989 Fr. Christopher Umiong was appointed the Administrator and Fr. In-Charge of the Akamkpa territory. But his administration of Akamkpa was short-lived as he was transferred in 1991 to St. Bernard's Marian Hill and St. John the Baptist Akamkpa later raised to the full status of a Parish sui juris, came under the administration of Msgr. then Fr. Emmanuel Umoetok (1991-2000) as Parish Priest following his return from Further Studies. Together with the erstwhile Mr. Peter Ekpe Ntui, the indefatigable native Catechist from Akamkpa town who also doubled as "Travelling teacher", Fr. Umoetok worked untiringly and unmitigated and saw to the raising in 1992 of all those Out-stations except St. Theresa's Ojor Station, to the status of Autonomous Parishes to the Glory of God. It was to his eternal credit that this inimitable teacher of the people, Catechist Peter Ekpe Ntui, perhaps true to his name PETER, laboured using the standard curriculum of the early Catholic Missionaries teaching his people of Akamkpa region to be able to write and read. After his demise, Catechist Francis Bassey Itanam took over the mantle of catechizing the people with uncommon evangelism that promoted Akamkpa to the enviable position of mother, grandmother and great grandmother of the new promising parishes of ancient "AKA – MKPA?" which has constituted the St. John the Parish, Akamkpa Deanery today. St. Theresa 's Ojor was later excised from St. Paul's Uyanga and raised to the status of an autonomous quasi-Parish, sui juris, in 2015 by the indefatigable Archbishop Joseph Effiong Ekuwem gloriously reigning in Calabar Archdiocese today.

(c) CHURCH BUILDING: As already mooted elsewhere above, most of these Mission Stations started with School buildings serving as locales both for Church Services and other activities but most importantly as schools. Church Functions, village rallies and functions were more often than not organized in these Church Schools. That was the reason why the Vatican got so interested in knowing the number of such "PERMANENT CHURCH BUILDINGS" ever to be constructed precisely as CHURCHES in any particular Diocese or Eparchy and St. John's Akampa fell into this category of foundations. With the first Mass celebrated in the early 1920's a modest Church building in mud and thatch was constructed and this had served the Akamkpa Station until the arrival of the St. Patrick's Missionaries. It is on record that Fr. Kevin Longworth who administered St. Mary's Adiabo constructed the first concrete Church School building in the 1940s as also St. Augustine's Church School, Ikot Omin. That Church School had served the Akamkpa Church right into the 1990s even after it had been created a Parish sui juris. In 1993 Mgr. Emmanuel Umoetok laid the foundation to kick-start the construction of the new Church building right adjacent to the Old Church School building. With his earnings as well as funds raised from Bazaars, big time Functions and Rallies especially Annual Harvests which he also had organized without fail, a sizable amount was raised to prosecute the work which was carried out in stages beginning with the erection of pillars and putting up of the roof. The author was also instrumental to the supplying of the timber much of which he had struck a deal with Iwuru timber dealers he engaged when he kick-started the establishment and construction of the Girls' Juniorate at Iwuru. He had gathered timber sufficient enough for the Juniorate as also for the ongoing work of Sacred Heart Cathedral International 3-Storeyed Block which was going on at the time. In 1996 the church building was completed and commissioned by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga with fanfare and great rejoicings amidst pomp and pageantry characteristic of the Great Ejagham Peoples and to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

ST. PAUL'S PARISH, UYANGA

ORIGINS: St. Paul's Parish Uyanga was one of the Mission Stations established by the Holy Ghost Fathers ditto St. George's Parish, Old Netim, because of their accessibility by sea. In the 1930s and with the arrival of the first group of St. Patrick's Fathers Uyanga Station was regularly visited on bush treks. The first Open Air Mass was said to have been celebrated in 1945 exactly where the Primary School is situated because the site was near the village square and was named ST. PAUL'S CATHOLIC MISSION – UYANGA, probably after the Church from which it was first evangelized, namely ST. PAUL'S CHURCH UTUTU – AROCHUKWU with Mr. E. N. Okafor as the first Catechist and Station Teacher thereof. From those early 1940's onward the Station came under Adiabo Section and Central Station together with St. John's Akamkpa, St. George's Old Netim, St. Theresa's Mbarakom and St. Anthony's Iwuru as Mission Stations. Until the end of the civil war, the same situation remained except that they were then administered from Sacred Heart Cathedral and St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral, Efut Abua when Awi and Okom Ita Stations were added to them. Adiabo itself was also under the ancient Parish of Arochukwu, precisely St. Paul's UTUTU because the priests preferred administering the territory from there. From Calabar by sea, they could easily access Itu and environs from there move on to Arochukwu still by sea. The early Holy Ghost Fathers on account of the existence of the large expanse of forest lands untraversed except through bush tracks which were not easily accessible, made their first contacts by sea in order to establish Mission Stations along the Cross River and wherever there were towns and villages near the rivers such as the Presbyterian Missionaries – the Church of Scotland Mission were doing. The SCM Mission even established their Missions deep into the MAINLAND of what is now Akwa Ibom and Abia States like Ikot Offiong, Mbiaya Uruan, Adadia, Ibiaku Uruan, Ugep, Uzuakoli, Edda, Afikpo and Itigidi, etc. Yes, it was the same Missionary zeal that motivated those early Presbyterian Missionaries to penetrate Ikot Offiong long before establishing their missions at Mbiaya, Ibiaku Uruan, etc. in URUAN. After the civil war, most of the St. Patrick's Missionaries viz. Fathers Patrick Hannelly, Alphie Rushe, Bernard Hughes and Lawrence McWey went back to Ireland while some were transferred to Port Harcourt Diocese under the administration of Bishop Edmund FitzGibbons who earlier on had served in the Archdiocese of Calabar in the 1950's except Fr. Thomas Ryan who stayed put.

Together with the few indigenous priests of the Archdiocese at the time, they weathered the storm and trudged on to build up the new post war indigenous Churches which we have today. Some of the Chiefs and powerful women of the town like Chief Obaina Agbor, Chief Paul Awambe, Chief Matthew Agwu Agbor, Madam Mary Ewa Abani, Mr. Emmanuel Akpossey and Mr. Alphonsus Atanakak donated their pieces of land for the building of the Church which also served as School. They equally became converted to the Catholic Faith and were the first to receive the Sacraments of Baptism and First Holy Communion. Some of them even got their marriages blessed by the Church before they died. In those days, pagans who received the Faith were allowed to receive the Sacraments after being groomed in the faith by the Catechists and Station Teachers. Some of the men willingly brought their wives to receive the blessings of the Church in the Sacrament of Matrimony, usually with their first wives in tow. For a long time, the two Iwuru Stations were administered through Uyanga which is the Capital Station after Akamkpa. In 1994, Uyanga Station was excised from St. John's Akamkpa and created an autonomous Parish sui juris by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga with Rev. Fr. Maurice Etim as the first Parish Priest and St. Theresa's Ojor, Ifumkpa St. Anthony's Iwuru, St. Joseph's CREL as its Out- Stations. In 2015, St. Theresa's Ojor together with St. Ifumkpa were excised by Archbishop to form an autonomous Parish of Ojor.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As noted above the first Church building was a mud church and later in the 1950's the St. Patrick's Fathers constructed a permanent Church on a large piece of land near the hill which was donated by Chief Obaina Agbor, Chief Paul Awambe, Chief Matthew Agwu Agbor, Madam Mary Ewa Abani, Mr. Emmanuel Akpossey and Mr. Alphonsus Atanakak. Thanks be to God, some of the donors' children and grandchildren are today serving the Church as priests, viz. the son of Chief Obaina Agbor, namely Fr. Joseph Obaina Agbor while others are Senior Seminaries including and Anthony Akpossey and Anthony Ebani. This Church was also meant to serve as School until well into the late 1990's when the indefatigable Msgr. Francis X. Una exhorted the people to move out to a permanent site for the building of the new Church which we are admiring today. The new site was at Obaina Street and was donated through the generous contributors by the same villagers above, most of whom were Catholics, but by law the piece of land was also to be approved by the Ntufam and Chiefs in Council as certification, endorsement and authentication. The church building though partly completed at the time, was commissioned by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga in 2002 under Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis Una while it was to still undergo further refurbishings to make it a model Parish Church as we have it today.

ST. GEORGE'S PARISH, OLD NETIM

ORIGINS: As commented above, Old Netim is a scion of the ancient Akamkpa group of Ejagham kindred of MBA - AKANG which emigrated from what is now Mamfe territory in Western Cameroun to what was formerly known as South Eastern of Nigeria and now Cross River State between 1400 and 1500 AD in the present Akamkpa Local Government Area. It is designated "OLD NETIM" in contra-distinction to NEW NETIM being the original settlers where they now find themselves tucked in the heartland of the Equatorial Rain Forest area of tropical Nigeria. According to local and oral traditions, their founding father was NTUFAM ACHOT ITA – AKARE and this eminently substantiates our assessment above as people of Ejagham stock. Their routes of emigration were said to be through OSERA AYA, through OKA - AYIP OGBAN to where they then moved to NSI- NOK in IKOM in Central Cross River and finally through Obubra advancing and passing through NYIM AYA near IFUMKPA to where they now find themselves. OLD NETIM also implies that the whole ancient kindred must have broken up leading to some of them heading to find greener pastures in ODUKPANI country in what is now designated as NEW NETIM. In each case, there must and should be a leader and founding father which in the case of OLD NETIM was no other than NTUFAM EWONG ITA in the 1920's precisely around 1926/27 AD.

Before the break-up, the ruling Family Heads of OLD NETIM included Ntufam Asikpo Nchar, Ntufam Iserom Iserom, Ntufam Achot Ita Akare, Ntufam Okpa Okem, Ntufam Daniel Agu Okey, Ntufam Michael Ogar Itagber and Ntufam Augustine N. Orok among others. Among their women folk, their leaders or NTUNKAE were Ntunkae Ono Ntui, Ntunkae Cecilia Agbor Orok, Ntunkae Uso Ojong and Ntunkae Grace Akpor Mbe. The towns and villages which constituted the pre-1978 groupings included Old Netim, Akamkpa, Mbarakom, Njahachng, Awi Ayebam, Nsan Oban, Okoroba and Obung. Old Netim people past and present are great warriors, hunters and farmers. Being descendants from ancient Cameroun as noted above, they also believed in and practised those ancient URUAN-EFIK cults like MGBE (EKPE), NJOM, ANIM (NDEM) and MFAM EBIN (MBRE EK? M? /EK? ?) even to this day. The early Holy Ghost Missionaries must have met them within their pristine Ejagham culture and because they were a very accommodating and sociable genre, the Missionaries had no difficulty in bringing the Gospel message to their very homes and so endeared themselves to them right from the beginning.

As commented elsewhere in this book, all those older Parishes in the post-civil war EJAGHAM-BIASE territories viz. modern St. John the Baptist Akamkpa Deanery were under the larger St. Mary's Parish Adiabo, ie. before the civil war (1954-1970). St George's Parish, Old Netim was one of its Mission Stations established by the Holy Ghost Fathers. In 1928, with the arrival of the last group of Holy Ghost Fathers in Calabar, but this time directly from Gabon, Old Netim became the latest Mission Station to be evangelized. According to reliable records and from their ancient folklores and tradition history, Old Netim Town was visited for the first time when an Open Air Mass was celebrated exactly where the Parish is situated now in 1928 because the site was near the village square. From then onward the station was visited from the Calabar Central Mission once in a while as was the case with distant and bush track countryside towns and villages until St. Mary's Adiabo was raised to the status of a quasi-Parish or Catholic (Central) Mission when Old Netim itself came under its Administration as the new Central Mission Station. This therefore became the designation as was the norm in those days since the 1940's although it later became administered under Arochukwu Central Mission Station as their base and choice centre with Fr. Patrick Hannelly as the first Fr. In-Charge thereof. He became a regular visitor and administrator of Old Netim station from there before Akamkpa gained a Parish status after the war while Old Netim Church still remained as its Mission Station. In 1991, St. John's Akamkpa was raised to the status of an autonomous Parish with all the Stations beyond Akampa including Old Netim as its Mission Stations. In 1998 the Old Netim Station Church was detached from Akampa to be created a Parish sui juris under Mgr. then Fr. Emmanuel Umoetok still as its Parish Priest thereof.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The first Old Netim Church building to which a school was later attached was a mud brick church with thatch built by the early Holy Ghost Missionaries. This was the custom characteristic of houses built on riverine soil which more often than not was the stony and slippery "ed?n" type of soil. Such soil could not be padded like muddy or clayey soil and the custom was to mould it before using it for building houses or churches, etc. Most of the ancient native buildings in Old Netim were constructed in like manner but with thatched roofs to boot. In the later 1940's after the St. Patrick's Fathers had taken over the administration of the area, they started constructing permanent Church with cement blocks on a large piece of land further down the hill since the piece of land earlier donated by the Ntufams (Chiefs) in Council was a large expanse of land which even till now has accommodated both the old Church School and the new Church premises. That permanent SPS Church school building continued to serve the needs of the Church as well as School well into the 1990s. It also served the needs of the town in many ways for their village functions as also Rallies and Assemblies. In 1996 arrangements were in top gear to construct a model Church especially when the people noticed that Archbishop Brian Usanga was going to raise some of the old Mission Stations lately under St. John's Akamkpa into autonomous Parishes. In anticipation and also in preparation thereof, the Station Church Committee decided to kick-start the building of the new beautiful church which was very near completion with the roof included such that in 1998, Archbishop Usanga announced the detachment of the Old Netim Station from St. John's Akamkpa and erected it an autonomous Parish while the construction continued to its logical conclusion with a Shrine to boot.

ST. THERESA'S PARISH, MBARAKOM

ORIGINS: St.Theresa'sCatholic Church Mbarakom until this time around, was formerly a Mission Station under St. Mary's Adiabo. Before then according to reliable records, it was Rev. Fr. James Mellet (CSSP) and co. who were the first Missionaries ever to set foot on Akamkpa and Mbarakom territory travelling all the way from Ogoja where they had earlier evangelized in 1921 and trekking through Oban en route Calabar, the centre of their Mission. As their custom was, and because they had acquired proficiency in Ejagham language by this time, they had no difficulty trekking through the villages and presenting the Gospel Message to the numerous adults and children who had come out to welcome them. When the people noticed that these early Missionaries were trekking into their village through Akampka, they were not too comfortable receiving them in the village square as was usually their custom whenever important personalities came visiting. But from the account they had heard about the Missionaries' visit to Akamkpa, they were sure the Missionaries would need a suitable place where they would be comfortable to stay and meet the people. They soon became very enthusiastic and rooted out to meet them noting that they were also coming to their town to evangelize there. That is why they were ready to grant them free access into the outskirts of the town but some distance away from their living quarters in the village. Therafter, they arranged that any time the Missionaries arrived, they would make them settle mid-way between their town and Akamkpa. On their arrival, they soon discovered that the Missionary visitors were a very friendly and sociable set of people and the chiefs decided to rally the people from all the nooks and crannies of the town by ringing their MKPE a.k.a "EKPE BELL" to summons them since this was their manner of alerting and calling upon the people whenever there was something very important demanding the attention of all and sundry.

These Holy Ghost Missionaries according to records were said to have first visited Mbarakom town around 1923. On their arrival, the chiefs ordered that a site be cleared for the celebration of the first Open Air Mass on what later became the Awi - Mbarakom NA Road. Then as the villagers poured in day after day and because the Missionaries had acquired proficiency in Ejagham language as noted above, they had no qualms in baptizing all those who had come forward, men women and children alike especially those who had expressed genuine desire and willingness to embrace Catholicism and to receive the Gospel Message of Christ and Baptism. This was the custom of the early Missionaries following the example of the legendary Bishop Josef Kraft (CSSP). But it was later on in the 1940's and with the arrival of the St. Patrick's Fathers from Ireland since 1930, that the complete catechization of the crowds who had responded to the Message of the Good News of Christianity were given proper catechization and Christianity received a great boost.

Then as commented already, all those older Mission Stations established and recently erected as new Parishes by Archbishop Brian Usanga within the post-civil war (1991- 1998) including Mbarakom came under St. John the Baptist Akamkpa Deanery. The first Father In-Charge to really open up the Station in the early 1940s for effective evangelization was Fr. Patrick Hannelly. He and other St. Patrick's Priests like Fr. Joseph Petit, Fr. Bernard Hughes etc. became the regular visitors and Administrators on bush tours of the Mission Station until the end of the war. In 1991 St. John's Akamkpa was raised by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga to the status of an autonomous Parish with all the Stations including those within and beyond Akampa viz. Awi, Mbarakom, Old Netim, Uyanga etc. as its Mission Stations. In 1998 Theresa's Catholic Church Mbarakom was detached from Akamkpa to become an autonomous Parish sui juris still under Msgr. then Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Umoetok as Parish Priest.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The piece of land donated by the Village Chiefs in Council was quite out of the way, some distance from their village centre. Because they had noticed that these early Missionaries were trekking into their village through Akamkpa, they were at first not too comfortable receiving them in the village square as was usually their custom whenever important personalities came visiting. But from the accounts they had heard about their visit to Akamkpa as noted above, they were sure the Missionaries would need a suitable place where they would be comfortable to meet the people. That is why they were ready and willing to grant them a piece of land mid-way between their town and Akamkpa. For this reason, they offered them a site along Awi - Mbarakom NA Road. It was here that the Missionaries constructed the first Church building to which a school was later added making it a Church-school. In 1956 with the posting of Fr. Kevin Longworth as the new Administrator to St. Mary's Adiabo, he kick-started the construction of the first permanent Church School. When the School was to be upgraded to Senior Primary ie. Standard Five, it was necessary to add another School building for the up-grading. As soon as Fr. Lawrence McWey was appointed the new Priest of St. Mary's Adiabo after the transfer of Fr. Patrick Hannelly, his main objective was to start the foundation of the new school building for inspection and upgrading in 1962 which also coincided with the construction of the permanent Rectory at Adiabo. With the construction of the second Church-school building completed, this larger Senior Primary School building in turn became the main Church block till well into the 1990s. This was the phase the Author met the St. Theresa's Church Mbarakom when he went on tour of the station in 1968 with Ntufam Christopher Offiong, the father of Fr. Francis C. Offiong as Headmaster of the School. I had earlier met him in 1951 when he was a pupil teacher at St. John's School, Oku Abak while a Student in Holy Family College. That encounter turned out to be a wonderful re-union which attracted the attention of both the teachers and pupils most of whom had never set their eyes on an indigenous African Priest or Rev. Sister before. It became a sort of populo admiratio as the children and even some of the teachers in tow were trying to touch me and rub their hands to see if I was indeed an African priest or perhaps I had painted myself black since the priests they were used to seeing were the white St. Patrick's Fathers. In 1991 St. John the Baptist Akamkpa was erected an autonomous Parish with St. Theresa's Mbarakom as one of its Mission Stations. When Msgr. Emmanuel Umoetok was appointed the new Parish Priest thereof and began visiting those out-stations, one of his key developmental agenda was the construction of separate permanent Church buildings in the stations beginning with St. John's Akamkpa which he kick-started in 1993.

With this impetus, most of the Mission Stations began to harbour the initiative and enthusiasm of building their individual permanent Churches including St. Theresa's Mbarakom. Small wonder that when Fr. Christopher Okpu, himself an indigenous priest of Mbarakom was appointed in 1994 to the Sacred Heart Cathedral as Administer, he used the opportunity to urge his people of Mbarakom to consider building their permanent church to which he gave a big boost by contacting Mbarakom Chiefs to offer a piece of land within the village for the construction of the new Church and also visiting the village constantly to spur them up. Through his meetings with the Chiefs, a strategic site was donated right at the centre of the town and work soon started during the latter part of 1995. By 1998 most of the church construction was completed with a roof ready for the Archdiocesan Laity Council (CLCN) slated to take place at Mbarakom in November of that year. It was at the grand rally in celebration of the Laity Council coming to Mbarakom for the first time. It was when such a tumultuous and enthusiastic crowd turned up itching to hear the announcement of the Station being erected as an autonomous Parish. When Archbishop Brian Usanga indeed decided to personally attend the Laity Rally, it became clear that true to their expectations he would surely grant autonomy to the Station, the Church was filled to capacity and overflowed even into the verandas. On the occasion of that Function which was marked with fanfare and pageantry to commission the Church, the Archbishop announced the excision of Mbarakom Church from St. John's Akamkpa and erected it a new autonomous Parish sui juris to the greater Glory of God.

OUR LADY OF LOURDES CHAPLAINCY, AWI

ORIGINS: Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Chaplaincy – Awi, Akampa was established at the instance of Archbishop, Most Rev. Dr. Brian Usanga in 1976 with Mgr. Joseph Ekarika as Visiting Father In-Charge even when the College was yet a School of Basic Studies (SBS) during the South Eastern State Administration of erstwhile Military Governor, Brigadier U. J. Esuene. Many other Priests including Fr. Justin Ukpong, Fr. Michael U. Offiong, Fr. Francis O. Mbaba and Fr. Emmanuel Nyong also served part-time while administering to the spiritual needs of the Catholic Community thereat. Later Rt. Rev. Msgr. then Fr. Emmanuel Umoetok and Fr. Gregory Atemgwoye Unimna became Fathers In-Charge and Administrators of the Chaplaincy respectively during the time of the Institution as former College of Education (1986-2002). In 2003 the College became part of the newly established Cross River State University of Technology (CRUTECH). But after two years it reverted to its former status as College of Education sui juris. Visiting Fathers from St. Mary's Parish, Adiabo also administered the Chaplaincy. In 1991 during the Administration of Rev. Sr. DR. Mary Juliana Adah as Rector thereof, the Church Station was created a Chaplaincy by Archbishop Usanga when Rev. Fr. Christopher Udiong was appointed Parish Priest of the newly created St. John the Baptist Parish, Akamkpa followed by Mgr. Emmanuel Umoetok and Fr. Gregory Unimna, both Lecturers at the Institution. During this time, Sunday Masses and other relevant Church Devotions and Activities were often held in one of the Lecture Rooms appointed by the Rectors of the College. With the new Status of the College after the establishment of the Cross River University of Technology (CRUTECH) in 2003, the Church continued as a Chaplaincy sui juris with Rev. Fr. Innocent Inwek as the first Chaplain assisted by Fr. Daniel A. Omonga.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Very providentially and strategically too, the erstwhile Rector of the College Rev. Sr. (DR) Mary Juliana Ada appointed Rector in 1985, provided the site for the Catholic Chapel of the College right after the entrance of the College and the foundation of the Chaplaincy was laid and blessed by Archbishop Usanga on Nov. 8, 1985 on the eve of the Priestly Ordination of Rev. Fr. Christopher Okpu, the first Indigenous Priest of Akamkpa and Biase regions. The entire territory of Akampa Deanery stretches as far as Akpet Central covering both Ejagham and Erei countries. For a long time, the place lay fallow until well into the 1990's when work started on the Church building which is still standing uncompleted due to paucity of funds as also dwindling resources of the Chaplaincy. The Authorities of the Archdiocese of Calabar should deem it worthwhile to look into the disreputable situation of this uncompleted citadel of Catholic Worship and as a matter of urgency, reserve the next proceeds of the Archdiocesan 2019 Annual Harvest towards the competition of the uncompleted project which has caused so much embarrassment and contempt not only to the Chaplaincy but more so to the Catholic conscience in our time. Meanwhile Sunday Masses and other Church activities and Devotions are still continuing in the Lecture Halls.

ST. ANTHONY'S PARISH, IWURU

ORIGINS: To URUAN-EFIK ancient peoples, IWURU OBIO NKAN as it was called in those ancient days, ditto Akpet, Okurike, Ikun, Iko Ekperem, Ikot Okpora etc. and those other towns and villages up to Arochukwu are towns and villages steeped in the heartland of the defunct South Eastern State of Nigeria, now renamed Cross River State by the Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida Military President (1985-1993). Iwuru town itself traverses through the vast virgin equatorial rain forest land and is inhabited by wild elephants, antelopes and what have you including reptiles of various designations. Between the 1940s and up to the early 1970s, anyone passing through this forest land could not fail to notice the existence of very gigantic trees of all sorts, Ukpa, Ofriyo, Mkpenek, etc. which supplied tonnes and tonnes of timber to the early Europeans manufacturers and to URUAN – EFIK and others for the construction of very magnificent furniture and large "Ubom Uwat-owo" canoes. Such large canoes often mounted with sails were large and powerful and could explore the Atlantic depths without any untoward dangers to the canoes or men. This was the situation the early St. Patrick's Missionaries met on ground when they came calling to spread the Good News of Salvation among these people. As commented elsewhere, St. Anthony's Iwuru was one of those early evangelized Out Stations of St. Mary's Adiabo, but which was administered from Arochukwu in those early days by the St. Patrick's Fathers.

The principal Apostle of the Adiabo – Arochukwu Mission according to records was no other than Fr. Patrick Hannelly who took over from the Fathers administering Adiabo from Sacred Heart Cathedral to wit, Fathers Kevin Longworth, Patrick Prendergast, Patrick Moore, Joseph Pettit, Bernard Hughes, Liam McWey, etc. When Fr. Patrick Hannelly came on board, he decided to assess those Out Stations of Biase through Arochukwu which was closer and more convenient to him sailing through the Calabar River via Cross River to Arochukwu. After covering the Arochukwu sector Out Stations which included Mary Immaculate Atan Onoyom and St. Oliver's Ekpene Eki Stations, he would then begin to tour the Uyanga – Biase Out Stations sailing from Arochukwu River to Uyanga and moving on foot and also where motorable, ride by motor bicycle to these other out of the way Mission Stations. To make things easier and accommodating for the people, he would also add Schools to these station Churches like Ikot Okpora, Iko Ekperem and Iwuru ostensibly except Akpet which had a Government School already and readily available for use by the Missionaries on demand.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As was always the practice, whenever a Mission Station was opened, the next thing on the mind of these early Missionaries was to request for a handy place to build a Mass Centre where Masses could be celebrated and for other Church Services, Catechism instructions, Church Meetings, etc. even for use by the village for town or village Rallies and Assemblies. Whereas as was the case with Iwuru, wherever the compounds of Chiefs who had received the Missionaries in the first place were large and spacious enough, these would automatically become the first centre of Church activities and Mass centres. The Village Head and in some cases another Chief belonging to the Village Council of Chiefs would also gladly donate the large veranda of his house and the adjacent open compound to be used for the celebration of the first "Open Air Mass" as happened here in the case of Iwuru which at the time had some Efik Christians in their midst. Those Efik citizens were ostensibly those who must have settled there in order "to hire" the carpentry villagers for the felling of the gigantic trees for them. Then, they would thereafter make the timber for their magnificent and world-class furniture or for the construction of their "Ubom Uwat-owo".

It happened then that when more and more of the citizenry in the village were won for Christ, there arose a genuine felt need to move from the compounds to a more central and spacious environment. As soon as they discovered a suitable site, they petitioned the Chiefs in- Council as was the case for the piece of land and offered "some gifts" of wine, yams and a goat to the actual owners of the site as "kola", a term often used as a token for a benefit received. Iwuru Church land was "donated" quite out of the way near the village's evil forest ostensibly so that the God of the Missionaries would exorcise the evil from the land and bring abundant blessings to the people in exchange for their goodwill and generosity to God's Messengers, the Missionaries. Thereafter they constructed a seemingly large mud Church at the site which had lasted far into the 1940s. From the 1940s this mud church served the Christian faithful for decades because a school was also added making it a Church school building. This was the state the Author met the Station in the early 1970s when on tour of the area from St. Marys' Parish Efut Abua. But precisely in 1988 plans were on top gear for the construction of the beautiful Church along with the opening of the Juniorate Iwuru by Archbishop Brian Usanga. Timber was easily available and with the collections taken from the Bazzars and other Church Functions including "COMBINED SERVICES" approved by Fr. Colm Clinton followed by Fr. Francis Mbaba and Emmanuel Nyong then administering from St. Mary's Adiabo, the church construction continued to a manageable stage. The zinc roof came on before the other parts were completed and ready for commissioning. With the posting of Fr. Christopher Umiong and later Msgr. then Fr. Emmanuel Umoetok as first Fathers In-Charge of the newly erected St. John's Parish, Akamkpa, the Church building was completed and commissioned with style, fanfare and pomp characteristic of Ekoi people's manner of celebrations of such events to the greater Glory of God.

ST. DOMINIC'S PARISH, AKPET CENTRAL - BIASE

ORIGINS: During and after the civil war (1967 - 1970), so many people were displaced especially the Igbos working in Pamol and the Dunlop Rubber Estates in Odukpani and principally from Adiabo territory and Ikot Okpora down to Arochukwu. Most of them moved further North to Akpet in Biase and some had naturalized because they were born and bred there. But before going further into the history of Akpet in Biase, perhaps it would be beneficial and necessary to digress a little in order to ponder and bring home a very poignant point concerning some of the new inhabitants of Akpet especially the Igbos living there in recent times. In 1972 in the great Capital City of Rome while this Author was studying for his PhD Programme there, a letter was brought from the Zambian Embassy in Rome to the College; Collegio di San Pietro – Viale Mura Aurelia, 4 Roma. It was meant for exhibition before the African Students staying in the College but studying in some of the Pontifical Universities in Rome. It was to find out whether anyone of them could decipher the contents of the letter. That letter had gone round all the other African Embassies and Colleges in Rome where African students were studying. Then those of us in the College including Nigerians, "Zaireans", Togolese, Cameroonians, Gabonese, Rwandans, Sudanians, Malawians, Tanzanians, Ghanaians, Angolans, Zimbabweans, Congolese, Kenyans, etc. filed out to look at the letter and try to decode in what African language the hand-written letter was all about. Why? Because someone – a European pedestrian, had noticed when the letter was being dropped by an African girl on the wide high profile Strada leading to the FUMICINO International Airport, Rome. With the entire psychological tantrums about it, the person had picked up the letter and taken it to the Zambian Embassy a little close by. There they tried to decipher it without success and the Zambian Ambassador must have sensed something very devious, curious and sinister about that letter and decided to get down to the circumstances surrounding the dropping of such a letter there especially as he was so convinced that the hand-written letter was definitely written in an African language. But why should it be so callously, yet so dramatically dropped there by a young African girl along a major Avenue of an International City like Rome? Surely the letter must be one of great forebodings. Most of us African students who had seen the letter were greatly disturbed and very anxious to get to the root of what must have transpired.

To put it very briefly as this was so stupendously exciting too; that letter happened to be written in good URUAN/EFIK language. Immediately the letter came to my turn to look at, I was able to decipher and translate it into Italian to the bewildered African Students and those of other Nationalities, Brazilians, Australians, Pakistanis, Vietnamese, Cambodians, Indians, Jamaicans, Koreans, Japanese, Philippines, etc. residing in the College who were also very bewildered, excited and curious that the letter came from Africa and indeed Nigeria, but especially from my own Archdiocese of Calabar in South South Nigeria for that matter. After I had promptly translated the contents to the point that the writer of the letter was an Igbo girl, who had been brought over from Adiabo/Kalaro Rubber Estate in Calabar to Rome by an Italian worker there who had convinced the parents of the girl and promised to bring her to Italy to work and study in one of the Universities in Rome. But this had never happened. From the contents of the letter, the girl instead was deployed as a sales girl in a gigantic high profile Jewelry shop along Via di Cavour. The girl had mastered the Italian language at one of the numerous Open Diploma Centres preliminary to entering an Italian University but had not been enrolled in any University as promised by her master.

All these were made possible to decode because all of us the Nigerian Students including John Cardinal Onayekan, then a Level 500 Post Graduate Student at the Biblicum Institute of the Gregorian University, Dr. Vincent Udo Nkanga, a Level 600 Post Graduate lay student at the Lateran University etc. Rome, had also trooped out to the Nigerian Embassy to narrate what had happened to the Nigerian Authorities there. The Embassy promptly took up the matter with the Italian Government consequent upon the issue at hand. Dr. Vincent and his colleagues were very useful and cooperative as they were able to engage an Italian girl colleague who helped using the Telephone number that was included in the letter to speak to the Matron of the Jewelry shop. With that, proper contacts were easily established because the Matron never seemed to have suspected anything since the phone call was schemed to be made to her by an Italian girl. In the end we were able to easily trace the shop and fish out the girl. To conclude, the matter was taken up by the Federal Government and the girl was promptly deported to Nigeria and handed over to her parents.

But what has this got to do with St. Dominic's Parish Akpet Central? It does. First of all, the reader will soon notice that this Church as at now is almost an Igbo Church for the simple reason that most of the Igbos in Efik-Biase speaking areas of Old Calabar Province were very safe during the war as they ran into the expansive tropical forests of Biase and were sanctuaried by their good-hearted Biase neighbours during and after the war. Secondly, most of them were Catholics praying their Rosaries to the BVM, Help of Christians. Thirdly, most of them were refugees from Calaro Rubber Estate Adiabo now stayed put after the war making Akpet Central and its environs big centres of Biafran war refugees a.k.a IDPS. These were the people I met on ground in the early 1970s. Any traveler passing during that time through Biase territory along the newly Costain constructed Calabar - Ikom High Way would not have failed to notice those big Camps. It was from these IDPs and natives and with the approval of the charismatic Archbishop Brian D. Usanga that I was able to open up the Catholic Centre in this hitherto Presbyterian territory of yore. The Akpet Church was named after the great Saint of the underprivileged, St. Domingo a.k.a DOMINIC hence, St. Dominic's Catholic Church Akpet Central. At first we were using one of the Refugee Camps and the Government School at Akpet Central instead of the big Catholic Central School at Ikot Okpora which was a bit far off from the newly constructed Road, a road which never had existed before the 1970s. This is the profile of and the beginning of this great Church in Biase country of the great Erei Speaking People. To God be the Glory!

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: One can surmise straight away that it was not going to be a big deal for a Catholic Church to be constructed in BIASE land, trust our Igbo brethren and big time entrepreneurs forming the majority of the St. Dominic's Church's roll call then. In 2003 the foundation of the Church was begun by Rev. Fr. Aloysius Eneyo, who then was appointed Rector of the flagging Uyanga Community Secondary School then handed over to the Catholic Church as the nucleus of the fledgling Stella Maris Minor Seminary at Uyanga. He was also appointed Priest In-Charge of the Church in Biase territory stretching from IWURU to AKPET and including even Okurike, Ikun, and Biakpan together with Iko Ekperem, a border town of Biase with the entire Ebonyi territory thereof.

This is a very extensive territory which can be equiperated with the entire Ebonyi and Abia States put together. Readers of this book should begin to buckle up towards assisting in the built-up of a great Catholic empire and Church in this almost Primary Evangelization territory because this is a very difficult terrain of tropical forest land and scattered populations at that. With the transfer of the young dynamic Fr. Aloysius to Bayelsa State in 2005, the Church construction work was stalled as the new Rev. Fathers appointed thereto could not cope combing the work of the Seminary and the ever expansive parish. But the people never gave up and in the interim continued to mould blocks from the Sunday tray takings since priests were thin on the ground and were only visiting the fledgling station from time to time. Nevertheless, the reprieve came when God blessed the Archdiocese with the booming Ordination of Priests that we saw from the early 2000s into the 2010s. Between 2003 and 2013 not less than forty (40) priests have been ordained in the Archdiocese of Calabar, a number that more than doubled all the Indigenous priests ordained for the Archdiocese since 1903 ie. within a century, (1903 – 2013), thanks to the good fortune of Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo who inherited a bountiful harvest of Seminarians being prepared by the legendary Archbishop Usanga. In 2003, he was also as it were being handed over a booming bountiful "near-harvest territory" when he took over the administration of the Archdiocese. Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo himself had even acknowledged this during his first meeting with the Archdiocesan clergy in March 2004, when he observed among other things to the effect that "he had inherited a solid foundation well dug in."

This observation is important because pronto, the fledgling Biase Parishes including Uyanga in Akampa territory and the Seminary began to enjoy the appointment of full-time priests to serve them for the first time in a century. Biase land a.k.a Akpet Central Mission and Headquarters became one of the beneficiaries with a resident Pastor in tow. In 2013 one of the newly ordained priests of 2011 set, Fr. Maurice Edem was appointed the residential Parish Priest of Akpet Central. He it was who immediately re-started the completion of the Church by using the Seminarians appointed to him on Apostolic Work to explore all the moribund Mission Stations of Biase land, the last of which Iko Ekperem, was only visited as late as 1984 by Archbishop Usanga and the Author. Your conclusion to this episode is as good as mine regarding the status of Akpet as the territory of primary Evangelization.

This last mentioned station offers an interesting story too. During that Archbishop Usanga's visit, the people of the area mostly Presbyterians, decided to hand over their flagging Community Secondary School then operated by the Presbyterian Church of Nigeria Mission to the Catholic Mission. From then on the Archbishop continued to appoint new Graduate Seminarians on their one-year Compulsory Probation as Principals to the School. Promptly the School was upgraded and granted approval to offer its Candidates to sit for the NECO and WASCE Examinations. From then onward Iko Ekperem became a prominent Station in Biase land. With this scenario, things began to take shape and the Church building effort had an amazingly accomplishing impetus. The Church building was completed as commented above by Rev Fr. Maurice Edem and commissioned in 2014 to the greater Glory of God.

ST. MICHAEL ARCHANGEL PARISH, OBUNG

ORIGINS: St. Michael the Archangel Quasi Parish Obung is one of the oldest Mission Stations under the present St. John the Baptist Deanery and belongs to the ancient stations established by the early Holy Ghost Fathers under Adiabo. Until the end of the civil war, even St. John the Baptist Akamkpa was equally one of the ancient out-stations of St. Mary's Parish, Adiabo. Adiabo itself was under the ancient Parish of Arochukwu, precisely St. Paul's UTUTU. The early Holy Ghost Fathers on account of the existence of large expanse of forests untraversed except through bush tracks which were not easily accessible, made their first contacts by sea in order to establish Mission Stations along the Cross River and wherever there were towns and villages near the rivers such as Adiabo. It was the same reason that motivated those early Presbyterian Missionaries to penetrate Ikot Offiong long before establishing their missions at Mbiaya, Ibiaku Uruan, etc. in URUAN. That is why Arochukwu and Adiabo were evangelized almost together because they could be reached by sea via canoes. Soon after the war and with return of the SPS priests coupled with the Ordination of some of us, Archbishop, then Bishop Brian D. Usanga considered it fitting to break up the monolithic Adiabo Parish after Arochukwu had been ceded to Umuahia Diocese. One of the new Parishes excised from Adiabo was St. John de Baptist, Akamkpa which was still administered from Adiabo through St. Mary's Efut Abua. St. Michael's Obung logically became one of its out-stations. Thereafter Archbishop Usanga equally went on to split Akamkpa into St. Georges Old Netim, St. Theresa's Mbarakom, Our Lady of Lourdes COE, St. Paul's Uyanga etc. St. Michael's Obung consequently became an out-station under St. Georges - Old Netim. Then with coming of Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo as successor to Usanga, St. Michael's Obung was excised from Old Netim to become an autonomous Quasi Parish in 2012 with Rev. Fr. Joseph Etim as first Parish Priest.

(CHURCH BUILDING): St. Michael's Obung was the first to build a Church even before Old Netim, precisely owing to the fact that there was no primary school established there. The practice and vogue was always to use the school main block for Church Services. In the absence of a school in a particular station, such a village or town had no choice but to build a Church. That was the situation at Obung, but it's very first Church building was a thatched mud church which had lasted till the 1980s. In the early 1980 a concrete Church block was built and refurbished by then Fr. now Msgr. Emmanuel Umoetok in 1993. The under-listed Chiefs donated land for the Church building at Obung viz.: Ntufam Ntui Agu, Mr. Dominic Bassey, Ntufam Agu Okang and Ntufam Mbe Ntui. The present Church building was constructed in 2009 to replace the old one when the people were promised an autonomous Parish status by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo and was effected in 2012 to the greater Glory of God. The following donated the land for the recently constructed permanent Church building:

ST. THERESE OF THE CHILD JESUS PARISH, OJOR

(a) ORIGINS: The St. Therese of the Child Jesus Parish, Ojor was formerly an old Mission Station under St. Mary's Adiabo which was visited by the early SPS Fathers right in the 1930s. As was the custom, these Rev. Fathers occasionally visited the Station to administer the Sacraments and attend to the people's spiritual needs – sick calls, evangelizing the Catechumens as also instructing couples for the Sacrament of Matrimony. In the 1950s and from the records, the priests used to stay here for two or three days in order to visit other out stations eg. those stations like Ifumkpa and Owai that were not accessible by motor cycles which were the only means of transport used by those early St. Patrick's Missionaries then. Ojor was one of the Adiabo Stations I visited and also spent the night there during the civil war, precisely in 1968. Here I had very interesting and fun memories so much so that I have treasured them till today especially because the same events which occurred at St. Theresa's Mbarakom also occurred here. Regarding the events, in a particular case it so happened that after the morning Mass as I had the custom of going round greeting the lay folks and chatting with them especially the ubiquitous and interesting children, some of them came up and rubbed my arms. I was flabbergasted and curious. But one of the women in a bid to allay my fears also touched my hands and rubbed her hands on her dress ostensibly to see if it would be tinted. On further exasperation they all laughed and chorused that they wanted to know if I had pained myself black because every priest they ever knew then was a white man.

Well, the long and short of it was that I was the first black priest to minister there. Secondly, they had never seen an African indigenous priest before although they had heard of Dominic Cardinal Ekandem. They were thinking I might indeed be one of the white priests who had disguised and painted himself because of the war since all the white priests had been ordered out and deported back to their country. Fr. Joseph Cantwell a newly arrived Irish priest in Nigeria just before the war broke out, has captured his experience at Adiabo very well in his book: because he was not even up to a year in the country before the war broke out. He was appointed Assistant Priest to Fr. Lawrence McWey at St. Mary's Adiabo by the erstwhile Bishop James Moynagh. In other words, nobody had expected a white priest in Adiabo territory, a fortiori, in Nigeria anymore. Therefore, any white priest ever to be seen in Nigeria would have to come disguised and as it were by being painted black. The rest is history as they say. With the erection of St. John de Baptist Akamkpa in 1991 as the first Parish sui juris to be detached from St. Mary's, Adiabo by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga, all the Mission Stations beyond Odukpani – Ikom Axis and the stretching up to Biase viz. from Our Lady of Lourdes COE. Awi, St. Paul's Parish Uyanga, etc. up to St. Dominic's Akpet Central, all these including St. Therese Mission Station, Ojor came under Akampa as the new Headqurters of the Deanery and Central Mission. In 1996 St. Paul's Uyanga was further detached by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga from St. John de Baptist Akamkpa and St. Therese Ojor became the new Mission Station under Uyanga but administered by the Rector and priests teaching at the Stella Maris

Junior Seminary, Uyanga. In 2015, St. Therese Ojor was detached from St. Paul's Parish Uyanga and erected a Quasi Parish sui juris by Archbishop Joseph Ekuwem, the newly appointed archbishop of Calabar who took over from the erstwhile and retiring Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo with Rev. Fr. Emmanuel G. Ntekim as the first Parish Priest thereof.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The first thatched mud building was according to records constructed in 1950 during the time of Fr. Patrick Hannelly (SPS) as the regular visiting priest. It was a modest little church and stood strong right through the war. With the increase in the population of the Catholic Faithful who thronged the place during the war as refugees, the former building was pulled down in 1973 and a modest sand-brick church was constructed which lasted till 1981. Then a new site was acquired outside the village centre on the Ojor Ifumkpa road grace Ü la the Village Council of Chiefs after giving the traditional kola of a life goat, gin and 5 yams to the original land owners. Thereafter, the old Church was pulled down to kick-start the construction of the beautiful Church we have today. The construction of the beautiful and first ever Rev. Father's house was started in 1913.

ST. JOSEPH'S IKOT ENE DEANERY-AKPABUYO
ST. JOSEPH'S PARISH, IKOT ENE

PRESENT CHURCH

NEW UNCOMPLETED CHURCH

ORIGINS: Apart from Ikot Nakanda, the Headquarters of Akpabuyo Local Government Area, Ikot Ene was the only significant town after acquiring the status of a CENTRAL MISSION STATION Ikot Nakanda having been made the N/A CIVIC CENTRE of Colonial Nigeria in Akpabuyo territory and the second in the Calabar Mission under the legendary Fr. Josef Leon Lena (CSSP (1903 - 1928) as the Head of the Calabar Mission with Fr. Patrick McDermott (CSSP) as Assisting Priest. As discussed already in Part One, URUAN-EFIK Founding Fathers had sailed from AKWA AKPA URUAN further south, around the turn of the 1st Century AD and discovered ATA - AKPA a.k.a Atakpa or better still, CALABAR, a name given to the territory by the early Portuguese Explorers who first arrived the shores of the West Coast of Africa in 1546 AD. After settling there at Atakpa for ages, these Founding Fathers discovered to their consternation and dissatisfaction that Atakpa was only a narrow and winding strip of land whose lager interior territory had already been occupied by the EFUTS to the East and the QUAS to the West. They further discovered that this mangrove territory was indeed too small and unsuitable as also unsavoury and insufficient for farming and fishing and this made some of them to sail further south through the Idundu River until they arrived at the Atimbo River over which they had crossed on sighting a large expanse of land before them. They named the territory AKPABUYO, meaning = a LAND ON THE CROSSING OVER. This is also the territory which the present Church has named IKOT ENE DEANARY or the Headquarters of the Church in the territory today. This covers an expansive land mass which stretches from Atimbo River as far as Ikang on the Atlantic Coast.

Being an already established Efik territory long before the coming of the early Europeans as observed above, and more so before the arrival of the Holy Ghost Fathers of the Calabar Mission, little wander that the Missionaries would have inexorably planned to first explore those areas occupied by their Efik hosts and peoples. From available records and as explained already, many Efik Chieftains living in Calabar metropolis had large farms and plantations and holiday resorts in Akpabuyo even up to this day. It therefore meant that they were moving hither and forth from Calabar to Akpabuyo as dictated by the timing of the planting and harvesting seasons. It was these chieftains that invited the Holy Ghost Missionaries to open up Mission Stations for them in Akpabuyo territory one of them being from the Archibong Ene and Ephraim Adam Royal Houses, hence the naming of the area under study as IKOT ENE. Small wander also as observed above, that the Missionaries in turn would have decided to open up their first Efik Out-station and Mission Centre at Ikot Ene. The first trip of Fr. Josef Leon Lena to Ikot Ene as noted above was by canoe which was at the instance of the Efik Chieftains residing at Calabar. Fr. Lena with his entourage were ferried across the Atimbo River. From there they paddled and meandered up-stream until they arrived at Ikot Edem Odo beach a.k.a ESUK MBA where tumultuous jubilant dancing troupes of villagers from far and near were awaiting them. Here at Ikot Edem Odo they celebrated their first Open Air Mass on December 8, 1910 and named the place after the third Person of the Blessed Trinity, Holy Ghost Catholic Mission to symbolize and in honour of the Holy Spirit Who filled the Blessed Virgin as His Spouse and also in commemoration of the Solemnity of Immaculate Conception. Other trips were often by canoe grace Ü la the ubiquitous and hospitable Akpabuyo Chieftains residing at Calabar and visiting their large farmlands in the territory but still always embarking and setting sail through the said ESUK MBA. It was later on in 1912 that they opened up their Headquarters at Ikot Ene from their Ikot Edem Odo base and after celebrating their first Open Air Mass there they named the place after St. Joseph, the husband of Mary.

From here after some time, they rounded up the territory and opened up St. Michael's Oban in 1914 after trekking over a hundred miles away through that thick West African forest inhabited by all sorts of wild animals including lions, elephants and snakes etc. to go visit and evangelize a people with ways and cultures incomparable to theirs. Ask Rev. Fr. Jim Kelleher SPS, who was here almost 60 years ago, and still continuing the missionary work among us, and you can conclude the rest for yourselves. It was nothing short of miracle! That was also the raison de ìtre Fr. Lena named Oban Mission Centre "ST. MICHAEL'S CATHOLIC MISSION" after the Archangel of God Almighty, who can conquer all things. MICHAEL = Aniekan Abasi – the same name God Himself gave His holy Archangel, the conqueror of Satan. It was really to go and conquer Satan against all his exploits as also his evil co-travelers that Fr. Lena went out there. In 1931 and with the impetus of the arrival of the Irish St. Patrick's Fathers, Ikot Ene began to have a new lease of life as the Irish priests became the regular visitors to the territory with Bishop then Fr. Thomas McGettrick as Father In-Charge thereof. The SPS or St. Patrick's priests as they were called beginning with Fr. Thomas McGettrick had taken over the Calabar Mission territory by now from the Holy Ghost Fathers and they took the work of evangelization to another lever. They began to frequent Ikot Ene as their base and to go from there on bush treks moving from one village to another preaching, teaching baptizing and blessing marriages with the Sacrament of Matrimony. They visited those who were sick by giving them the Sacrament of Extreme Unction a.k.a ANOINTING, as it was called in those days of pre-Vatican II.

One of the Irish SPS priests who frequented Ikot Ene and from there as base went on bush treks to open more out-stations was Fr. Thomas McGettrick as mentioned above. He later was appointed the "strong man" of ANUA MISSION, the second after the SACRED HEART MISSION, CALABAR. The Anua Mission under Fr. McGettrick became one of the largest and most populous with hundreds of Mission Stations, Schools and Catechists after the likes of Holy Trinity Mission, Onitsha which was the premier Mission of Bishop Josef Shanahan followed by Emekuku Mission as discussed above. Other visiting Priests before the erection of St. Joseph's Ikot Ene as a Parish include Rev. Father Austin Gogarty, Fr. Kevin Longworth and Fr. Liam McWey in that order. In 1954 Akpabuyo was carved out from the Sacred Heart Mission to become the second Roman Catholic Mission of the Calabar riverine sector under Bishop James Moynagh with Rev. Father Patrick Scanlon as Father In-Charge a.k.a Parish Priest. In 1958 he became instrumental in the establishment of the St. Joseph's Hospital manned by the Medical Missionaries of Mary (MMM) Sisters. This was a great land mark in the annals of the Calabar riverine Roman Catholic Mission and this opened up Ikot Ene and the entire Akpabuyo country to the larger outside world. In 1967, Rev. Father Sylvester U. J. Udoh was appointed the first ever African indigenous priest to take over from Fr. John Ralph (SPS) followed by Fr. James Kelleher who later was transferred in 1968 to St. Michael's Oban and Immaculate Conception Seminary, Mfamosing as Rector.

In 1990 during the Annual Archdiocesan Priests' Retreat and as part of his policy address, Archbishop Brian D. Usanga announced the erection of new parishes carved out from two ancient St Patrick's parishes hitherto created by the erstwhile Bishop James Moynagh, to wit from St. Mary's Adiabo and St. Joseph's Ikot Ene. Those of St. Mary's Adiabo included St. John the Baptist Akamkpa, St. Paul's Parish Uyanga and Our Lady of Lourdes Chaplaincy College of Education Awi. Those erected out of St. Joseph's Parish Ikot Ene included Holy Ghost Parish, Ikot Edem Odo, SS Daniel and Patrick Akwa Ikot Efanga and Our Lady of Fatima Parish Ikang. From all accounts St. Joseph's Ikot Ene has now become a mother, grandmother and great grandmother with the further erection of St. George's Ekpene Tete Parish in 1999 and later, St. Francis of Assisi Akpap now in Bakassi L G. A. in 2003 to mark the Centenary of the Calabar Mission (1903 - 2003) to the greater Glory of God.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The first ever "chapel" church was built on burned sand bricks and the foundation was laid by Fr. Franz Howell (CSSP) in 1914. But later in 1932 and with the arrival of the St. Patrick's Missionaries (SPS), the building was extended and commissioned by Fr. Thomas McGettrick to accommodate the teaming population. This modest expanded and refurbished church building at Ikot Ene served the entire Akpabuyo Christian Faithful for decades until 1944 when Rev. Fr. Augustine Gogarty pulled down the old building and laid the foundation of the present church building which still stands strong today. In 1984 and with the appointment of Mgr. then Fr. Emmanuel O. Idem to St. Joseph's Ikot Ene as Parish Priest, he laid a new foundation for a new world-class church he termed "St. Joseph's Basilica" which is still standing uncompleted till today. Nevertheless, and even with the balkanization of the seemingly monolithic St. Joseph's Ikot Ene, it would be right and fitting for the Archdiocese of Calabar Pastoral Council to champion the completion of this to-be magnificent Church a.k.a "ST. JOSEPH'S BASILICA" by organizing an all-embracing Archdiocesan Annual Harvest, the proceeds of which should be channeled towards the completion of this long overdue project which has overwhelmed Ikot Ene and has also become the shame of the Catholic Archdiocese of Calabar for decades now.

c) SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of St. Joseph's Ikot Ene both formerly as a Mission Station of Sacred Heart Cathedral, and afterwards as a Paris sui juris, the following Priests have served in Ikot Ene either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

REGINA PACIS CHAPLAINCY, POLICE COLLEGE, ATIMBO

ORIGINS: As a quasi-Mission Station and quite before attaining an autonomous status as Regina Pacis Chaplaincy, the Catholic Community in this College had always participated in terms of Mass Celebration as well as other Church Services and functions just as all other educational Institutions like in the Primary, Secondary Schools etc. in the Archdiocese. Priests were usually appointed to celebrate Holy Mass there on Sundays in the officially designated class rooms or Assembly Halls of the Institutions. The Author was appointed as a visiting Chaplain among others by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga during the early days of the College (1992-1999). But since this is a boarding school, Catholic students were usually at first marched to St. George's Catholic Church, Ekpene Tete to attend Mass there on Sundays. As the school went up in the academic cadre as also owing to increase in the population of the College, Church services began to be conducted there in the approved classrooms. This continued until well into 1990s when a permanent College Hall was collocated and fixed as the formal venue for Church activities.

(b)CHURCH BUILDING: There is no special Church built here for Religious worship and other spiritual exercises in the College. The College Authorities have only granted the Religious groups approval and the permission to use the College Assembly Hall for Masses and other Religious Activities on Sundays only.

(c)SERVING PRIESTS IN CHAPLAINCY – POLICE COLLEGE, ATIMBO

Before this time, the Archbishop of Calabar used to appoint either priests who had fewer activities in their parishes or Teaching priests in the University of Calabar, etc. to serve as visiting priests in the College. Later, the Parish priest of either Holy Ghost Ikot Edem Odo or St. Joseph's Ikot Ene ie. before the creation of St. George's Parish to minister to the students on Sundays. Recently either the Parish Priest of St. George's Ekpene Tete or SS Daniel and Patrick Akwa Ikot Effanga are assigned for this task. Hence the following priests have served here either as Visitor, Assistant or Chaplain since the inception of the College and for the present Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Agu:

MGR. JOSEPH P. EKARIKA 1992 - 1993	FR. JAMES GOLDEN EKPE 1993 -1994	FR. MALACHY EPHRAIM 1994-1995	FR. JOSEPH A. EDEM 1995-1997

(d) POLICE COLLEGE, ATIMBO CHAPLAINCY CHOIR ASSOCIATION

The Chaplaincy has only one Students' Choir hence there is no special Choir Association, but the students sometimes arrange for Prayer Meetings after Choir practices.

(e) SENIOR SEMINARIANS IN TRAINING OF REGINA PACIS CHAPLAINCY

Since its inception over 20 years ago, there has been no Senior Seminarian in training. Chaplains administering here should do well to introduce Prayers for Vocations to the Students and also encourage Vocations. Meanwhile let us also join our prayers as most Vocations nowadays come from secular Secondary Schools even from Military and Police Colleges nationwide.

(f) LAY OFFICERS & IMPORTANT PERSONALITIES OF CHAPLAINCY

These are some of the important Officers of the Chaplaincy who are either the Catholic Members of Staff the or Catholic Head Boys and Girls including Heads of the Catholic Associations to-date:

HOLY GHOST PARISH, IKOT EDEM ODO

OLD CHURCH WITH VATICAN I

ALTAR

NEW HOLY GHOST CHURCH

ORIGINS: From available records, Fr. Franz Howell (CSSP) who arrived the shores of Calabar on September 28, 1910 was sent by Fr. Josef Leon Lena (CSSP) the Superior and Father In-Charge of the Calabar Mission, to explore the possibility of opening up the mass area of Akpabuyo country for Christ and His Gospel. Fr. Lena had previously visited the area in 1904 grace Ü la the chiefs of Akpabuyo, notably Chief John Adam Ephraim, a one time baptized past pupil of Sacred Heart School and therefter, a Royal Father and Paramount Ruler of Ikot Edem Odo. He with his Chiefs-In- Council had in the course of time paid a courtesy visit to the legendary and indefatigable Fr. Lena at his Court in Sacred Heart Cathedral to implore him to come down to Akpabuyo and bring Christ and education to his people. In compliance with this request, Fr. Franz Howell, a close companion of the ebullient German Fr. Josef Kraft (CSSP) at the Sacred Heart Cathedral set out with a large contingent of Akpabuyo citizens residing in Calabar as mentioned above in Part One, and arrived Esuk Atimbo amidst the enthusiasm and merriment of the jubilating natives who had thronged the beach to receive him. They then sailed from there and arrived at ESUK MBA in Ikot Edem Odo where they met yet a more tumultuous jubilating dancing crowd of enthusiastic local people. A large forest area around Chief Adam Ephraim's residence had being cleared and this was where Fr. Howell, the august visitor said the first Open Air Mass on December 25, 2010 on Akpabuyo soil amidst jubilations, great funfair and dancing. From here Fr. Howell opened up St. Joseph's Ikot Ene in 1912, and St. Michael's Oban in 1914. Fr. Howell became the regular visitor to the station. Later on, St. Joseph's Ikot Ene was created the de facto Central Mission and Parish Centre of Akpabuyo territory while Ikot Edem Odo continued as a Mission Station until 1995 when it was raised by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga to the status of a Parish sui juris during the Author's administration of the area with Fr. Malachy Ephraim as the first official Parish Priest in 1996.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The first ever Church construction work with a VATICAN I prototype Altar was started by Fr. Josef Kraft and completed by Fr. Franz Howell. That premier church building still stands strong till today as seen in the photograph above. It is not very apparent that the Old Church has been put to any use except that the young priest who happens to be Efik is trying to rehabilitate the Church as one can see Indian bamboo props now going up ostensibly to reinforce the building. I would suggest that it can be used as the Parish Hall and Parish Pastoral Centre and even more still as an Adult Education Centre to bring back life to the easy - going aged peoples as of yore. In 1992 the foundation of the new Church building was laid under Fr. Malachy Ephraim as then Parish Priest of Ikot Ene. It was constructed by community effort because in Akpabuyo territory everybody by tradition is a nominal member of the Catholic Church. The Church was completed in 1996 and blessed by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga. During the visit of the Papal Nuncio, Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano to the Archdiocese in 1997, his itinerary included a visit to Holy Ghost Parish Ikot Edem Odo where a tumultuous Rally of the citizens of Akpabuyo and beyond was organized for his reception and the commissioning of the Church with great fanfare, pomp and pageantry.

(c)SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of the Holy Ghost Parish, Ikot Edem Odo both formerly as a Mission Station and afterwards as a Paris sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge, Parish Priests or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

OUR LADY OF FATIMA PARISH, IKANG

ORIGINS: The EFUTS as discussed in PART One of this Chapter of the Book are said to be peoples of the indigenous autonomous tribe of the BANTU stock of the Nigritic peoples of AFRICA who had emigrated from what is now known as the Cameroun Republic in Central Africa to the shores of what is known as CALABAR in the present Federal Republic of Nigeria between the 9th -11th century AD at the heat of the fierce BATANGKA WAR as recorded in most books on Medieval World History. They did not arrive in large hordes but voyaged by canoes in their kindred groupings of the CAMEROS BAKWERE RACE with their respective MGBE EFUT MUTAKA ie. Ekpe traditional symbols of Authority. From available records and according to Efuts' lores and cultural history, their first port of call and settlement was RIO DEL REY, a costal island which borders our famous USAHAEDET which was originally founded by the ancient URUAN/EFIK peoples and later designated EDIK AFAHA by the IBIBIOS after URUAN/EFIK had emigrated to IBOM in modern Arochukwu. What is most probable here is that the EFUTS did not depart with URUAN but stayed put at their base around RIO DEL REY until they were overtaken by the great Batanga war mentioned earlier because while URUAN founded USAHAEDET still within the RIO DEL REY region, they in turn had founded EFUT IWANG which became the first primary cradle land of their settlement centuries before Christ, ditto URUAN/EFIK peoples. At "Efut Iwang" ie. Efut Rivulet or Creek land, they must have settled there long enough into the Christian era and had so multiplied that the land could no longer contain them. Some of them started to move on and landed on the shores of NTEMTEM which is the coastal town they founded and which is otherwise known as modern IKANG. But it seems they must have settled long enough at IKANG, the Headquarters of what is now known as BAKASSI, to be able to penetrate and deforest considerable areas of this settlement. But they could not penetrate further into the thick forest land and swamps before them and therefore decided to settle in those areas of EFUT ESIHI, EFUT IFIANG, etc. which are all within IKANG territory or Bakassi today. Then, after settling at NTEMTEM - IKANG in what later became the present day AKPABUYO forest land, some groups and kindreds of the EFUTS who traversed the aforementioned territories moved on and founded the territory of ISU EKOM which they deforested covering the thick land mass now known as EDIBE EDIBE in modern CALABAR, ditto EFUT ABUA, EFUT EKONDO, ETC.

But again, there is another culture history of the Quas which describes the founding of IKANG by the Quas. Qua cultural and ethnographic history has it that thousands of years ago and long before the Christian era AD, the Quas emigrated in two waves from South West Cameroun, the first group led by Ndidem Eta Nyak a.k.a Eta Ntison and arrived at the Calabar axis overland and founded what is now known as Odukpani ie. ETAMKPINI/AKPANG. The second group entered Calabar overland through what is now known as Bakassi and Akpabuyo axis led by Ikang Eta, the son of Eta Ntison. These were the Qua groups who founded IDUNDU and other areas bordering the IDUNDU River viz. ANYANGHANSE, ASABANGKA, etc. This territory terminates in Atimbo River in AKPABUYO district. From there they moved on and founded IKANG territory which is now Bakassi as discussed in article III of this Chapter above. They are also the Qua group which now forms Akim Qua and Big Qua Clans. etc. (Cf. Chief Hon Hayford S. Edet, 12 -14). It is also on record that the early Holy Ghost Missionaries who established Ikot Ene Central Mission in 1912 later moved on and founded the Ikang Catholic Mission Station in 1915 or thereabouts.

Ikang Station was assessed through the Atimbo River which runs southward to join the Cross River terminating in the Atlantic Ocean. This was so because the Calabar - Atimbo Ikang Road had not yet been constructed and the Missionaries preferred rather to travel by boat to the further end of modern Akpabuyo/Bakassi rather than traverse the thick virgin forest land through Efut Esihi, Akpap, Ekpri Ikang, etc. From Ikang they were able to assess other groups of villages viz. Ikot Effiom, Ifiang, Efut Esihi, Idebe, Ekpri Ikang and Akpap Mission Stations, etc. all in Ikang or Bakassi territory today. Later on Ikang developed as a beach town of its own. The immediately following the Cameroun / Nigeria border disputes, this catapulted in the stationing of the Nigerian Army and Navy in Ikang by the Sani Abacha Military Government (1993- 1998).

To go on "bush visitation" to Ikang as visits to out of the town and Out-Station villages were popularly tagged, meant a boost to the covers of St. Joseph's Ikot Ene Central Parish and many a Missionary and later indigenous priests including the Author made it a point of duty never to fail going on bush trek visit to Ikang Mission Station. In fact, priests even regularly went there if not for anything else but to get a good taste of the fish from Ikang Fish Beach Port. Ikang between the 1940s – 1960s was a well often visited sea port. It later became an international beach market town. Many sea merchants from Cameroun, Gabon and Equatorial Guinea as well as the MAINLAND a.k.a Akwa Ibom and Igbo country patronized the sea port. It was one of the fist Mission Stations after Ikot Ene and Ikot Edem Odo to have constructed a model permanent Church which lasted well into the 1980's. In August 1990, during the Annual Archdiocesan Priests' Retreat and as part of his policy address, Archbishop Brian D. Usanga announced the erection of new parishes to be carved out from two ancient St. Patrick's major Parishes hitherto created by the legendary erstwhile Bishop James Moynagh, to wit from St. Mary's Adiabo and St. Joseph's Ikot Ene. These two Central Mission Stations were erected by the Holy Ghost Fathers because they were the most important Efik Stations after Sacred Heart Cathedral, the premier Mission of the CSSP. The Holy Ghost Fathers true to their custom of "cujus regio ejus religio", sought out other most important Efik towns after Calabar, and promptly moved there to establish their Central Mission Stations – Adiabo to the North, and Ikot Ene to the South, both along the Efik coastal territory. Those Mission Stations of St. Mary's Adiabo included St. John the Baptist Akamkpa, St. Paul's Parish Uyanga and Our Lady of Lourdes Chaplaincy College of Education Awi, St. John's Akamkpa, St. Theresa's Mbarakom, St. Paul's Uyanga, St. George's Old Netim, St. Anthony's Iwuru, St. Dominic's Akpet Central and lastly St. Therese, Ojor. Those erected out of St. Joseph's Parish Ikot Ene included Holy Ghost Parish, Ikot Edem Odo, SS Daniel and Patrick Akwa Ikot Efanga, Our Lady of Fatima Parish Ikang, St. Francis' Akpap –Bakassi, and St. George's Ekpene Tete as also Regina Pacis Police Chaplaincy, Atimbo.

But Our Lady of Fatima Ikang was not a residential Parish Centre and continued to be administered from St. Joseph's, Ikot Ene until well into the third Millennium 2000 AD when a modest Rectory was completed under Rev. Fr. Joseph Eyo as Parish Priest (1999-2003). The Author last ministered in Ikang as visiting priest on relieve duty in 1995. Since then the following Fathers viz. Fr. Christopher Okpu, Fr. Joseph Eyo, Fr. Cyril Essien, Fr. Francis H. Essiet and lately Fr. Paul Etene have all administered the beautiful Parish.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The First Open Air Mass which was conducted near the verandah of the first man to be baptized, Ntoe Benedict Archibong according the Church records, continued to serve as the holy place of worship until the Ntoe in Council donated a large piece of land much closer to the village square and it was here the first mud thatch Church was constructed. This happened before the construction of the Calabar Ikang Road which incidentally passed through the Mission Station Centre. This seemingly large Church building on account of the ever increasing attendees for worship and Catechetical Instruction continued to serve as the place of worship until well into the 1950s when with the arrival of the early St. Patrick's Missionaries, the Church was pulled down to make room for a beautiful permanent Church that endured quite into the 1980s. It was precisely when Fr. Patrick Scanlon was posted to the Parish that he kick-started refurbishing the Church in 1956 and laid a stronger foundation to withstand the expanded beautiful Church that lasted well into the Millennium. With the erection of Our Lady of Fatima Ikang as an autonomous Parish, the people began to nurse the hope of building a completely new Church. In 2003 Fr. Joseph A. Eyo laid the foundation of the new Church pictured above. That Church is taking a bit of time to complete due to the precarious situation of the entire Bakassi territory where Nigerian refugees have flocked in from the Bakassi Peninsular as a consequence of ceding the area to the Cameroun Republic. Life in Ikang is no more what it used to be. Again the economic situation and potential of the place as both a fishing port and beach market town has considerably nose-dived leaving the town in a palpable hiccup. Very few people from the MAINLAND are coming to Ikang these days on account of this setback and the entire coastline has almost been completely blockaded by the Cameroun gendarmes and the Nigerian military with the Navy in tow stationed there. With this scenario, Ikang is not buoyant again and those economic ventures of old have been adversely affected thus making life in the Parish and environs very unbearable and the Church has become a mere country side Mission post. Much effort has to be put to get the parish working again and to be able to complete the beautiful Church on schedule.

(c)SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of Our Lady of Fatima Ikang Parish, both formerly as a Mission Station and afterwards as a Quasi-Paris sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

SS DANIEL & PATRICK PARISH-AKWA IKOT EFANGA

ORIGINS: SS Daniel and Patrick Mission Station was the name given absolutely to Yellow Duke and Akwa Ikot Effanga Church in Western Akpabuyo axis which terminates in Akansoko, MCC Road which equally terminates in Ekang, the last town in Cross River State and border with Western Cameroun Republic. During and soon after the Nigerian civil war, the populations in Calabar villages and towns catapulted owing to the influx of refugees a.k.a "Internally Displaced Persons" mostly from the Mainland of what is now Akwa Ibom State as noted elsewhere in this book and Akpabuyo was no exception. Archbishop Brian D. Usanga in order to immortalize the legendary Military Governor of Old Cross River in the person of Brg. Daniel Patrick Daniel Archibong, son of the indefatigable Etubom Maurice Efanga Archibong as an indigene of the area, raised the ancient Ikot Effanga village Catholic Church to the status of a Parish with the above name tag and named the Author as first Father In-Charge. However, the Station conventionally hitherto called Catholic Church/ Mission, Akwa Ikot Effanga was originally a Mission Station as well as Sectional Centre under St. Joseph's Parish, Ikot Ene in Akpabuyo LGA. Determined to add verve towards the materialization of Archbishop Usanga's good will and intensions, the people especially the "refugees" to whose benefit the Church was elevated mobilized with all zest to make SS Daniel a great Church in Akpabuyo country. In conjunction with this, Brg. Daniel Patrick's brother Arch. Dr. Maurice Archibong Jnr. added another dimension to the status of the newly created Parish by mobilizing and also constructing a large and magnificent Pilgrimage Centre at the further end of the town such that the town now has a Primary School, a Government Secondary School establish by the New Cross River State Government, still after the war in the 1980s, a Pilgrimage Centre and a Parish Centre to further embellish this extensive territory in Akpabuyo land. Before this time, the Fathers In-Charge and the Assisting Priests of St. Joseph's Parish Ikot Ene were the regular administrators of the Station then, while the Church was only yet a Mission Station. But after the erection of SS Daniel Parish, Akwa Ikot Efanga in 1995, the Parish Priest of Holy Ghost Ikot Edem Odo became the Administrator of the Parish. Recently, the Parish was administered by the Parish Priests of St. George's Ekpene Tete until 2016 when Fr. Emmanuel Agu was appointed the substantive Parish Priest but residing at Ekpene Tete Mission.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As noted above, the Church here started as a Mission Station under St. Joseph's Parish, Ikot Ene and as the custom was in those early days, most of the Churches started using the school building for Religious Services. But this was not exactly the case with Ikot Effanga Station. It was very providential that the Colonial Government had already penetrated these parts of Akpabuyo and so established a number of schools for the people for example, Government School Ikot Nakanda, which is actually the Headquarters of the entire Akpabuyo country. Consequently, it so happened that the first Missionaries from Ikot Ene were lucky to find the Government School here and started using the school as the place of worship without any interference or complaints from Government. The school was built for the benefit of the people and they obviously regarded the school as the village property donated to them by Government. This was the case in almost all and similar situations nationwide or at least in the defunct South Eastern Nigeria. But the Church can only be said to be established in any particular locale whenever, and until a separate and if possible, a permanent concrete Church is built by the people themselves. In the 1950s, a mud building was constructed through the combined effort of the people from Yellow Duke and Ikot Effanga territories at Akwa Ikot Effanga. In 1966 they molded blocks and actually started the building of a permanent Church and it was stalled by the ensuing civil war (1967-1970). After the war the Church building work continued with zest and renewed vigour but as the "refugees" started returning to their villages of origin coupled with the creation of Akwa Ibom State in September 1987, as also the repatriation of the so-called Akwa Ibomites non-indigene civil servants from Cross River State, the population dwindled to such a degree that the work assumed a very slow pace and could no longer be sustained. In fact, it was only within the last two or three years that the Church building ever showed any appreciable rate of continuation. In 2016, with the posting of a very dynamic young priest, Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Agu to the Parish, the Church Altar and other aspects of the Church building have been successfully completed and the Church will sooner or later be commissioned by Archbishop Joseph E. Ekuwem to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

ST. PETER'S PARISH, EKPENE TETE – AKPABUYO

ORIGINS: St. Peter's Ekpene Tete, like other out-stations of St. Joseph's Ikot Ene was evangelized after Ikot Ene had gained the enviable status of AKPABUYO CENTRAL MISSION, the second Mission after SACRED HEART CATHEDRAL, CALABAR. At the same time, the Holy Ghost Fathers began visiting the area in the early days of the Calabar Mission. They began visiting Ikot Ene and doing bush treks to the Out - Stations including St. Peter's Ekpene Tete, a little close by from Ikot Ene. It was a very difficult terrain assessing it from the Atimbo beach because after being ferried to Atimbo, the Missionaries had to trek through the typical swampy rain forest territory through what is now St. Dominic's Station, Atimbo Station to the Parish centre Ikot Ene before assessing any other Mission Stations which invariably were Holy Ghost Ikot Edem Odo and St. George's Ekpene Tete. In 1915, Fr. McDermott visited Ekpene Tete out-station and after some time opened a school there for the people. The mud school building became the centre both for academic work and Church services right into the 1930's when the St. Patrick's Fathers arrived Ikot Ene. In 1932 Bishop, then Fr. Thomas McGettrick rebuilt the school in concrete and this became a veritable centre of attraction and locale for the entire area where important events like village functions, bazaars, ball-room dances and other village displays which were the order of the day in the 1940s – 1960s were carried on. In 1991 when SS Daniel and Patrick Akwa Ikot Effanga was excised from Ikot Ene and created an autonomous Parish, St. Peter's Ekpene Tete became an out-station of the new Parish with Very Rev. Fr. Malachy Ephraim as their new Parish Priest. In 1995 before the transfer of Fr. M. Ephraim, the station was erected an autonomous Parish sui juris by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga with Rev. Father Evaristus Bassey as the first Father In-Charge a.k.a Parish Priest. At its inception the Parish had only three out-stations, but through the enterprising and evangelical acumen of their Parish priests in sync with the people, a new baby station, Our lady of Fatima station Anwa Enang which hitherto had been their ancient grazing grounds for their cows, a very strategic place at that, was established to the greater Glory of God. In 2016, the indomitable, enigmatic and ebullient Fr. Francis H. Essiet was transferred from Ikang to the Parish, and with his "never say die" and enterprising spirit, he has opened up new vistas and ventures by establishing among others SS Peter and Paul Crospil Estate in the parish.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As observed already, St. Peter's Ekpene Tete carried out all its church services and programmes using the St. Peter's school building which at inception was a junior primary section of St. Joseph's Central School, Ikot Ene. With the arrival of the St. Patrick's Fathers, the members under the direction of their two eminent sons, viz. Chief Peter Enebim and Ete Michael Nya Enebim donated a piece of their patrimonial land for the construction of the first church at Esin Ufot Ikot Ekanem Nya along the village stream road popularly called "Idim Nya Enebim". It was the strategic and most central place in the town because everybody had to pass through it to the stream either to draw water, swim, or do their washings and even fish downstream. That made it inevitable for the folks not to notice the church and try to find out what was going on there. ln time this place attracted a good number of worshippers as the chorus repetition of the Catechism under Mr. Patrick N. Akpan, the Station Teacher, was inescapable. It was the good old days, so to speak. Many children including those who were not yet going to school were attracted and they willingly enrolled for the Catechism classes. It was only a matter of time for them to be registered in St. Peter's School which also prompted the promotion of the school to Standard IV in 1958 with the arrival of Fr. Patrick Scanlon (SPS) to St. Joseph's Ikot Ene. All these are preliminary to the refurbishing and eventual construction of the beautiful church we now have in place.

It first started with the construction of Iboto mats and bamboo benches whereas before this time, the school children were carrying the school desks to the church on Fridays after school. It was inevitable that these little kids would inadvertently let fall and break some of those desks as these children two by two, were used to carrying them on their heads. A stop had to be put to this by the school Authorities, hence the Church members by themselves had to supply in - proviso bamboo benches and chairs at this material point in time. Later on they also made wooden ukpo benches from their broken canoes and other canoe slices. But it was quite satisfactory so far. However, in time, the thatched mud church had to make way for a more comfortable and respectable building. Chief, Etete Effiom, Joseph Ene Okon Udo Udoh, and Madam Mmandu Okon Ekpo Effiom Tete donated the present piece of land which was adjacent and quite near to the school for the commencement of the present Church project.

(c) SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of St. Georges' Church Ekpene Tete, both formerly as a Mission Station and afterwards as a Quasi-Paris sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including Visiting Priests appointed to the Parish.

ST. MICHAEL'S OBAN DEANARY- AKAMKPA
ST. MICHAEL'S PARISH OBAN - AKAMKPA

(a) ORIGINS: Available records show that Rev. Fr. Louis Lena CSSP celebrated the first Holy Mass here at Oban on September 29, 1906, naming it St. Michael's Catholic Church on whose Feast Day he landed on this strategic Ekoi soil. More specifically and tellingly, his trip to this virgin, mountainous equatorial rain-forest country must be seen by all discerning readers of this book as a task and a feat accomplished. How could a white man coming from a locale with electricity, macadamized roads, good food with toilets to boot, attempt without committing suicide to travel on foot from CALABAR more than two hundred miles away through the thick forest of West Africa inhabited by all sorts of wild animals including lions, elephants and serpents etc. to go visit and evangelize a people with ways and a culture incomparable to his own? Ask Rev. Fr. Jim Kelleher SPS, who was there 60 years ago, and still continuing the work in the Calabar Mission, and you can conclude the rest for yourselves. It was nothing short of a miracle! That was also the raison de etre Fr. Lena named the place "S T. M I C H A E L 'S C H U R C H" after God Almighty, who can conquer all things – Aniekan Abasi. That is the same name God Himself gave to His Holy Archangel Michael, the conqueror of Satan. It was really to go and conquer Satan with all his exploits as also his co-travelers that Fr. Lena went out there. He became an Archangel Michael of sorts and the Apostle of Oban and beyond. Then from 1915, his lieutenants like Fr. Patrick McDermott and Josef Kraft began evangelizing the territory.

But much later on in the annals of St. Michael's Oban, Fr. James Mellet CSSP, between 1919 and 1921 became a regular visitor and quasi Parish Priest of the Station as there was only two Parish Centres in the whole of this part of Southern Nigeria at the time namely, Holy Trinity Onitsha and Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar Missions. Though permanently stationed at Calabar he was able to traverse the length and breadth of the thick Ejagham forests and learnt not only to speak the prevailing URUAN-EFIK language but also Ejagham and other Ekoi languages of the poor and weaker tribes fleeing into the Oban Hills. He is said to have traversed the thick forest and established St. John's Akamkpa and St. Theresa's Mbarakom Mission Stations which have become important autonomous Parishes in the Archdiocese today. On his transfer to evangelize the Ogoja axis, precisely in 1921, Fr. Mellet took off from Calabar through the Oban axis and forest highlands which really was a roundabout route, passing through the ancient boundary station of Mkpot which lies between Ogoja Diocese and Calabar. Fr. Mellet did this just to be able to call on the people of Oban to bid them farewell as he had worked there considering that Oban was first evangelized by the legendary Fr. Louis Lena since 1906 as remarked above. It is worthy of note that Archbishops Ukpo and Ekuwem visited this out-of-the-way Station soon after their appointment to the Archdiocese of Calabar. Other early priests that administered Oban axis were Bishop Shanahan, Rev. Frs. Francis Howell CSSP, Josef Kraft CSSP, Paul Biechy CSSP, T. Douvry CSSP, Hebert Whyte CSSP and Edward J. Knaebel CSSP. There was an extraordinary hospitality accorded Fr. Mellet by the good Oban citizens because everywhere he visited he was speaking with the people them in their Ekoi tongue. St. Michael's Oban Baptism Register indicates that in his first coming (1919-1921) Fr. Mellet had baptized hundreds at Oban, Nyaje, Ikpai, Ekong Anaku, Abaiti, Mfamosing, New Netim and Akamkpa citizens. One could recall the type of reception and honour given to the Apostolic Nuncio, Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano in 1987 when on a pastoral visit there.

Later on in 1914 after Akpabuyo terrirory precisely St. Joseph's Station was visited and became a Mission Station, the Rev. Frs. Louis Lena as first visitor and others Patrick McDermott, Louis Ward, Josef Kraft. Francis Howell, Paul Biechy, Phillipè O'Connor, James Mellette who were appointed thereto became regular visitors to St. Michael's Oban. Much later on, when St. Joseph's Ikot Ene was erected a Parish, St. Michael's Oban became a Mission Station under Ikot Ene Parish.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: With the creation of Oban Mission Station, the Rev. Fathers now resident at Ikot Ene, precisely through the authority and able hand of Very Rev. Fr. Louis Lena as Superior of the CALABAR MISSION erected two small mud buildings at Oban, one to serve as a rest house both for the Oban Station Catechist and the Visiting Priest from Ikot Ene and the other for the St. Michael's Catholic Church Oban, which also served as the school when that became feasible. Until well into the 1920s this was the official Church building, the entire Mission land of which was donated by the Ntufam in-Council and Church Leaders of Oban territory. The land was donated gratis and in perpetuity because as observed above, the good people of Oban were so very enthusiastic to welcome the white visitors into their land that they were ready and willing to offer them anything they wanted in order to enable them carry out missionary work among them. In particular, when the school population increased, another school block in mud was erected for the Primary section while the first one remained as the Infant School Section. In 1960 the Mission Station was raised to the status of a new Parish and detached from St. Joseph's Ikot Ene with Very Rev. Father Joseph D. Griffin SPS, as first Parish Priest. Following this development and with the coming of the St. Patrick's Society Missionaries in large numbers during the period, there arose a need to erect a permanent building both for the school and the Rev. Fathers residence with the result that the permanent buildings so erected also continued to serve both as Church and school. In 1990 trust the good Oban people, through the combined effort of the entire Oban community and the Catholic members, the first magnificent. Oban Church was completed. It was a very beautiful and befitting permanent Church which still stands strong till today. But in 2012 Very Rev. Fr. (DR) Joe Obaina Agbor renovated and painted the entire structure.

ST. BENEDICT'S PARISH – IKPAI-NYAJE

ORIGINS: Quite until late in the 1990's, St. Benedict's Ikpai, both as a Mission Station and head of that Section was still under St. Michael's Parish Oban. But precisely on July 17, 1991 it was detached from Oban by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga and erected an autonomous Quasi-Parish, under Oban Deanery with Rev. Fr. Aloysius Eneyo as the first Parish Priest. Ten Mission Stations make up the geographical territory of the Quasi Parish which covers a land mass of about 634 sq. KM extending as far as Mkpot on the Ogoja Diocesan border and Ekang on the Cameroun border to wit: Akor, Orem, Ntebachot, Mkpot, Onom, Old Ndebiji, Ojok, Mbeban, Nkame, Mfamiyen, Ekang and Nyaje (Ikpai Central). In 2015, no sooner had the newly installed Metropolitan Archbishop of Calabar, His Grace, Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo settled down to business than he visited the Parish en route its furthest station of Mkpot – border station with Ogoja Diocese which he had also visited while then Bishop of Ogoja Diocese. Similarly, on his assumption as successor to Archbishop Ukpo, His Grace Most Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Ekuwem also had visited the Parish, ditto Mkpot and Ekang border stations.

(CHURCH BUILDING): Up to this, Holy Mass and other Church services were held at the St. Benedict's Primary School which was constructed by Fr. J. D. Griffin in the 1960s then administering from Oban Central Mission. On July 17, 1991 at the Archdiocesan Monthly Laity Council Meeting of the CLCN holding at the station with Archbishop B. D. Usanga presiding, he laid the foundation of the new Church also raising it to the status of a Quasi Parish. Rev. Fr. Aloysius Eneyo then Curate of St. Michael's Oban was appointed the first Father In-Charge and charged with the duty of overseeing the construction of the new Church building. In 1998 the church building was completed and dedicated to the greater honour of God.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION PARISH, MFAMOSING

ORIGINS: Until the end of the Nigerian-Biafran War (1967-1970) Mfamosing Station was part of the Aningeje Mission Station administered as Aningeje Catholic Church as also Aningeje Section with over 10 Stations all under St. Michael's Parish, Oban of Akamkpa Local Government Area with Very Rev. Fr. James Kelleher SPS as Parish Priest. In fact, as noted elsewhere that just as we had been taught in our Geography Lesson that "Egypt is the Gift of the Nile"; thus implying that without the Nile there would perhaps had been no Egypt, so too by inference, without the Immaculate Conception Seminary, there would have been no Catholic Church

Mfamosing, talkless of Immaculate Conception Parish, Mfamosing. As noted above, there was nothing like a Catholic Church in the Area. Whoever became an adherent of the Catholic Church in the two Mfamosing villages had to trek to Aningeje to register his/her presence as a member of the Catholic Church there. The Catholic Church in Mfamosing came about as a result of the establishment of the Immaculate Conception Seminary when the young Seminarians used to be shepherded as it were, to the Government School every Sunday to attend Mass there including whoever resided there mostly as workers employed in the Seminary. Most of them were Catholics – Teachers, carpenters cooks, drivers, houseboys, etc. These had come to constitute the roll call of those who attended the "PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT SCHOOL CHURCH" on Sundays.

In 1980 to be precise, Aningeje Section was carved out from Oban Parish to constitute the new MCC Road Section and named SEMINARY PARISH, MFAMOSING with Rev. Fr. Patrick Corcoran SPS, appointed as the substantive Parish Priest thereof. Meantime Holy Mass and Church Services used to be conducted at the Government Primary School, Mfamosing.

Incidentally the MCC Road stretching from Calabar to Ekang Town on the Nigeria – Cameroon border, was constructed by the Gowon Administration with a prominent Hausa Alhaji as Construction Supervisor. It was through him that Archbishop Brian D. Usanga made contacts with then Federal Minister of Works and Housing to acquire the Prefab buildings earlier used by the MCC Contractors for the establishment of the present Immaculate Conception Seminary Mfamosing which was first sited in the 1971/72 session at Holy Child Convent Oron with Rt. Rev. Msgr. Joseph P. Ekarika as the first Rector.

In 1991, Mfamosing Mission Station was erected a Parish sui juris by Archbishop Usanga while that part of the MCC Section known today as St. Patrick's Parish, Asabanka was carved out and granted the status of a QUASI PARISH later on. But it was still administered from Mfamosing with Fr. Francis O. Essien (1988-1992) as Parish Priest. Then the "Seminary Parish Mfamosing" nomenclature was changed to Immaculate Conception Parish, Mfamosing by Archbishop Dr. Brian D. Usanga.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: From available records and according to Mr. Patrick Nkanta the erstwhile Catechist of the Parish, the following persons and families as the original land owners donated plots of land for the erection of the first permanent Church building which was constructed and literally financed by Fr. Patrick Corcoran SPS. Those land owners include Ntufam Clement Emajib, now Paramount Ruler of Akamkpa LGA. Mr. Okon Iyahew, Mr. Daniel Ojong and Mrs. Alice Nchrianyi. The Church building was constructed by direct labour 1991 through funds received from Ireland but principally through his Priest elder brother in San Diego - South America. Thereafter, Rev. Fr Patrick Corcoran was able to complete the Church building work which now serves as Parish Church to the greater glory of God. With its completion, the Dedication took place in 1994 as an Archdiocesan Function with the entire Archdiocesan Laity groups, Priests and Religious in attendance.

ST. PATRICK'S PARISH – ASABANGKA

OLD CHURCH

NEW CHURCH IN PROGRESS

MISSION HOUSE

ORIGINS: This Quasi-Parish was at the time of this analysis (1968-1973) just as in the case of St. Theresa's Akansoko, one of the Mission Stations ditto St. Michael's Ibesikpo now St. Vincent de Paul, Mbukpa; St. Peter's Ediba, SS Peter and Paul Edim Otop, now Queden of Angels, etc. administered by then St. Mary's Parish Efut Abua Administrator and Fr. In-Charge. It was created after the civil war but later became administered like Mfamosing in Aningeje Section under St. Michael's Parish, Oban in Akamkpa Local Government Area. By 1980, the Station had begun to gain prominence as a prospective Central Mission Station thus eclipsing St. Theresa's Akansoko which was a major station in the Old MCC Road Section with over 3000 inhabitants immediately after the war. But with the return of the refugees back to their homeland in modern Akwa Ibom State, Akansoko Station paled into insignificance and the big market also waned yielding place to the emergence and prominence of Asabanka market till date. Then during this time under review (1978-1991), many priests from the Calabar Metropolis used to be assigned to offer Mass and administer to the people of Akansoko/Asabanka Stations especially during the school holidays since Rev. Fr. Corcoran (SPS), then Rector of Immaculate Conception Minor Seminary, Mfamosing who later became the Administrator of the Station would often go on leave during those times. Some of these priests have been included as Serving Priests in Asabanka although it was simply a Mission Station under Mfamosing at that time. In 1991, St. Patrick's Church, Asabanka Station was carved out and granted the status of a QUASI PARISH by Archbishop, Most Rev. Dr. Brian D. Usanga with Rev. Fr. Francis O. Essien as Parish Priest, but still being administered from the Mfamosing Seminary.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The first Church building on the hill which has continued to serve as the permanent site of the new Parish Church building was constructed as a thatched building first with canoe mats (Iboto) in 1969 by the Legionaries of Sacred Heart Cathedral Parish and St. Mary's Efut Abua and master-minded by the late indefatigable Legionary, Mr. Leo Etim (father of Rev. Fr. John Leo) of Ikot Etim, ditto Idundu and Akansoko Mission Stations. He it was who founded the Churches in the first place. He is also said to have founded and constructed the following Churches which have since become very prominent Parishes Centres in the Calabar Metropolis, viz. St. Charles Lwanga Essien Town (1959), St. Vincent de Paul Mbukpa (1962), St. Peter's Parish Ediba (1968), SS Peter and Paul Edim Otop now renamed after the creation of the Parish as "Our Lady Queen of Angels Air Port" (1968) and Regina Caeli New Air Port, Efut (1978). Concerning the last mentioned he could not actually erect a Church building because he was hard put to it in finding and securing a site. The feat was accomplished by also a Legionary companion, late Mr. Christopher Ekpo who used his own house veranda for Church services at the time before acquiring a temporary site for the Church near his house. He was later appointed a Church Warden in St. Mary's Efut Abua by the Author in 1977. Ete Leo, as he was fondly addressed, also attempted to acquire a piece of land off Housing Estate at Asari-Eso Estate, for the construction of the Catholic Church for the teaming population but failed for the same reasons. It was his son, Rev. Fr. John Leo who single-handedly acquired a piece of land and constructed the magnificent Church of Annunciation far off the tangent of Asari-Eso Estate but on the "JONATHAN BY- PASS" Double-Carriage Way constructed by the Administrations of Governors Donald Duke (1999 -2007) and Senator Liyel Imoke (2007-2015). These moot points should not be lost to our readers in order to keep the Records straight and give honour to whom honour is due. It is through the inscrutable ways of God Almighty that by His Providence John Leo his second son has become a priest today.

The present St. Patrick's Parish Church building was started in 1991 with the first blocks molding supervised by the Author and later Very Rev. Fr. Francis O. Essien then Assistant Rector at the Seminary and Fr. In-Charge of the Station. The Church building was completed commissioned, dedicated and named St. Patrick's Asabanka in 1998 by Most Rev. Dr. Brian D. Usanga to the Greater Honur and Glory of God.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S - IKOT OMIN DEANERY
ST. AUGUSTINE'S PARISH IKOT OMIN

ORIGINS: The very mention of the name IKOT OMIN evokes in the anciani a.k.a the people of ancient Calabar but more so the ancient Qua peoples of Colonial Calabar, great sentiments and feelings of nostalgia because this was the Colonial Headquarters of the ODUKPANI RURAL DEVELPOMENT COUNCIL – ORDC of the great Qua Peoples which invariably was IKOT OMIN, hence the construction of the laterite colonial N/A Road in the 1920's called Odukpani Road which later was tarred in the 1940's though now dilapidated but still endures to this day. This road as just commented became a macadamized thoroughfare in the late 1940's and traversed what now remains as the ELEVEN – ELEVEN (11 – 11) JUNCTION or CENTRUM through the Princess Margaret Hospital which hitherto had served as the University of Calabar Teaching Hospital – UCTH until the early 2000s. This road also passes through Leopard Road a.k.a Hope Waddell Road, CRS house of Assembly, through Governor's Office, Diamond, Enen Essien a.k.a Great Charles Lwanga, Essien Town - Calabar, Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa, St. Patrick's College, Ikot Ansa, Old Odukpani Headquarters IKOT OMIN, Ikot Ekpo, and then meanders up to Awi terminating at Uyanga. Before 1960 there was no such road ever known as CALABAR ROAD talkless of MURITALA MUHAMMAD HIGH WAY which was first constructed in 1961 by the Costain Company and enlarged by the indefatigable Brig. U. J. Esuene, the erstwhile Military Governor of the defunct South Eastern State (1968-1975) simply because the Calabar city terminated at the Central Post Office then. Today the Highway now known as MURITALA HIGH WAY is being reconstructed to be dualized up to Odukpani Junction from Calabar to Calabar – Itu // Odukpani Junction // Ikom High Way through the efforts of three sitting Governors of Cross River State viz. their Excellences Gov. Donald Duke (1999-2007) Gov. Liyel Imoke (2007 -2015) and currently by the no-nonsense Action Governor (Prof.) Benedict Ayade (2015 – 20??).

Cross River State, originally South Eastern State which included what is now Akwa Ibom State, was one of the twelve (12) States decreed into existence in May 1967 by General (Dr.) Yakubu Gowon (1966-1975), the then Military Head of State and Commander In-Chief of the Armed Forces of Nigeria. This Road continues to reverberate till today. One can then surmise the importance of IKOT OMIN - this strategic Qua town a.k.a IKPAI OMIN in Qua designation and "MILE 8" in social and popular parlance located about 8 Miles ie. 13 Km from Calabar Metropolis in the scheme of things especially in the annals of the ancient Calabar Catholic Mission. It is therefore no small wonder that Ikot Omin town in Qua territory did not fail to attract the attention of the early Holy Ghost Missionaries and consequently became one of the early towns in which the Catholic Church was established by the Holy Ghost Fathers. For any tourist and others visiting CALABAR, the Cross River State Capital and taking the westerly direction from Lagos, Kaduna, Enugu, Aba etc. through Akwa Ibom State, or from the Northern direction through Odukpani - Ogoja - Benue State, to Sokoto or Yola, he/she would have to pass through IKOT OMIN. Ikot Omin therefore has become the epicenter of Calabar metropolis. It is generally acknowledged that IKOT OMIN where the St. Augustine's Parish, the subject of this treatise is situated, has become the "NEW CALABAR as it were." Ikot Omin is the gateway to Africa's Premier Business and Leisure Resort, the dream TINAPA project of the Cross River State Government masterminded by the indefatigable Governor Donald Duke, a proud blue-blooded and royal son of URUAN-EFIK Kingdom. It is also instructive to note that Odukpani Road was the beginning of Calabar city to anywhere else by road in those days as also the terminus of the colonial Calabar city which was the Colonial Post Office which stands strong till today. Anywhere else from there including what is now the Calabar Municipality was jungle and forest up to Akamkpa and Biase, the two dreaded territories of yore. In fact, anyone coming to Calabar outside the aforementioned areas had to travel in by sea.

From available records, the indefatigable Fr. Josef Kraft (CSSP) who was the Head of the Catholic Mission Calabar as it was called in those days, mandated Fr. Thomas Ronayne (CSSP) the newly arrived priest from Ireland on December 15, 1920 to open up Ikot Omin as an out-station and say that first open air Mass in 1925 thus establishing the second Qua Church, the St. Augustine's Church. He was the first young Irish priest whom Bishop Shanahan had brought along together with Mgr. Patrick J. Whitney, the then young mastermind of the St. Patrick's Missionary Fathers' existence and their coming to take over the Calabar Mission from the Holy Ghost Fathers. Fr. Ronayne then went on to name Ikot Omin Church after the great African Church luminary and theologian St. Augustine, as a Mission Station as early as 1925 on the aforementioned Odukpani Road. It is further said that the first open air Holy Mass was celebrated along this road in the large compound of Chief Joseph Inyang Ibanga having been the first person to accept the white Missionaries into the town with about fourteen other villagers including James Ekanem, Akpan Udo Etighe, Peter Effiong, Jacob Udo Nwa, John Orok, Augustine Anam, Gabriel Oguche and Okon Effanga. Others were Bernard Nyong, Cecilia Ekanem, Josephine Etim, Margaret Akpan, Madam Mbeke Essiet and Madam Ikuni Itatong among the group whose great grandson, Hon (Barr) Christopher Oqua is the current Chairman of the Parish Administration. Chief Inyang Ibanga had offered a large piece of land adjacent to his compound where a thatched mud church was built for Sunday Masses and other Church Services in the 1920s, and this site remained till 1935 when another piece of land was acquired for the building of a new Church. With the arrival of Fr. Kevin Longworth in 1945 and later Fr. Patrick Prendergast at the Sacred Heart Cathedral in 1952, there was a sort of paradigm shift and the centre of Church worship was moved to a piece of land near Chief Hart's compound at Ikot Ekpo. It was actually here that Church attendance gained momentum and the Christian population began to double that of the 1925 – 1948 which then was masterminded by the indefatigable Fr. Kevin Longworth of ancient Sacred Heart Cathedral. Among those who witnessed the transfer of the place of worship and the first Mass celebrated by Fr. Patrick Prendergast at Ikot Ekpo was Chief Maurice Bassey Effiong who is still attending the Church today with his wife, children and grandchildren. By this time of course, St. Mary's Adiabo had been created a Catholic Mission centre with the arrival of Fr. Patrick Hanneley and Ikot Omin became one of the out-stations thereof. Then arose the problem of getting a befitting place of worship. These Church members including Mr. Thaddeus Okon Nyong, a Station teacher together with Mr. Paul Itoken a Cameroonian as Headman a.k.a Church President, Mr. Bassey Whiley - Catechist, Mr. Peter Etim Owodinyene - VP, and Madam Paulina Koyo Effiong - Woman leader, were chosen to approach the chiefs and leaders of the village. Thereafter, a more befitting piece of land was donated by the Ntoe of the Clan In-Council viz. Ntoe Ada Itu Ndon, Chief Nyong Omin, Chief Ansa Ntoe, and Chief Usang Mbang near the market square along that ancient Odukpani Road. It was here the permanent centre of worship was built with an additional piece of land also donated by two adherents who had embraced the Catholic Faith to wit; Chief Peter Etim Owodinyene and Chief Peter Okenne. For the benefit of our new and younger generation, this is no other than the famous MILE EIGHT (8) MARKET. Having opened up the St. Augustine's Church Ikot Omin, Fr. Lawrence McWey who had now taken over from Fr. Hannelly as Father In-Charge of St. Mary's Adiabo and Manager of Schools added a school to it making it a Church School and this had remained so well into the 1970's. The school began with a Kindergarten "ABC" with three other classes of Infants I and II as also Standard One as they were designated then. This was as a result of the influx of new pupils from the adjoining Qua Presbyterian Churches who were attending the Presbyterian Schools in Calabar Metropolis. The school became the second Catholic school next to Immaculate Conception School Ikot Ansa, established by the Catholic Mission in Qua territory then.

As can be gathered from very reliable sources, most of the earlier St. Patrick's Fathers used to celebrate Mass here for the people from time to time as they always did in those days in their bush treks to the so-called Out- Stations. People should as noted elsewhere learn to come to terms with the situation and condition under which these early Missionaries worked and try to understand and also appreciate the fact that these priests had to trek on foot through bush paths across forests, rivers and streams to bring the Gospel to the people of Africa. It could take them even more than two days to come over from Sacred Heart Cathedral to Ikot Omin. It should also be noted that later on in the 1930's with the arrival of the St. Patrick's Fathers coupled with the relocation of St. Joseph of Cluny College to Ikot Ansa a.k.a St. Patrick's College, formerly "SACRED HEART COLLEGE" founded by Bishop Shanahan, but built by the legendary Fr. Louis Lena in 1911-12, the St. Patrick's Fathers became regular administrators of Ikot Omin aside Essien Town then under Immaculate Conception Mission Station, Ikot Ansa. That is why to still minister to the people of Ikot Omin, Rev. Father Kevin Longworth then Administrator of the Sacred Cathedral (Fr. D. Dolan's classmate), Fr. Oliver O'Sulivan (a.k.a Fr. O.O^2), Fr. Patrick Moore, Fr. Thomas Lucey, Fr. Maurice Hays, Fr. Patrick Quickley, Fr. Noel Hays and Fr. Denis O' Hara all SPS Fathers, came to be administrators of both Ikot Ansa and Essien Town as well as attending to Ikot Omin from time to time until the erection of St. Mary's Adiabo as a Parish centre in 1954 as mentioned elsewhere.

From the early 1940's onward and with the erection of St. Mary's Parish Adiabo first as Mission Centre in 1949, Ikot Omin station coming under the Administration of the St. Mary's Parish, Adiabo became properly constituted as a Mission Station then tagged "ST. AUGUSTINE'S CATHOLIC MISSION". In 1954 the following members viz. Mr. Francis Bassey Whiley as Catechist, Mr. Matthias Okon Nyong as Station Teacher, Mr. Paul Itoken, a Cameroonian as Station Headman a.k.a President, Mr. Peter Etim Owoedinyene as Vice President and Madam Regina Nkoyo Effiong as Women Leader were appointed into the Station Committee. The St. Patrick's priests who administered the Parish from Adiabo Central Mission included Rev. Frs. Patrick Hannelly, Fr. Patrick Prendergast, Fr. Joseph Petit, Fr. Alphonsus Rushe, Fr. Bernard Hughes and Fr. Liam McWey, the last to administer Ikot Omin before the civil war (1967 - 1973). After the civil war, it became the leading and expanding station of the Parish such that St. Mary's Adiabo Parish almost became unviable without Ikot Omin Out-station. This situation subsisted until 1994 when the station was erected a Parish sui juris with Rev. Fr. James Golden Ekpe as the first Parish Priest thereto. Ikot Omin Parish Church has played host to a number of important Ceremonies and Events in the Archdiocese of Calabar, chief of which was the Priestly Ordination of Rev. Father Joseph A. Eyo in December, 1993 and Fr. Christopher I. Naseri (July 5, 1997), the first Indigene of the Parish.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: To date three church buildings have been put up including the original Church-School block at the site each replacing the other in greater grandeur, structure and size. The first church building as customary was a mud building the site of which was donated by Chief Ada Itu Ndom, Chief Nyong Omin and Chief Ansa Nsa Ntoe. For the site of the present Junior Primary School building which became the official "PERMANENT CHURCH BUILDING" until the 1970s, Chief Peter Okenne and Chief Peter Etim Owoedinyene donated the land ie. St. Augustine's School, Ikot Omin, still along Odukpani Road. This was in 1958 and in order to upgrade the School to Junior Primary namely, Standards One and Two, it was necessary to construct a permanent structure for approval and upgrading by the Ministry of Education with the Headquarters then at Enugu and this invariably also served as the Church-School masterminded by the inimitable and fastidious Fr. Liam McWey, the then Manager of the Catholic School with Mr. Louis E. Joseph as Head Master. The School remained thus until 1962 when the Infant Section School building which was much larger than the former was re-constructed in order to upgrade the School to the Senior Primary starting with Standard Three. This served as the new Church building until 1968 when the School was raised to Standard Six with Mr. Gabriel T. Udoh who was transferred from St. Paul's School, Uyanga as Headmaster by the Author while as Education Secretary and General Manager of Catholic Schools South Eastern State of Nigeria (1967-1972). With the arrival of this indefatigable Head Teacher and his appeal to the people to construct a befitting Church at the Station so as to leave ample accommodation for the school but most importantly, because the school was now a Government School having been "taken over" by the Military Government of South Eastern State masterminded by the no-nonsense erstwhile Military Governor, Brigadier U. J. Esuene, a new site to the tail end of the school was approved for the construction of the first ever St. Augustine's Catholic Church the site of which was donated by two Ikot Omin Princesses, viz. Madam Arit Edem Duke and Nankae Ikwo Nya in 1974. The Church building project was championed by the Church President, Chief Lawrence Oqua, Mr. Cornelius E. Ekpo – Vice President, Mr. Sebastian E. Etuk - Secretary, Mr. Boniface Bassey, Mr. Augustine Anam and the two Women leaders, Madam Grace Offiong Nyong Naseri, the mother of Rev. Fr. Chris. Naseri and Princess Suzanna Effiom whose regime saw to the Golden status and Apogee of the Great St. Augustine's Parish, 1992 -1998. Actual work commenced in 1975 with Mr. Edet Okon Umoh as building contractor and with the progress of the work in top gear, Rev. Fr. Thomas Ryan in a colourful ceremony characteristic of the Quas laid the Foundation stone setting the stage for the building of a modern St. Augustine's Station Church still under St. Mary's Adiabo. With the appointment of Fr. Columbanus Clinton (SPS) as the new Parish Priest of St. Mary's Adiabo, work continued on the building with renewed vigour which prompted the setting of a date-line for the completion of the building by the new Building Committee. Following the timely completion of this magnificent project, the Church was commissioned with fanfare on May 30, 1982 by the charismatic Fr. Colm Clinton.

With the completion of the Church building began the agitation for a new autonomous parish for the station considering that except for Immaculate Conception Ikot Ansa, there was no other such Church of Parish status in Qua land since Holy Family Parish Big Qua was erected an autonomous parish sui juris, almost about the same time. To this end and with popular demand, St. Augustine's Ikot Omin Station was later excised from St. Mary's Adiabo Parish which naturally belonged to the Efik Kingdom and was accordingly granted the autonomy of a full Parish sui juris by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga in 1994 with Fr. James Golden Ekpe as the first Parish Priest though still administering from St. Mary's Adiabo. However, that erstwhile Church building continued to be used until 1997 when Rev. Fr. Maurice Etim was appointed to the Parish as Parish Priest after Fr. James G. Ekpe's transfer. He set out to expand the Church by knocking down the rear and side walls which construction was completed through the efforts of his successors namely, Msgr. Emmanuel E. Umoetok, Msgr. Emmanuel O. Idem. Later on, it was Fr. Joseph Etim who actually championed the complete reconstruction of the Church building because according to some of the Church members interviewed, the progress of the reconstruction and expansion of the Church building was indeed not moving and progressing as was contemplated after the transfer of Msgr. Umoetok to the Catholic Education Secretariat as Education Secretary.

However, Fr. Joe Etim on his assumption of office in 2008 decided on summoning first of all a meeting of the Elders since the Parish Project Committee members seemed to be slipshod in handling the work during Msgr. E.O. Idem's brief tenure. Thereafter, the Elders recommended the setting up of a "Task Force" which true to type under Sir (Dr.) Solomon Okpa Ita the erstwhile Parish President, assisted by Chief Emmanuel E. Okon, with other members of the Task Force to wit; Mr. Innocent Onykwelu, Mr. John Okafor Ataigbe including Engr. Emmanuel Awara, Engr. Benedict B. Idiaha, Sir Patrick Agbara and the newly appointed Parish President, Sir (Dr.) Lawrence Etim as Ex-Officio. These took up the mantle of leadership charged with duty of fast tracking the reconstruction of the Church. They also brought the building project to a higher momentum and the work was on top gear. The Task Force Committee among other things likewise saw to the construction of a befitting new Altar, renovation of the Church roof together with ceiling, flooring the Church with terrazzo, electrical lighting, and the attachment of a sacristy. They even saw to the construction of the Altar of Perpetual Adoration in tow including the knocking down and replacing the dilapidated fence together with the fixing of an iron entrance-gate and painting of the entire church. Then the demise of Fr. Joe caused another set-back, but for the appointment of the indefatigable Fr. Basil K. Akpan who hitherto had masterminded the construction of the first ever St. Patrick's Cathedral at Yenegoa in the Capital City of Bayelsa State (2005 - 2009) as successor. Through this new development, Fr. Basil saw to the completing of the Church building with an ultra-modern Sacristy and everything then went on according to plan. The old church now gave way to the new imposing St. Augustine's Church we are today admiring and lauding to the greater Glory of God.

ST. LUKE'S PARISH, IKOT EFANGA MKPA- CALABAR

ORIGINS: In 1998 after celebrating Mass on that auspicious morning at St. Augustine's Parish, Ikot Omin, Mrs. Femina Medang, a grandchild of Ikot Efanga Mkpa Town but whose father is from Equatorial Guinea drew me aside and during our discussion she informed me that there was quite a sizeable number of worshippers attending Mass from Ikot Efanga Mkpa. The long and short of our discussion was to the effect that she wanted me to use my good offices as then Episcopal Vicar and arrange for an autonomous Parish to be created for them. To this end, I had to discuss the matter with His Grace Archbishop Brian D. Usanga and this came in anticipation of the forthcoming rotatory Laity Council Meeting holden at Christ the King Chaplaincy, Army Brigade Headquarters on August 23, 1998. At that Laity Council the Archbishop among other things announced in his address, his intention to carve out Ikot Effanga from Ikot Omin and to create it a new Quasi-Parish sui juris. As Ikot Effanga Mkpa was neither a Mission station nor an Out-station before then, the people had to make do with canopies to kick start the new Out-Station and Parish to be. Thereafter, St. Luke the Evangelist Quasi Parish, Ikot Efanga Mkpa was excised from St. Augustine's Ikot Omin and created a Quasi Parish. Meanwhile, the Rev. Fathers appointed as Parish Priests of Ikot Omin administered the Parish as a Quasi Out-station.

During this time, Archbishop Brian D. Usanga also used to appoint certain priests including the Author to celebrate Mass at the new Mission Centre on Sundays until 2003 when Rev. Fr. Malachy Ephraim was appointed Principal of St. Patrick's owing to the handing-over of former Mission Schools to their owners by the Governor Donald Duke Government of Cross River State. On Fr. Malachy's transfer, Fr. Christopher Okpu was appointed the new Principal and also became the administrator of the Quasi-Parish. With the official appointment of Fr. Godffrey Ukpabio to St. Patrick's as Acting Principal in 2006 by the new Metropolitan of Calabar, His Grace, Archbishop (Dr.) Joseph Edra Ukpo, Ikot Effanga Church was officially erected a Parish sui juris with Fr. Ukpabio as the first official Acting Parish Priest thereto. In 2007 Msgr. Patrick A. Okure returned from his Sabbatical leave and was appointed to succeed Fr. Ukpabio as the official Parish Priest by Archbishop Ukpo. In 2011 Msgr. Okure was transferred to St. Bernard's Parish, Marian Hill and Rev. Fr. Dominic Umo was appointed Principal of St. Patrick's with the added task of administering the Parish. In 2012 Rev. Fr. Christopher Essiet was appointed Archbishop's Secretary and Administrator of the Parish. In 2015, Archbishop Ukpo moved to the new Archbishop's Residence and took over the administration of the Parish with Rev. Fr. Gabriel O. Bulem as Assistant Parish Priest.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The beautiful and magnificent Church captured above was the brain-child of the few committed Founding Fathers and Founding Mothers of St. Luke's Parish Ikot Effanga Mkpa championed by the indefatigable Mrs. Femina E. Medang who as observed already masterminded the creation of the St. Luke's Parish in the first place. To kick start the construction of the Parish Church, she acquired a piece of land adjacent to their house from her mother. At first, canopies were used for Mass and other Church activities. In time and as the population of the church doubled, there was the felt need to acquire a suitable and bigger site for the Church building project. Contributions towards the building of the Church started coming in as soon as the Parish was inaugurated. Before this, canopies continued to be used for Church Services and other purposes. After acquiring the present site which was paying for an extension portion of the piece of land originally donated by Mrs. Medang's mother and part of her sister's portion of land. With this newly acquired piece of land, a pre-fabricated structure was constructed in order to keep the members and prevent them from going back to St. Augustine's Ikot Omin where there was a ready-made ample and conducive accommodation in place for Worship and other Church Activities. But through the dynamism of these founding members, people generously contributed in cash and kind to build the Church, the construction of which started in 2003. With the posting of Rev. Fr. Dr. Godffrey Akpabio as Acting Parish Priest as also the Acting Principal of St. Patrick's College Ikot Ansa in 2004 as mentioned above, the construction work took on a higher momentum and the Church building was completed and dedicated in 2005 to the Greater Honour of God.

ST. JOSEPH'S PARISH, ESUK UTAN – CALABAR

ORIGINS: Esuk Utan translated "SAND MARKET" or most appropriately "BEACH SAND-MARKET" is a beach where building sand is sold and by implication a market on the shore of the sea or river where building-sand from the sea-shore is sold. But this is precisely no other than the Beach Town of ancient Ikot Ansa of the Great Qua (ABAKPA) peoples discussed in Part One. Tucked in at the tail end of Calabar Metropolis between Ikot Ansa Town and Ikot Omin, St. Joseph's Catholic Church now St. Joseph's Catholic Parish Centre was formerly a Quasi Out - Station of Immaculate Conception, Ikot Ansa which was evangelized in 1904 by the legendary Fr. Josef Leon Lena (CSSP) the Founder and Superior of the Calabar Mission and by implication the Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar (1903 – 2018) under discussion. Today the town has developed beyond all proportions and importance as the Headquarters of the Nigerian National Petroleum Company (NNPC) in Calabar. The town also plays host to the Nigeria Police Headquarters Zone 6. It is on record that Ikot Ansa Town was one if not the first of the towns in ancient Calabar with only a single Mission Church viz. the Catholic Mission Church with no other whatsoever. This of course is Immaculate Conception Catholic Church Ikot Ansa and by implication the only Church in the town until the end of the civil war (1967 - 1970). Small wonder then that Ikot Ansa peoples (of the GREAT NKONIB Kindred in Ikot Ansa Qua Clan) were mostly members of Immaculate Conception Catholic Church even if some were merely so nominally. That is why even till today, whenever and wherever any important event was to be celebrated in the Church, the whole town as it were was expected and even sure to be in attendance.

When this is considered in conjunction with the St. Joseph's Catholic Church Esuk Utan, one can easily understand why there is a Catholic Church there (and or perhaps any other church for that matter). That Church had to be established near the beach market in the first place. In those golden days of the Catholic Church of the Calabar Mission, attendance at morning Mass in a Parish Church and in the absence of a Parish, "MORNING PRAYER" at the Mission Station was mandatory since the attendance register for the roll call of attendees was always kept. Again in those days, absentees were punished at the Sunday Service//Holy Mass by administering some strokes of the cane on the palms of the hand of male worshippers and on the sole of the foot in the case of females for failing to trek to Church for Morning Service or Mass. Again one can equally understand why those sand traders at the sand beach market had to build a small mud Catholic Church there right on the hill of the beach market. This therefore also goes to explain the presence of the St. Joseph's Catholic Church Esuk Utan which is still standing strong today. It was established to register the attendance of the beach-sand marketers at Morning Service (AKAM USEN UB? K) right back in the 1920s. This was the beginning of the out-post Mission Station of Esuk Utan as an Out Station of Immaculate Conception Catholic Church Ikot Ansa since then, so to speak. Being a Church mostly attended in the early mornings and mostly by these sand marketers, not much attention was paid to the Church there in terms of celebrating Holy Mass there. The Rev. Fathers if they did, visited the place only from time to time.

But later in the 1940's – 1950s, people mostly the sand marketers began to build houses and make their homes there to facilitate their having to trek back to the town to attend Church Services at the Immaculate Conception Church. Gradually the place grew to become a town of its own and distinct from Ikot Ansa Town. It has continued to grow to become what we see today. It is necessary to maintain this account in order to appreciate the origin of St. Joseph's Parish Esuk Utan Calabar, in the first place and for the records. The author first came in contact with this seemingly unknown little town in 1959. But why 1959? In 1959 while attending morning Mass at the Sacred Heart Cathedral cycling from No. 18 Ballantyne Street, Calabar where I used to reside with A.E. Esshiet Esq. my uncle, an Official in the Elder Dempster Lines Establishment, whenever I came to the city, I happened after the Mass to meet Rev. Mr. Augustine Etim, a native of Ikot Ansa and a Senior Seminarian in Year I Philosophy at Bigard Memorial Seminary Enugu. Augustine together with late Kgt. Raphael Anwanakak (erstwhile Grand Knight, KSM Calabar) happened to be my students at the famous Queen of Apostles Seminary, Afaha Obong while I was their Mathematics Tutor there in 1956. After Mass, Augustine requested me to drop him at his native place Ikot Ansa. In those days as mentioned elsewhere the Calabar city ended at the General Post Office Calabar Road. From there onwards the rest of Calabar District was jungle and forest. It was from here that people could either hire a bicycle for a ride or pay three pence (3k) to board a bicycle to Ikot Ansa. A bicycle hire for l day or to be cycled to his/her destination as far as Uyanga or Akpabuyo roads which then were N/A Roads was the only means one could travel out of Calabar City to anywhere then. But while within the city, only one person could ride the bicycle alone without carrying anybody a.k.a "passenger". To circumvent being arrested by the Police, one could otherwise walk down past the Post Office before picking a cyclist that could then carry a "passenger" out of the city to wherever one's destination was. It was forbidden to carry anybody on a bicycle within the city of Calabar then. It was a civil offense and one could be charged to court and prosecuted with immediate effect. I always brought my Raleigh bicycle (Cf. Chapter ONE - Ikot Ekpene Diocese in Perspective – The Catholic Women's League), ferried across from Oron to Calabar whenever I came on a visit to the city. The Elder Dempster Agency Ferry used to charge 3 pence for the bicycle ticket to be ferried across while the passenger on board bought a sixpence ticket.

But what has all this got to do with the issue at hand, namely St. Joseph's Parish Esuk Utan? Yes, it was to explain how we had to trek rolling my bicycle in order to take Rev. Mr. Augustine to Ikot Ansa. Hence we had to walk down past the Post Office before mounting the bicycle together en route Ikot Ansa. But low, we were not going to Ikot Ansa Town directly, but rather to Esuk Utan where Augustine's parents resided. It was while there that I first saw the little hut Church which obviously had no sign board for identification at the time for the same reason above since there could be no Church other than the Catholic Church in Ikot Ansa land. This is where the St. Joseph's Church is situated today. That is the genesis of this Church under discussion. But it is also interesting and note-worthy that Mr. Augustine, the Seminarian would have been the first ever Catholic priest of Calabar extraction after the likes of Mr. Denis Effiom of Ikot Ansa the first Calabar Mission Seminarian and of course my mentor, Sir Maurice J. Nya (KSM) of Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar of the FEDECO fame who was the returning Officer of the Federal Elections of 1979 with Sir Ovie Whiskey (KSM) as the Federal Electoral Commissioner in the Second Republic of Nigeria. In the years following, that Esuk Utan Church also began to grow. In the 1980/90's priests were regular visitors administering to the spiritual needs of the Catholics there including the Author who also later became the regular Assistant Administrator of the Mission Station and Father in – Charge until 2002 together with Archbishop Brian D. Usanga in tow. In 2002 the St. Joseph's Catholic Church Esuk Utan was erected a Quasi Parish sui juris by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga with Rev. Fr. Donatus Ihekwoaba as the Administrator or Father In-Charge while still a Curate residing at Great St. Charles Lwanga but then as the first Parish Priest of Esuk Utan thereof.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: As noted above, the first Church was constructed up the hill along the NNPC Road in the 1940s by the Catholic members selling sand at the beach market and the reason was not far to seek. This Church was still in use until shortly after the civil war (1967 - 1970) when it became so decrepit and almost useless that it needed to be completely pulled down for the construction of a more befitting Church since it had been abandoned during the war. By this time the South Eastern State had been created and many people were moving in and the buying of land in Ikot Ansa became the in-thing. Ikot Ansa people were selling land sometimes at give-away prices as if their lives depended on it. This became a veritable subject of discussion especially among us priests with Archbishop Brian Usanga leading the discourse. I have mentioned this scenario in a number of places in this Book because most of us took part in the discussion especially the SPS Fathers who had commented and made remarks to the point that Ikot Ansa people in the days to come might become tenants in their own native land. It was an open and clear fact. In time the entire Esuk Utan up to the sea port became an opened-up area with imposing establishments all over the place. Ikot Ansa land is quite extensive terminating at the "WELCOME TO CALABAR" Junction after the NNMC Mega Station with border with Ikot Effanga. Small wonder then that the new Church members were mostly stranger elements and no longer the sand diggers and sellers. That situation of things really facilitated the construction of the post-civil war Church. It was a modest building atop the hill and served the Catholic population until 2004 when the acquisition of land down the hill was mooted. The Author was part of the new arrangement until Rev. Fr. Donatus Ihekwoaba came in to kick-start the negotiations for the purchase of the new site through the direction of Archbishop Brian D. Usanga.

According to Rev. Fr. Donatus, the site was acquired down the hill on a very flat piece of land adjacent to the NNPC Terminal with a down-payment of Four Million Naira (N 4,000,000). However, the piece of land was later discovered to be insufficient as the idea of also building the Rev. Father's House was contemplated. The adjacent plot was a very rough and jagged piece of land, almost a dumping ground and was not a built-up-area yet. Much work had to be put into it to level it and get it ready for the construction of the Church. From the accounts I later gathered from Fr. Joseph J. Etim, he was able to complete the Church on schedule and for commissioning for use in 2006 while the construction of the Fathers' Vicarage was also in process.

ST. MARY'S PARISH, ADIABO – WESTERN CALABAR

ORIGINS: URUAN-EFIK tradition and lores have accounted to one poignant fact namely the founding of the Iboku Esit Edik a.k.a Creek Town on their arrival at the great river from AKWA AKPA URUA otherwise known as the Cross River Estuary or Bay which is a body of water emptying itself into a greater one and in our case the Atlantic Ocean. To very clearly capture this panorama, one has to get back to what is variably tagged the Cross River Bridgehead or the Itu Bridge whichever captures the reader's fancy and from which direction while crossing the bridge to the other side either to Calabar or to Akwa Ibom. What one would notice looking over the bridge is a mass of water which is a portion of the Cross River tapering from the far side up to the Cameroons and the other portion dividing itself as it were into three. The furthest of the three goes to Adiabo territory, the proximate goes to Ikoneto and the nearest towards the largest bulk of the Cross River goes to Creek Town territory, while the main Cross River and the largest portion goes to AKWA AKPA URUAN which empties itself into the Atlantic Ocean as noted above.

It could have happened that some of the Founding Fathers on their arrival here from IBOM via ITU had paddled along this portion of the river and founded Adiabo and Ikoneto. The direction of this position and analysis stem from the fact that parts of both Akpabuyo and what is now Creek Town were already inhabited by the Efuts much earlier than the Founding Fathers of Atakpa a.k.a CALABAR. The other position and quite plausible is the position equally taken by the early Holy Ghost Fathers in their bid to establish their new out-post Mission at Adiabo as recounted below. This version recounts their taking off from Calabar which had been founded and explored about the 2nd and 3rd century AD, and this must have happened long before the arrival of the Portuguese Explorers in 1476 AD as captured in Part One. This moot point which the Founding Fathers of URUAN-EFIK had explained as their leit motif for crossing the great river which opens up and empties itself into the Atlantic Ocean is what they named AKWA AKPA URUAN, a.k.a Cross River estuary or bay as noted above. That is the position they have always taken. It was here that they took possession of the massive land stretching to no end before them to deforest it and settle there in perpetuity till this day. Any other position must be considered suspect or as a neo-revisionist theory.

Again either for of one reason or the other, they did not all settle here forever as their populations increased with the attendant insufficiency of land to accommodate their ever catapulting populations. This, coupled with their spirit of adventure as world-class sea-farers must have warranted their further emigration down the lower Cross River estuary until they discovered another large expanse of land still along the Cross River Basin on crossing the Atlantic. Here they also pitched their camps and settled for centuries as was discussed already in Part One. We need not go into the details of their exploits and eventual possession and settlement there for centuries or generations quite into the early centuries of the Christian era before moving still further and further along the NNUNUNG Atlantic coast a.k.a ATAKPA or CALABAR. However, and because while all this was going on, some of them were and are still settling there at AKWA AKPA URUAN which area they have now renamed AKANI OBIO URUAN. Even till date, URUAN people are still plying to and from there, the same as the Efik are doing, moving between Akpabuyo and Calabar or more so between Creek Town and Calabar. But of course some of these daring sea farers before the nation, in what has seemed to be an entire Clan, had continued to sail along to discover a new and larger expanse of land and other locations. Fortunately, then and sailing further, they must have branched off either along the NNUNUNG mangrove coast or further along the Atlantic coastline down the estuary to discover, deforest and take possession of what we call Ikoneto today. ADIABO, Mbiabo Edere, etc. are part of the same Efik towns they had also come to settle till this day. Yes, because the song of these ancient sea men and adventurers had always been:

Sia mma kebe AKWA AKPA URUAN/ When once I have crossed the Atlantic Mkpaha aba ke ube inya akwa mm? / I cannot fear death or drowsing crossing any depths Ekam es? ukb?k ewat esin man nnyin ikpesim is? !/ Just let us row on and we shall touch land! Swse ik?t Nnunu ko, ekam ewat esin!/ Look there is the mangrove forest ahead, row on!

Here too, we need not delay on who and who and from exactly which Clans the progenitors of Creek Town, ditto Iboku Utan ie. Atakpa /Calabar, Ikoneto, ADIABO and beyond up to Mbiabo Edere came. All such names like Ekpenyong Abasi, Effiom Okoho, Obong Eyo, Etinnyin Ntiero Effiwatt, Obong Eyamba, Etinnyin Ekpo Otu, Etinnyin Ibanga Nkenta etc. are new names and recent fabrications that take us nowhere. Most of these words and names came into URUAN/EFIK lexicon and culture History during the Hart's Commission of Enquiry into the Stool and Obongship of Calabar conducted in 1964, and for our part that was just a few years ago. Most of those who wrote or gave testimonies whether as EFIK or URUAN indigenes or whoever were doing so for relevance and to protect the old status quo. All that our readers are interested in knowing is whether these people of the same URUAN stock are the same as those who discovered and settled in Creek Town, Ikoneto, ADIABO, etc. or not. And this should confine our options thereto.

From available records, St. Mary's ADIABO was one of the last and oldest Efik Mission Stations accessible by sea which was established by the Holy Ghost Fathers in the late 1920s directly from Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar after their founding of Ikot Ene Central Mission in Akpabuyo then. It was one of the stations visited once in a while as was the case with distant and bush track countryside towns and villages until St. Mary's Adiabo was raised to the status of a Parish in the 1940's although later administered under Arochukwu by Fr. Patrick Hannelly as Fr. In-Charge in 1944. He then became a regular visitor and Fr. In-Charge of St. Mary's Adiabo. It was the most important Parish centre established by Bishop James Moynagh second to Sacred Heart Cathedral in the 1940s. It covered the entire old Calabar Diocese from Ikot Effanga axis to the Northern end of Biase territory terminating in Arochukwu which as noted above became the epicenter of the Parish as well as Western Calabar terminating in Creek Town. Since it was always the custom, the chiefs especially those who had come in contact with the Holy Ghost Fathers at Calabar were those who requested them to come and open up the station.

To access Adiabo by then, the party that was sent to bring the Missionaries sailed down the Calabar River and landed at Esuk Ikot Mbo Otu Ibuot exactly adjacent to the Palace of the reigning Obong of Calabar. From there the Missionaries trekked to Adiabo lkot Okon now designated as Mbiabo Esin – Ufot or Central Mission where the Holy Ghost Missionaries afterwards pitched their camp. Thereafter, they used Chief Eyo Asim Bassey's compound as the centre for Holy Mass and other Church activities. With the increasing number of Christian adherents, there was the felt need of providing a more befitting site for Church Services. The Chiefs were contacted and they offered a piece of land where the Church was built which also served as school – St. Mary's School – Adiabo. Later on in the early 1950s, and with the arrival of Fr. Kevin Longworth who was then Sacred Heart Cathedral Administrator coupled with the increasing number in the Adiabo Church, but more specifically in school attendance, Fr. Kevin Longworth ordered the pulling down of the thatched school building for the construction of a bigger and permanent building which remained until the 1980s and still stands strong today serving as the Main School Block.

But because the Rev. Fathers continued landing at Mbiabo Ikot Otu Ibuot beach, the St. Patrick's Fathers decided to open up an Out-station there at Ikot Otu with the name St. Patrick's Catholic Mission, Ikot Otu Ibuot. They also attached a Convent school to it in order to decongest St. Mary's School such that while the boys attended the Central Ikot Okon School, the girls attended the Ikot Otu Convent School which by then had multiplied in pupil population a hundred percent due to the establishment of PAMOL and the Rubber Estate in the early 1950s. Another reason for citing the Convent School there was that with the full taking over as also the establishment of more Convent Schools in the entire Archdiocese of Calabar by the newly arrived Holy Child Rev. Sisters, it was no longer acceptable in the Calabar Mission to provide co-educational Institutions any longer. Then with the influx of many nationalities and workers from all over Nigeria into the area, the St. Mary's School was full to overflow. In fact, in the late 1950's and early 1960s, the St. Mary's School population hit 2000. After the war and with the exit of the St. Patrick's Fathers from Calabar to join the team then serving under Bishop Edmund Fitzgibbons in Port Harcourt Diocese, the Parish came under the administration of St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral, Efut Abua. Thereafter Adiabo Parish was administered by a number of priests appointed either from the Sacred Heart Cathedral, from teaching priests and others who served simply as visiting priests up till 1984 when Rev. Fr. Francis Mbaba was appointed as the substantive resident Parish Priest of St. Mary's Adiabo once more.

As noted above, St. Mary's Adiabo excluding St. Joseph's Ikot Ene which then also stretched as far as Oban territory even to the Cameroun border, Adiabo thereafter became the Central Mission embracing the entire western and northern flank of the then Diocese of Calabar up to Arochukwu. It was from Adiabo that Arochukwu area was created before the war to constitute the autonomous St. Paul's Parish Ututu. After the war, it was afterwards excised from the then Diocese of Calabar and annexed to the Diocese of Umuahia in Abia State. Soon after the war, Archbishop Usanga carved out Western Calabar from Adiabo and erected St. John's Parish Ifako comprising the entire Okoyong territory and Creek Town areas. Then in the 1990s as part of his Policy Address, he further announced the erection of new Parishes to be carved out from the two ancient Holy Ghost Fathers' Central Missions hitherto created Parishes by the erstwhile Bishop James Moynagh, to wit from St. Mary's Adiabo and St. Joseph's Ikot Ene. Those of St. Mary's Adiabo included St. John the Baptist Akamkpa, St. Paul's Parish Uyanga and Our Lady of Lourdes Chaplaincy College of Education Awi. Others included St. Theresa's Mbarakom, St. Anthony's Iwuru and St. George's Old Netim and later, St. Dominic's Akpet Central. Then in the later 1990s and early 2000s he, Archbishop Brian Usanga further created St. Augustine's Parish Ikot Omin and St. Theresa's New Netim from St. Mary's Adiabo. As if to create great granddaughters, during the Administration of Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo, St. Rita's Police Chaplaincy Ikot Enebong and St. Luke's Parish Ikot Effanga were carved out and created new Parish centres from St. Augustine's Ikot Omin. That can give the reader the extent of this ancient Efik Central Mission founded by the early Holy Ghost Fathers before 1920 AD.

b) CHURCH BUILDING: No sooner had Rev. Fr. Francis Mbaba settled down as the new Administrator and Parish Priest of St. Mary's Adiabo than he kick- started the building of the present new beautiful church which was to be moved to a completely new site from the school centre. With the arrival of Fr. Emmanuel C. Nyong the Church building was completed and commissioned with great fanfare in 1988 by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga to the greater glory of God.

ST. RITA'S POLICE CHAPLAINCY, CALABAR

ORIGINS: The story concerning the establishment of the St. Rita's Police Catholic Chaplaincy, Calabar is poignantly answered in the events that catapulted the establishment of the Holy Trinity Navy Barracks Parish, Calabar. The St. Rita's Chaplaincy at Police College Ikot Enebong was established at the instance of the Nigeria Police Command and initiative just like the Navy Barracks but probably more so at the instance of the indefatigable Supol Jonathan Ihwo of the Nigeria Police who was a foundation member of Christ the King Chaplaincy at the Army Brigade Headquarters Calabar in the early 1970s. It was precisely to decongest the C.K.C Church and specifically for Catholics among the Nigeria Police Force that the Chaplaincy came to being in the first place. He had equally come to notice that the CKC Chaplaincy, Army Barracks was actually meant for the Military as also the Holy Trinity Navy Parish for the Navy and not necessarily for the entire Armed Forces of Nigeria and the Paramilitary then residing in the Calabar Metropolis. This is because each of the Army Units is distinct by reason of its orientation, organization and administration. Before this, quite a number of the Police Catholics, men and women including the aforementioned Supol Jonathan Ihwo of the Nigeria Police were also attending Mass at the Christ the King Army Baracks Chaplaincy then, and afterwards at St. Augustine's Parish Ikot Omin.

The arrangement for the establishment of a separate place of worship for the Police Catholics was championed in 2010 by three Spiritual Leaders, a Rev. Father for the Catholic Church; a Pastor for the Protestants Church; and an Imam for the Mosque who were posted by the Police Command to Cross River State, Calabar to foster the Developmental Objectives of the Nigerian Police Force Chaplaincy which had just been established in the Country then. In fact, that very year, the Police Command expanded their recruitment drives by extending their goodwill and magnanimity to Muslim Administrators Imams, Bishops and Protestant Pastors to recommend their qualified Candidates for recruitment into the Police Force Chaplaincies nationwide. The Catholic Archbishop of Calabar in response sent Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Umiah whose parents themselves were retired Police Officers for the training course and subsequent deployment, ditto other Dioceses and Protestant Churches. Then after the Chapel was being built, the Catholic Archbishop acceded to the request of the Police to bless and dedicate the Chaplaincy. It was Rev. Fr. Martins Akinyemi (DSP) who was appointed by the Police Command as the first official Chaplain of St. Rita's Police Chaplaincy that officiated at that first Mass of the new St. Rita's Catholic Church Calabar, with 57 Catholic devotees in attendance. On November 23, 2016 Rev. Fr. Martins (DSP) was re-assigned and the newly appointed Rev. Fr. Oguji Vitus (DSP) took over the pastoral administration of the Chaplaincy. Then on November 23, 2016 Fr. Rev. Fabian Azatyom (DSP) also took over as the new St. Rita's Chaplain.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Originally as noted elsewhere, most of the members of the newly established St. Rita's Chaplaincy, Police College, Ikot Enebong used to attend Mass at the St. Luke's Parish Ikot Effanga. When preparations were made to create the new Chaplaincy, the Chaplaincy Directors in the Police Headquarters Command according to custom provided funds and with the efforts and contributions from members who were less than one hundred (100) at the time, they were able to build the new beautiful Chapel which was completed in 2011. Thereafter many Catholics living within Ikot Enebong environment were attracted to the Chaplaincy and these swelled up the population of the Church which today stands at almost 800 members. During his Pastoral Visitation on Sunday October 23, 2011 the Church was commissioned by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo who also conferred the Sacrament of Confirmation to about 45 Candidates to the greater Honour and Glory of God. To foster the developmental Objectives of the Nigerian Police Force Chaplaincy nationwide on the 30th of November 2014, His Grace, Most Rev. Joseph Ekuwem, the new Arch-Bishop of Calabar commissioned the newly built Reverend Fr.'s house.

ST. THERESA'S PARISH, NEW NETIM

ORIGINS: From the very fact that the Church here is named St. Theresa's Catholic Church, ie. NEW NETIM Parish, it obviously implies that there is another called OLD NETIM which Church and Parish is actually St. George's Catholic Church Old Netim and by implication, St. George's Parish Old Netim. What is Netim and by implication why Old as also New Netim in the first place? Old Netim is a scion of the ancient Akamkpa group of Ejagham kindred of MBA - AKANG which emigrated from what is now Mamfe territory in Western Cameroun to what was formerly known as South Eastern of Nigeria between 1400 and 1500 AD in the present Akamkpa Local Government Area. It is designated "OLD NETIM" being the original settlers where they now find themselves tucked in the heartland of the Equatorial Rain Forest area of tropical Nigeria. OLD NETIM also implies that the entire ancient kindred must have broken up leading to some of them heading to find greener pastures in ODUKPANI country in what is now designated as NEW NETIM. In each case there must be a leader and founding father which in the case of New Netim was no other than NTUFAM EWONG ITA in the 1920's precisely around 1926/27 AD. According to their oral tradition, this break-away new tribe as it were, even till today still have links with their parent stock in Old Netim. On their onward march to freedom and in search of new pastures especially in search of table salt and other good things of life, because they were essentially an agricultural community of hunters and farmers, fierce in battle and flit of feet, they could within a twinkle of an eye overrun an attacking community like those of Odukpani towards whom they were going to seek refuge. But the citizens of Odukpani in QUA KINGDOM were equally great warriors and distant runners. Nevertheless, they were very wary and afraid of the seemingly NETIM invaders because Odukpani territory is surrounded by ravenous wild animals. So they tried to stop them in their tracks as they were trying to advance forward. However, the so-called invaders were actually on their way èn route Calabar seeking for where they could get salt. This is because they had been reliably informed that salt could be purchased in the colonial city of Calabar with a trifle and next to nothing. What a joy and fulfillment if ever they could ever get there! It would be a mission accomplished. So in 1924 or thereabouts, they tried to hasten there, but they were stopped short. The inhabitants of Odukpani plainly explained to them, that they wished them no harm if only they could on their return, be willing, at least some of them, to settle among them to protect them against the wild beasts which were a thorn in their flesh and making them live in fear all the time.

That was around 1924 as noted above. As oral tradition also put it, on their return journey from Calabar, they reported to their Elders the new development during their journey to Calabar and their encounter with the Odukpani people. Upon hearing their report, Ntufam Ewong Ita, the kindred leader at the time, convened a meeting of the chiefs and elders together with their women counterpart to deliberate on the matter. Thereafter, the elders of the parent Old Netim Town with one accord decided there and then to accept the offer. There upon and following this decision, the Chief, Ntufam Ewong Ita assembled the leaders of the people once again and told the bewildered Ntufams and Ntunkae of the land that he himself was going to lead the delegation while they sort out themselves by appointing their new leader as his successor. Naturally, this did not go down well with the people considering that decision and departure for good of their powerful, dynamic, good-natured and indefatigable leader, Ntufam Ewong. They tried to dissuade him, considering that only a fraction of the citizens were ready and willing to move. As they say, "the citizens may have their say, but it is the leader who has his way". So he set out together with the following chiefs and women leaders to wit; Chief Okpa Ita, Chief Okorn Agu, Chief Felix O. Ita and Ntufam Raphael O. Ita. The women leaders included Ntunkae Omonga Ntui, Ntunkae Aki Ita Echuk, Ntunkae Aso Akpana, Ntunkae Efop Ogbang, Ntunkae Ayang Egwu and Ntunkae Patricia Ndifon Ejen. The rest they say is history as the moving party marched on into the unknown and there multiplied in their tens and hundreds to found the new community we now call NEW NETIM, but still retaining their Netim customs and traditions as well as maintaining their allegiance to the parent stock of OLD NETIM.

This is remarkable because this Author has been an eye witness to two events that have overtaken New Netim in recent times. The first was the near mass holocaust of the NEW NETIM "settlers" by their Odukpani "LAND LORDS" in 2003 following the tragic and not to-be-forgotten violence that attended the general elections of that year. While the people and politicians of Calabar and Odukpani cast their votes for the Chief Obasanjo Peoples Democratic Party (PDP), the so-called Ejagham/Ekoi peoples including Central Cross Riverians of Obubra and Ugep as well as by implication NEW NETIM peoples, were supporters of the All People Nigerian Peoples Party (ANPP). The rest is history because the dominant NEW NETIM colonizers as it were, won the election hands up. But this did not go down well with the overbearing ODUKPANI LAND LORDS, hence the mayhem and unfortunate catastrophe. It was a sad commentary of the seeming symbiotic and synergetic existence of the two warring factions and neighbours.

Again quite recently in 2017, a volcanic rupture of violence engulfed and consumed the entire community of Old Netim and continues to rage till this day leaving hundreds either killed or displaced. But why the misunderstanding again? It would be temerarious if not poking nose into affairs that do not belong to the issue at hand and more so, lack of space does not permit this, but it should be sufficient to state simply that most problems between communities in Nigeria leading to blood-letting are either land disputes or Chieftaincy affairs. This situation before us is a clear issue concerning Chieftaincy matters which have been clearly articulated in the 1999 Constitution as amended. People should learn to recognize the fact that once it can be identified that as a community they have been seen to be and regarded as "settlers" there will always be trouble – very serious trouble once they try to overstep their bounds and original conditions of their settlement. In URUAN-EFIK folklore we say: "Ke ete ke ete idighe odusat" and people should learn to understand what traditional institutions which are passed on from generation to generation should be. Nobody for example, goes to Igbo land, or Hausa county to claim to be the Traditional /or Paramount Ruler there except perhaps for "certain reasons, he/she can be adorned with an Honorary Chieftaincy Title. Period. And it should stop at that. Everybody knows how and why New Netim is called NEW NETIM in Odukpani L. G. A. which is in Qua traditional territory, and we should better leave it at that.

In December last year, while trying to gather materials for this history about St. Theresa's Parish, I met a deserted and completely razed to the ground community with no building standing upon another except the school and St. Theresa's Church, New Netim. I found no single soul except police men standing station and watching hopelessly! Till at this point in time, the Parish Priest is a refugee in St. Augustine's Parish, Ikot Omin. It is perhaps the ravaged Boko Haram territory of the North Eastern States of Nigeria that witnessed such devastations and damages with no end in view. But even at that, it is on record that some of the Northern villagers are returning to their rebuilt homelands, but that is not the case with NEW NETIM peoples. However, whenever the villagers will return, those who may still be alive to tell their own version of the story regarding Odukpani's onslaught and sacking of their town will have no roofs over their heads, and they will think twice before upturning the applecart. This is the irony and sardonicism of Nigeria whereas this is a bona fide community of the great NIGER DELTA peoples suffering in their God-given land with the Federal Government staying aloof and looking askance, whereas the NIGER DELTA resources have been used to rebuild the NORTHERN NIGERIA ravaged towns and villages. It is also a veritable proof that this country is still a fumbling wobbling complex web of ethnic groups with growing mutual animosity and violent rivalry. The Cross River State Government should do something and settle the issue now.

In 2003, though not formally and expressly so communicated, the Author unwittingly became the de facto appointed Fr. In-Charge by Archbishop D. Usanga and the Assisting Priest to Fr. Vincent Udoh the officially appointed Parish Priest of St. Mary's Parish Adiabo which St. Theresa's New Netim then, was only a Mission and Out-Station thereof. I then became the regular administrator of the station during the hostilities arising from the infamous National Elections of that year. Thereafter Rev. Fr. Vincent Etim was officially appointed to St. Theresa's New Netim Parish as its first Father In-Charge and the de jure Parish Priest. Thus St. Theresa's New Netim became a Parish sui juris from thence onward, while the Church was only yet a Mission Station under St. Mary's Parish Adiabo.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: During its situation as Mission Station of St. Mary's Adiabo, Church Services and other activities in the Station were conducted in the Government School until 1986 when Sir Francis Okpa Ita became the Parish President of St. Mary's Adiabo. Thereafter began the felt need to construct a permanent Church in the Station the plan of which was championed by the indefatigable Sir Francis. Soon arrangements were in top gear to kick start the Church building and the Chiefs generously donated a piece of land close to the school. By 1990 the roof was put on the uncompleted building while the construction work was to continue. With the posting of Fr. James Golden Ekpe to St. Mary's Adiabo, he took it upon himself to bring the Church building to completion and commissioning. In 1991 the Church was commissioned with fanfare by Archbishop Brian D. Usanga. By 2003 plans were on top gear towards the erection of the Rectory of the Parish but this was to wait until after the completion of the new Church Sacristy which at the time had reached an advanced stage. With the posting of the indefatigable Fr. Patrick Eneyo to the Parish, the Sacristy work which had gulped a great junk of the Church's funds on account of the topography of the Mission land which required filling, cutting and all that including land-scaping was completed. Then the issue of the Church building was over leading to the new phase which was the construction of the Rev. Father's house which also was completed and commissioned by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

(c)SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of St. Theresa's Parish New Netim both formerly as a Mission Station under St. Mary's Parish Adiabo and afterwards as a Parish sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the Parish.

STELLA MARIS - CREEK TOWN DEANERY
STELLA MARIS PARISH, CREEK TOWN

OLD CHURCH

NEW CHURCH

ORIGINS: URUAN-EFIK tradition lores have accounted to one poignant fact that on their arrival at the great river from IBOM ie. the river opening up and emptying itself into the Atlantic Ocean which these Founding Fathers of URUAN-EFIK named as AKWAAKPA URUAN, a.k.a Cross River estuary or bay. They took possession of the seeming massive land stretching to no end before them to deforest and settle there in perpetuity. Again either for one reason or the other, they did not all settle here forever as their populations increased with the attendant insufficiency of land to accommodate their ever catapulting populations. This, coupled with their spirit of adventure as world-class sea-farers must have warranted their further emigration down the lower Cross River estuary until they discovered another large expanse of land still along the Cross River on crossing the Atlantic. Here they also pitched their camps and settled for centuries as we discussed in Part One. We need not go into the details of their exploits and eventual possession and settlement there for centuries of generations quite into the early centuries of the Christian era before moving still further and further along the NNUNUNG Atlantic coast because while this was going on some of them were and are still settling there at AKWA AKPA URUAN which area they have now renamed AKANI OBIO URUAN. Even till date URUAN people are still plying to and from there, the same as they are doing between Akpabuyo and Calabar. But of course some of these daring sea farers before the nation, in what has seemed to be an entire tribe had continued to sail along and discover new and larger expanse of land locations. Fortunately, then and sailing further they had branched off either along the mangrove coasts or further along the Atlantic down the estuary to discover, deforest and also settle there till this day. Yes, because the song of these ancient sea men and adventurers had always been:

> Sia mma kebe AKWA AKPA URUAN/ When once I have crossed the Atlantic Mkpaha aba ke ube inya akwa mm? / I cannot fear death or drown crossing any depths Ekam es? -ub?k ewat esin man nnyin ikpesim is? !/ Just let us row on and we shall touch land! Se ik?t Nnunu ko, ekam ewat esin! / Look there is the mangrove forest ahead, row on!

Yea, they are those who rowed and rowed from AKWA AKPA and discovered the expansive territory where some of them settled permanently for centuries in what they also had named as IBOKU ESIT EDIK anglicized as CREEK TOWN. Most of them were of the IBOKU URUAN tribe but certainly from other URUAN kindred tribes or clans. Not necessarily all of them had moved on because everybody knows that when people move like this, some members of the group could be of a kind, that is, from the same kindred groupings and families while others could be neighbours, friends and others from other kindreds of the larger tribe who would constrainedly decide to settle down permanently. Here too, we need not begin to argue about who and who and from which clans exactly the progenitors of Creek Town, ditto Iboku Utan ie. Atakpa /Calabar came. All such names like Ekpenyong Effiom Okoho, Obong Eyo, Etinnyin Ntiero Effiwatt, Obong Eyamba, Etinnyin Ibanga Nkenta etc. are either new or concocted names and recent fabrications that take us nowhere because most of these words and names came into URUAN/EFIK culture History and lexicon during the Hart's Commission of Enquiry into the Stool and Obongship of Calabar conducted just in 1964. Most of those who wrote or gave testimonies whether as EFIK or URUAN indigenes or whatever were doing so for relevance and to protect the old status quo. All that our readers are interested in knowing is whether these people of the same URUAN stock are the same as those who discovered and settled in Creek Town till today. And this should be our point of departure regarding the origin of Creek Town, hence Stella Maris Parish.

From available records, Stella Maris Church Creek Town and now Parish, was one of the earliest and oldest Mission Stations accessible by sea which was established by the Holy Ghost Fathers since 1904 directly from Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar. From then onward the station was visited once in a while as was the case with distant and out of the way countryside towns and villages until later in the 1940's when St. Mary's Parish Adiabo was raised to the status of a Parish and it became administered under Adiabo though by the Fathers' In-Charge residing at Arochukwu. Arochukwu then was the de facto Central Catholic Mission and Administrative Headquarters with Rev. Fr. Patrick Hannelly (SPS) as Fr. In-Charge. But this was a roundabout way of administration and going about it because Creek Town, a rivulet jutting and flowing down to the Calabar River was only just about fifteen minutes by boat from Calabar. It was so administered because politically and more so ecclesiastically, it rightly belonged to the N/A Administration of Odukpani Division established as ODUKPANI RURAL DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL (ORDC) with Headquarters at Ikot Omin then. But why the roundabout detour? The reason is not far to seek, because in those days and by agreement, expatriate Missionaries both Catholic and Protestant and in our case, the ubiquitous Church of Scotland Mission a.k.a Presbyterian Church of Nigeria, wanted to avoid a situation of religious conflict. Creek Town being the second Headquarters of the Church of Scotland Mission (CMS) was the first Church built and there was to be no rivalry with the Catholic Mission. Hence the Roman Catholic Mission had to play cool and be content with maintaining it as a Mission Station of the Sacred Heart Cathedral and administering it far away from EFIK territory. That is why they visited the Out-Station only from time to time, simple.

In the early 1950's Fr. P. Hannelly became a regular visitor to the Parish and after the civil war it came under the administration of St. John the Evangelist Parish Ifako Okoyong – Odupkani, which in 1984 was raised to the status of a Parish by the indefatigable Archbishop Brian D. Usanga. In 1996 Creek Town Mission Station was erected a Parish Centre with Rev. Fr. Maurice Bassey Etim as the first Parish Priest.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Sometimes people like the Author and others begin to wonder why it took such a long period of time – to be precise, over a hundred years before any Catholic Church in concrete was built at Creek Town whereas the prestigious and imposing premier Church of Scotland Mission - the Presbyterian Church of Nigeria (PCN) Creek Town - was built there by the Venerable Rev. Masterson H. Waddell almost two centuries ago in the 1800s, precisely in 1867 AD. He it was who also had translated and produced the first ever African Bible in Efik in 1868. But the reason may not be too far to seek. The legendary and indefatigable Fr. Josef Leon Lena who founded the Creek Town Catholic Church in 1904/5 did not want to get bogged down to and in any rivalry with the Church of Scotland Mission CMS Authorities and Founders. His administration of the Creek Town Church was very perfunctory. He and his team of the Holy Ghost Missionaries visited there only from time to time whereas at the time, there were steam engine boats plying Creek Town every minute so to speak. Within just 15 minutes one could get there from the Calabar sea port. Or invariably and most probably, the Catholic Faithful chose to travel to and worship at the Sacred Heart Cathedral which had prestige and free of rivalry and from the totally invidious, resentful and envious PCN members mostly of URUAN-EFIK extraction who were in the majority there. It also served the Holy Ghost Fathers well, as they would then have sufficient time to concentrate on the other out-post and difficult to administer Mission Stations of the Calabar Mission. Again building a Church or anything like that in ancient URUAN-EFIK territory was not a very difficult task with plenty of kori – kori all over the swamps. Hence for obvious reasons, as soon as the Catholics of Creek Town acquired the piece of land from the Edidem (King) a.k.a Obong's Council, they proceeded to construct a modest burnt kori-kori brick Church in 1905 precisely where the present Church stands quite close to the Presbyterian Cathedral till today.

Later records showed that since they were prevented by the Church of Scotland Authorities from building a Catholic School, which was the norm in order not to cause rivalry and bring about confusion, rancour and enmity among brethren – the very same URUAN-EFIK people, that small brick Church served the people for many years even into the 1950s. During the Nigeria civil war and with the influx of refugees a.k.a Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), the ancient Church was pulled down and another raised but not with burnt bricks. This was the Church the Author met in 1968/9 during the war when he administered there from St. Mary's Parish, Efut Abua.

In 1996 and with the appointment of Rev. Fr. Maurice B. Etim as Parish Priest thereof, arrangements were in top gear to kick start the construction of a befitting Catholic Church in Creek Town. With this state of affairs, it took quite some time before the refurbished and prestigious Church we now have in place was completed and commissioned to the greater Glory of God in 2008.

ST. JAMES' PARISH, OKPOK IKPA-OKOYONG

PARISH CHURCH

PARISH RECTORY

ORIGINS: Tucked in the heartland of the equatorial rain forest and in Okoyong territory, St James's Parish Okpok Ikpa was one of those earliest Mission Stations founded by the newly arrived St. Patrick's Fathers of Ireland following the routes traversed by the renowned Mary Slessor (1875- 1915) the legendary Presbyterian Evangelist cum Administrator a.k.a the popular Afia-Anwan Okoyong. What is now Okoyong land was originally a vast territory discovered, deforested and occupied by the great ancient URUAN-EFIK peoples about the 15th century. Later in the early 18th century the Okoyong tribe from Western Cameroun tried to occupy Akamkpa but were routed and scattered by the great fighting Akamkpa warriors. Some of them had traced their way back and occupied the present Ekong Anaku in southern Akamkpa on the Oban-Mfamosing axis while a great bulk of the invaders sacked the remnants of URUAN-EFIK, the modern Adadia – Issiet and Nung Ikono citizens in 1703 AD and settled in the area till this day. The town Okpok Ikpa is one of the villages in Ekori Clan - a scion of the great Okoyong kingdom but since their emigration from Western Cameroon thereto in 1703 according to URUAN-EFIK traditional history, it is located within Odukpani territory of the great Qua peoples themselves having also emigrated thither at the turn of the 11th century AD to what later became known as Western Calabar.

It will be noted that there were always skirmishes between them and URUAN-EFIK settlers in Calabar until it catapulted into the great OKOYONG v/s EFIK war in 1878. This was as a result of their refusal to become part of and pay tribute to EFIK KINGDOM after the remnants of core URUAN had departed (Cf. APPENDIX II - UPDATES). According to the present Obong of Calabar His Eminence, Edidem Ekpo Okon Abasi Otu V, there are subtle moves by Okoyong leaders to recapitulate and join the core EFIK KINGDOM ostensibly perhaps, on account of the problems they are now encountering with the ODUKPANI QUAS, ditto NEW NETIM. In those olden days, Okpok Ikpa then could only be accessed from Creek Town through Adiabo River to Okoyong as there was no such road as Creek Town – Okurikang Okoyong, talkless of the later 20th century Calabar – Itu Road constructed in the late 1970s by Brig. U. J. Esuene, the legendary Action Military Governor of erstwhile South Eastern State, with Headquarters at Calabar.

As noted above, St. James Okpok Ikpa was evangelized early enough, precisely in 1934 as an Out-station under the Sacred Heart Cathedral by the indomitable Fr. Charles Meehan SPS, then the Father In-Charge of Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar. But equally with Fr. Hugh McGrath when he served as Curate to Fr. Meehan, he became the regular visitor and Administrator of Okpok Ikpa and the other Adiabo stations with Adiabo being made the Headquarters and Central Mission of the Section then. St. James was just a fledging Mission Station Church so also the other Mission Stations under Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar. It was tough and rough for these early St. Patrick's Missionaries who would had started to visit these places as frequently as they would have wanted. However, because of lack of accessible roads and means of conveyance, they had no choice but to trek through bush tracts to the Mission Stations. When Adiabo was raised in the early 1950s to the status of a Parish sui juris, with the arrival of Rev. Fr. Patrick Hannelly, SPS, St. James Okpok Ikpa became a prominent Mission Station thereof. During and immediately after the Nigeria – Biafra war (1967 - 1970), Adiabo Parish as also the Out -Station of Okpok Ikpa came under the administration of St. Mary's Efut Abua and remained so until the early 1980's. The Church was built up the hill and produced such great teachers like G. J. Williams whom the Author met in 1950 as fresher in the Holy Family College, Oku Abak. He was then a final year Cambridge student. Another notable figure of the area was Chief Lawrence Ani Ita who later on became instrumental to the foundation, establishment and support of St. Matthew's Station Church, Ikot Effiong Otop quite close by to Okurikang. During the civil war, the citizens fled into the numerous creeks and tributaries of the Okoyong/Ikoneto River, This River is a scion of the Calabar – Adiabo River. Thereafter, they safely returned after the skirmishes to their homeland.

It was in this situation that the Author met them shortly after the liberation of Calabar by the gallant Federal Troops. They were simple village folks and good living Catholics to the core, untouched, unadulterated and uncontaminated by the refugees from Ikono country and the Annang peoples who had swarmed into Okurikang and other Okoyong towns then and up till this day. Most of the core members on ground were old women. The author had baptized and blessed the marriage of one of their daughters Eti-Eka Helena James Effiong who later became the CWO President in the early 2003 under. Fr. Joseph Edem and later, Fr. Israel J. Ekpo during the Administration of the legendary Archbishop Brian Usanga. In 2004 the station was handed over to Msgr. Patrick A. Okure as Fr. In-Charge. On May 18, 2005 St. James Church was upgraded and excised from St. John's Ifako and erected a Quasi - Parish under Fr. Israel J. Ekpo. In 2008 St. James was erected a full independent Parish by the indefatigable Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo with Very Rev. Fr. (DR.) Israel James Ekpo as the first Parish Priest while yet a Senior Lecturer at the famous St. Joseph's Major Seminary, Ikot Ekpene.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: Two mud buildings had been constructed on the hill-side donated by the Elders and Village Chief in - Council. The Paramount Ruler himself had also been converted to the Catholic Faith and became the Church Headman for years. By 2005 the present permanent Church building construction was kick started by Fr. I. J. Ekpo. Then, Fr. I. J. Ekpo who had earlier served as the Administrator of St. Charles Lwanga Parish, Essien Town took advantage of this and summoned the Charles Lwanga parishioners to assist him in his new place of assignment. With this, he exploited their generosity and means by employing all the resources and capital at his disposal in men and materials to build the new beautiful permanent Church we are all admiring above. As a boost, Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo donated about Forty Thousand Naira (N 40,000) in support of the venture. Another generous Christian and prominent member of Sacred Heart Cathedral Chief Joe Patrick Solomon, donated the zinc for the completion of building. In 2008, the Church was later commissioned with fanfare by Archbishop Joseph Edra Ukpo to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

ST. JOHN'S PARISH, IFAKO-OKOYONG

ORIGINS: With the relocation of Mary Slessor from Calabar to Akpap Okoyong in 1896, the town instantly became the centre of attraction and a Mecca of sorts especially for the twins and their mothers. Invariably the town also became the anointed Headquarters of Okoyong District as it were. This was because in the course of her administration, she became the de facto Colonial Voice of the British Administration in Calabar. In fact, she assumed this status and position unchallenged and became the lone voice of the voiceless masses despite the fact that she came to Africa as a bona fide Missionary of the Church of Scotland Mission – CMS. "Where devils tread the Angels steer clear and dread to enter" hence for a long time the Catholic Mission which arrived Calabar later had no choice but to stay clear from the town and rather pitch her camp elsewhere ie. far into the heartland of Okoyong jungle forest which happened to be Ifako Okoyong. Ifako was equally accessible just as Creek Town was by sea. Small wonder then that just as happened in the case of Creek Town, every Missionary administering Ifako which as commented earlier, also became the de facto Fr. In-Charge and the Assisting Priest in St. Mary's Adiabo as also the regular Administrator of the town while the Church was only yet a Mission Station. From available records, Ifako just like Adiabo was first opened up by the Holy Ghost Fathers in the late 1920s directly from Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar then. It was one of the Mission Stations visited once in a while as was the case with distant and bush track countryside towns and villages until later in the 1940's when St.

Mary's Adiabo was raised to the status of a Central Mission Station although later administered under Arochukwu with Fr. Patrick Hannelly as Fr. In-Charge in 1944. He then became a regular visitor and Fr. In-Charge of St. Mary's Adiabo, ditto Ifako. Adiabo as noted above had later become the most important Parish centre established by Bishop James Moynagh second to Sacred Heart Cathedral in the 1940s and covered the entire old Western Calabar up to Akamkpa. In the early 1940's the Station was regularly assessed from Akpap Okoyong following the routes Mary Slessor had taken at the turn of the 20th century (1900 - 1915).

When Adiabo was raised in the early 1950s to the status of a Parish sui juris, with the arrival of Rev. Fr. Patrick Hannelly, SPS, St. John's Ifako became a prominent Mission Station thereof. Thereafter Rev. Fr. Patrick Prendergast, Fr. Joseph Petit, Fr. Alphonsus Rushe, Fr. Bernard Hughes and Fr. Lawrence McWey (SPS) took over as Father In-Charge of St. Mary's Adiabo and Manager of Schools. He then added a school to the Ifako Station making it a Church School and this had remained so well into the 1990's. During and immediately after the Nigeria – Biafra war (1967 - 1970), Ifako as part and parcel of Adiabo Parish came under the administration of St. Mary's Efut Abua and remained so until the late 1980's. As noted above, St. Mary's Adiabo excluding St. Joseph's Ikot Ene which then also stretched as far as Oban to the Cameroun border, included the entire Western and Northern flank of the then Diocese of Calabar up to Arochukwu. It was from Adiabo that Arochukwu area was created to constitute the autonomous St. Paul's Parish Ututu. In 1982 Archbishop Brian D. Usanga carved out Western Calabar and erected St. John's Parish Ifako as a Parish sui juris comprising the entire Okoyong territory and Creek Town areas. Then in the 1990s as part of his policy address, Archbishop Brian D. Usanga announced the erection of new parishes and carved out Creek Town from Ifako thus raising it to an autonomous Parish.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: The first site which Church land has remained to this day was donated by the Chiefs In - Council far out of the town because as was always the custom, the natives were always afraid of bringing the Church right into the village centre and living quarters ostensibly not to allow Church activities interfere with their pagan practices carried on within the town. They also made sure that the land so donated would be far of tangent from the sea shore and the beach where most of the town activities often took place viz. anchorage for canoes, swimming, mending of nets, and most importantly, offering of sacrifices. But it so providentially happened that the site they gave later happened to be close to the Ifako – Akpap Okoyong N/A Road when the road was constructed in the 1920s. It was here they built the first Church with burnt bricks from the "ED? N" river mud. This Church building lasted quite into the 1960s until when Fr. Lawrence McWey who had now taken over from Fr. Hannelly as Father In-Charge of St. Mary's Adiabo and Manager of Schools constructed the permanent Church to which he added a school making it a Church School and this had remained so well into the 1990's. With the appointment of Fr. Patrick Eneyo in 1996, taking over from Fr. Maurice Etim, he kick-started the construction of the beautiful Church captured above. The Church building was completed and commissioned by Fr. James G. Ekpe in 2002 to the Greater Glory of God.

MARY IMMACULATE PARISH, ATAN ONOYOM – ENIONG EBURUTU

ORIGINS: Mary Immaculate Parish, Atan Onoyom was originally a Mission Station established by the early SPS Fathers in the 1930s under St. Paul's Parish Ututu, in what is now Arochukwu Local Government Area. With the arrival of more SPS priests from Ireland, the erstwhile Bishop of Calabar, Most Rev. Dr. James Moynagh detached it from Arochukwu Section and annexed it to the other stations to be administered in the newly created St. Mary's Adiabo Parish with Fr. Patrick Hannelly (SPS 1949 – 1953) as Father In-Charge. But the entire territory then including Arochukwu was part and parcel of EFIK EBURUTU. Then in 1972 precisely, St. Paul's Parish Ututu with the entire Arochukwu nation land was ceded to Umuahia Diocese under what is now known as Abia State of Nigeria.

During the civil war (1967 -1970) and at the height of the hostilities in 1968, the Author was able to evacuate a number of citizens from the area including the teachers of namely Immaculate Conception School Atan Onoyom and St. Oliver's Ekpene Eki to the Central Education Office Headquarters at Uyo. Thereafter Mary Immaculate station Atan Onoyom with the other Mission Stations in Enyong and Itu came under the direct administration of Use Abat Parish when Rev. Fr. D. Dolan (SPS 1969 - 1975) was the Father In–Charge and Dean of Use Abat Deanery. With this development an arrangement was made by the Author, then the Education Secretary of Old Calabar Province and Uyo Provinces, whereby the teachers became seconded to St. Peter's Catholic School, Abana now in Bakassi Local Government Area. The territory of Abana has since 2005 been ceded to the Cameroun Republic. But Abana before then was a Mission Station under St. Mark's Parish Oron where the Author served part time during the war while residing at the Catholic Education Office Headquarters as the Father In- Charge of Christ the King Pro-Cathedral, Uyo in the MAINLAND. Since then the priests of St. Theresa's Parish Use Abat were mandated to serve as the regular Administrators of Mary Immaculate Atan Onoyom Station together with other stations of Eniong.

After the war while the church was yet only a Mission Station, Archbishop Brian D. Usanga excised it from the MAINLAND Parishes Administration and joined it to St. Mary's Parish Efut Abua, but still under Adiabo Parish. In 1982 the Church was created a Quasi Parish Centre with Mgr. then Rev. Fr. Emmanuel Okon Idem as Fr. In-Charge while serving as Assistant Rector of Immaculate Conception Junior Seminary, Mfamosing to Very Rev. Fr. Patrick Corcoran (SPS 1976- 1995). Thereafter the new Quasi Parish was administered by Assisting Priests residing either at Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar, St. Augustine's Parish Ikot Omin, and Immaculate Conception Parish Ikot Ansa or from St. John's Parish Ifako. With the Installation of Archbishop Joseph Edra Ekpo as the new Metropolitan of Calabar Ecclesiastical Province, Rev. Fr. Francis H. Essiet was appointed the first resident Pastor in 2005 and the Quasi Parish Station was raised to the status of an autonomous Parish sui juris. Thereafter Fr. Francis Essiet committed himself to building a magnificent Rectory which was blessed and commissioned to the greater Honour and Glory of God.

ST. OLIVER'S QUASI-PARISH, EKPENE EKI – MBIABO EDERE

(a) ORIGINS: St. Oliver's Quasi Parish, Ekpene Eki in Mbiabo Edere of Adiabo – Ikon-Eto Clan in Efik Kingdom has always been administered together with Mary Immaculate Atan Onoyom in Enyong – Efik Eburutu Kingdom. During the civil war this territory was completely cut off because it is a quasi-peninsular and far out from the land mass bordering the main Enyong district and environs. Only those who could escape through Atan Onoyom en route Itu escaped to safety and were easily ferried across to the MAINLAND and finally to Uyo. This was the situation the Author met on ground during the hectic days of the war such that those teachers who were able to get on board to Itu were transferred to the Education Office Headquarters at Uyo and subsequently seconded to Catholic Schools within Old Uyo Province. St. Oliver's Ekpene Eki Mission Station was equally administered from Arochukwu and later on from St. Mary's, Adiabo. As one of the major Mission Stations of ancient Arochukwu, it had always been part and parcel of the old St. Paul's Parish Ututu which was first evangelized and administered by the early St. Patrick's Fathers in the 1940s.

(b) CHURCH BUILDING: At its inception, Church services and Holy Mass were conducted in the St. Oliver's Catholic School far up the hill until the 1990s when plans were made for the construction of a permanent Church building. The foundation of the Church building was laid by Msgr. Emmanuel O. Idem in 1982 and after gaining the Vatican Scholarship to study at the Pontifical Urban University Rome, the Church construction work was stalled until late in the 1990s when work was resumed under Rev. Fr. Patrick Eneyo and completed on schedule with celebrations and fanfare in 1999.

(c) SERVING PRIESTS TO-DATE: Since the inception of St. Oliver's Ekpene Eki both formerly as a Mission Station under Arochukwu and St. Mary's Adiabo, and afterwards as a Quasi-Parish sui juris, the following Priests have served in the Quasi-Parish either as Fathers In-charge or Assisting Priests including visiting priests appointed to the station vis–a-vis Quasi-Parish.

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION: FROM DEANERY TO ARCHDIOCESE

From the account of the first Holy Mass celebrated here in Calabar when Msgr. Lejeune left Onitsha in the company of Fr. Patrick McDermott, he was joined by Rev. Fr. Joseph Leon (Louis) Lena (CSSp) who had sailed from Gabon as the official head of the Mission. Then all three as noted above were able to arrive Calabar on 3rd February, 1903. When they landed and after the initial reception and introductions by the British Colonial Officials and Administrators then resident at Calabar as Headquarters of the Colony later to be known as Nigeria, they set out for 19 Bocco Street, Marina Calabar where they were to say the first Holy Mass. The Holy Mass was presided over by (Louis) Lena as the Canonical Head of the Mission amidst over 150 joyful and enthusiastic Catholic Faithful comprising of Lebanese, Portuguese, French and English nationals including the local people and other Europeans within the population of over 20,000 inhabitants in Calabar City at the time. It was this that signaled what we have come to know as the Archdiocese of Calabar today. Less than fifty years after, that tiny nucleus of a Church had grown in leaps and bounds enveloping the entire area covering most of what has become Rivers State, Bayelsa, Abia, Ebonyi, Akwa Ibom and Cross River States ie. in the 1950s. But less than twenty years after, that African Mission Church which had grown into a gigantic tree, as it were, dramatically thinned down to a mere Deanery.

Precisely in May, 1970, Bishop James Moynagh who had been at the helm of affairs and had travelled out of Nigeria to seek for Aid, which he did, and what became known as ESSENCOS on account of the not-to-be forgotten Nigeria's fratricidal war (1967 - 1970). While still in Europe he was refused re-entry into the country and constrained to resign and hand over to his Auxiliary, Most Rev Dr. Brian Davis Usanga as the Federal Military Government of General Yakubu Gowon sanctioned the "not-to-return embargo" masterminded by the indefatigable Brigadier U. J. Esuene, the erstwhile Military Governor of the defunct South Eastern State of Nigeria (Cf. Biography of Bishop James Moynagh and Reminiscences, op. cit). The territory handed over to Bishop Usanga then was the then Diocese of Calabar comprising of six Deaneries viz. Anua, Use Abat, Oron, Essene, Ndon Ebom and Calabar, the remaining territory having been previously erected into the Dioceses of Ogoja, Abakaliki, Port Harcourt and Ikot Ekpene. The Deanery of Calabar by God's inscrutable but admirable and gracious ways is what we now come to know as the ARCHDIOCESE OF CALABAR, the remaining part of the territory having been similarly erected into the Diocese of Uyo later on in the second half of the Century, precisely in 1989 by His Holiness, Pope St. John Paul II. That Deanery of a Mission, namely, the new Calabar Mission had only five Parishes in 1970 ie. during the period of our present discourse viz. Sacred Heart Cathedral; St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral Parish, Efut Abua; St. Mary's Parish, Adiabo; Joseph's Parish, Ikot Ene and St. Michael's Parish Oban. As commented elsewhere in this Book, these Parishes were naturally all established in EFIK-speaking territory, Oban which is Ejagham was by divine Providence a territory colonized so to speak by the Efik and was easily accessed and evangelized through St. Joseph's Ikot Ene as noted above. In fact, there were many OBAN and other Ejagham peoples also settling in Calabar metropolis in the early 1900s. Small wonder then, that it would be the first Out—Station so early and conveniently to be evangelized right within the first ten years of the arrival of the Missionaries.

Today, that singular Deanery of sorts has become the Head Mission of the Catholic Church among the nine Head Missions or Metropolitan Ecclesiastical Sees a.k.a Provinces in Nigeria, viz. Lagos Ecclesiastical Province, Ibadan Ecclesiastical Province, Benin Ecclesiastical Province, Kaduna Ecclesiastical Province, Jos Ecclesiastical Province, Abuja Ecclesiastical Province, Onitsha Ecclesiastical Province, Owerri Ecclesiastical Province and Calabar. This Metropolitan Ecclesiastical Province of Calabar has now become the new Headquarters of and bringing in tow, all the above mentioned Dioceses back to its fold as it were, but this time around, as Suffragans of the Archdiocese of Calabar. EFUT ETHNIC ORIGINS AND CALABAR SOUTH HISTORY OF THE EFUTS IN PATICULAR AND CALABAR SOUTH

No true, correct and complete history of the EFIK herein affirmed throughout this book as the descendants of URUAN who discovered what is now known as Calabar can be embarked upon without bringing in the EFUTS, ie. those people whom they met on ground and who could tell us what they thought about these new comers. Many references have also been made to the EFUTS as URUAN kinsmen, the harbingers of those who later settled around the territory where the EFIK have now found themselves. In connection with Ekpe, URUAN are said to be the EFUTS who migrated from their ancestral home near USAHAEDET in the Cameroun with the other EFUT clans like EKONDO, ABUA, IBONDA, IDUNDU, and UKEM, IFONDO etc. during the great emigrations caused by the not-to-be forgotten Batanga war or another great pre-historic war of that nature. They became separated from their kiths and kins by the Cross which as observed already has many tributaries criss-crossing one another and emptying themselves into the great AKWA AKPA URUAN – the Atlantic. Because of this, many of these EFUT Clans could not trace their way back to meet their brethren and so as great ancient seafarers sailed along until some found themselves at the Cross River estuary, the territory we now call Calabar. Some passed on until they met with subsequent wars with Okoyong etc. who most probably are the ones herein referred to as ADADIA clans in ancient URUAN. As was the practice, it would have been unthinkable for the clans to move into the great unknown without their Ekpe, the symbol of manhood and nationhood.

To be sure, all these peoples especially those of the ancient Equatorial forest region - the Bantu tribes – Ekpe meant life, and has always been regarded as the guardian of life. It is equally unlikely that URUAN, ditto the EFUTS would have lost theirs if the other tribes were able to move along with theirs wherever they went. As people constantly on the move with their canoes and traditional sea farers at that, URUAN must have certainly retained and were moving along with their Ekpe from one port to another especially while in their original homeland which was only a short distance away in the Cameroun. That is why the "Efik" have never denied that URUAN people had Ekpe "when they were with them" (CF Bassey E. B. 22). But in fact what some "Efik" people are claiming is that before migrating to URUAN they indeed had Ekpe cult equivalent by the name NYAMA NYAKU except that they had abandoned it there. Yet as everybody knows, there is no such vocabulary in EFIK. If this claim were true why did they have to abandon it for Ekpe URUAN? Certainly proud people like the "Efik" would never have abandoned their own thing for an equivalent unless they did not have what they are claiming or that they what they had was inferior. Therefore, it could not be Ekpe in the first place? Or at worst, if they had their own thing, they would at least have given it their own name. All this goes to confirm what we have always been saying in these pages to the effect that was the neo-"Efik" citizens who confused URUAN/EFK by peddling the Orientalist theory that claims that they are of the Hebrew stock ie. remnants of the large portion of the African continent believed to have been expelled by Joshua the son of Nun about 1300 BC. (Akak E.O. Vol 3.288). Then in their attempt to show that Hebrew cultures permeated Negro Africa, they concluded that either this was brought about through normal commercial links or by the diffusion resulting from the dispersal of peoples (Williams J.J. Hebraism in West Africa, Bilbo and Tanen NY, 1982, 134 -142). The fact of the matter is that many have come to admit that the EFUTS exported Ekpe Fraternity into EFIK. This is no longer in doubt among the EFIK themselves since the names assigned to Ekpe Orders are in fact EFUT names. Exporters of Ekpe viz. ASIBONG anglisized ARCHIBONG, EKONDO, MUTAKA, MBANG, etc. are of EFUT origin even if in practice they are commonly referred to as EFIK (Ekei E. Oku, 65-66). In fairness, the EFIK see only minor distinctions between them and the EFUTS. Ekpe did not come to EFIK as a once and for all import, no; because the cost of such an import would have been prohibitive both in financial and human terms, especially at that material time of their evolution. Who then are the EFUTS if we may ask?

THE EFUTS: NOMENCLATURE, EMIGRATIONS & LOCATION EVOLUTION AND HISTORY OF ORIGIN OF EFUTS

The name EFUT as also other designations like those in Ekpe viz. IBONDA, NYANKPE, EBONGKO and even proper names like ASIBONG/ARCHIBONG, EFONKO, MBANG etc. are all of Bantu origins and by implication of the EFUTS. The EFUTS are therefore people of the indigenous autonomous tribe of the BANTU stock of the Nigritic peoples of AFRICA who migrated from what is now known as the Cameroun Republic in Central Africa to the shores of what is now known as CALABAR in the present Republic of Nigeria. This came at the heat of the fierce 9th -11th century AD BATANGKA WAR as recorded in most books on Medieval World History. They did not arrive in large hordes but voyaged by canoes in their kindred groupings of the CAMEROS BAKWERE RACE with their respective MGBE EFUT MUTAKA ie. Ekpe traditional symbols of Authority. Their first port of call and settlement was RIO DEL REY, a costal island with borders with our famous USAHAEDET which was originally founded by URUAN (and later designated EDIK AFAHA by the IBIBIO after URUAN had left for IBOM), but it seems improbable that the dating of the EFUTS' settlement here was the true position and not the other way round; ie. both the timing of the BATANGKA WAR and settlement at USAHAEDET because this would have really cut them off from their kiths and kins of URUAN with whom they were continuously living together before URUAN departure to IBOM. What is most probable here is that they did not depart with URUAN but stayed put in at their base around RIO DEL REY until they were overtaken by the great war because while URUAN founded USAHAEDET still within the RIO DEL REY region, they in turn had founded EFUT IWANG which became their first primary cradle land of settlement centuries before Christ, ditto URUAN. At "Efut Inwang" ie. Efut creek, they must have settled there long enough into the Christian era and had so multiplied that the land could no longer contain them. Some of them started to move on and landed on the shores of NTEMTEM otherwise known as IKANG which they founded while leaving the others there behind at "Efut Iwang" just as URUAN had done in the case of those who founded the IBOKU ESIT EDIK a.k.a Creek Town as also ATAKPA, Calabar while others also remained at AKWA AKPA URUAN till this day. But it seems they must have settled long enough at IKANG, HQ of what is now otherwise known as BAKASSI to be able to penetrate and deforest considerable areas of this settlement but could not penetrate further into the thick forest land and swamps before them like those areas bordering EFUT ESIHI, EFUT IFIANG, etc. which are all within IKANG territory as we shall soon discover.

Therefore, after settling at NTEMTEM - IKANG for some time and as the thick forest land and swamps before them were not very conducive for habitation and further settlement now that their populations had further increased, they set sail southwards through one of the tributaries towards what is now regarded as ATIMBO RIVER a.k.a Ekpo Eyo which runs as far as IDUNDU, CALABAR and other rivers (tributaries) which empty themselves right into what is known as the CROSS RIVER today. The bulk of them while still within IKANG territory then moved on and founded ISU EKOM ie. EFUT ESIHI a.k.a EFUT ABUA (not the territory in Calabar but their first settlement within IKANG) in what later became the present day AKPABUYO forest land, and settled there for some time. It should be noticed here as we shall soon discover that it was not the entire EFUTS who traversed all the aforementioned territories but some of their kindreds whom we shall hereinafter designate as the EFUTS FOUNDING FATHERS eg. EBUKA Family/Kindred /House who founded this very territory of ISU EKOM – EFUT ESIHI. They deforested the thick land mass and having settled there for a time, some of them sailed further through the QUA RIVER which indeed is also a tributary of the CROSS RIVER until they arrived further at the border region now known as ESUK EDIBE EDIBE in modern CALABAR. There again they deforested some portions of the area and settled there while after some time, a part of the founding Kindred then sailed through what is in EFUT tongue called the EBANYA a.k.a the Cross River tributary, or the Calabar River mentioned above. They sailed down the estuary of the CROSS RIVER until they finally arrived at the region bordering what is now the Creek Town territory of Western Calabar, a.k.a IBOKU ESIT EDIK which afterwards was also discovered and inhabited by ancient URUAN, now EFIK. They called this region MOSIGUNI where they are also known to have settled for some time ie. IBONDA, MBARAKOM, UKEM etc. before sailing further to found ETONKONASARI a.k.a ESUK OKOKOK or EKORETONGKO swamps now in the region of the ANANTIGHA CALABAR SOUTH Secretariat Headquarters bordering the New Airport region.

Here, as their custom was, they deforested the vast thick equatorial mangrove forest hinterland, possessed, occupied and stamped their authority of ownership on it as their permanent land of primary settlement till this day where they find themselves. Since they came in their various kindred/family groupings as noted above, they must have separately deforested their places of abode and settled still within the region in their separate kindred groupings and established their MGBE a.k.a. Ekpe shrines in their respective areas of authority. In fact, as already noted elsewhere, some tribes/Houses in EFIK Kingdom bought their Ekpe Confraternity Orders/Globes from the EFUTS (Cf. Hart's Commission, 1964, 56 ff). Some of the founding Kindreds and Founding progenitors are set forth as follows in tabular form:

CLANS AND THE RE-ORGANIZATION OF EFUT NATION

The EFUTS have an enormous history judging from the brief sketch before us. Like their kiths and kins of ancient URUAN, they are the acclaimed sea farers of yore, always on the move with their canoes sailing and setting sail from one territory to another ever since some of them left their cradle land of BAKERE near RIO DEL REY in modern Cameroun Republic since some Clans/Kindreds/Houses had decided to stay put in the Cameroun till today. I have used the equivalent designations viz. CLANS/HOUSES because these are the designations employed in URUAN/EFIK today. The EFUTS were not going aimlessly in their voyages but moved on a determination to explore the depths traversing great swamps and dense equatorial forests seeking for manageable arable lands. Wherever and whenever they discovered that the territory lying before them was not conducive and/or large enough to contain them in their different Families/Kindreds or Houses, some were constrained to stay put on behalf of the nation and were therefore left behind to inhabit the land and stamp their authority of ownership there while the others moved on. That is why they are found all over the CALABAR SENATORIAL DISTRICT OF NIGERIA. They are found to inhabit BAKASSI, CALABAR, AKPABUYO, OKOYONG, CREEK TOWN etc. It simply means that as they did not emigrate with URUAN/EFIK in the beginning to IBOM, they had the entire territory before them to explore and move on. That is why they never met with other human beings until the discovery of the land of mangroves at the estuary of the lower Cross River now known as Kalabros/CALABAR, a nomenclature first given to URUAN/EFIK by the early Portuguese explorers centuries after them.

When URUAN/EFIK eventually arrived, deforested and occupied the frontiers of the expansive land mass before them, they met with nobody until their further penetration of the land. Expectedly, the first groups of people URUAN/EFIK met on ground were most probably those EFUTs their kins people, who were the first human beings they encountered already settled before them beyond EDIBE EDIBE in what is now EFUT REGION.

They seemed to have had no difficulty in interacting with them since their language was similar. This also explains why later on, as they explored and penetrated the massive forest land and discovered another groups of human beings with whom they could not easily interact, they, URUAN/EFIK promptly named them in their mother tongue: "the EKOI", ie. People with strange languages or "ABAKPA" a.k.a the QUAS, as we shall soon discover in the subsequent article. These latter are said to have been the very first to discover this expansive land of the Equatorial Rain Forest, deforest, possess, inhabit, cultivate, occupy and stamp their authority of ownership on it as their permanent land of primary settlement till this day since they also had left the Cameroun region through the CROSS RIVER tributaries crisscrossing from the Cameroun Republic. The QUAS possess the core territory of ODUKPANI and CALABAR MUNCIPALITY today. Some of the EFUT CLANS left behind in the Cameroons include EFUT AMATO, EFUT AMBAI AGBA, EFUT ODODOP, EFUT EKONDO, EFUT TITI, EFUT MUNIMBA, EFUT ARUP, EFUT EKUNJUU etc. parts of Clans of which had left with the others to NIGERIA. In fact, most of the above mentioned Clans still have links and interactions with their counterparts here in Nigeria and do attend momentous events whenever they are invited. Some Kindred/Clans/Houses like EKONDO; ODODOP etc. do attend the traditional EFUT General Combined Assembly from time to time. The Assembly also has some interaction and links with the OBONG's COUNCIL. Some EFUT Chieftains are members of the OBONG'S COUNCIL and have been accorded recognition and honorary EFIK EBURUTU Awards since the (EFUTS) as explained already are URUAN kiths and kins.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF EFUT CLANS AND CHIEFTAINCY AFFAIRS/COUNCILS

In 1963 the EFUT COMBINED ASSEMBLY was inaugurated and this played a very important role during the ascendancy of late Muri Munene Peter Edet Edem I (1963-1976), Paramount Ruler of the EFUTS. Then Council Meetings used to be held at his Palace grounds at No.110 White House Street, the residential Palace of the Royal Father now renamed Victor Akan Street. As far as I can recollect, he has been the only Catholic Monarch of the EFUTS in living memory. His son, Muri J. B. Edem, a bosom friend and colleague of mine since our days in Holy Family College Oku Abak in the early 1950s promptly supplied me with the text on the lives and times of the great EFUT PEOPLES when I arrived back on the shores of our Canaan City Calabar from my Overseas Studies in 1975. When the King lay a dying he sent for me to give him the last Sacraments. I anointed him and he received the Holy Viaticum from my hands before his heavenly home-call. Then during his Obsequies, the Muri - in - Council obtained the permission of Most Rev. Dr. Brian D. Usanga to enable me perform both the Traditional and Christian Rites, which was granted. I can still recall that at mid-night as is usually the custom, when he eventually died, I performed only but a simple (not the esoteric complex traditional midnight Rites for a departed Ekpe Chieftain who also doubled as both king and an Adept).

All such Ceremonies require at least the pouring/spreading of NSEI of MGBE Rite before performing the Christian Rituals. I was asked to perform this for the King since the EFUT General Assembly had already recommended me to do it being a son of the IYAMBA who must have "initiated at least been "ke ed? ." During the reign of His Royal Majesty, Muri Munene Umo Effiom II (1976 -1993), the seat of Administration shifted to No. 59 Edgerly Road and Council Meetings were customarily held there. But during the reign of HRM Muri Munene Nwanca Asikpo Ito III the Grand Patriarch of the EFUTS, one of his 'timber and caliber' Chieftains, the Clan Head of EFUT ABUA, Muri Mutiti Ita Okokon Ekpenyong single handedly allocated a vast area of land situated at Anantigha and built a permanent Palace for the Grand Patriarch of the EFUT nation in his personal capacity. ANANTIGHA EFUT ABUA is the Headquarters of Calabar South Local Government Area as also the seat of Government for the nation. It also serves as the seat and venue for the constituted EFUT COMBINED ASSEMBLY (Cf. Ndabo Godwin Bassey, Secretary General, Efut Combined Assembly: Interview on 19/5/2012). Then on completion of the building the rest of the Royal Fathers with their kindreds joined hands and following these developmental efforts of the Muri Ekpenyong and furnished the Palace which is still standing strong till today. The Palace was later commissioned in 1993 with himself Muri Ekpenyong and another Chieftain, Muri Okon Etim Ededem, Clan Head of EFUT EKONDO as Principal Officials of the Dedication. In 1994 HRM Muri Munene Ita Okokon Ebuka IV the present Patriarch of the EFUTS succeeded Munene Asikpo Ito III (Cf. Muri J. B. Edem: Interview on 12/8/2012, Efut Ekondo, Calabar,2012). Since then the EFUTS have capitalized on this using it as a catalyst towards arranging epoch-making festivals on some Annual occasion in celebration of the so tagged "EFUT DAY". These historical antecedents of the EFUTS are to further depict the difficulties as also favours and blessings attending the evolution of the great EFUT nation.

ORIGINS OF THE QUAS AND CALABAR
A HISTORY OF THE QUAS ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION

The Quas in Cross River State of Nigeria in contradistinction from the KWA/AKWA of Akwa Ibom State in modern world history have a very important and significant part to play in the evolution of the present EFIK nation and their settlement where they now find themselves. Historians and ethnographers often mistakenly associate the Quas with the great Kwa/Qua- Iboe River, a name first given by the early Missionaries of the United Missionary Association in Great Britain and Ireland, a non-denominational body under the assumed title of Qua-Iboe Mission. This river which runs through the heart of Ibibio land has very many tributaries, rivulets, creeks and streams and runs for about 60 miles before emptying itself at IBENO into the Atlantic Ocean. Its other end terminates in the Imo River at the eastern part of Imo River in the present Rivers State of Nigeria. But the Qua nation under study is more appropriately described as the ancient descendants of the Bantu race and a scion of the great EJAGHAM tribe now in Cross River from the Equatorial region which extends from the Cross River to the Congo River Basin in Central Africa.

Paul Amaury Talbot, a great African ethnologist and historian has acknowledged that the Quas are the Ekoi peoples who form part of the larger EJAGHAM Bantu peoples. They were the original and first settlers of what is now the greater Calabar viz. Calabar Municipality comprising Big Qua, Ikot Ansa, Kasuk, Akim, Ediba, Idundu, Njaghassang, Ifiang etc. clans. They are supposed to have migrated from the Western Cameroun Republic to their present location about 2000 BC, years before the occupation by URUAN/EFIK of the section which is the "smaller Calabar"- the coastal region of what is now re-christened EFIK nation and EFIK territory. As observed already, the founding fathers of the EFIK from IBOKU ESIT EDIK ie. Creek Town, which was discussed in article II ever being great sea farers never bothered to trespass or get into the interior owing perhaps to the fact that they saw this mainland part of their new abode with a massive land mass and forests already being occupied by the Quas whom they and their EFUTS brothers named as the ABAKPA derived from ABA = fenced round territory, and AKPA = river, ocean ie. a territory surrounded by land mass away from the sea/ocean from where they came. Now in any case and even, how many were they ie. the ancient URUAN group that discovered ATAKPA? Many kindreds, towns and clans, some expanding and growing into large settlements to constitute an entire Local Government Area or Commune/District in Nigeria and elsewhere in the world have been known to have evolved from only a single nuclear family like Nto Edino, Ikot Osurua, Nto Obo, Ifuho, Enugu Ezike, now a full-fledged Local Government Authority in Enugu State! The original, now EFIK kingdom settlers were never more than three families as observed elsewhere! That is why these proud new EFIK/URUAN peoples neither regarded themselves as tenants anywhere, nor did the Quas see themselves as landlords over the EFIK either.

At present the Quas form part of and see themselves as the proud natives to the greater parts of 5 Local Government Areas in Cross River State viz. Calabar Municipality with a Mayor as Chairman of Council, the present Chairman being Rt. Hon. Ntufam Eta Mbora Edim; Calabar South LGA, the greater part of which is EFUT territory and the other part belonging to both the Quas as also EFIK territories, but the Local Government Chairman Council of which is a proud Efik son Hon. Bassey Asuquo Eyo; Odukpani LGA ie. Qua Akpang/Qua Etamkpini; Akpabuyo LGA ie. Qua Mba-Akasi meaning: Road has not reached there; and Bakassi LGA now in Mba Akang of Mamfe Division in the Cameroun Republic. The term Qua is probably a derivative from one of their founding fathers, Oqua but the early Portuguese/European traders mistakenly referred to them as KWA anglicized Qua as observed above, whereas the Quas regard themselves as Akin and their language as Ekin. Qua cultural and ethnographic history has it that thousands of years ago and long before the Christian era AD, the Quas emigrated in two waves from South West Cameroun, the first group led by Ndidem Eta Nyak a.k.a Eta Ntison arrived Calabar axis overland and founded what is now known as Odukpani ie. Etamkpini/Akpang.

The second group entered Calabar most probably again overland through Bakassi and Akpabuyo axis led by Ikang Eta, the son of Eta Ntison. These were the Qua groups who founded IDUNDU and other areas bordering the IDUNDU River and terminating in Atimbo River in Akpabuyo, this territory of which was founded on their crossing over by ancient URUAN peoples as discussed in article IIIA above. They are the Qua group which now forms Akim Qua Clan. [Cf. Chief (Hon) Hayford S. Edet, 12 -14] As observed above, QUA a.k.a the EKOI nation with about 333sq. Km from the greater Calabar together with the Efuts discussed above with about 110 sq. Km of the land mass.

What remains ie. the coastal area of about 28 sq. Km is Efik land, after which the entire territory of Calabar is named because they were the first to be so designated by the early Portuguese explorers and merchants but with Iboku Esit Edik – Creek Town and Enyong –Eburutu clans land mass, EFIK territory is overwhelmingly large. They Quas from antiquity have been known to be great traders, farmers and hunters and for centuries. In pre-colonial times apart from fishing, hunting and farming, the people engaged in various crafts and industries and were famous for producing great artifacts in carving, sculpturing, smelting and pottery and metals works made possible through mining at the Oban and Cameroun mountains. They were able to produce agricultural and other tools and implements like akara blades, hoes, metal and even bronze currencies ie. OKPOHO manila and SITIM copper rods viz. Ude in Igbo or Akaraku in Hausa. In the 19th century these currencies gradually depreciated in value to one shilling in 1805, 3d in 1856 and 1penny in 1864. My father recounted that in the 1920s in Calabar a case of gin =12 bottles cost 48 brass Sitim rods or 12/- while at Afikpo market 1000 yams had gone down to the value of only £15:0: d. The rods were counted in bundles of 5, 10 and twenty; ditto the Manilla – a small horse-shoe shaped metal coin with expanded ends which remained the main currency in the Niger Delta and the hinterland till the 1930s, 40s even till 1950s the Manilla was still in use. It is on record that this was done on purpose ostensibly to discourage the use of these African currencies and to forcefully and brazenly forfeit and ban the use of anything depicting African civilization and technology and to replace them with their colonial brands.

THE STORY OF OLD CALABAR, AD 1700 – 1960

A publication from the National Commission for Museums and Monuments states that with the establishment of colonial administration, British, American, French, German and other coins were introduced in the early 1900s ostensibly to stop the importation of local forms of Currency and were therefore greatly devalued and British West African currency coins of 1 penny, 3 pence, ½ penny were introduced. (Cf. Ekpo Okpo Eyo, 1986, 61ff). The word Manila was similarly given by the early Portuguese explorers and traders to all the various metal bracelets, rings and currencies employed in the coastal trade of West Africa. But by 1956 these local brass and bronze coins which dominated the Nigeria market were withdrawn and retained mainly for ceremonial purposes. They were however being replaced with British West African Currency in notes and coins viz. half-penny – AFU, penny, three pence –TR? , six pence – SISI, nine pence – NAI and the Shilling - SIDI? ie. 12 pence. There were other higher denominations also of the florin =2 Shillings, Pound = £1 or 20 shillings and Guiney = £1:1/- or 21 shillings.

The Quas also produced brass ornamental and ceremonial objects like Esa ub? –staff of office used by kings and chiefs in these coastal parts. Just like URUAN/EFIK and the EFUTS they also excelled in weaving and dying of cotton, raffia and other fibers for making caps – the bidak and especially necklaces, bangles etc. which were very much in use by the URUAN/EFIK women at ceremonials and NKUH? outings which are also very popular in these coastal rain forest areas. They like their URUAN/EFIK as also their EFUT neighbours produced animal skins especially ikpa-Ekpe leopard brands for the making of chieftaincy crowns and ceremonial foot mats. In particular pottery needed for domestic utensils, graters, aqua containers, mirror frames and ceremonial paraphernalia were their specialties ditto those of upper Cross River including Ikom, Itigidi up to Afikpo now in Ebonyi State. Their stone carvings and pottery – the Terra cotta vessels were a masterpiece as early as 200 AD and these culminated in the production of elaborate ritual figures. Recently some excavations by Prof. Ekpo Eyo have revealed the antiquity of these people especially through their expertise in the Qua pottery industry and Terra -Cotta products with their distinct NSIBIDI designs which date back to 1.500 BC. In fact, as will be recounted later, the Quas after ancient URUAN and the EFUTS were the first to develop writing designs and orthography which they designated as NSIBIDI which almost outclass the Western form of writings except perhaps those of the Egyptians and Sumerians of ancient past. NSIBIDI is wholly African and has not been known to have been derived from any of the Western writings and orthographies. There are no Arabic or Latin designs or letters in their scripts which go to show the world that African civilization and worldviews are also imbued with ancient traditions and wisdom and that Africa also had the tradition of writing. I have dwelt at length on this in the chapter on Ekpe URUAN. The satellite villages and kingdoms of the Quas are each governed by the Traditional Ruler or Chief known in Qua language as the Ntoe/Atuofam/Ntufam masculine, Ntunkae feminine. The leader and Paramount Ruler as also Patriarch of the entire Qua nation is designated the Ndidem of the Quas which seat is currently occupied by His Majesty Edidem (Dr.) Thomas Ika Ika Oqua III, but their overlord in the larger Ejagham tribe is designated the NTUFAM masculine, NTUNKAE feminine. Those whose photographs have been recorded above are some of the current leaders in the Qua nation who together with the Ndidem, they oversee the daily administration of the Clans of the Qua nation through the QUA CONSTITUTED ASSEMBLY just like the EFUT COMBINED ASSEMBLY and are equally supported by the ETUBOMs or family heads which in Qua tongue are designated the Ojos.

ture, we cannot help going back and forth as it is absolutely necessary to treat at least if O nation in connection with the IBIBIO STATE UNION and URUAN nation. Though of a lesser and later consequence in the scheme of things, there are still a number of issues raised above concerning the IBIBIO without which certain aspects of URUAN history could neither be explained nor understood. Every community or group of people, it has been observed the world over, must have monuments to serve as beacons of light and land marks of its journey through history. Today the United States of America is worshiping the Status of Liberty as it were, which was erected with the active assistance of France, a country in Europe in commemoration of the American War of Independence. This was not simply something of a craven image but a wonderful Shrine. In Europe also we have the Trafalgar Square, Planetarium and Madam Tussord in London - England, the FourSquare in Berlin – Germany, Eifel Tower in Paris – France, the Colosseum, Piazza Garibaldi and San Pietro a.k.a St. Peter's Basilica in Rome – Italy, the Great Wall of China in Beijing, etc. Back home in our dear country Nigeria, concerning precisely these communities: Cross River, Rivers/Bayelsa and Akwa Ibom States, we are yet to establish memorials to remind us as a commemorative effigy or something of the hallowed and patriotic activities of personalities especially those like the Bassey Duke Effigy at the round-about Calabar-Muritala Muhammed Road Calabar, the Hon HRM Nsomm of URUAN, Edidem Atakpor Nyong Essien at Nwaniba/Oron/Ikot Ekpene cross-road Uyo, His Imperial Majesty Edidem Ededem Archibong V, the Obong of Calabar, His Imperial Majesty Edidem (King) Eyo Honesty at Creek Town, Sir Justice (Dr.) Egbert Udo Udoma, Chief (Dr.) Douglas Jaja, the Amanyanabo of Opobo at Ikot Abasi, who untiringly and selflessly were demonstrably the fore-front champions for the creation of a proposed COR STATE, comprising of the three geo-political and colonial provinces of Calabar, Ogoja and Rivers. Then of course we can briefly recall some of those great effigies of some prominent Nigerian Nationalists and Statesmen like those of Dr. M. Ihuonuka Okpara at Port Harcourt –Enugu junction at Umuahia, His Excellency Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe at Onitsha-Enugu Road-junction, Onitsha, Sir Ahmadu Bello at Kaduna-Katsina junction, Kaduna, Chief Obafemi Awolowo at Okene – Lokoja junction, etc. This eminently was the first of its kind in the annals of Nigeria, but which on the assumption of office as Head of State and Head of the Federal Military Government and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, Colonel (subsequently General) Yakubu Gowon, created three separate States from the former Eastern Region viz, South Eastern, Rivers and East Central States.

One would have thought that the colonial Uyo TTC which later metamorphosed into ATTC, then Cross River State University and now the Federal University of Uyo, as also the Ibibio State College Ikot Ekpene which were both established at the instance of the famous and now defunct IBIBIO STATE UNION (1928 -1967) could have been left alone to serve posterity as a constant reminder of the good old regime when the Ibibio, Itu. Enyong, Annang, Oron, Uruan, Eket, Ibeno, Andoni, Opobo now Ikot Abasi were united as brothers and sisters and good neighbours in the defunct IBIBIO STATE UNION as a quasi-national Institution, and later as the foremost champions with their EFIK brothers of the cause for the creation of States in Nigeria and in fact the first in the whole of Africa except perhaps the defunct UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA which has now been balkanized into not-so- amicable and brotherly Independent Nation States viz: Malawi, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Swazi land, Lesotho etc. Not to be forgotten also, is the foresightedness and progressive adventure of initiating a Scholarship Scheme for Further Studies Overseas, the first ever recorded in Nigeria which materialized in the early 1940s with Chief Bassey U. Attah (the father of Govt. Victor Attah), Justice (Dr.) Egbert Udo Udoma, (CFR- THE OBONG IKPAISONG IBIBIO) Sampson U. Etuk, Ibanga U. , Obot E. Antia-Obong, James Lawson Nsima, Etubom O. O. Ita, Robert U. Umoinyang, and later Miss Ibium Bassey, Miss Margaret Nsasak, Miss Josephine U. Ibok, Miss Victoria U. Inyang etc. as some of the beneficiaries.

THE 1939 CATHOLIC SPLINTER GROUP OF IBIBIO STATE UNION ST. JOSEPH'S CATHOLIC LEAGUE a.k.a CATHOLIC LAITY COUNCIL OF CALABAR

In this connection as noted elsewhere, the Catholic Mission authorities under the auspices of the Catholic Lay Faithful and Catholic elite adherents also formed the Association of St. Joseph's Catholic League determined to imitate the Ibibio Union by sending well qualified Catholic Students Overseas, the first beneficiaries of whom included Leo E. Essien, Sylvester J. Una, Fabian J. Essiet, Simon Etim a.k.a Akpan Annang, Malachy P. Essien and later such greats like Fabian E. Okon a.k.a "Supervisor", Denis U. Inyang, etc. But what prompted all this in the first place was the complaint lodged before the Colonial District Officer, Sir F.R. Kay in 1939 by the Ibibio Union Officials, the majority of them protestants, to the effect that the Irish Catholic Administrator of the Mainland Church in particular that of Anua, then Rev Father. Thomas McGettrick, who became the Bishop of Ogoja with Mgr. James Moynagh as Prefect Apostolic of the entire territory including Abakaliki, was arresting women and holding them against their will in what they termed "the parallel of the Nigerian convict prison". The complaint resulted in reports in the Press accusing the Catholic Mission of operating illegal "prison and penance houses" in their Mission compounds which they wanted outlawed by the colonial Authorities. This was in reference to the practice in Central Mission centres whereby people did a kind of "public penance" consisting of manual labour, attendance at Mass and prayers prior to being reconciled to the Church following some flagrant breaches of Church discipline eg. putting a girl in the family way before receiving the Sacrament of Matrimony, alleged "embezzlement" of school or Church funds without rendering proper accounts, acts of insubordination or other acts of indiscipline as adjudged by the Church Committees on Church discipline. This aspect of confinement in Mission quarters was distinct from that arranged for pre-marriage courses whereby betrothed girls were expected to attend while staying in these Marriage Training Centres or "Marriage Quarters" for a period of two to three months in preparation for the Sacraments and for instructions in house-keeping and childcare.

THE PENANCE QUARTERS PALAVER v/s IBIBIO STATE UNION

This practice of course had a parallel in traditional URUAN/EFIK society whereby girls spent a period in UF? K NKUH? seclusion – ie. "Fattening house" before circumcision and marriage. The raison d'être for this was to enforce the discipline of Christian Marriage in a pagan territory like Nigeria, nay Africa. The early Missionaries had reasoned that the full demands of the Church regarding Christian Marriage be stressed hence "excommunication" or "public penance" for infractions. Though unpleasant for the people, but it was necessary to take this drastic and unpopular line as an integral part of both traditional life and also to ensure that Catholic members would marry in accordance with Canon Law. (Cf. Kiggins Thomas, 156-59; Sir Udo Udoma, 103-105; See also Obi C.A, A Hundred Years of the Catholic Church, African-FEB, Ibadan, 1985; 203) This meant that both partners would have to be Catholics. At this time, but with the schools being mostly populated by males, it was obvious that the young men intending marriage would already have been baptized Catholics from the schools and would also have gone through the "Traditional Marriage" while their intending wives would be either protestants or pagans, hence the need for bringing the girls to the "Marriage Quarters" for the training and matrimonial preparations. Nevertheless, the girls were usually positive in their attitude as it offered them the chance to learn something new – even the rudiments of the 3Rs viz. Mathematics, Reading/Dictation and Writing. But it was the families at home which had misgivings since it was an inconvenience as the girl's food would have to be brought to the Catholic Mission while the household was deprived of her services at home.

But in fact what followed above was as a result of the faithful adherents of the Catholic Faith in a protest against the discriminatory and unorthodox activities of the officials of the Ibibio State Union. The deputies commented rather poignantly for example that the top posts in the Union were held solely by Protestants. No Catholic in spite of their higher qualifications was on the Executive Committee of the Union or among the students sent for Further Studies Overseas. One of the Union Protestant officials had the audacity to claim that Catholics were on the minority and the Union had the power to crush them because the Roman Catholic Mission was an insignificant group. That was why the Catholic delegation including the visible most influential Grade I Catholic Teachers and Graduates like Domingo Ita Inyang, Leo Essien, James A. Isua and Joseph U. Adadiaha who later became the President and Director General who could not withstand the insult determined to re-organize and withdrew to form the St. Joseph's League in the first place. The League to a large extent became the "TEACHERS' FORUM ". This was inevitable as the teachers were the dominant educated group within the Mission and most of them had benefitted from the Further Studies Programme. The League was organized throughout the Catholic Stations – a very visible and potent Organization at that, an Ete Joseph U. Adadiaha as permanent Co0rdinator went round the Stations and Parishes to organize and to confirm compliance and payment of dues (Colmann Cooke, Bishop James Moynagh of Calabar, Columba Press, Dublin, 2014). In its University Scholarship Policy, the Ibibio State Union had put forth policies contrary to Catholic principles. This reference to the "Marriage Quarters" etc. especially with regard to the Catholic Mission Centre at Anua was uncalled for as it was an unnecessary and unjust provocation. In fact, at one of the Ibibio State Union Caucus, the delegates of the Catholic elite were treated with contempt and disdain, they had to stage a walk-out on the Union as the only answer by the Catholic deputation. Since the Caucus Assembly was held at Ikot Ekpene, the Catholics later regrouped at St. Anne's Ifuho. It was this episode that gave birth to the famous unmitigated formation of the Catholic League a.k.a St. Joseph's Catholic Union which in turn gave birth to the establishment of Holy Family College in 1942 in a predominantly pagan and Protestant area ostensibly to break down the very visible anti-Catholic prejudice of the local Protestant Missions. That was also the reason why many non-Catholic, indeed non-Christian students were admitted into the College including Brian D. Usanga who later became the Archbishop of Calabar.

However, the "PENANCE QUARTERS" palaver was subsequently brought to the Legislative Council at Enugu. The Lieutenant Governor ordered for a special inspection of the "Marriage Quarters" which event was conducted in the presence of a large crowd which included representatives from all other denominations. In the end the Lt Governor and his Officials could find no substantial fault with the practice and the practice continued throughout the entire region of what is now Cross River, Rivers and Akwa Ibom States where the St. Patrick's Fathers held sway. In fact, this hard line of action was not uncommon among the native authorities because the tradition of the people condoned great harshness in the exercise of authority and even used to inflict physical punishments on people for breaches of community discipline. The privileged position of a white man in a colonial setting also allowed such latitude in dealing with the local population even including matters of church breaches. Another off-shoot as a result of this was the withdrawal of Catholics in the territory from the Ibibio Union and forming the St. Joseph's League Association as mentioned above because they were now determined to imitate the Ibibio Union not just by sending well qualified Catholic Students abroad for Further Studies but by building imposing secondary schools like the Ibibio State College at Ikot Ekpene. They succeeded in building the famous Holy Family College at Abak, the Teacher Training Higher School at Ifuho, St. Augustine's TTC College Urua Inyang and Cornelia Connelly College at Afaha Oku in Uyo. A permanent organizer, Chief Joseph Udo Adadiaha was appointed President General by the League with Lady Mary J. Edet a.k.a Adiaha Uruan as Secretary General and dues were collected from every Station to do this. Catholics came from far and near to help in the building of these Institutions, the projects becoming a rallying point for the entire Catholic communities. Holy Family College in particular was so named ostensibly to emphasize the attack on the Catholic ideal of family life and marriage epitomized in the so-called "Marriage Quarters"

The Minutes of the Ibibio Union which are much more than a mere historical document have come handy here to inform us about all these happenings because it is from these Minutes that we could ever have known what exactly happened at the peak of the colonial era in Nigeria. They have also given us a glimpse into Ibibio personality as it were; their capabilities and their idiosyncrasies, especially concerning the roles the Union had played as also the services it rendered to the government which consequently won it government approbation. All these are reflections of the IBIBIO mind at work. As early as 1928, the Union had advocated for the establishment of a public library which was followed up the following year by a demand for a printing press from the government. In 1930 the Union prodded the colonial administration to establish the Teachers' Trading Institute which came into effect in what became the Uyo TTC and later the University of Cross River State (UNICROSS) now the Federal University of Uyo. When placed in its proper context of the time and against the weight of the Colonial Masters' restrictions, the usefulness of these Minutes can never be lost to the inquiring mind. We can for example only fathom the weight of that counseling by the UNION to the communities not to erect buildings indiscriminately in their territories or too close to the 'MAIN' roads to safeguard their destruction in case of necessity in the future especially when good trade, expansion or other civil progressive needs could arise, or even increased traffic and widening of roads, the establishments of Technical and Modern Colleges, etc. In fact, it is revealing that there was a case on 15th February, 1937, despite the fact that the UNION had among its registered members, expatriates like Rev. A. Groove of the Primitive Methodist Mission, Sir M. D. W. Jeffreys, a colonial Administrator and others which no other ethnic Union in Nigeria ever had at the time. It is also instructive to note that the then Chief Commissioner, Eastern Provinces, Mr. W. E. Hunt accompanied by the Lt. Governor, Sir R. Taylor, also the Snr. Resident Calabar Province, Mr. G.G. Shute, the D. O. Ikot Ekpene Mr. J.W. Hartley attended the Meetings of the UNION in order to address the representatives of the UNION. At those Meetings the UNION had requested among other things as noted above for the establishment in Ibibio land: a printing Press, a public Library, a High School each for boys and girls one at Eket and the other at Uyo also a Technical College and 'FREE EDUCATION' for all. But the Lt. Governor told the bewildered Elders that government was not keen on such projects "since such a Programme would produce qualified people for whom there might be no employment for them by Government" and this was the vogue throughout the colonial era.

The Elders of the Union had countered that whereas "not all in civilized countries who have been graduates have been employed by Govedrnment, the enactment of compulsory education in those parts has not been repealed" (Cf. Hon. Nyong Essien, 58-72). But what exactly went wrong? First this sad episode which is difficult to swallow or to forget stemmed from the issue of the next Obongship of Calabar. History and tradition has it that the Hon. Chief (Etubom) Nyong Essien (OBE, CMG, CON) and later His Royal Majesty, Edidem Atakpor, the Nsomm of Uruan (1945-1976) had been tipped for the Obong in the early 1940s but was vehemently opposed and rejected by some Efik Chieftains notably from Atakpa and Obutong (Duke Town), Adiabo, etc. but was only supported by the Etuboms and Chiefs of Iboku Esit Edik (Creek Town), Ikot Offiong, Ikoneto and Nsidung (Henshaw Town). Then to add salt to injury, first the alleged defamation and derogatory language used against the Ibibio by Dr. Amaku who himself is a native of Enyong, second by designating URUAN nation as coming from the IBIBIO stalk and further fueled by these was the publications of Edikot ? wed Mbuk by the same Dr. Amaku in 1949 with the tracing of Efik Ancestry to the marriage between Otong Ama-Ibibio and Okorafor- Igbo, thus making URUAN/EFIK descendants of the Igbo who were for a long time their slaves, etc., etc. All these sparked off unimaginable bitterness, enmity, rancor, bad blood and loss of faith and trust between the core Ibibio and the EFIK as also between the EFIK and URUAN. This matter further led to the institution of a civil suit in the Law Courts against Dr. E. N. Amaku and the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland Mission by the IBIBIO STATE UNION, but the colonial Authorities intervened, urging that the case be amicably settled out of court. Yet it did not end there. As it seemed, and to make matters worse, it so happened that most of the EFIK at the time insulted and continued to repudiate URUAN by derisively denouncing them as Ibibios.

It was this and others besides then that frustrated and constrained Etubom, the Honourable Nyong Essien to pull URUAN out from any association with the EFIK and recommended to the colonial Authorities the ban on AKPA EDIKOT NWED and UDIANA EDIKOT NWED IK? EFIK Primers, viz. ? wed Ud? bara Ika and ? wed Usari in all public schools of the Old Calabar/Ogoja Provinces and pulling URUAN out and together with Chief Okon Edem better known as Bishop Willie Young to form the IBIBIO ASSOCIATION at Calabar whereas it was this same Honourable Nyong Essien who was the pillar, founder and leader of the Calabar (EFIK) National League (1923-28) and Interpreter at the Calabar High Court of Justice. He eventually joined the yet-to-be registered IBIOBIO STATE UNION formerly known as IBIOBIO WELFARE UNION in 1928, a Union which had been predated by the MAINLAND ASSOCIATION in the now Akwa Ibom State formerly designated as the MAINLAND of Old Calabar Province. Although there is no record that URUAN as a nation had ever joined the UNION, as there is no trace of any of the meetings at any of URUAN Native Courts as was the practice throughout the Minutes of the UNION (1928-1943), but this was the Elder statesman who was unanimously selected for the National Legislative Council at Lagos in 1938 by the UNION and nominated by the then Governor General of Nigeria, Sir Bernard Bourdillon to represent and act as spokesman of the whole of the people of the Mainland Territory of OLD CALABAR PROVINCE, which he then signed off as the new IBIBIO DIVISION. He was also selected to attend all the Nigerian Constitutional Conferences in London up to the last ones in 1957/59. The Honourable Etubom Nyong Essien a man with the rare distinction and honour of being elected the first President of the House of Chiefs of the then Eastern Region of Nigeria in 1960 and continued to be so elected till the civil war broke out and so terminated the First Republic of the Nigerian Federation in January1967. Tradition has it and it is also noteworthy that by 1927 Chieftains like S. U. Etuk of Etinan, O. A. Antia-Obong of Opobo (Egwanga) Robert U. Umo Inyang of Ikot Ekpene, Sampson Udo Idiong of Ibesit, Ebong A. Inyang of Abak, Chief Okon Udo Ndok and James U. Eka of Uyo, then Head Teacher under the Primitive Methodist Mission, Ikot Ekpene were instrumental to the founding of the aforementioned UNIONS. But as said elsewhere the story of the IBIBIO STATE UNION has been the anchor, the beacon and fortress of all the national Unions in Nigeria today. Just as the 1st Nigeria Republic ended abruptly in 1966 with the not-to-be-forgotten ill-fated civil war, so also the IBIBIO STATE UNION with a FIAT by which General Johnson Umunakwe Aguiyi-Ironsi on assuming power as Head of the Federal Government of Nigeria and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces, by a Decree to wit, the infamous Decree No. 34 proscribed the IBIBIO STATE UNION along with all Political and Cultural Organizations in Nigeria, and also seized and by this confiscated all the property of the UNION including the Ibibio State College, Ikot Ekpene, of which it was founder and Sole Proprietor as a corporation and aggregate of the IBIBIO STATE UNION National Secretariat at Uyo with all its contents and records. He ordered the occupation of the Offices by selected Officers of the then Military Government. And so was lost forever to posterity all records and proceedings pertaining to, and identifiable with the IBIBIO STATE UNION, nor could any trace of anything be found in any National, Regional or State archives in Nigeria till today. They were meant to constitute part of the highly treasured NIGERIA-BIAFRA WAR BOOTY since the UNION at the height of its power was regarded as the citadel and fortress, nay the SANCTUM SANCTORUM of the vocal advocates of State creation in Nigeria which ought to be destroyed and buried forever.

SOME EVENTS IN THE ANNALS OF IBIBIO STATE UNION

Perhaps it would be beneficial to relate at least one or two important events before closing this brief article in the annals of this great UNION. The first has to do with the issue of the returnees of the first badge of Graduates sponsored in 1938 by the Union for Further Studies Oversees. It is heart-warming to know that all of them came back to God's loving State with laurels as Doctors, Lawyers, Economists etc. except Mr. Asuquo Udo Idiong of Abak who was a Medical Student in Canada and died while still pursuing his studies. Two of them from Annang territory including the deceased and Dr. Obot Essien Antia-Obong had opted to study Medicine, but Dr. Antia-Obong who did his medical studies in the UK came back as MD. Most of them also became men and women of timber and calibre in the Legislative Councils both Federal and Regional eg. Dr. Ibanga U. Akpabio, a seasoned educationist became Minister of Education while Prof. Sylvester J. Una became Minister of Health in the Eastern Regional Executive Council of Nigeria. Dr. Egbert U. Udoma became a legal luminary as also a Member in the House of Representatrives and Regional House of Assembly. But before long some unfortunate events took place between two of them, viz. Dr. I. U. Akpabio who was appointed Foundation Principal of Ibibio State College established by the UNION and Dr. Obot Essien Antia-Obong, MD. appointed in the Medical Services of Eastern Region and assigned to the St. Margaret's General Hospital Calabar on their return from Overseas.

DR. IBANGA UDO AKPABIO v/s IBIBIO STATE UNION

The above title itself speaks volumes of what actually took place, but this should not detain us for lack of space. However, for the fact that the unfortunate yet unavoidable happening took place between a beneficiary who really got to the peak of his career as Minister of Education in Nigeria grace Ü la the IBIBIO STATE UNION through his biting the finger that nursed him by his near rubbishing of the UNION and bringing it to its knees, we would simply have left sleeping dogs lie. Nevertheless, this matter is too important to be swept under the carpet like that. The long and short of the matter is that Dr. I. U. Akpabio on his return from his Overseas studies was promptly given appointment by the UNION, not that he could not have gained a "juicy" appointment in the Civil Service of the Government of the day. But come to think of it, he was appointed directly as the Head Master a.k.a Principal of a very prestigious College in the country at that time viz. the famous Ibibio State College, Ikot Ekpene, an appointment that could never happen anywhere in the Civil Service talkless of the Private Sector of the time; and mind you, at his very back yard of Ikot Ekpene on a salary quite beyond Government salary schedule. Being made the Principal of a co-educational institution at that, he was therefore to place himself in loco parentis of the students by acting appropriately, but which he failed to do by abandoning his duty post for months for other personal and selfish interests. Besides, he paid himself on the senior expatriate scale ie. £540:0:0 p.a. above what he was placed instead of £360:0:0 p.a. he was to appropriate. Again he appropriated for himself funds derived from students' fees, Government Grants-in-Aid, donations, UNION contributions etc. accruing to the school to the tune of £3,000:0:0. He even after being asked to resign as Principal of the College continued to register new students and pocketed the proceeds being then both a Member in the House of Representatives Lagos and the Eastern Regional House of Assembly. The last straw which always breaks the camel's back was his suborning riffraffs from his Annang country viz. Abak and Ikot Ekpene Districts of the Union to claim that the school was his personal property, it having been established on Ikot Ekpene land, the site of which was contributed to by his Ikot Ekpene people. This was not all, he also suborned one J. A. Ibanga, a bicycle engineer (repairer) from Utu Etim Ekpo in Northern Annang of Abak District to make a motion at the Annual General Assembly of over 2000 attendees to the effect that a perpetual Injunction be placed on the IBIBIO STATE UNION to thenceforth declare that the UNION was to be known and named as "ANNANG & IBIBIO STATE UNION"; the ANNANG counterpart specifically to be known and addressed as "ANNANG WELFARE UNION". But all these turned out to be a one-man show considering that when he, Ibanga of Etim Ekpo stood up waving his right hand in such a dramatic manner, almost in Hiltleric Nazi-German fashion of the 2nd World War years, he then signaled for all those considering themselves as coming from the great ANNANG stock to walk out from the mammoth Assembly. But it so happened that only himself had walked out since nobody seemed to give him an ear, completely being overwhelmed by the great Assembly of eminent Nigerian citizens from the MAINLAND of Old Calabar Province of Nigeria's Southern Provinces now designated "AKWA IBOM STATE OF SOUTH SOUTH NIGERIA" in contradistinction to the CROSS RIVER STATE. What a shame!

Nevertheless, his principal, Dr. I. U Akpabio while sitting on an altogether prominent seat in front as a proud IBIBIO STATE UNION official was tongue-tied. He could raise neither even his hand nor voice to defend himself of the charges brought against him while at the same time trembling like a leaf tossed by the river in fear thereof. When he could find his voice when he observed to his shame and confusion that the IBIBIO STATE UNION had resolved to institute an action in court against him principally for regarding himself as the proprietor of the Ibibio State College, he finally stood up boasting that he had already with the aid of a friend engaged the services of well-known lawyers in the country to defend him in court and the friend of course was no other than Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, Proprietor of the West African Pilot whose friendship he had courted while in Lagos as a Member of the House of Representatives. In fact, contrary to the specification of the Board of Trustees of the UNION (BOT) of eminent Nigerian citizens, themselves members of the UNION, together with the special Committee to institute the case at the Magistrate Court, Ikot Ekpene, the Colonial District Officer, Sir J. W. Hartley directed rather that the case should be transferred to the Supreme Court Lagos, in accordance with the procedure in those days with Dr. E. Udoma as Counsel for the UNION, the expatriate Mr. L. A. McCormac and Mr. S. Obianwu, Counsels for Dr. I. U. Akpabio. What angered the UNION and indeed the entire people of the MAINLAND, Annang included, was that it was an abomination to lay claim by Dr. I. U. Akpabio to the College, whereas the Ibibio State College was a national Institution, but it was being claimed as "a private property", a prodigious College at that. Then in the aftermath of all these saddening events, the College established with fanfare in 1946 had so degenerated that it was to be closed down by the Eastern Nigeria Government Ministry of Education and banned from offering candidates for the Cambridge School Certificate Examinations.

This was not all, Dr. I. U Akpabio through this matter, had instigated a dangerous propaganda damaging to the cause of the UNION and using such a dangerous weapon to stir up ill-feelings, animosity, and hostility among the Annang Section of the UNION with the stage-managed petitions and protests from some elements of Abak and Ikot Ekpene to declare a novel and parallel Union to be named "ANNANG WELFARE UNION". However, "all is well that ends well", it so transpired that the Mbong Ikpa-Isong - Traditional Rulers of the MAINLAND nation with Obong Okon Udo Ndok, Paramount Ruler of Uruan Central as Chairman, intervened and Messrs McCormac and Obianwu, Counsel for Akpabio after seeing such a devastating evidence supported by documents which were tendered in court, decided to withdraw from the case in disgust. During the short adjournment, Mr. Obianwu thereafter applied to the Court for adjournment of the case on the ground that he had duly advised his client Dr. I. U. Akpabio in his own interest to have the matter amicably settled out of court.

The following comprising both the Officials of the UNION and Traditional Rulers took part in the whole drama with Mr. Robert U. Umo-Inyang exercising overall supervision of the terms of settlement:

IMPORTANT PERSONALITIES OF THE UNION & TRADITIONAL RULERS 1950 - 1953

CHIEF UDO UDO OKURE (CHAIRMAN)	IKOT EKPENE	OBONG S. U. ETUK	U Y O
MR. AKPAN UDO AKPAN INYANG	IKOT EKPENE	PROF. SYLVESTER J. UNA	U Y O

OBONG P. B. OKON	C A L A B A R	BOARD OF DIRECTORS & SPECIAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS
MR. DAN A. ENO	C A L A B A R

The most noteworthy feature of the case was the fact that all the members of the Committee who actively participated in that amicable settlement were themselves pillars of the IBIBIO STATE UNION. Secondly Dr. I. U. Akpabio himself was conscious of the fact that each and every member of the Committee was conversant with the history of the College being partakers in the establishment and development of the College from its inception and wanted and orderly progress in Ibibio land a.k.a MODERN AKWA IBOM STATE. It also confirmed the truth of the proprietorship of the Ibibio State College as established in open Court for the benefit of future generations, a fact that the present crop of Annang people should do well to understand.

DR. ANTIA-OBONG'S INTRANSIGENCE & UNION'S LOSS OF REPUTATION

One could recall that in those colonial days, once a person was a beneficiary of a Scholarship scheme that enabled him/her to study either in a Government/Mission Institution, or Overseas, he/she was bound by bond before the commencement of studies to the effect that the beneficiary would after the completion of studies work for the Administration/Institution which granted the Scholarship. This was the case also with the IBIBIO STATE UNION Scholarship beneficiaries. All the above mentioned Scholarship holders of the UNION Scheme were duty bound either to work or take appointment with the UNION after their studies. For example, on his return, Dr. Egbert U. Udoma took up appointment with the UNION by offering himself as President General of the UNION, Dr. Ibanga U. Akpabio took up appointment by working as the Principal of Ibibio State College, likewise Dr. Obot Essien Antiabong on his return was demanded to take appointment as MD of the Ibibio State General Hospital, Ikot Okoro. Sometime in 1950, Dr. Obot Essien Antiabong wrote to the NCW of the UNION tendering his resignation to go seek for greener pastures in the mainstream of Government environment. This matter did not go well with the UNION since he had not completed his years of service as stipulated in the Bond. But since he geared up to make trouble with the UNION and bring her to her knees, the UNION reluctantly acquiesced. He subsequently applied for and was appointed MD on July 5, 1950 in the Medical Services of the Eastern Region and assigned to St. Margaret's Hospital Calabar. But sometime in 1955, Dr. Obot Essien ran into serious trouble following the death of a patient under his care. The crux of the matter was that he had prescribed treatment to the Matron on night duty over the telephone for a patient when he was on duty night-call instead of physically seeing and examining the patient beforehand; a prescription which later resulted in the death of a patent, one Brown Ibem, a native of Aba. At the height of it, the matter indeed went to court to determine Dr. Antia-Obong's culpability or none of it. That case was considered to be a case of homicide, because it was a case of culpable negligence which sanction merited dismissal from the post. It further snowballed into taking court action against him and his having to face the Disciplinary Committee of the Federal Medical Service at the Headquarters, Lagos. In fact, on March 8, 1956 the Inquiry opened at the Headquarters of the Federal Medical Service Lagos before the Medical Disciplinary Committee with Dr. G. M. M. Menzies as Chairman and Hon Sir Kofo Abayomi as the Presiding Judge with Dr. E. Udo Udoma as Counsel for the accused. The tribunal did pronounce Censure against Dr. Antia-Obong but when the matter was reassessed, the Governor General of Nigeria accepted instead the recommendation for the dismissal from service of Dr. Antia-Obong. Meanwhile Dr. E. Udo Udoma had remonstrated protesting and arguing that the "accused could not be put in jeopardy twice for the same offence" (Cf. Udo Udoma, Spectrum, Ibadan 1987, 403). Everybody knows the maxim in law to the effect that: "Nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa": which forbids that an accused be put in jeopardy twice for one and the same offence; but this should limit our options.

However, to demonstrate his intransigence and culpability, Dr. Antia-Obong had so made trivial of the matter by excusing himself before the bewildered UNION President General that he had already consulted Dr. Haigh the Missionary Medical Superintendent in-Charge of Ituk Mbang Methodist Hospital and that the latter had concurred with him that the learned trial Judge in Lagos was wrong to have him censured. This was not all, when probed further, Dr. Antia-Obong also exonerated himself that he had equally consulted Chief Thompson Udo Akpabio, then of the Medical Department at Headquarters, Lagos who had before this reviewed the whole matter with Dr. E. Udo Udoma fearing that the case could already have been referred to the Medical Disciplinary Committee of the country. He continued to be adamant by maintaining with enthusiasm that he was right in his convictions and assertion that as a Medical Doctor in Government Service on call duty at night, he was correct to have prescribed treatment over the telephone to be administered by the night Nurse on duty on an emergency case like this, and without the necessity of going to see the patient by himself. He became even more persistent that the learned trial judge was in error to have censured him. Everybody knows that as a beneficiary of the IBIBIO STATE UNION, this would bring untold loss of face and reputation of the well-acclaimed UNION which earned both acceptance and repute from the public and Government of the day. It was very frustrating and the UNION tried everything to save the situation. Being a good friend of the UNION and having been Resident in Calabar for years in the 1930s and 1940s, His Excellency Dr. C. J. Mayne, the Deputy Governor of Eastern Region was approached to intervene especially as he was the Officer responsible for Civil Service matters in the whole Region. On the kind advice of Dr. Mayne, Dr. E. Udo Udoma was also directed to pursue the matter and seek audience with His Excellency, Sir James Robertson, K.C.M.G, the Governor General of Colonial Nigeria who knew Dr. Udoma personally and had also acquiesced to the workings of the UNION. But after meeting with His Excellency, the Governor General confirmed that the final decision to terminate the appointment of Dr. Antia-Obong rested with him but subject to the advice of those other Authorities of Government.

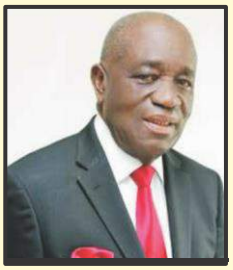
It is noteworthy to recall that this issue occurred at the same time preparations were agog for the Royal Visit to Nigeria of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and because of this moot issue, Dr. Obot Essien Antia-Obong was granted some reprieve. But when the case was resumed, Dr. Antia-Obong showed no remorse and that angered the presiding judge to convict him of gross dereliction of duty. Thereafter the National Medical Commission unanimously decided to remove Dr. Antia-Obong's name from the Medical Register of Medical Practitioners and Dentists Ordinance for a period of two years with of course the right to appeal within 21 days for the restoration of his name. Shortly afterwards, both Dr. Udo Udoma and Dr. Antia-Obong met with the Hon Sir Kofo Abayomi who expressed his utter disappointment at Dr. Antia-Obong's comportment and behaviour before and during the trial. He explained that members of the Committee were disposed to give Dr. Antia-Obong a soft landing but later, they changed their minds. Thereafter the Chairman Dr. G. M. M. Menzies in a firm voice addressed Dr. Antia-Obong and pronounced the unanimous verdict of the Medical Disciplinary Committee to the effect that his name be removed from the Medical Register. It was a slap in the face of IBIBIO STATE UNION, an event that humiliated and brought disrepute to the UNION.

But thanks to the wisdom and vision of the later Military Heads of State be ral Gowon and in tow general Muritala Muhammed, General Ibrahim B. Babangida and General Sani Abacha who not only restored the regions but created more states. General Ironsi also abolished all the Regions in Nigeria replacing them with groups of Provinces thus bringing into existence eg. UYO PROVIINCE, ANNANG PROVINCE, OPOBO PROVINCE, and EKET PROVINCE etc. and so ended the IBIBIO STATE UNION with the mushrooming of ethnic antagonistic nationalities as “atomistic societies perpetually at war with each other”. What a pity! Perhaps it will be beneficial to reproduce here verbatim some relevant portions of that infamous Edict that nailed and obliterated the IBIBIO STATE UNION from the face of the earth. It was to silence forever the great UNION of nationalities in AKWA IBOM:

Fellow Nigerians, during the past two weeks, I presided over Meetings of the Supreme Military Council and the Central Executive Council at which many important State matters were considered…It is now three months since the Government of the Federal Republic of Nigeria was handed over to the Armed Forces. Now that peace has been restored in the troubled areas it is time that the Military Government indicates clearly what it proposes to accomplish before relinquishing power. The provisions of the Decree are intended to remove last vestiges of the intense regionalism of the recent past and to produce that cohesion in the governmental structure, which is so necessary in achieving and maintaining the paramount objective of the National Military Government and indeed of every true Nigerian, namely, national unity. The highlights of this Decree are as follows: the former Regions are abolished, and Nigeria grouped into a number of territorial areas called PROVINCES. Nigeria ceases to be what has been described as a Federation. It's now become simply the Republic of Nigeria. A military Governor is assigned to a group of Provinces over of which and subject to a direction and control of the Head National Military Government (NMG), he shall exercise executive power. The National Military Government having committed itself to this task is firmly resolved to conclude it, and will not be diverted from, or obstructed. in, the fulfillment of this objectives by the activities or political maneuvers of any society, party, union or association. Part of our task is the removal of politics based on tribal affiliations, which as everybody knows, have manifested political intrigues, or have been used as bases for party-political propaganda. This leads me to the removal of the second obstacle on the way for which provision has been made in the Public Order Degree 1966, which I have signed today and which comes into operation forthwith, dissolving all Organization of the type scheduled therein, and banning any manifestation of their political purpose. These organizations have been dissolved and will be buried along with the tribal, sectional and regional bitterness, which they engendered. Certain types of associations and organizations are unaffected and will remain so. It is a cardinal aim of my government to foster the growth of town development union, membership of which should be open to all inhabitant of a particular town irrespective of their tribal origin. I want, however, to leave no doubt in the mind of anybody, that the provision of this Decree will certainly be enforced (Cf. Major General Johnson Aguiyi-Ironsi's Broadcast, May 24, 1966-Tell Magazine: 2011, 16-17).

All these can be found in the famous Nyong Essien Library, the books of which are now treasured and securely stocked at the University of Uyo Library, Akwa Ibom State. Obviously one wonders how it happened that it should have found itself there. But being a sage such as he was and because nobody, and more so those of his time and pedigree ever conjectured or even dreamt of Nigeria ending in a civil war, yet he had preserved for posterity this treasure - the copy of the Minutes of the IBIBIO STATE UNION (1928-37) safe and sound in his library then located at his home, Issiet Ekim. But since he knew that the URUAN nation was not a bona fide registered member of the UNION as such, the civil war notwithstanding, yet he viewed that that nobody of URUAN nationality would be interested let alone treat and take care of the library for what it stood for. Therefore, before his demise and in his Will, he donated out this famous and often talked about "Nyong Essien Library" (21) to what has now become the University of Uyo which then was a mere College of Education, an ATTC for that matter. This had since metamorphosed into the University of Cross River State during which time the library was officially handed over under Prof. Donald Ekong as Vice Chancellor. This matter has come up for mention here to



IBIBIO ORIGINS vis-a-vis AKWA IBOM STATE

We cannot therefore successfully close this article on the IBIBIO STATE UNION without looking at the very people usually referred to as the Ibibios. Because the very creation of Akwa Ibom State was at the instance of Ibibios who form the core tribe of Akwa Ibom State and who had inhabited the earlier founded country by the great URUAN peoples called IBOM, now renamed Arochukwu. All the nationalities and clans now in Akwa Ibom state had lived in this great country and URUAN cradle land of settlement once they had immigrated from USAHAEDET in Western Cameroun and had settled there years before the Christian era. On 19th December 1953 following the failure of the Lyttleton London Conference of 1951 to usher in a new Constitution for the emergence of the Nigerian State as an Independent nation, the Executive members of the Ibibio State Union and Paramount Rulers to wit. Sir Ethelbert/Egbert Udo Udoma – 2nd General President General (after HRM Nsomm J. U. Afia and Leader Hon Nyong Essien), Obong Ntuen Ibok - Obong Ikpa Isong Ibibio, Opobo, Obong Robert Umoinyang- Vice President, Obong Sampson Udo Etuk-Provincial Officer, Obong Okon Udo Ndok – URUAN, Obong N. U. Akpan - Ikot Ekpene, Mr. Leo E. Essien Uyo, 1st Manager of Ibibio State College, (my English Master 1951 @ HFC Abak and later Supervisor of RCM Schools), Edidem Thomson Udo Akpabio - Eket, Prof Sylvester J. Una – Uyo, erstwhile Principal of Ibibio State College and later Provost ATTC Uyo, Obong Jimmy E. Ukpana - Etim Ekpo, Obong Sampson Udo Idiong - Ukanafun, Obong E. E. Uquak –Abak, Obong Denis Udo Inyang-ONNA, Obong Mbom Etuk –Ibadan Branch, Chief Anthony George Umoh - Itu, Secretary General, Obong I. Amah 2nd National President, Mr. B.O. Mbiam – Northern Conference, Obong Ekpenyong Udo Ekong –Offot - Uyo, Obong Harry A. Ekanem –Opobo (Ibekwe) Obong Joseph M. Ito – Ikot Ekpene, Obong Dick E. Usen – Ikpa Ibom, Barrister Dan A. Eno Legal Adviser including others also in attendance and representing Calabar, Rivers and Ogoja viz: Professor Eyo Ita, Bishop D. Davis Manuel, Chief Bell R. Jack, Dr. Okoi Arikpo, Prince S. A. Takon, Chief M. T. Mbu, Chief Andrew Bassey as also other ex-officio members met at the Catholic School Grounds Afaha Oku since Chief Effiong Okon Eyo a.k.a Eyo UYO had also with the connivance of the colonial Police DPO Uyo organized a parallel NCNC Conference at the Uyo Provincial Assembly – Barracks Road, which was the venue originally scheduled for the Rally and for which Police permit had been denied.

The two parallel Meetings were of course to brain storm to produce Memoranda in preparation for the forth-coming Nigeria Constitutional Conference scheduled to take place in Lagos come January 1954. In fact according to Sir Udo Udoma, Mr. C.S. Smith, the Colonial PPO Calabar after discovering that the large concourse of representatives of the COR Movement were indeed men of high integrity and distinction as also some of the finest characters in Calabar Province whose contributions to the public service of Nigeria had been openly acknowledged by Her Majesty's Government of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, personally apologized for what the Uyo Police Authority had done and granted them leave to continue their meeting unmolested. But E. O. Eyo out of desperation informed the Police Detachment at Uyo that Dr. Udo Udoma was indeed planning a Revolution in Eastern Nigeria, yet neither the Police nor the Authorities acquiesced knowing that the said E. O. Eyo was far wrong in his speculations since his fear was that once the COR State Movement was successfully launched at Uyo his own NCNC Constituency would be immeasurably drowned. Towards that goal, the Ibibio State Union had devoted a good deal of its attention and resources becoming as it were the forerunner of the creation of Akwa Ibom State.

Thus the new State created by the Military President Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida on 23rd September, 1987 was given the name AKWA IBOM STATE precisely on account of this incontrovertible historical fact. But while on a very auspicious occasion, precisely at a Convocation, Prof. Emmanuel A. Ayandele, erstwhile Vice Chancellor of the Federal University of Calabar which was until then a Campus of the University of Nigeria Nsukka (UNN) had described the people as they behaved and often saw themselves in their various ethnic unions as 'an atomistic society' to wit unions of ethnic nationalities, and he was obviously correct being an eminent historian that he was. The very title and nomenclature IBIBIO to all intents and purposes is a linguistic term and on all accounts it seems to be so from the conclusions of ethnologists, historians, anthropologists, colonial administrators, religious writers and even explorers of the African continent notwithstanding. There are controversies as to whether the Ibibios should be regarded as simply those who speak a series of dialects which are ethnically related, a people, though of one kindred stock, but of which stock in trade seems to be that of disunity. It was this that prompted Ayandele to say so in the first place and which has also brought about the social, political, educational, religious and economic disintegration of these groups till today. Yet we are all aware of the adage that "a house divided against itself cannot stand." That is why their daily wranglings among themselves as if they were distinct nationalities and tribes: ORON, Eket, Okobo, URUAN, Annang, EFIK, Offot, Etoi, Nsit, Ibiono etc.; yet such displays and wranglings cannot help or foster any unity of purpose among them.

As often happens this sort of disunity often results in mistrust, victimization of one another, nepotism, stigmatization of one group or another as inferior, stupid, backward or even uncivilized whether in their attitudes, actions or utterances which are often provocative. One recalls this episode of discriminatory tendency and divisive spirit at the height of the demands for the creation of separate states during the military rule of General Muritala Mohammed and later General Ibrahim Babangida. Whereas nationalities like the Yoruba were soon to get Ogun, Osun, Ondo, Ekiti and Oyo States while the Igbo got Anambra Enugu, Ebonyi, Abia and Imo States, Cross River had to remain so for a long time because of their open mistrust and hostilities between one section and the other. No wonder why these atomistic societies buttressed their claim of separate nationalities by some claiming that their ancestors originated in Palestine while others claimed Egypt, Ghana, the Sudan, or even Igbo land, etc. But I think Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe had debunked this sort of claims when he said that there were more than twenty dialectical groups in Igbo land and some of these dialects could be quite unintelligible to most Igbo because Mbamili, Aniocha, Anidinma, Ukwani, Nsukka, Udi, Agwu, Awka, Onitsha, Ogbaru, Abakaliki, Afikpo, Okigwe, Orlu, Owerri, Mbaise, Ngwa, Bende, Abriba, Ohafia, Abam and Etche were from a dialect of groups of Igbo nationalities and yet regard themselves as one people, from one stock – the Ibo race. We seem to ignore the pre-colonial cultural affinities and also the names of these founding fathers with those ancient names of their ancestors; we even ignore clans and villages such as Afaha which are spread all over Akwa Ibom State and Cross River. We also ignore the fact that ethnic dialectical groups are found all over Africa and Ibibio as such cannot be the exception. We have gone into all these to establish the fact that we cannot escape the fact of linguistics in the analysis of the Ibibio. It is my view that the building of any nation must start at the grass-roots - the family, the village, the clan and the ethnic linguistic group, then the nation unfolds. If people who are ethnically related begin to argue unwittingly about their separate entities, then no national unity and cohesion can ever be achieved and no nation can ever be built. In URUAN for example the North claims to be separate being form the Iboku tribe and ancestry, similarly the Central has its own claim from Ibonda, the South from Mutaka and so on. Although there are superficial differences in the dialects and verbal usages, URUAN cannot claim that they are not from a common origin. Unity is the key to progress, prosperity and advancement of any people while disunity carries with it strife, hatred, nepotism and domination and often ends in war and bloodshed. God forbid!

WHO ARE THE IBIBIOS THEN?

Quite unlike URUAN, the origin of the Ibibio is not so straightforward and like the Efik nomenclature is not original. From all accounts no ethnic group or kindred was ever known by the title "Ibibio". It came from those who noted these large amorphous ethnic nationalities because originally they only knew and called themselves by the names of their clans eg, Eket, Itam, Iman, Offot, Ibiono, Ikono, Annang etc. There was no common name for the entire group. That is why we have relied on linguistics to enable us say who the Ibibios are. The first intimations regarding the cultural and linguistic identification of this ethnic group in Nigeria were first mooted in AD 1777 by Christian G.A Oldendorps, an American missionary working in Sierra Leone at the time. While in the West Indies and before his arrival in Sierra Leone he had noticed the language of a large segment of slaves of African origin in America which they distinguished as the Moko people. Here in Africa he placed all the ethnic nationalities near the Ijaw of new Calabar as "Moko people" and distinguished them the people of Igbo and Ijaw. That epithet is derived from the answer to the question *"omokop"? (Do you hear?) Which was often used by these slaves when their white slave masters said something to them, and they would ask one another "omokop"? To which the other would answer "mokop"! Which sounded to their masters as "moko",* hence the designation moko people of Africa? Thus this became their name as far as the Americans were concerned. That is also the reason why the early Europeans also who lived among the Andoni and others who visited the West Coast viz Kwa, Ibeno, Oron, Calabar etc. called the people "moko people". Identifying this group of blacks in the Caribbean Oldendorps (Cf. Christian G.A. Oldendorps, 345-347) collected the vocabularies and made this comparison:

GERMAN	ENGLISH	MOKO (West Indies)	IBIBIO (S. S. NIGERIA)
EIN	ONE	KIA	KEED
ZWEI	TWO	IBA	IBA
DREI	THREE	ITA	ITA
VIER	FOUR	INANG	INANG
FUMF	FIVE	UTION	ITION
SECHS	SIX	ITIUEKEE	ITIOKEED

There are other nick-names by which the Ibibios were called before finally settling with the sobriquet Ibibio simply because before the 16th century when the early European explorers touched down on the shores of West Africa all these people were said to have lived in their separate ethnic but contiguous communities around the territory stretching from Andoni near Bonny to the West, to the coast and the boundary between Calabar and the Cameroons to the East without any name by which they referred to themselves as a whole. It would also seem that since they could understand one another's dialect, and these early expatriate, mostly European writers also noticed that they understood themselves, small wonder then that hey logically came to the conclusion that they all spoke the same African dialect and by implication Ibibio language. The word Ibibio therefore on all counts is the name given collectively to the indigenous inhabitants of the territory living in the South-Southern Nigeria along the easterly bank of Ikot Abasi (Opobo) River stretching from the estuary of the Imo River and flowing into the Atlantic Ocean. It continues westerly separating it from the Cross River State of Nigeria as far as the International boundary which separates Nigeria from the Cameroun Republic. To complete the designation, the main Ibibio territory runs through the coastal sea-board including the Bight of Bonny (Biafara) and runs along the whole of the southern coast extending to Itu River which separates it from Arochukwu. Akwa Ibomites are a coastal people so to speak, and the territory is well watered beginning with the Kwa-Iboe ie. Akwa Ibom River which runs through the land with numerous tributaries, rivulets, creeks and streams for over 90 Km before emptying itself into the Atlantic Ocean. There is also the great land mass extending through the Cross River (River Cross) known from ancient times as AKWA AKPA URUAN as discussed above (Egbert Udo Udoma, 1-2).

The major Ibibio sub-groupings from this designation include the Uyo, Itu, Eket, Etinan, Ikot Abasi, Mkpat Enin with the sub-tribes of Uruan, Oron, Annang and some communities in the settlements along the Cross River estuary separating them from URUAN and the EFIK. The Central Ibibio includes sub-tribes and clans in former Opobo, Eket, Itu and Uyo divisions viz Ibeno, Oniong Ndem, Obodom (Eastern Obolo) Ibiono, Itam, Offot, Etoi, Oku, Ikono, Itak, Iman, Ibesikpo, Nsit, Ubium and Asutan. But it is interesting to note that Robertson McKeon quoted above one of the early European travelers to West Africa in 1819 had described this territory as the "Kingdom of Qua/Kwa, ie. kingdom of the Ibibio. The kingdom of Kwa is bounded on the West by the Branch of the Banee a.k.a Bonny River called St. Anthony, on the South by the Atlantic Ocean, on the East by Rio del Rey, and the North by Acrikock a.k.a Okrika. Old Calabar is the principal town. Acrikock lies in the interior of Banee where the traders of Banee and Calabar Resort for oil and other commodifies especially the new TINAPA RESORT constructed by the amiable indigene of Calabar, Gov. Donald Duke which are brought down the Niger, the salt and other articles being carried up in turn (Robertson McKeon, 31).

It should also be noted that for these early Europeans, the entire area was seen as contiguous and with the type communication the people employed it was logical to regard them as a kingdom considering that Okrika though Ijaw speaking people is situated near Bonny and Okrika shares a common boundary with Andoni ie. Obolo/Obodom most of the inhabitants of these areas being fishermen. Also at the time 1819, Robertson wrote, Rio del Rey was correctly the boundary separating the Ibibio (Nigeria) territory from the Cameroun; whereas in 1884 Germany declared a Protectorate over the Cameroun and in 1891 the Cameroun River and Rio del Rey (Ndit? Eka iba = the two Rivers) were excised from the Oil Rivers Protectorate established by the British Government since the two rivers were within the territorial sovereignty of Germany. Then after the World War I (1914-1917) the area came under the British Government administration as a Trust Territory under the United Nations Mandate. Surely, we learnt about all these in Primary IV History class of those old good days when History was an interesting subject taught even in the Primary School system.

The name Ibibio is derived from Agbisherea or Egbo Shary which was used to designate the Ibibios by the Europeans according to an account by John Barbot who visited the Calabar River for some trade transactions on the coast about this time (William Baikie Balfour; 319-320;351.) But this name could have predated the 16th century. However, the name is a Europeanized corruption of two words either "Ekpo esiere" Ekpo/Egbo being a euphemism for 'you' understood or ekpo masquerade to signify that it is dawn for ekpo play to begin. Or, it could also be derived from the normal 'good morning 'greeting which the Europeans could easily have picked up from the person who was greeting his fellow slave such that if the person being greeted did not hear at first, another person who had heard the greeting would repeat saying "Ebo esiere" meaning 'he said to you "good morning"! Which in the European's ear must have sounded 'Egbo Shary/ Agbisherea'? In other words, the Ibibios are those who greet people "Ebo esiere"-anglicized "Egbo Shary/Agbisherea". Or again, it could also imply that the Ibibio slave broker was advising the slaves to always "say Good morning = "Ibo bo" ie. "Always say: Emesiere" …. to your European masters, meaning "You (plural), always say 'Good morning'" (to them). At this time apart from Calabar, Bonny was another headquarters of the trade where most of the slaves from what is now Rivers, Bayelsa and Akwa Ibom States of Nigeria were shipped to the West Indies. By 1850 the name Ibibio had spread to Calabar and was therefore also used by both the EFIK and the Igbo or Aros. According to M.D.W. Jeffreys, the word could come from two different terminations ibio (country/bush) and gbo – bio = slave joined to form Ibibio ie. bush/ country people (slave)= slave/people from the bush or countryside (M.D.W/. Jeffreys; 16-17).

Yet others notably Edet A. Udoh argue rather, and this seems to be the most likely in consequence of the slave trade in the 1500s-1800s before the colonization of West Africa, that the word IBIBIO is no doubt derived from two words ibo-bio = I say, kill (him/it), ie. kill the recalcitrant slave. As we can notice, all the foregoing arose from the instance of the slave masters who tried to identify the various West African slaves from their languages, and in this case the Ibibios. The killing of stubborn and unprofitable slaves by their slave masters is a known recurring decimal, so to say, and in ordering their beheading, all that was required would normally be to order the task master to carry out the act: "he says you should behead/kill him: "ebo bio" (enye = slave). In Ibibio land the use of the word "beheading" is a household word because whether in the slaughtering of animals or killing of human beings, the act was done simply with one stroke of the matchete as this illustrated good marksmanship, bravery and valour, talents which the Ibibios seem to value most in their culture and this was often applauded. In fact, members of the Ek? society and Ekpo Ny?h? masquerades were highly respected for their bravery, gallantry and valour and those who could behead with one stroke of the matchet were given titles of honour. During warfare such men were decorated with the title of Otu Ekong/ Obio Ekong. At funerals of members of Ekpo Ny?h? the bereaved wives were expected to donate a goat each for the funeral entertainments and as the masquerades congregated and a select group of experts appointed to slaughter the goats, the heads of goats belonged to the masquerade beheaders. Should a masquerade miss it at the first stroke, such would be accounted guilty of cowardice and would never be conscripted to defend the land in times of an emergency such as war with a neighbouring village or another ethnic group; they could even lose their prestige and respect among the citizenry.

That may well account for the use of the word" ebo bio" ENYE on the slave ships. In fact during the slave trade era when daring slaves tried to escape from their Ibibio captors, the latter would cry out to the public "ibo-bio in?", ie. behead him for me please! such that the European slave dealers and the early missionaries as well as the URUAN/EFIK slave brokers on hearing this often nicknamed them as IBIBIO people. Udo rejects the earlier derivative also from two Ibibio words: Ibio –ibio = "sharp sharp ie. short, brief and precise," = "cut short" etc. The Ibibios are said to do things" sharp sharp," in very brief, direct and precise ways; their language spoken phonetically is brief too. Even one can notice that one Ibibio word could stand for more than two different things, the meaning depending upon how the word is accented or pronounced. eg. O b o n g / ?b? stands for at least five different things viz. mosquito, he/she shouts, cane Chief/ Paramount Ruler, pimple etc. Hence Ibibio stands for "the people who do things in a precise, brief manner. Later the soubriquet covered all of the Central Ibibio now in Akwa Ibom State of Nigeria. Thus the soubriquet IBIBIO now stands out in bold relief, hence the general designation IBIBIO for all those ethnic nationalities who could understand one another in this way. It therefore seems altogether likely that by the 18th century the designation of the people as IBIBIO had gained wide currency. John Adams one of the slave dealers has remarked that whenever an insurgency took place on board a slave ship at Bonny, they (Ibibios) were always found to be the ring leaders, and the only slaves concerned in it while the Heebos (Igbos) remained passive spectators (Adams, John; 132). Also commenting on some of the inhabitants of Arochukwu country William Baikie had noted that some of them came from" the country known to the traders as Egboshary near the Cross River and this is the Efik name for the place ie. IBIBIO AREA (W. B. Baikie, 320). But later on in the last century, Robert M'Keown observed that of all the Cross River peoples, the Ibibios are "probably the stock native from whom most of the small tribes in the Qua Iboe and Calabar have sprung" (M'Keown R. 12-13).

The Ibibios concerned with in this article are reputed to number over six million (2004/5 Census) and constitute the fourth largest ethnic group in Nigeria. In spite of cultural and dialectical variations among the communities as a result of emigrational and environmental differences as also the absence of any visible unifying force they still constitute a composite unity. Recently with the institution of Akwa Esop Ima Isong Ibibio in 1980 with a central authority, though very loose, ie. the NTISONG representing a quasi - monarch or eponym, there has been some semblance of magnetic attraction to wield the ethnic groups together. Therefore, the Ibibio without doubt constitute an ethnic group eqiperative of a national state in Nigeria with abundance of shared common characteristics like basic language, common background of culture, cultural heritage, a common belief in the Supreme Being, Abasi Ibom and a highly developed common outlook of life. It is therefore correct to describe the Ibibio as a nation of which sense Nigeria as presently constituted can appropriately be described as a Country of different nationalities. The formation of the Ibibio State Union discussed above has been indeed the first ever attempt at the unification of a united people, viz the Ibibio. It was historically an occasion and a heartwarming experiment of a political socio-cultural and institutional organization which really turned out to be an overwhelming success in modern Nigeria, but sad the war killed it.

EVOLUTION AND ORIGINS OF EKET PEOPLES

Eket must be specifically treated here because it is veritably a unique component of the Ibibio race. Eket which should be pronounced as E K I T or Ekid/Ek?d really means in IBIBIO "ammö ekit" = they see because Eket people and the rest of the Ibibio call them EKIT, but was anglicized to EKET by the early European merchants just as in the case of Itung/Ituk Mbang in URUAN now anglicized to Ituk Mbang, Eto obodom in Eastern Nsit – Nsit Atai to Eto Obolom, and these names have come to stay. The name Eket came about because when the entire immigrants from IBOM country of origin arrived in the area they heard and saw for the first time the unmistakable sound of "ocean breakers" on the shores of what later came to be known as IBENO, a coastal town in former Eket Division. On seeing and hearing this, and since they could not understand what it was, the people dispatched some few of them from their group to find out and these returned to explain what they had just seen and heard; hence the name EKIT for what they actually saw ie. the "ocean breakers". This area of ocean breakers and portion of land invariably came into being as a destination and nomenclature which never had existed. It has since become the destination and evolution of a people later to be christened Eket peoples ie. "those of the group who were sent 'to see' together with the entire group". But besides, Ekit people were described by the early Europeans as a warlike IBIBIO people. In fact, they often bobbed up trouble with these Europeans and gave much trouble to the British Officers who had tried to take their land by force as the British always did any way. There was no city state the British did not subdue and hoist their UNION Jack Flag without the use of military force. But Eket people were equal to the task because they were the most sporting tribe imaginable.

According to the erstwhile Eket District Officer, Sir A.C. Douglas, the British Colonial District Officer of Eket at the time, "the British had to make at least seven military expeditions to reduce them to size" (Douglas. A. C. Letter to Talbot P. A. Feb, 1914: In Life in Southern Nigeria, 293). Eket people are such who would say with the Romans after the words of their celebrated Emperor Constantine: Veni, vidi, vinci; because they are masterful and can look anybody eyeball to eyeball, and they are also very straightforward and act with precision. They incidentally speak a dialect akin to ORON, nevertheless, they are part and parcel of the core IBIBIO. Still to be included among the other definitive core peoples of Eket are the Awa Ibibio now designated with the acronym as ONNA.

THE ONNA CLAN - ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION

ONNA in the old Calabar Province was known as "Ibibio Awa" ie. a scion of the Ibibio race. In his documentary on Ibibio peoples, Professor Monday Effiong Noah, one of the pioneer indigenous graduates of the early 1960s whom I later employed while as the Education Secretary of Catholic Schools in 1967 at St. Theresa's Girls Secondary School with late Rev. Sr. Mary Joseph Okoro (HHC) as Principal, has sketched the History of the Ibibio race observing that the Ibibio are the fourth largest ethnic group in Nigeria next to the Igbo, Yoruba and Hausa. The Ibibio are located in the South South of Nigeria whose geo-political area lies between longitudes 725 and 825 East of the Greenwich Meridian and between latitudes 433 and 533 North of the Equator. They share borders North and East with the Ekoi; in the East with the Igbo of Abia State and in the West with the Rivers State while the Bight of Bonny washes the Southern borders. The coastline stretching from the Akpayafe River at the Nigeria-Cameroun Republic borders in the East and Andoni Riverine the West which is a distance of about 130 kilometres from the southern coastline of Ibeno extending as far as Itu Mbon-uso, Nkari and Iwerre in INI Local Government Area bordering Arochukwu. ONNA an Ibibio community as part and parcel of the Ibibio originally consisted of three autonomous clans but with the advent of the British colonization of Nigeria in 1861 and in respect of their affinity integrated them into one administrative political unit – the Ibibio Awa. Sandwiched between Iman clan in the North, the Atlantic Ocean in the South, the Qua Iboe River in the East and Ukpum - Ikpa Clans in the West this community with their feudal kingdoms later became known as Oniong Nung Ndem and Awa Native Authority(ONNA) under the ancient Opobo Division. Then when the Military Government of Nigeria under Col Yakubu Gowon created twelve states among them the South Eastern State of Nigeria, the N.A. was grouped under the new political Eket Division. But in 1989 the Military Administration of Gen Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida made it an autonomous Local Government Authority under the new name ONNA comprising forty-two (42) autonomous communities with Headquarters at Abat. ONNA is located on the Qua Iboe River, one of the nineteen important rivers which water the shores of Nigeria. Located on the Niger Delta, the Qua Iboe River meanders north-south-west and empties itself into the Atlantic Ocean in the Bight of Bonny.

ONNA is therefore a water shed territory with many swamps and streams about twenty plus flowing into the creeks with gigantic mangrove trees along the coastal areas in luxuriant foliage of various tints with dry land mass embracing the primary villages and those on the shores embracing sort of the secondary villages. ONNA has produced some of the most important personalities in Nigeria including the first General Manager of the Nigerian Central Bank and first Civilian Governor of Cross River State, Chief Clement Nyong Isong CFR, Hon Awaekpo MHR, Hon Thomas Ekpo Etuk – Etesis MHR, Chief (Hon) Ndaeyo Uttah Speaker, CRSA, Prof I.I. Ukpong CON - SSG CRS, Mrs. (Prof) Affiong Abasiattai – Hon Comm. Elder Engr. Mkpoette Effanga – Hon Comm. Obong Ufot Ekaette CFR – SGF, Senator (Lady) Eme Ufot Ekaette etc, but not to be easily forgotten His Eminence, Akwa Edidem (Dr) Akpabio Udo Ukpa, JP, FCE the current OKU IBOM III of AKWA ESOP IMAISONG IBIBIO and Paramount Ruler of ONNA.

WRITERS ON THE IBIBIO LAND, LANGUAGE & CULTURE

As expected the Scottish Missionaries notably Revs. H. M. Waddell and Hugh Goldie spent most of their missionary years (1846-1906) working among the EFIK as doing otherwise would have meant deviating from a policy and purpose of the EFIK who had invited them to Old Calabar. (Waddell, H.M, Twenty-nine years, viii) For almost 60 years (1846-1906) they failed to get into the heartland of Ibibio land as this would have inevitably warranted transferring their headquarters from Calabar to a more central station in Ibibio country. But more so because the EFIK were determined to monopolize as they always did in the case of the booming slave and merchandise trade, and contact with the Europeans also. So neither evangelization nor extension work like opening up any station in the Ibibio country was embarked upon even though they had a thorough knowledge of the riverine Ibibio. That is why Rev. Hope Waddell in writing that his book in 1863(H.M. Waddell, 309) only concerned himself with the Efik whereas if he had penetrated inland and opened stations worked among the Ibibio he would have included them in his book. In 1874 Rev H. Goldie published the first Efik/English-English/EfikDictionary (H. Goldie, 356 – 358). But by 1904 the Scottish Mission penetration was definitely stopped due to the scramble for the hinterland which among others brought about the demarcation of Western Ibibio (Etinan, Eket) for the Qua Iboe Mission, Central Ibibio (Uyo, Annang, including Oron etc) for the United Methodist Mission, Catholic Mission and Lutheran Mission (Udo E.A, 27).

In 1894 Sir Roger Casement (R. Casement, 1895, 36), a British Consul-explorer who undertook the exploration of the hinterland of Ibibio speaking areas on behalf of the colonial Government as also Sir H. Johnston, another British Consul for South-Eastern Nigeria grouped the Efik, Annang, Eket, Ibeno, Eastern Andoni, Efiat, Ebughu, Oron and Central Ibibio as coming from the same semi-Bantu, ie. Ibibio stock (H. Johnston, A .1-14). Later, the Europeans who really traversed Ibibio land and studied both the language and Ibibio culture were the scholar-administrators including G.I.Jones the Anthropologist,(Jones, G.I.& Forde Daryll, 67-92). Major A.G. Leonard\, the Administrative Officer (Cf. Leonard, Arthur Glynn, 17), P.A.Talbot both Anthropologist and Administrative Officers,(P.Amaury Talbot.184-185) Prof. M.D.W Jeffreys, Anthropologist and Administrative Officer, (M.D.W Jeffreys, 1-3) Also E.N. Mylius, Political Officer, (E.N. Mylius, Intelligence Report, No 27627,) Anthropologist Daryll Forde and Consul Thomas Hutchinson.(T.J. Hutchinson,38) More recently also an American linguist, Prof. Joseph Greenberg who located the central Benue Valley as the ultimate area of Bantu origin included the Ibibio, the Efik, the Annang, the Oron, Ibeno and the Andoni among others as Bantoids speaking similar dialects.(GreenbergJ.H.38) Later on still, two other Nigerian scholars Profs. K.O.Dike and J.C. Anne shared the same views about the Ibibio with these world authorities arguing that both the Ibibio and the Efik were ethnically related (Cf. Dike, K.O. Trade, 24. Anene J.C. 48). We have mentioned the above authors on the Ibibio because even though by 1842 the slave trade had been abolished in Efik territory and slavery was completely outlawed throughout Nigeria in 1901, the Efik community regarding themselves "as a civilized cosmopolitan and heterogeneous community continued to look down on the Ibibio as slaves, un-educated and unexposed (Udo, E.A. 29).

What we can read into that period of the slave trade (1500-1906) is that the Efik due to that early Western influence in economy, education, even in their cultural, judicial and legal systems they began to invade as it were by opening up several "Calabar markets" along the coasts in Ibibio countryside. This further fueled up recriminations, hatred and discrimination between them and the Ibibio and therefore led to many controversies as to whether or not the Efik were ethnically related to the Ibibio and from where the Efik and their ethnic groups originally descended. Before long these wranglings and claims of places of origin extended to the Oron, Ibeno, Eket, Andoni and Annang sub-groups also. The confusions and claims and counter claims eventually resulted in the setting up of a Commission of Enquiry to look into the disputes as to where the Obong of Calabar could be elected from (A.K. Hart, Official Document No.17, para.65). At a time when tribal politics plagued this country, all these could be understandable because there were certain ethnic groups who, using political weapons and their numerical strength in the parliament tried though unsuccessfully to dismember, even to the point of obliterating other ethnic groups and institutions using both politics and academics to incorporate them into their ethnic kingdoms and fiefdoms.

ETHNIC ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION OF ANNANG
ANNANG WORLDVIEW vis-à-vis AFE ANNANG

THE GREAT ANNANG PEOPLES OF ANCIENT DREAMS

We cannot do justice to this Chapter if we failed to bring into the picture those others who also settled at Ibom after emigrating from USAHAEDET a.k.a EDIK AFAHA. They were the Ibibio and Annang speaking peoples which nomenclature came much later on. These are the people who now inhabit the great Land of Promise viz. the Annangs and Ibibios of Akwa Ibom State of Nigeria. This is to complete as it were, the mosaic analysis of the events that have overtaken us before people begin to now glibly talk about "our Oron people", "our Eket people", "our Ibiono Ibom people", etc. and here by implication, also "our Annang people", all of whom are now happily settled in AKWA IBOM STATE, but which STATE and whence AKWA IBOM are we talking about? Yes, because all these peoples and kindreds had settled in IBOM country before their exodus to now AKWA IBOM STATE after the not to-be-forgotten hostilities launched against them by the same descendants of ancient URUAN ATAKPO remnants now turned AROS or ancient Uruan-Igbo speaking peoples for short, whose forefathers had founded and inhabited the great IBOM country in the first place. But for the not-to-be-forgotten incomprehensible and inexplicable event; that sad and what could have been avoided Nigerian civil war (1967-70) which has left this great country of good forebodings that climaxed in the 1960 celebrations of the evolution of the Nigerian State as an independent nation of our dream prostrate. Nobody, and I repeat, nobody could ever have come to contemplate, not to talk of anticipating most of the events or would I say calamities that had befallen and have continued to rubbish Nigeria as a result of this unique occurrence in the chequered history of this great country, the centenary celebration of which is now in the offing for the auspicious year 2014, and which also I have proposed as the year by divine Grace, that this book will be in your hands, Deo volunte.

These people, and there was a certain time in world history ie. all the peoples of Annang nation, when they were not grouped together to be known by that name or by any other name as a united ethnic people. They were simply clanal ethnic and kindred groups like the people of Ika, Ukana, Ukanafun, Adiasim, Abak, Ikot Ekpene, Etim Ekpo, Nto Edino, Afaha Obong, Midim, etc. Incidentally, and from a no greater authoritative personality, His Royal Highness, Obong Augustus Asiak, the Paramount Ruler of this same great kingdom, Ikot Ekpene of yore, when interviewed about his great empire and Ikot Ekpene territory as also Annang country had among others told me with bated breath and evident annoyance that somebody or institution in Akwa Ibom, for whatever dignity, position of authority, or whatever he must have claimed to be or have, had the imprudence and temerity to exclude ancient Ikot Ekpene kindred and kingdom as not belonging to the recognized clans in Annang country. What a calamity and sad commentary on the audacity, of pride and of prejudice of a jaundiced nincompoop!

There weren't even groupings or such clans like ORUK ANAM, OBOT AKARA, and ESSIEN UDIM etc. which have now been gazzetted as Local Government Areas in the Federal Republic of Nigeria. Today the whole of Annang country which was comprised of only IKOT EKPENE and ABAK districts in the colonial era a.k.a Local Government Authority/Area in modern Nigerian Constitution, has been regrouped into IKOT EKPENE, ABAK, UKANAFUN, OBOT AKARA, ESSIEN UDIM, ETIM EKPO, and IKA Local Government Areas. For, just like the Ibibio nation, these people of Annang later had joined to become part and parcel of what was designated and known as the IBIBIO STATE UNION, brought about by no other personalities of the MAINLAND as it was called in those days of the 1920s, and 1930s in contradistinction to Calabar and URUAN than the two great URUAN/EFIK sons, the legendary (Chief) the Honourable Nyong Essien as also that cerebral lawyer and chieftain, His Royal Majesty, Edidem Atakpor James U. Afia. The Annangs were those who formed part of the Afaha group in USAHAEDET together with some villages and towns of which also bear that name viz. Afaha Obong, Afaha Ikot Ebak, Afaha Esang, etc. It is also instructive that in the Minutes Book under reference, prominence was given to the parts played by late Robert U. Umo-Inyang of Ikot Ekpene as the General Secretary of the Ibibio State Union and also that the original home and headquarters of the Union was Ikot Ekpene where late Mr. James U. Eka, the foundation president was a School Headmaster under the Primitive Methodist Mission of which Rev. Dr. A. J. Groves was then Minister and General Superintendent of Schools. Tradition however also has it that prior to the formation of the Ibibio Welfare Union in 1928 which in that same year also, precisely on April 1928, metamorphosed into the IBIBIO STATE UNION. But there was actively in existence an organization of Uyo, Etinan, Abak, Itu, Ikot Ekpene and Eket peoples known as the IBIBIO MAINLAND ASSOCIATION in the mainland territory of the Old Calabar Province, now AKWA IBOM STATE. There was also formed in Calabar city in 1927 an organization known as IBIBIO UNION formed by the joint effort of the people from the areas mentioned above. It is also revealing that on the 15th of February 1937, Sir W.E. Hunt, the then Chief Commissioner, Eastern Provinces of Nigeria in the company of Mr. G.G. Shute, the Private Secretary to His Honour, Sir G.A.L. Guise, the D.O. of Ikot Ekpene, Mr. J.W. Hartley and the Assistant D O, Mr. N.A.P. McKenzie came all the way from ENUGU to meet with the representatives of the Union at the HQ of the Union then transferred to Uyo.

Concerning the two great personalities under reference, I have garnered this from no mean son of Nigeria, himself also a legend in the annals of the Ibibio State Union, the Honourable Sir Dr. Udo Udoma, the Mfut Itiat Enin of Ikot Abasi and the OBONG IKPA ISONG IBIBIO and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Uganda, Africa. He it was who wrote among other things that: "the discovery of the old Minutes Book, property of the Ibibio Union in the library of that distinguished leader by Professor Donald Ekong, Vice Chancellor of the then Cross River State University, is somewhat sensational". The Leader in reference is of course, no other person than the late Chief, the Honourable Nyong Essien, and the Nsomm of Uruan. He was also the first Uruan son who having been unanimously selected by the Ibibio people at the assembled Ibibio State Union Conference, was nominated by the then Governor General of Nigeria, Sir Bernard Bourdillon to represent and act as the spokesman of the whole of the people of the Mainland Territory of the Calabar Province now designated as Akwa Ibom State, but hitherto then designated IBIBIO DIVISION, in the Legislative Council of Nigeria in 1938. It could therefore be authoritatively revealed that it was this same Nyong Essien who eventually by his acceptance of the nomination that opened the way towards the success of the National Scholarship Scheme earlier referred to heretofore. It is a matter of good fortune that the Minutes Book of the Union had been discovered. This must be regarded as an achievement in itself. For it shows the meticulous care, integrity good sense, competency and sense of responsibility as exercised in checking the contents of the library at the time when it was equally taken over. Nothing could have been better than the decision to publish the Contents of this Minutes Book. He it was also the same Chief Nyong Essien who in 1960 had the rare and singular honour and distinction of being elected the first President of the House of Chiefs at its inauguration in the then Eastern Region of Nigeria (Noah Monday Efiong Ed., Proceedings of the Ibibio Union; 1928-1937, 19-21). He later became the President General of the same IBIBIO STATE UNION (1946-1967) which was banned by General Johnson Aguyi Ironsi, the first Military Ruler of this country.

THE ANNANG OF AKWA-IBOM STATE ORIGINS, LOCATION AND NOMENCLATURE

Because ever before the people later called the Annangs also left Ibom country which was first founded and occupied by the great ancestors of ancient URUAN thousands of years before the Christian era as we have seen already, there was nothing in the world lexicon known as ANNANG. The name evolved much later, even long after settlement in their present abode. Just like the EFIK of URUAN, the IBIBIO, the AROS, the YORUBA, the IGBO etc, these names never existed they only came into being after the great epoc making events of the discovery and Demarcation of Africa among the European countries in1884 vouchsafed by the events leading to the abolition of the inhuman Slave trade which had made human beings, created in the image and likeness of God Almighty, cartels and drawers of water and cutters of wood for these European nations. Yes, EUROPEAN, another great word which never existed before the ascendancy of the Greeks and the Romans of the Greco-Roman pagan world, which only knew them under various designations and soubriquets some of whom they had described as Teutons, Anglo-Saxons, Goths - both Visigoths and Ostrogoths, Vandals, Angles and Jutes, Franks, Tartars, Turks, etc. Concerning those peoples of the world, most of their names which have now become part of the human vocabulary have given rise to words like vandalism, vandalistic, barbarism, barbaric, Gothic literature and Gothic architecture, etc. Before this time, and that was not before the 5th century of our Christian era, nobody had ever heard of the names of countries such as Germany, France, England, just to mention but a few. There were no such words in world history and in any lexicon worldwide. Even in bringing this discussion nearer home, less than twenty to thirty years ago, whoever heard of the designation ABIA, ORUK ANAM, ESSIEN UDIM, ANIOMA, OSUN, or even OGUN; YiGAWA, YOBE etc? These names and designations have now come to represent Nigerian States and ethnic nationalities.

When for example Pope Gregory the Great (AD 540-604) while yet only a Deacon watched blue-eyed, a number of young innocent boys being sold at slave markets in Rome, and having learnt on enquiry that they were Angles and Jutes, he had exclaimed: "Look they have faces just like the Angels; it becomes such to be co-heirs with the Angels in Heaven". He never even fathomed that he was prophesying as it were the conversion of England, France, Germany, etc. to the Christian Faith! Later, when he became Pope, he made good his prediction by sending out St. Augustine (who was to later become Archbishop and the first Primate of the English Church with Headquarters at Canterbury (now Manchester Abbey). Augustine was accompanied by 40 monks from the Monastery of St. Andrew to the barbarian lands of the Angles and Jutes which he then renamed as "Angle +land" = E N G L A N D; which later became known as ENGLAND; Germany a.k.a D e u t c h l a n d s was derived from the Roman word GERMANUS = n e i g h b o u r s, used to describe them by the Gauls; ditto Gaul, the barbarian Frankish lands which later became known as FRANCE; Africa was named after the Afri Tribe of Tunisia the former rich country of Carthage conguered by the warlord Hannibal; Europe was derived from the Macedonian town of E u r o p u s; America was named in 1507 after the Italian Explorer/Navigator A m e r i g o V e s p u c i from Florence, Italy originated from V i t a l i a = pasture land, S p a i n, an English word derived from Hispania/España, Russia is the land of the R u s s, China with the great Wonder of the World, its Great Wall soaring into the heights and can be visible from outer space which was constructed by and named after the Emperor "China Isin", and so on. Recently Swaziland in 2018, the new King has dropped the name for "E s w a t i n I" = Land of the Swazi.

Yes, BARBARIAN or BARBARIC, these words only came into existence much later on, after the fall and the disintegration of the Greco-Roman Empire in 476 AD as recorded in World History books which most of us studied in our Primary and Secondary schools of the 1930s -1950s. Is it not therefore a misplacement of values that for more than thirty years now since the 1980's infamous introduction of the new National Education Policy of 6-3-3-4 which had upturned and discarded everything that bore the educational vestiges of the colonial/ Nationalist systems of Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, the great Zik of Africa and the Nigerian sage, Pa Awolowo, in favour of the new Nigerian brands from the bigoted fertile minds of Nigeria's new-fangled Educationists and Administrators. The first casualties of all these was the expunging of the teaching of history and geography from the school curriculum. From the Greek word BARBAROI, LATIN - BARBARI meaning foreigners, crude, uncouth, uncivilized peoples, the name BARBARIAN was first coined and applied by the Caesar Constantine and his successors after the great Augustus Caesar to all those peoples and races who were neither Greek nor Roman but those who spoke in barbaric tones. To the all these words implied the idea of "BAA – BAA"sounding languages in the ears of these ancient Greco-Roman potentates. Besides, these hordes of foreigners who had swarmed into the empire were really barbaric and wild. These "Peoples of the World" as they were called had in their advance into the Greco-Roman territories pillaged, destroyed, burnt and rubbished all those g reat admirable monuments of world-class artifacts, technology, architecture and civilization in the great sciences and technologies. All these were monuments and institutions which had taken the Emperors years to build, hence their addressing these barbaric cohorts as "BAA- BAA speaking" nations. That is how that expression came to be. Hence that is how they came to be designated as "barbarians ie. "Peoples of the world"; a terrible and formidable species of mankind!

Here in our own case, less than 100 years ago there was no such name or country in world history known as NIGERIA. It was Lady Flora Shaw, a very erudite and intelligent British journalist in 1897 at a Beauty Pageant organized by the British Government which she won that invented the name by juxta-posing the two current words "NIGER" (the River of black peoples) + "AREA" (territory of black peoples) to form the word NIGERIA. She was later wooed and married by Lord Lugard. There was no such name ever before the Amalgamation (unification) of the territories of the Northern and Southern parts of what later was to become one single country that we call Nigeria today. It was equally her husband Lord Frederick Lugard, the then British High Commissioner of Northern Nigeria who played a decisive role in the amalgamation of the country in January 1914, setting up his united administrative and socio-economic blue-print and structures for Nigeria. Due to his initiative, the "Indirect Rule" as practiced in his administration of the North became the prototype for all the colonial governments of the North, East and West and throughout Nigeria. He was then appointed the first Governor General of a united Nigeria and this led to the evolution of Nigeria as the largest single British colony under British Rule worldwide. With Nigeria emerging as the undisputed largest British colony, all the other British Overseas enterprises through trade exchange and socio-political developments brought about the evolution of a global colonial empire of imperial Britain. It was after this that the word NIGERIA ever entered into the lexicon of world history the centenary commemoration of which we are now planning to celebrate come January 2014. Even as at now and less than ten years ago, the Nigerian state has been caged and is swooning under the scourge of militant Muslim fundamentalists called Boko Haram who have recently been branded as terrorist gangs, the tag coined in Hausa-Fulani pidgin English to mean Islamic insurgent groups in Nigeria. These groups of Nigerians despise Western culture and civilization, regarding such as heathen, forbidden, profane and abominable to the Muslim Faith. The consequence of all these for them is that it should be dethroned and set up in its place Islamic cultural and political governance. Nobody has ever claimed to have found this language, neither in the Hausa –Fulani, nor Efik, nor Igbo nor Yoruba nor Ijaw nor even Tiv dictionaries, but which has now become a household terminology like its counter parts of Al Qaeda, Al Shabab coinages of Afghanistan and Somalia, Sudan, etc. Muslim insurgent terrorists are those who also want to turn their countries into an-all Islamic states with everything Western and American obliterated from the history of the world.

So what are we talking about as if the word ANNANG had always existed? These are the people of whom URUAN/EFIK, long after their settlement in their present abode, and inhabiting those parts of Northern Akwa Ibom State to the east of Abia State in South Eastern Nigeria soon evolved and behaved ever more strangely and seemingly savagely than formerly on account of their contact and association with their NDOKI and NGWA Igbo neigbours (again names and designations which never existed in world history before the celebrated infamous Slave Trade). Now URUAN had described them as "NNA? A -NNA? A -NNA? A PEOPLE". But why? This is because they often noticed them carrying very well-sharpened matchets - the AFAKA, which they so menacingly but indeed dexterously carried wherever they went about their business. Very often, they sheathed these knives in lovely woven raffia shields. Annang people are noted for admirably using their knives to cut neat and clean whatever objects they have applied their hands thereto, hence the evolution of the word ANNANG to describe this ethnic group inhabiting the northern fringes of AKWA IBOM STATE of Nigeria. One good URUAN/EFIK proverb which they must have used in this connection to explain the raison d'être in calling them so goes like this: "Idihe- nna?a-nna?a- nna?a edi it?k ik?t ebua"- nte me ina?a - Ibibio/Annang; meaning wildly, madly as wild/mad hounds, the menacingly behaving dog-hounds which cannot get at their targets viz. hunted forest animals yet are pursuing these wild animals. In other words, hunting dogs may behave so amazingly audacious and menacing, but they never can ever notice let alone run after the hounded wild animals running before them in the bush especially lions. Yet it is also one of those very Annang proverbs that better captures this point:"Agwo akpa agwo ase alak akpa; Akpeep akpa-akpa awod". This means that though the Annang man may handle his matchet so menacingly but when it comes to cutting things neat and clean, he performs that with such finesse, adroitness and finality that it does not cause any stir or anxiety. In other words, if he is cutting something, say the hand of a man or an animal or even the stem of a tree, he can do so without killing the man/animal or destroying the tree quite unlike a novice would probably do by causing the death of the man or animal or damage the tree. It therefore implies that an Annang man as a specialist in the use of the matchet or knife knows how to cut without killing or causing a fatal damage or harm or destruction one way or the other. He can also do this much better than a stranger or novice could ever do because such a novice would end up killing or destroying even without his intending or wanting to do so.

Yes, this is because the Annang people have been noted as saying, but I think perhaps to their Ndoki/Ngwa Igbo warring, hostile and unfriendly neighbours and also warning them to stay clear. They also often say every time they are confronted: "Nda ukpa-o! Nde unam un??" meaning "I will cut you-o! Am I or do I look like a beast/animal before you?" But their neihbours and others besides capitalizing on this designation and nomenclature as it were, did in the recent past give the Annang unprintable names by regarding them as cut-throats, cannibals and those who decimated their stranger visitors and travelers passing through or coming into their territory, whereas this had never been the understanding of URUAN/EFIK who innocently gave them the name in the first place as the two Proverbs above do corroborate. "Give a dog a bad name and hang it", you would say; but this is very far from the truth! Whereas until recently, and even beyond the past two centuries, nobody had ever come out to declare that he had witnessed an Annang man or somebody around the area, kill or roast or boil or even cook a human being to prepare his meal. Considering their bravery and deftness in the use of matchets, E. A. Udo opines that the Annangs are said to behave rather like wild warriors when confronted and this can also imply the bravery of theAnnangs. As if to corroborate this, Joseph Udondata and John-Bosco Ekanem, themselves bona fide sons of Annang, refer to the Annang as if they are Inaanga, ie. people who feign madness and behave wildly. They argue that the term is not derogatory as some may suggest, for "considering the war circumstances of Annang people, one can easily be maddened by the behaviours of an enemy. One will naturally react when he is provoked." They therefore went to conclude that what their Annang ancestors did in these circumstances was to bring out their matchets, hit them on a stone or on the ground and cut down whatever was the intruder or assailant. They could cut down live sticks and in extreme cases would severe their opponents' heads with one stroke of the matchet (21-22). It also implies that the Annangs could behave and react wildly and dangerously when violently assaulted hence their behaving "inaanga-inaanga" with violence and vengeance like mad and wild people. The Efik language often doubles the adjective to derive the adverb, hence Inaanga = violent- adjective; Inaanga-inaanga/afai-afai = violently/wildly or madly – adverb.

ORIGINS AND EVOLUTION OF ABA – NOW IN ABIA STATE

ORIGINAL VERSION: Then as observed above, because the Annangs have a common boundary with the Sudanic Igbos, they had often to fight many wars against their Ngwa neighbours in order to preserve their identity and territorial integrity and farmlands ditto the Opobo people all extending as far as what is now known as ABA. "ABA" is ANNANG/IBIBIO word for a fenced plot of land either for farming or for keeping livestock. In ancient days, the people of Opobo as also the Annangs were noted for rearing large herds of livestock notably goats and sheep at this area and traders used to flock in from all parts to buy them. At a certain point, the livestock markets flourished so well that they became objects of contention as the Igbo traders became so incensed and envious especially those from Isiala Ngwa. This led to a war that gave the Ngwa Igbos, who presumably were the Isiala Ngwas and companions the upper hand which eventually led to the areas where the markets were held now being named ABA. This happened because originally this large expanse of land between Ikot Ekpene and "ABA" and between ancient Opobo – Egwanga now designated "IKOT ABASI" through Azumini was a virgin thick forest "a no man's land" of sorts. This is where these ancient Akwa ibomites used to construct fences for their livestock resulting in a booming livestock market there. For the Ngwa Igbos, anybody with rough physical strength who was ready and willing, could carve out for himself a large expanse of farm land, fence it round and plant his crops or even build living quarters for himself and the extended family household. To buttress the originality of ABA as belonging to Annang/Opobo these people often cite the issue of Chief Margaret Ekpo who was a known figure in the struggle for women emancipation especially during the Aba Women's Riot as having her domicile at Aba, ditto Dr. Egbert Udo Udoma who lived here all through his life before and since his return from the UK in 1947. Mr. J. A. Ekong was even the Chairman of Aba County Council in the 1940s - 1950s. Sometime also, Chief Margaret Ekpo represented Aba in the 1950s at the Federal House of Representatives in Lagos.

ABA TOWN HALL AND EKEOMA ABA MARKET IN 1940s

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE ORIGIN OF ABA

Tradition also has it that an Ngwa man who first discovered the wide expansive forest land inherited the area as far as Eziukwu. He thereafter built homesteads for his extensively extended family household and developed the place into a large and expansive farmland known in Igbo as "BARAA" ie. a farmland where food crops such as yams, cocoyams, plantains, cassava, palm trees and bamboos are grown. Oral history has it that some white people, the colonials led by Mr. E. M. Faulks the Resident from Calabar on arrival at the expansive farmland had enquired to know what name the natives called a large plane area like that. The Ngwa Igbos are said to have replied that the native word was "BARAA" which to the white men sounded like "ABA". From that day the area became known as "ABA". But that seems to be too recent and a far cry from the first version given above because Mr. Faulks indeed came to Aba rowing through the mouth of the creek ie. "Water –Side" via Ogbor Hill during the time of the Aba Women's' Riots in recorded history, 1928-1929 as mentioned elsewhere. Precisely in December 1929, a mass protest led by thousands of women from the old provinces of Calabar, Uyo, Owerri in Eastern Nigeria against the alleged plan by the British Colonial Government to impose levies and taxes on the womenfolk of Southern Nigeria. On learning about this, thousands of women half - dressed with their upper parts bare and waving cassava leaves in the air marched in procession round the colonial Headquarters of Aba. But the procession later snowballed into riots as the colonial police with batons tried to stop them leaving hundreds with injuries and others being arrested. (Cf. Udoma E. U. Spectrum, Ibadan, 1987; 46-48). It is perhaps this moot point concerning the Aba Women's Riots that has given ABA its status and Raison d'être because the very Nigeria Police Emblem with the symbol of the elephant signifies this Event by which the police contingent quelling that riot bears the two batons crossing each other at an intersection. It indicates how the British Colonials used the baton to quell the riots which shook the nation then and how the British were able to effectively apply the baton to subdue the women. As mentioned above, the Isiala Ngwas who were itching to supplant the Annangs/Ibibio's and take over their land on arriving near the place saw an elephant ie. "EHI" in Igbo emerge from nowhere and began as it were to clear a wide area the thick forest before them and then suddenly disappeared signaling that that was the land God had given to them in perpetuity, hence the elephant emblem for "ABA". It was also from this that the Ngwas derived the name "ENYINMBA" for "ABA" which seems to be a well thought-out and concocted revisionist theory and new version of the evolution of "ABA".

Between 1920s and 1950s Aba was a very well planned are especially on account of the expansive GRA area inhabited by the British Colonials and the European Companies like the John Holts, Mandilas, G.B. Ollivant, CFAO, Mandillas, P.Z. Nickolas, Griffittes, Cussons, Dunlop, etc. The first paved and tarred Road in the early 1950s ie. Aba - Owerri Road was lined on both sides with oil bean trees ostensibly to provide shelter to pedestrians and motorists during the sweltering heat seasons. As the traffic increased on the road it became necessary to uproot them as they constituted veritable sources of fatal automobile accidents resulting from drunken and reckless drivers running into these trees. Aba in the 1940s and 1950s soon became the centre of commercial activities masterminded by the ubiquitous Abriba citizens who almost dominated the trade through introduction of imported merchandise. As observed above the centre was at first the dominant market of domesticated animals as an international business district with Efiks, Ibibio's, Annangs, Yorubas, peoples from other parts of Igbo land as well as other aliens, etc. The very name "ABA" came to constitute what originally was christened ABIA, a name derived from the acronym Aba, Bende, Isikwato and Afikpo which now belongs to Ebonyi State. Aba is so well centralized that it has become the epicenter and commercial centre of the defunct Eastern Region. Anybody coming from Cross River and Akwa Ibom, or from Rivers and Bayelsa passes through Aba. Equally those coming either from the Western or Northern parts of Nigeria to the other part must pass through Aba. The Ngwa Igbos were greatly feared in those days because they were always fighting and capturing their victims for food and the Annangs were also said to have followed suit. These people also went to the extent of imagining that the index finger of a human person just like the gizzard of a chicken was the sweetest because of its being always in constant touch with soups and therefore contains wonderful ingredients. You can never fathom the fertile imagination of proud bigots and nincompoops at work!

THE NEW ABA IN PERSPECTIVE

As the popular local wisecrack goes: "Aba ma ndi Aba", Aba really knows those who truly belong to Aba, the elephant Enyimba (Elephant) modern city. Modern Aba has in every respect become a real cosmopolitan city. It is 64 KM equidistant from other cities of the South South and South East viz. Uyo, Port Harcourt, Owerri and Umahia. This centrality has so greatly contributed to the importance of Aba making it the commercial nerve centre of the region. Due to its centralization also, there has been such great an influx of people which doubly makes its commerce to grow by the day. Coupled with this, the Ngwa aborigines due to their open-mindedness have also contributed to many visitors flocking into the city from all parts of the country. Another contributing factor in the increase of the population of Aba is informed by the low cost of living not only in foodstuffs but also in cheap house rents and availability of all sorts of goods and usages. For the Igbos in particular, it is impossible almost not to find any family of Igbo extraction not having one or two relations living and doing business in Aba. Aba has become the fabricators' haven, the home of commerce and industry. To really belong, one must be ready and willing to toil and work very hard otherwise one can just "get lost" in the hurly burly of everyday life in Aba. Only people with business acumen can survive in Aba. That is why Aba has become a melting pot of Industries in textile, footwears, electronics and what have you. Any new comer to Aba that fails to understand this already has his/her days numbered and cannot survive here. Aba is for those with business savvy and sense of hard work. In fact, Aba's middle name can be equiparated to business with more than 3,000 small and medium scale Industries that churn out millions of finished "Aba made" products in shoes, bags, dresses, etc. which get better by the day (Cf. Chika Abanobi and Okey Sampson, Sunday Sun, Nov 25, 2017; 4-5). These "Aba made" have attracted thousands of customers including traders coming from neigbouring countries like Niger, Chad, Benin Republic, Gabon, Equatorial Guinea and Cameroun not to talk of some Nigerian States viz. Rivers, Akwa Ibom, Cross River, Sokoto, Kano Maiduguri, Oyo Kwara etc. to purchase goods of all kinds there. Aba has become the "Japan of Africa" with artisans of uncommon ability who can masterfully fabricate anything under the sun. Aba artisans can just look at the sample of a thing and before you say "Aba Ngwa", they have produced facsimile products which appear even better than their original. "Aba ma ndi Aba": you can't miss them.

Many people just like the ancient Jews as also their Greco-Roman super gentry were known to always look down on those outside their climes regarding them as barbaric, uncivilized and ignorant savages either calling outsiders Gentiles or barbarians and vandals whereas the Germanic barbarians for example, at the time St. Boniface arrived there for their conversion were in fact known to have had very high standards of morality, duty and organization especially in their high level of culture, economic and agricultural developments. Indeed, it so happened that later on, the Holy Roman Empire that emerged was essentially the Christian Empire of the Germanic Peoples. The designation Germanic of course was in relation to the barbarian peoples of the linguistic family who spoke languages akin to Deutch ie. ancient German, French, English, Dutch, etc. The same could have been said about the Annang people at the time they came in contact with URUAN at IBOM.

Just like the EFIK, they had accepted this designation without qualms and without much ado even till today. In fact, the British colonial administrators and scholars working in Annang area never doubted their identity as part and parcel of the whole Ibibio Mainland administrative area. The name Annang was even only first mentioned about the 19th century precisely in a book Polyglotta Africana, deputed to have been written by a German missionary, Sigismund Wilhelm Koeltie who was working in Sierra Leone at the time. The second reference to the Annang was by Rev. Hugh Goldie himself, one of the first early Scottish Missionaries who arrived in Calabar in 1846. He wrote in 1874 in the first edition of the Efik Dictionary describing Annang country as a district of the Egbo Shary Ibibio land far away from Calabar. Later, and writing in 1932, the District Officer (DO) of Abak S. E. Johnson stated among others that the Annang sub-tribe appears to have been the last area in the Calabar Province to be opened up by the Government, and indeed to have come into contact with Europeans. But this is not the issue in point. It is simply to instruct us that the word Annang like any of the others only came to be whereas before now the early historians and anthropologists like Darryl Forde and George I. Jones etc. of the Institute for British Colonial Social Sciences Research Council in 1945 enumerated Annang among the Ibibio ethnic groupings to wit, Western Ibibio constituting Abak and Ikot Ekpene political Divisions in the old Calabar Province.

ANNANG COUNTRY & DESIGNATION/ CLANSHIP AND ORGANIZATION

As a homogenous society and blessed with an equally intelligible language/dialect understood by most parts of the territory the Annangs have a strong bond which has united the citizens by an organic solidarity especially by virtue of birth and family ties. It is this particular aspect which emphasized common ancestry, communal identity and group spirit and these galvanized to determine individual behaviour. Annang society was also organized through taboos, socio-cultural mores, feelings and emotions. All societies want success, growth and progress so they need good government - traditional or modern in place to drive the programmes of their developmental efforts. Annang country is no exception. Both the governed and those who govern are to be seen as partners in progress to move the society forward. This seems to be the motive behind the selection, appointment/election of an ITAI for the AFE Annang which as observed already is the umbrella of organization of all the groups and different ethnic nationalities in Annang land. The AFE in ordinary parlance is the meeting point for members of the society to converge together and discuss matters regarding their welfare, programmes and aspirations thereto. Whether in the context of a nuclear family assembling in the parlour or of the kindred - Afe Ekpuk/Uf?k, is a special meeting place of the group to discuss their affairs, the AFE even of the entire Village, Clan or District - Afe Is? , is destined to serve many useful purposes in the administration of the society. It is on this account that the meeting and by implication, the meeting place of all the Traditional Rulers and Kings is designated AFE ANNANG. But they certainly need direction and guidance as the pillar of the Organization, hence the ITAI since all of them "are not periwinkles wearing the same type of hat to be able to direct their affairs. Just as in the arrangement of the Ibibio nation which has the AKWA ESOP IMA ISONG to propel the destiny and aspirations of the citizens of IBIBIBIO land, so also the Organization in Annang country with an ITAI, the Equivalent of the NTISONG Ibibio. His authority is empowered by the organic solidarity of the people since power is invested on the people and from them to the one they have chosen to lead them, the Itai. The many voices of the people are drowned in the unique bold voice of the Itai who now articulates the feelings, wishes, emotions and aspirations of his people.

Today the Annang community is building a massive AFE Is? as the Assembly of all the civil and political leaders – the ATE ANNANG at Ikot Ekpene city for the galvanization of the socio-political structure of the great Annang peoples. The Afe/Ate is destined to serve many purposes primordial and modern viz. for the organic solidarity where the members need to disseminate information on the operations of the system, because here everybody will be represented as part of the social structure. Here also instructions concerting certain lines of action and decisions to be taken will be directed as well as cases/matters involving members in Annang communities.

ORIGIN OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS IN NIGERIA

IKOT EKPENE IN PARTICULAR – ORIGIN OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS NATIONWIDE
IKOT EKPENE AS FIRST CONSTITUTED LOCAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORITY

OLD SECRETARIAT BEFORE INDEPENDENCE

PAUL JAMES INYANG ESQ

NEW SECRETARIAT, IKOT EKPENE LGA

According to Paul James Inyang Esq. (Cf. Souvenir Funeral/Thanksgiving Programme, Oct.3, 2011) and as recounted by Ete James himself on his 80th Birthday in 2008 at the Diamond Jubilee Mass celebrated in his honour and officiated by the Author, he had among other things narrated that with the events leading to Nigeria's Independence gathering storm, the British Colonial Government was also gearing towards the radical re-organization of the Colonial architecture of governance. They first mooted the idea of transforming the entire system of Native Authority (N/A) administration, whereby British Divisional Officers (DOs) would be replaced by indigenous N/A a.k.a Local Government Administrators and Secretaries to be designated" "SECRETARY/TREASURERS" (STs), since they would take absolute charge of including the finances accruing to their areas of Authority. Then they renamed the N/A Councils as Urban/Rural Development Councils or County Councils, eg. What was formerly tagged "CALABAR DISTRICT COUNCIL" OR Degema, Ozubulu, Ikom, Agbor, Uromi, Ikot Ekpene, Nguru, URUAN, Fugar, Obollo- Afor, Gboko, Orlu, Kontangora, Kachia, Sarbon –Birmi, Arochukwu, Aba, Etinan, etc. became known as CALABAR URBAN COUNTY COUNCIL (CUCC) or CALABAR RURAL DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL (CRDC) depending on whether it was in an urban or rural district viz.: Ikot Ekpene district became IKOT EKPE URBAN COUNTY COUNCIL (IKUCC), while Uruan became URUAN RURAL DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL (URDC), etc.

To this end, the Colonial Authorities saw the need to train good and seasoned technocrats as Administrators who would take over from the British District Officers - DOs. Then according to Ete Paul Inyang, a number of serving Secretaries some of whom were previously trained at the prestigious Nigerian College of Science and Technology Ibadan like himself, were selected and presented by the Colonial Government to the United Nations Office for Overseas Training in Public Administration and Community Development. They were thereafter sent to the University of Haifa in Israel to understudy the Local Government System of Organization there tagged the "KIBUTZT". While there, they also studied at the Mount Carmel Centre, an Institute of the United Nations and Training Centre. He was among the one hundred and fifty Candidates selected and they spent two years studying at the feet of the Masters as it were. On their return to Nigeria they were to be further involved in preparing and drafting the programmes that would constitute the Policies, Laws and Reviews for the Ministries of Local Governments of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. As a pilot programme, Ete Paul Inyang was posted to Ikot Ekpene Urban County Council where he assiduously and painstakingly developed and delivered the first ever Programme of Local Government System as a special grassroots pilot pattern of governance to be ratified and adopted throughout the Nigerian Nation. Thereafter he was posted to URUAN County Council Idu to also modify and supervise the LGA programme suited for rural communities. In 1960 during the Celebration of Nigeria's Independence on October 1, he planted the Independence Tree there in URUAN which still stands strong till today. To further galvanize this novel programme in some other pivot areas of the then Eastern Region, he was re-assigned and posted to oversee the Calabar Municipality County Council, then posted to Mbaitoli County Council, Opobo County Council, Owerri County Council, Port Harcourt Municipal Council, Urratta County Council, Uzo Uwani County Council, Nsukka Urban County Council, Abak Urban County Council and Creek Town County Council. Thereafter he was also assigned to prepare and superintend the pilot programme as "Sole Administrator" for the MAINLAND County Councils in old Calabar Province viz. Abak, Itu, Oron, Etinan, Four Groups and Ukanafun County Councils.

FORMATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS IN MODERN NIGERIA

The history of Local Government Administration in Nigeria dates back to the colonial era. Due to the exigencies of that era and in a bid not to 'rock the boat' and create a situation where they would engage in physical battles with the locals who had a well-entrenched system of government, particularly in Northern Nigeria, the colonialists introduced the Indirect Rule while the English version of local government was introduced in the Eastern and Western Regions. After independence in 1960, the imperative of Local Government System was again brought to the fore. The three geo-political regions which then constituted the Federal Government of Nigeria continued with the former existing system. Each region adopted the system it deemed fit for its peculiarity. The North continued with the Native Authority (N/A) system which revolved mostly around the Traditional Rulers, the Emirs, while the West and East operated the English version of the Local Government System which had legally defined responsibility and elected a majority of voluntary unpaid members to carry out executive and administrative duties through the committee system and also oversee the functioning of the local communities. This set of affairs continued until 1976 when the General Obasanjo Military Government instituted the Local Government Reforms of the Federal Republic of Nigeria and thereafter transmitted the Decree for the 1979 Constitution to effect the organization of a new Local Government System of governance in Nigeria. Then came the clamour for the creation of new local government areas all over the country and it was deemed worthwhile to first of all examine the constitutional provisions as well as the social, fiscal, political and economic implications that would result from such a policy programme nationwide. That was how the 1999 Constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria (THE CONSTITUTION) among other things came into being. Concerning the 1999 Constitution as amended and now in force, the said Decree No. 24 was published as No. 27 in Volume 86 in the Federal Republic of Nigeria Official (Extraordinary) Gazette of 5 May, 1999. The Constitution came into force on 29 May, 1999. Under that Constitution, a three tier-government was to be established namely; the Federal, State and Local Governments. Section 2 subsections (2) and (3) of the Constitution were also specific on the constituent parts of the Federation ie. that the States, the Local Government Areas as well as the Federal Capital Territory and the respective States were to be set out as in Section 3 (1) of the Constitution. The areas covered by each State as well as the Federal Capital Territory were also clearly spelt out in section 3 (2) and (3) of the Constitution and 774 Local Government Areas were designated therein.

THE NIGERIAN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS IN PERSPECTIVE

In order to articulate what this article is all about, it would be profitable to state in perspective what Local Governments in the Nigerian context should be. First of all, the Local Government constitutes one of the most critical level of governments at which the momentum to sustain national development can be created. In some countries of the third world, it is the only semblance of authority known beyond the traditional mode of governance (Cf. BELLO I.B. 2007: 1). Then from the 1970s, the national leaders all over the world and even their followers started to change their erstwhile attitude towards local government for a more positive appreciation of the role of this level of government. Consequently, they started to think of more functions, more finances and more qualified manpower for the level of government. This re-awakening vis-à-vis the pivotal role of local government also gained prominence in Nigeria as from 1976 nationwide which brought about the Local Government Reforms. The Reforms recognized this level of government as a distinct tier of government (Cf. Bello I. B. 2007:1).

CONCEPT OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT: Local Government can be defined as a Political Authority under the State eg. Akwa Ibom State, for decentralizing political power and delegation of that authority to the people (Cf. Fajobi, 2010: 1). It is the administration under local Committees set up in order to maintain law and order based on the range of social amenities accruing to the area and to encourage the cooperation and participation of the people at the grassroots. The aim is invariably to improve the living conditions of the people in question. Based on this, Local Government Administration stresses the maintenance of law and order as its primary motive.

ROLE OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT: Deriving from the 1976 Local Government Reforms, the Federal Republic of Nigeria has articulated four basic objectives for establishing its Local Government. These are: (i) To make appropriate services and development activities responsive to local wishes and initiatives by developing and delegating such services to local representatives.

(ii) To facilitate and bring the exercise of democratic self- governance close to the local levels of the society and to encourage initiative and leadership potentials.

(iii) To mobilize human and material resources through the involvement of members of the public in their Local Government, and to provide a two – way channel of communication between local communities both State and Federal (Cf. Fajobi O. F., 2010: 3).

(iv) To achieve social change and general economic growth which requires the spreading of effort so that local communities and individuals can participate bring about such ideal conditions as energy, expertise, enthusiasm and most importantly, initiative towards the working out of local development activities. Local Authorities must therefore provide the opportunity for local decisions and local schemes within the general national policies and ethos and above all,

(v) To act as the local centre of initiative in activities conducive to development. Again, it is persuasive that in support of any positive role for local governments, a genuine procedure for promoting the spread of development in every nook and cranny of the areas most aptly justifies all these and reason for their existence.

WHAT TO DO: PROMOTION OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT FROM BELOW

Of all the diverse ways Local Governments can promote socio- economic development, such a procedure should start from below. Two distinct aspects will be highlighted herein. Local Governments have the role of promoting purely economic development and this can take various forms. First, unlike starting from the 'top-down' development strategy currently in vogue, Local Governments should look for a way of promoting development from below and this strategy gives priority to rural development, enhances a more effective use of land and labour, encourages the search for endogenously- derived technology which inculcates collective action in solving many of the problems confronting agriculture, trade, etc. Above all, it makes for effective local institutions to represent the key aspects of the development strategy. Second, it promotes local freedom and autonomy. Since Local Governments are the closest level of government to the people as the system is truly local, they should inevitably provide special opportunities for people to complain about the quality of services the LGAs render and about the conduct of Council Officials. Moreover, since Central Governments all over the world are becoming increasingly distant in both physical, psychological and even social senses, decentralization by devolution tends to bridge these various distances between the local civil servants and the citizens. Thirdly, it enhances grassroots democracy. Over the years, Local Governments have for a very long time been regarded as the training ground for democracy, but does it happen? In a sense, therefore, the creation of Local Governments is often linked with the desire to promote grassroots democracy. From the review of a lot of Euro- American literature, it should be regarded as the primary function of Local Governments even though such claims have more often than not gone unchallenged.

IKOT EKPENE DURING THE COLONIAL ERA IKOT EKPENE LOCAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORITY IN ANNANG LAND

IKOT EKPENE DISTRICT ANCIENT AND MODERN: ORIGINS

Ikot Ekpene which is the subject of this special spotlight is also known as the Raffia City a.k.a IK, as sometimes used in this article on Annang country. It is one of the ancient Districts of the Colonial Divisions of Old Calabar Province. It is now a historic town in Akwa Ibom State of South-Southern Region of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. It is the political and cultural Capital of Annang ethnic group in Nigeria (Cf. Nair, 1972, 16). The town is located on the A 342 highway and runs parallel to the coast between Uyo and Calabar. It is bounded on the North by Etim Ekpo and Ika, on the South by Uyo, on the East by Aba and on the West by Abak Local Governments. Its Coordinates are to wit: 5°11'N 7°43'E? / ? 5.183°N 7.717°E covers a total area and landmark of 45 sq. miles OR 116Km^2 with a total population of 143, 077 (Cf. 2006 Census). It is a link-way from Aba to the State Capital, Uyo. Umuahia is the next major town to the north from Aba. The present Executive of IK Local Government Authority is Obong Hon Unyime Etim (www.annangheritage.org). His Council Co-workers are also listed below:

The popular historian Dr. Kannan Nair much quoted in this Chapter on Ancient URUAN-EFIK and by implication Annang Country of which Ikot Ekpene is a potential part, has described the town as the cultural and political Capital of the Annangs and the Ibibios ostensibly because it was the first ever accredited urban city in now Modern Akwa Ibom State. The Ibibios live to the east and most of the Annangs live to the south of the town. Ikot Ekpene has continued to remain the regional centre of commerce, with notable exports of palm products, especially palm oil, palm kernels, raffia products including raffia fibers and its wine, the popular brand known as "TOMBO". Her ground crops include yams, cassava, Toro, and corn. The population is made up primarily of the Annang people with a small number of Igbo traders and Hausa Suya vendors. Significant exports also include basket weaving, sculpture, and, most notably, raffia cane furniture, hence the colloquial name of the town as RAFFIA CITY. During the Colonial era, though most inhabitants of the area did not have direct contact with European traders whom they called MBAKARA until the early twentieth century, it is believed that European articles of merchandise reached the people only from the 17th century.

But in November 1903, the British troops arrived in the area from Calabar and the following year established a Garrison there in January 1904. This was the first Colonial Control Post in the area. They then installed Chief Umoren Eyenobong a.k.a "SWORDWEARER" from Ukana in charge of the Annangs. From Ikot Ekpene the troops marched to Uyo and from there to Abak and Opobo, now Ikot Abasi.

Between 1904 and 1910, Ikot Ekpene became part of the Enyong a.k.a ITU DISTRICT. In 1914 Enyong District was broken up into two: Enyong and Ikot Ekpene Districts. The new Ikot Ekpene District included Uyo and Abak with the headquarters in Ikot Ekpene town (Cf. N. C. Akpan, 1967). In 1919 the Annangs opened up their trade links with the Europeans and IK town became an Administrative Centre. But before then the following European Companies had already opened trading posts and stores in the town viz. John Holts Cooperative Wholesale Society, Paterson Zochonis (PZ), G. B. Ollivant and the Compagnie Française de D'Afrique Occidentals (CFOA). The establishment of these Companies resulted in an exodus from the surrounding areas to the city thus making Ikot Ekpene a vibrant metropolis. In 1937, the Colonial Administration built the Main IK Market and separated those who sold imported European goods from the indigenous brands. They also added a slaughter house there to allow for the inspection of meat. The town was so important to the British that when a proposed road linking Owerri and Calabar in the late 1920s was to by-pass the town, the British Administrators abandoned the idea in favour of the one linking Eket and Owerri in order to bring the town into the loop (Cf. K. Nair, 1972: 23). In 1951, Ikot Ekpene thereafter became organized by the British as the first centre of the experiment in local self-governance of what has now become Local Government Authority/Area in Nigeria as noted above. It was also the birthplace of the famous Ibibio Welfare Union which later metamorphosed into the famous IBIBIO STATE UNION masterminded by the indefatigable Chief the Hon. Nyong Essien, erstwhile Nsomm of URUAN. Methodist School in Ikot Obong Edong was made the first Headquarters of the Union (Cf. M. E. Noah, 1988). Thereafter, the town became the seat of both the Annang Division and Ikot Ekpene County Council.

IKOT EKPENE DURING THE INDEPENDENCE ERA IKOT EKPENE AS THE MUNICIPAL CENTRE OF AKWA IBOM STATE

Ikot Ekpene, probably more than any other town, was seriously affected by the Nigerian civil war. Ikot Ekpene was of very strategic military and political importance to both the Biafrans and Nigerians. During the war, the town and the entire area changed hands at least three times in that bitter conflict. Following the war, the new reorganization and state structure led to policies that did not recognize the historic importance of the town as most of the Annang leaders were massacred during the war. Like most Annang communities, Ikot Ekpene has a tradition of self-improvement from its sons and daughters, both far and near. Several groups have worked together to recapture and rebuild what they fondly call "The Raffia City". Since she has a long history of transforming the raffia fibre into cloth used in shoes, hats, handbags, mats and with distinctive cultural carvings made out of wood, these unique arts and crafts trade has continued alongside traditional agriculture. Many foreign organizations and churches are to be found everywhere in the area. To date, there are four Institutions of Higher Learning in IK and these have added a distinctive richness to the town viz.: The Akwa Ibom State Polytechnic, Ikot Osurua, the St. Joseph Major Theological Seminary, the School of Nursing and the Rittman University.

THE EVOLUTION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN NIGERIA FROM 1979 TO 1999

The Local Government system has taken different forms from one period to the other in Nigeria. We have the pre- colonial experiences culminating in different traditional political systems; from the Yoruba, Igbo and Hausa political systems. We also have the Indirect Rule System whereby such governments were being run through the traditional rulers, the chiefs and the warrant chiefs. After these, there had been series of reforms in the Nigerian Local Government system. The 1976 Obasanjo Reform and the 1979 Constitution left unanswered what should be the definite role of Traditional Rulers in the Nigerian society and their communities. Secondly, the financial instability of Local Government Councils somehow reduced them to more or less structural decorations since they could not perform any relation to the various functions that they were supposed to be charged with. Thirdly, the Wards for the election of Councilors were exceptionally large, to the extent that some communities never knew who their Councilors were. Apart from the fact that this development did not make any political sense, it also defeated the purpose of the 'LOCALNESS' of Local Government Councils. It is thus evident that the emergent structure suffered from various problems which tended to undermine the performance of Local Governments in Nigeria. Thus, during the Second Republic (1979-1983), some of the State Governments broke up and even adjusted Local Government boundaries in order to carve out more favorable bases for their political survival without due regard to their viability. Besides, some States in the Federation, it is believed created many Local Government Councils within their State. Then the Buhari Administration (December 1983 to August 1985), reduced the number of Local Government from 770 to the original 301 constitutionally approved, deflating the over-bloated structure under the second republic. However, as a result of the apparent inadequacies in the entire system, the Federal Military Government set up a Local Government Review Committee in 1984 under the Chairmanship of Alhaji Ibrahim Dasuki.

The Dasuki Report noted that the problem inherent in the 1976 nation-wide Local Government Reforms was more of operational lapses arising directly from the behavior and attitudes of persons who operated the system rather than their structural deficiency. It therefore, recommended that the multi-purpose single-tier structure of the then 301 Local Governments was adequate as at the time and needed to be given a chance to function unfettered. As from 1986, the responsibility for postings and deployment of staff of Local Government Services became vested in the Ministries of Local Governments. Finally, in spite of the Dasuki Committee's recommendation of a more meaningful role for Traditional Rulers in the running of Local Governments, no concrete action in this regard was ever taken at the time.

As a result of the new needs of local democracy and grassroots socio-economic development emphasized by that Administration, and particularly the fact that old vices and characteristics of the Local Government Structures still existed, the Federal Government resorted to clearly spelling out the basis of Local Governments, especially as by 1987. But the relationship between the States and Local Governments was still definably super-ordinate. This situation was compounded by the emergence of popularly elected so-called “Local Government Executive Chairmen and Councilors from the Local Government election areas to enhance both citizenship participation and more meaningful service delivery at local levels. Hence, as from March 1988, the Federal Government adopted some comprehensive and well-defined measures aimed at radically reforming the structure especially with regard to finance and administration of Local Governments in order to make them viable and effective centres of development (Cf. Bello, I. B. 2010: 41).

Prominent in this regard was the Federal Military Government of Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida a.k.a. I.B.B. (1985-1993) tinkering with the federal structure by creating new States and Local Governments in 1987. Consequently, both the 1987 and 1991 exercises resulted in the structural dislocation of some communities though these initially felt aggrieved and refused to give their full cooperation and support to the new Local Government Councils. The demand for a new Local Government structure was to be a multi-tiered system of government. The main focal point was meant to have been retained as Headquarters while the various sections were supposed to have been constituted into lower units with specific functions. Again, these Institutions of democratically elected Government Councils have been entrenched within the Nigerian Constitution. In particularly, each of the 774 Local Government Units now have a new constitutional status similar to those of States Structures. Furthermore, whereas it was only the National Assembly that had the power to create New Local Governments, but by 1999 Local Governments reverted to and were seen as being State Government creations. Whereas, before 1999, the procedures for creating them were spelt out in the Constitution, but they were being made as being those for creating new State Governments (Cf. Bello I.B. 2010: 44).

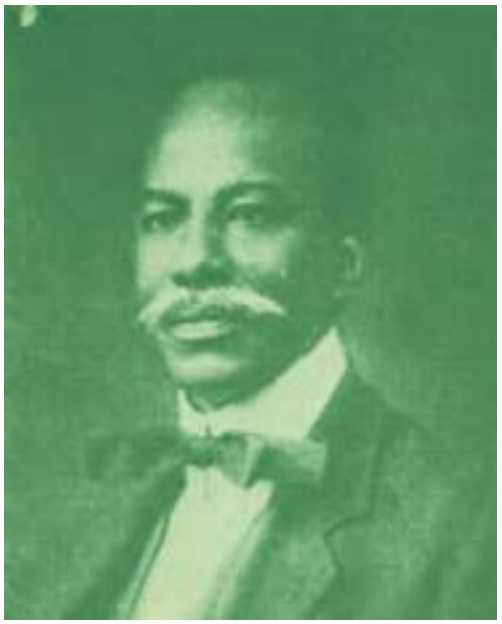
IMPORTANCE OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN PRESENT DAY NIGERIA



CHANGE OF STRUCTURE: Local Governments have changed their structures in Nigeria today because they seem to be more organized on account of the several Reforms which went on over the years. They are also seen as being closer to the masses whether this is the case or not. Nevertheless, this has tried to foster development in the Local Government Areas as they try to foster a close relationship between the governments for speedy development. The evolution and the role in which Local Governments play in the development of nations today have not really done much because of its not having that full autonomy and rights Local Governments are meant to be: viz. their being closer to the people but because of both the Federal and State Governments are dipping their hands into them, Local Governments seem to be less and less undergoing underdevelopment. I have made a personal overview by way of recommendation in Chapter Seven regarding the way forward which the New In-coming Governments in 2019 should do well to look into. Above all, I recommend that the Local Governments should be given a chance to express their integrity not only that the Chairmen of Councils and their Councilors should be allowed to run them, but that perhaps we should think of making them work in sync with the Traditional Rulers with well-seasoned and highest calibre of Civil Service Technocrats with conscience, patriotism and integrity a.k.a DIRECTORS GENERAL as the overall Administrators of Local Governments. Then Local Government Chairmen and their Councilors can serve as the mouth piece of the people in their various communities and societies.

NIGERIA IN THE MAKING vis-a-vis AMALGAMATION NATIONALIST MOVEMENTS AND NIGERIAN INDEPENDENCE NCNC: FORMATION OF THE FIRST POLITICAL PARTIES IN NIGERIA

As noted above, the Royal Niger Company (RNC) Ltd. surreptitiously under Great Britain's mastermind and eminentently fantastic diplomacy employed the Charter they were granted, became emboldened and empowered as it were, and overturned the Trade Charter and at the same time took control and by implication began to govern the area which their British Masters afterwords named as NIGERIA within which they traded. But this was without the mandate and authority of the citizens as if those owners of the land counted for nothing. According to them, ie. the British, they were only protecting the part of the country which happened to be Southern Nigeria and the Niger Delta where they were settling. But as for the North which they had subdued by confronting the Jihadist Fulanis under Uthman dan Fodio, they said that they had a right to own and colonize it because it was their conquered territory. As if that was not enough, and according to Chief Mbazulike Amaechi, first Republic Minister of Aviation and now the only surviving Nationalist of Nigeria, Great Britain started ruling the entire territory such that in 1914, Lord Lugard who had been charged to take over control of the territory, directed that for administrative convenience he had no choice but to merge the Northern and Southern Protectorates. This was ostensibly to enable the British use the richer resources of the South to run the whole country because the North was seen not to be solvent on its own. It was this novel masterstroke that was bound to open the eyes of the Nationalists as we are going to see.

Then as the British kept on running the country like this, some Nationalists began to spring up in the country in the 1940s. They boldly started to agitate demanding that it was time Great Britain allowed Nigerians as the owners of the land to rule their country. This agitation as narrated by Chief Amaechi, was first led by Sir Herbert Macauley a Lagosian, and people like Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, Dr. Akiola Maja, Dr. S.O. Gbadamosi, etc. Thereafter, all of them came together and formed the Nigerian Youth Movement and later the Nigerian National Democratic Party (NNDP). Then some of them began to reason that confining and concentrating the democratic struggle to Lagos Colony alone would not solve the problem of the country and they decided to form a Political Party with national spread. In 1944 the National Council of Nigeria and Cameroons (NCNC) Party was born with Sir Macaulay as National President and Dr. Azikiwe as National Secretary thereof. This was because Southern Cameroun and some part of Northern Cameroun were part and parcel of Nigeria then. In 1947, the group organized to tour the whole country with a view to sentisizing the people and in so doing selling themselves to the people to obtain their mandate to go to London and demand that the people of Nigeria wanted Independence and Self Rule. I can recall very vividly as a kid that this group also came to our town in that same 1947 and addressed a mammoth crowd at A? WA MBAKARA near ESUK MBEHE IDU as noted elsehere. As they toured the country, North. South, East and West, Sir Macauley, then an octogerian had an accident on their way to Kano and became incapacitated and therefore returned to Lagos where he sickend and died. But on his death bed he had emphasized among other things and articulated that the NCNC should take a break of the tour for four days in his honour and that his son Dr. Ogedengbe who was President of the Radical Zikist Movement, should keep the Flag flying. Then demonstrating with his bow tie and thick moustache, he gave an illustration to the effect that "just as my bow tie and moustache are parallel and inseparable, so shall the unity between the North and the South be indestructible". As Chief Mbazulike emphasized, when Macaulay had finished his last admonition to the NCNC stalwarts so to speak, he gave up the ghost and a few minutes after, the NCNC ordered a week of mourning for him and then continued the tour of Nigeria (Courtesy of the SATURDAY SUN, 2019 – Politics, eds. Magnus Eze, Geoffrey Anyanwu, David Onwchekwa).

Thereafter, the NCNC in subsequent Meetings ratified the appointment of Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as the new National President to take over the mantle of leadership of the Party and appointed the National Secretary from the North. When the Northern Secretary died he was replaced by Dr. Kola Balogun from the West. Then the first thing they did was to send a delegation to the UK to demand for Nigeria's Independence and the abrogation of the obnoxious 1947 Richard's Constitution as explained elsewhere in this Book. When Sir Richards, Nigeria's Governor General (1946 - 1948) was recalled to England, Sir John MacPherson took over and created the Northern, Western and Eastern Regions as a Federation. This led to the springing up of Trade Unions (TUC) and eventually the Nigerian Labour Congress (NLC) together with the Action Group Party (AG) led by Chief Obafemi Awolowo in the West and the Northern People's Congress (NPC) led by Sir Ahmadu Bello in the North. However, when the Nigerian Youths thought that the agitation was moving with such a slow speed, they formed the Radical Zikist Movement then chaired by Dr. M.C.K. Ajuluchukwu. Kola Balogun was elected Secretary. This was ostensibly to revolutionize the agitation for Independence since the NCNC was taking it too easy, believing in negotiation rather than revolution and conflict and recommending that they should go easy. Nevertheless, in 1949, the NCNC decided to stage a Revolution which was to take the form of protests by telling the Nigerian citizens to no longer pay taxes to Foreign Governments and warning the Policemen of Nigerian origin never to arrest or molest fellow citizens. It was a sort of civil disobedience, one might say! At this point in time, there was no Nigerian Officer beyond the rank of Police Inspector and Sergeant Major in the Police Force. In fact, nobody was even a Commissioned Officer in the Army. But that year, one of the Zikist leaders, Mr. Osita Agwuna came to Lagos and delivered a lecture at Tom Jones Memorial Hall to conscientize the people. He was promptly arrested, charged to court and thrown into prison together with Anthony Enahoro, Frederick Anyiam and other Nationalists who had attended the Lecture since their Zikist policy was not to make any pleas before any White Judge. People like Mallam Raji Abdallah, Mokwugo Okoye, Bob Ogbuagu, Ikenna Nzimiro, J.C.J. Anakwe etc. even dared the British to give them the maximum sentence if they thought their Movement was illegal. Indeed, all of them were put into the gulag for various terms with hard labour. They did not lose hope but however continued the struggle after serving their prison terms. The Nigerian citizens even accorded them heroic reception as they wore their Prison Graduate caps (PG) everywhere they went. Such bold and daring political ex-convicts were also exempted from paying bus fares when traveling in any part of Nigeria then, because everywhere, Nationalism was the in-thing. This also led to those series of pre-Independence Constitutional Conferences in London between 1947 - 1957.

SIR ALBERT MACAULEY

That was why in 1960, the Nigerian citizenry with one accord agreed and as it were acquiesced by telling these freedom fighters to go ahead "we shall elect you to go and run our country for us now with the nationalism in you, we trust you". Yet they did all this without receiving or giving money as our modern day Nigerians are doing in recent times. Even communities in those days were begging their sons and daughters and other individuals to come out and serve them as Governors, Councilors, Senators or MHRS because such individuals were found worthy. But nowadays it depends on who has the money to bribe his/her way; who can tell lies and has the capacity to hire thugs against his political opponents. Nowadays too, those who find themselves elected or have maneuvered themselves to be elected are embroiled in open and hidden intrigues for positions to become principal officers and juicy Committee Chairmen in Parliament or the National/ State Assemblies instead of engaging themselves in robust and articulate discourse on good governance and service as well as how they would tackle the myriads of problems confronting the country and their States and Constituencies viz. on economy, security, education, health, unemployment, etc. Most people especially those in the political class today see politics as an industry and business for thugs and criminals in the way they take politics as a quick way of making money and amassing wealth. As a matter of fact, our political class seem to play God when they are always thinking and planning for positions in the next Elections which may be some years ahead whereas they have not even started or concluded their present terms in office. As human beings, nobody knows who will be alive at that time, but they are wearing themselves out about the future? Today, Nigeria's political space is replete with selfish and dishonest politicians who place themselves and their interests above national affairs and the welfare and progress of the country vis-à-vis fellow Nigerians. To what extent can a country make progress and advance as some countries like Indonesia, Singapore, UAR, etc. which were far behind Nigeria? This is why Nigeria as the 6th largest producer of petroleum in OPEC cannot afford a national carrier, cannot run a railway system, cannot produce an army not to talk of a Police Force capable of overcoming the challenges of insecurity, kidnappings, banditry, terrorism etc. cannot produce enough power for even the Capital Territory, cannot employ and pay her citizens and worse still cannot even have a functional refinery. What a shame! They forget that people used to win Elections in Nigeria in those days without spending money and without bribing anybody and bringing confusion everywhere. People were ready and willing to go out and vote for men and women of their choice as their civic duty demanded and the electoral officers were always civil servants. Everybody has read or heard about the absolute dedicated service, efficiency, commitment, honesty and integrity of civil servants of those days. Everybody can see that Nigerian Political leaders of today do not seem to show concern and genuine interest and patriotism to solve the problems facing the citizenry, whereas we all know that leadership is an opportunity to serve humanity. But in Nigeria it is an opportunity to amass personal wealth. This is nothing but a sad commentary on leadership and governance. The stark neglect and politicization of the orgies of terrorism, kidnapping, banditry and herdsmen rampages coupled with armed robbery and rape in recent times portray the extent to which Nigeria and her leaders with unpatriotic and selfish considerations have sunk and fallen prostrate before the international community and the world at large.

MATHEMATICAL ABRACADABRA BY THE NORTH TO GAIN POLITICAL ADVANTAGE OVER THE SOUTH

In 1957, the British Imperial Government granted internal autonomy or "Self-Rule" to Eastern and Western Nigeria but deferred that of Northern Nigeria until 1959 when the North would be ready. When it became clear that Nigeria was eminently ready and competent for Self-Rule, the Colonial Government had no choice but to grant Independence to Nigeria on October 1, 1960, just as she did to Gold Coast thereafter renamed Ghana in 1957. The new Independent Federal Government of Nigeria was constituted in the 1959 pre-Independence Elections with NCNC scoring 2.6 Million Votes for 94 Seats, Action Group 1.59 Million votes for 74 Seats and NPC 1.56 Million Votes for 144 SEATS in the Nigerian Parliament to enable the North produce the Prime Minister in the person of Alhaji Tafawa Balewa of Bauchi. Of course no single Political Party in that year had two-thirds of the seats hence the Coalition Government between the NPC and NCNC formed the Government. The Action Group led by Chief Obafemi Awolowo became the official Opposition to the Government with Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as the Governor General thereof. The rest they say is history. But what type of History and what Mathematical calculation is that: 2.6 Million or even 1.59 Million being less than 1.56 Million? Giving 144 Seats to the North by the Colonial jingoists with only 1.56 Million was simply the British abadacabra in order to connive with and give the Muslim North demographic superiority and political advantage over the Christian South.

But before this, they had surreptitiously through the 1947 Constitution of Sir Arthur Richards crafted the demographic configuration of Nigeria by diving it into what they deemed as THREE UNEQUAL PARTS/REGIONS: viz. NORTH with KADUNA as Headquarters ostensibly aimed to constitute a majority of 2/3 of Nigeria such that the SOUTH which was to constitute EAST with Headquarters at ENUGU 1/3 and WEST with Headquarters at IBADAN 1/3. Of course with this type of calculations the entire geographic expression called Nigeria would NEVER, NEVER get a MAJORITY at any National Election with any political party in the REGIONS vying to become the RULING PARTY till thy kingdom come. So the joggling of (figures) VOTES during Elections, and announcing a majority therefrom for the WINNER thereto; viz. 1.5 Million Votes to give the NORTH 144 SEATS (ie. 2/3) and EITHER 2.0 Million (WEST 1/3) OR 2.2 Million Votes (EAST 1/3) in Nigeria did not begin today. In British Mathematics 2/3 + 1/3 + 1/3 = 1; instead of what should conventionally and normally be 1/3 + 1/3 + 1/3 = 1 whole ie. North + East + West = Nigeria.

Thereafter in 1961, the Nationalists considered that the Constitution signed by Queen Elizabeth II of England for Nigeria's Independence was not adequate and good enough and so ordered the New Parliament to set up a Committee to prepare a new Constitution signed by all Nigerians. The Committee set out to bring in eminent personalities within and outside of Parliament to draw up the Nigerian Constitution. In 1963 a new Constitution was promulgated which made Nigeria a Sovereign Republican State. Unfortunately, in 1964 there was a serious internal rift in the Action Group which led to the loss of face between Chief Obafemi Awolowo who led the Opposition at the centre and Chief Samuel O. Akintola his Deputy who had become the Premier of Western Region. He surreptitiously assumed leadership of the Party and went behind Awolowo to form Alliance with the Northern Peoples' Congress led by Sir Ahmadu Bello. It was this move that resulted in the sharp division within the Action Group that so much affected the position of the NCNC and the NPC together with the resultant crisis in the Western Region of Nigeria. The trouble was catastrophic and catapulted to what became known as "OPERATION WETIE" and the dissolution of the Western House of Assembly.

The situation continued to worsen to such an extent that some Candidates in both the NCNC and Action Group were not allowed to register in certain Constituencies. This worsening situation led to the Military staging a Coup in 1966 to stop the Government of the day and eventually taking over Government. To administer the Nation, the Supreme Military Council headed by General Johnson Umunakwe Aguiyi-Ironsi appointed Lt. Col Emeka Ojukwu as the Military Governor of Eastern Region, Lt. Col Adekunle Fajuyi, Western Region, Major Usman Katsina, Northern Region and Lt. Col David Ejoor, Mid-Western Region. Thereafter there was a crisis within the Military itself in which General Aguyi-Ironsi and Lt. Col Adekunle Fajuyi were assassinated in Ibadan Government House in the reprisal coup of July, 1966 and the headship of the Federal Government became void. Lt. Col Yakubu Gowon was promoted to take over as the new Head of the Supreme Military Government and Commander In-Chief of the Armed Forces of Nigeria. But Lt. Col Odumegwu Ojukwu argued that as his junior, Gowon could not boss over him. This led to a serious personality clash that overwhelmed the Nation resulting in the 1967- 1970 Nigeria – Biafra fratricidal civil war that brought Nigeria to her knees. Then began a series of military coups with succeeding Military Heads of State taking over the governance of Nigeria beginning with General Muritala Muhammed who overthrew General Gowon and took over (August 1975 – February 1996); General Olusegun Obasanjo (February 1996 – October 1979); then began the Interregnum era of return to the Civil Rule of Alhaji Shehu Shagari with a Constitution drawn up and signed General Obasanjo (October 1979 – December 1983) followed by the Military Rule of General Muhamadu Buhari (December 1983 – August 1985) General Ibrahim Badamosi Babangida (August 1985 – September 1993) followed by another Interregnum and the Civil Rule of Chief Ernest Shonekan (September 1993 – May 1994). Then General Sani Abacha overthrew Shonekan and ruled (May 1994 – June 1998) and finally General Abdusalami Abubakar (June 1998 – May 1999). General Abdusalami Abubakar then told a bewildered Nation that his military Rule would be a short one and the last. Then true to his words he formed a Constituent Committee to draw up another Constitution for Nigeria which is still in force but with amendments. One evil that ensued from military rule was the abolition of the teaching of History in Schools and this has affected the mindset of Nigerians; never thereafter to be able to learn from the past, re-organize and strategize for the present and plan for the future. It is sad indeed.

Further to the above schedule of modern events and personalities especially with regard to the Traditional Institutions in Annang country, Annang even before the civil war boasted of a galaxy of personalities both in the Civil Service and political arena notably the late Hon Ibanga U. Akpabio erstwhile Minister of Education in the early 1960s, Barr Akpan Ekukinam, Hon Donald Etiebet who was the first ever Annang Governor of the Old Cross river State now succeeded as it were by Obong, His Excellency Gov. Godswill Obot Akpabio, Hon Christopher Udom Essiet the first Speaker ever of the House of Assembly in the post war Republic and others too numerous to recount, All these go to show the land marks attained by the Annangs not excluding those of the Spiritual, Chieftaincy and Cultural Affairs. Another notable aspect of the schedule is the list of some Clans which migrated from the original URUAN parent stock as observed already, specifically, Ikot Ibritam, in Oruk Anam LGA, Afaha Obong, and Afaha in Abak, Essien Udim and Ukanafun LGAs, Obio Akpa in Oruk Anam LGA- a scion from IKPA Riverine Clan in URUAN, as also Ikono in Etim Ekpo LGA. As noted above, IKONO perhaps the largest Clan of them all and its peoples were the first Clan ever from ancient URUAN stock to break away and emigrate to their present locations, sections of which still belong to Ikot Ekpene Senatorial Distinct while others are scattered both over Uyo and Eket Senatorial Districts and stretching from ancient IBOM and cradle land to the very epicentre of Akwa Ibom State in Uyo Local Government Area and Headquarters of Akwa Ibom State.

THE CATHOLIC COUNTRY OF ANNANG a.k.a. DIOCESE OF IKOT EKPENE APOSTOLATE WITNESS: HOW I HAVE SEEN ANNANG THESE OVER 50 YEARS (1950-2018)

PREAMBLE AND REMINISCENCES OF ANNANG COUNTRY

Annang ma, ma; ma-ma de-e-o! Iyai, Iyai! I formally opened my small eyes and ears to the tell-tales about Annang country in the late 1940's but precisely in 1950 when I was in Std. Six and preparing to take the Special Scholarship Common Entrance to the famous Holy Family College having previously passed the RCM Schools General Common Entrance to St. Patrick's College Ikot Ansa Calabar (which happened to be my mum's first Choice), but my paternal uncle Prince A.A.Ekarika decided: "to Holy Family College, Abak you must go because our son George Okon Bassey a.k.a G.O.B PERPENDICULAR so nicknamed on account of his athletic, smart and holding his head straight-up-walking-steps even till old age, has been appointed Tutor thereto and has graduated in the 1st batch from the University of Ibadan." Whereas I had physically known and seen the students of SPC with their beautiful and gaudy green "SPACO" blazers and had no idea of what those of HFC looked like, it was a painful decision for my little head to take. But pronto, my uncle returned the 2:6d Entrance fee to my dad and gave me another 2:6d to go pay for HFC

Entrance. Thus began my life and long association with Annang Catholic country, hence this compelling inspirational odyssey as it were, of my recollections about IK Catholic Diocese of Annang nation. For at School, St. Joseph's Idu Uruan as also at Holy Trinity Mbiakong, Sacred Heart Calabar (during our preparations for Confirmation in St.V,1949) and at St Joseph's Anua (as Boys Scouts), what became impressionable in the minds of young scholars of the time was the frightening stories of the infamous "EKPE IKPA UKOT" a.k.a man leopard eating ghosts of Abak, Ekparakwa/Ukanafun as also the "AMA-UKE" of Ukana, EKA EKONG and MBOBO-EKPO/UTU-EKPE of Urua Inyang, all in Annang country. All of these sent frightening shivers to the spines of youngsters. Providentially to douse all these fears were the glorying tributes paid by my father about his friend, Chief Joseph Udo Adadiaha of Ikot Ekpene, the President General of the defunct St Joseph's League – the progenitor of the Vatican II Laity/Pastoral Council. He was the Chairman /Board of Governors of HFC yet my dad was talking as if he was going to be our Housemaster or Cottage prefect: but this invariably "wetted my appetite" as it were, to go to Holy Family College. This gigantic man as he seemed to us was the first black ever seen in living memory to ride a BSA motor cycle, probably donated to him by the legendary Fr. Hugh McGrath SPS of Ifuho. Only the Rev. Fathers of those days rode on motor bikes. Often, after important and "big Ceremonies" at St. Anne's Ifuho, we used to relax in his house and this had brought me face to face several times with Ete Joseph Adadiaha. On Dec. 8 1950 of that Holy Year, kneeling with my father before His Lordship Bishop James Moynagh for his blessing at the porch of Anua Rectory, Very Rev. Fr. T. Fitzgerald the Superior, introduced us after the Solemn Holy Year Mass Celebration as crowds from the then Eastern Region had converged at ANUA with the expatriate Holy Ghost Fathers wearing their long white beards and black tassels. There were only five black Rev. Fathers in sight viz. Frs. John Cross Anyogu, William Obelagu, Michael Tansi, Joseph Nwanegbo and Dominic Cardinal Ekandem - all ordained from St Anthony of Padua Igbariam, the forerunner of Bigard Seminary Enugu & St Joseph's Major Seminary, Ikot Ekpene. With this meeting with the Bishop all my fears about Annang country vanished and my going to HFC was now a fait accompli. But what has all these got to do with the issue at hand? Quite a lot, for this preamble prepared me for what I was later to witness for the greater part of my life now in my 70's in Annang country. Providentially, I still find myself here, so to speak: "I still dey kampe among the Annang!"

BISHOP EKANDEM'S INSTALLATION AND HIS MISSIONARY APOSTOLATE

Talking about my recollections and impressions of Ikot Ekpene Catholic Diocese of Annang nation, whereas before then nobody ever heard of the word DIOCESE, or BISHOP or HIS LORDSHIP except in Catholic circles, it would look like writing a brief History of the Diocese or about Annang, but is it? I do not think so! For when the news of the erection of the new Diocese of Ikot Ekpene came to us in my final year of Philosophy at the St Paul's Bigard Memorial Seminary Enugu, all through the years my Apostolic work assignment had always been here: 1st year, Ifuho main station parish with both Std VI convent and boys schools as well as Higher School respectively; 2nd year, St Mary's Ikot Atasung with a Std IV School, 3rd year St Francis Xavier Ikot Osurua (Std.II), etc. all of these being Mission stations in old Ifuho Parish/ I was always working in the company of blind Catechist Emmanuel Afangide together with Venerable Bro. Michael Stephen Ekeng as H/M St. Anne's Ifuho, interpreter, Foundation President and pioneer foundation member of the Legionary of Mary established in1932/3 in the whole of Africa after that of Ireland, the first in the whole world founded by the indefatigable Legionary icon, Bro. Frank Duff in 1921. But the Inauguration and Installation of the then Auxiliary Bishop of Calabar, first indigenous Bishop in the whole of Anglophone West/Central Africa whose Consecration previously took place on 6th February 1954 at Sacred Heart Cathedral, Calabar, as the first Bishop of Ikot Ekpene was to signal that epoch making event in Annang country the centenary of which we are now celebrating its Golden Jubilee of the creation of the Catholic Diocese of Ikot Ekpene @50 under the patronage of SS Philip & James occurring on 3rd May, 1963. That day cannot be lost to anyone now living who was there to witness it, especially for the mammoth crowd which was breathtaking. The mass of human traffic as well as vehicular (bicycles and lorries-no cars or vans, no motor bikes-except those of Rev. Fathers in those days) had made it almost impossible to move. I could recollect that the Celebrant's convoy, Bishop Dominic Ignatius Ekandem's, which started off at St. Michael's Uyo Road was to converge with those coming from Abak/IK junction en route IFUHO to make way for those taking Uyo /Aba road and those coming from Aba/IK. But as already observed, even the white Bishops from the then Dioceses of Western and Eastern Regions of Nigeria had to be ferried on bicycles from Urua Akpan junction as Aba/IK road was literally jammed by human traffic. It was an impressionable experience, and the only time such a mammoth crowd was ever noticed was in 1998 at the Beatification of Fr. Michael Tansi by Pope John Paul II at Oba in Onitsha.

WHY IKOT EKPENE DIOCESE WAS CREATED IKOT EKPENE DIOCESE IN PERSPECTIVE

It should not be lost to us why in spite of Anua, Oron, Essene axis being the strategic centers of early Catholicity in those days, and particularly Anua as Head station from which it was evangelized; Ikot Ekpene became the favoured new Diocese after Ogoja to be erected from Old Calabar. Why? I can vouch that first and foremost, Annang country was the beloved territory of Bishop Moynagh first evangelized in 1915 by the legendary Holy Ghost Fathers J. Kraft, L. Steigler and P. Biechy who wrote the first Efik Hymnal and Catechism and who later became the Bishop of Congo Brazzaville, since he (Moynagh) was appointed thereto in 1930 by the Superior General Msgr. Corney Plunkett and the Regional Superior Very Rev. Pat Whitney who then oversaw Ogoja axis, then Fr. Thomas McGettrick (who baptized me) Anua axis, Fr. P.J.Costelloe Calabar axis, and Fr. D Creedon Essene axis. Secondly IK diocese was a homogenous country with like dialects and co-extensive with Annang sub-tribe though the whole of Ikono including INI was its potential part. Thirdly, Ikot Ekpene and Abak were big and important centres of commerce before the advent of Catholicism. Its markets extended to what has now become ABA metropolis in ABIA STATE. ABA is an ANNANG word for an enclosure or fenced grounds and was the headquarters of ANNANG markets then just as OBO ANNANG, URUAN INYANG aka ABALA, etc. There was a big market centre there and this continued until it was recently transferred and rechristened ARIARIA MARKET. I could never fathom as a youngster the volume of produce that came from Annang, Ndoki a.k.a Azumini and Ngwa country especially ABA area to my home town of IDU, precisely Nwaniba, that part of Idu (where two roads divide - nwa a-iba, one branching to where the European Companies were situated and where they settled ie. at the present 5-Star of Ibom Meridien of former UAC, PZ, M&K etc. fame.

These were British and other European enterprises, the other road (usu Esuk) led to the great beach market- ESUK MBEHE-where slaves and other merchandise" jousted" and also those transported through the Annang version of the LONG-JUJU of IBRITAM a.k.a. EKPE IKPA UKOT as mentioned already. Fourthly it was fitting that the first priest ever ordained at Ifuho (Dec. 7, 1947) by His Grace Charles Heerey, CSSP should be appointed first indigenous Bishop thereto. And finally to my own mind, Bishop Moynagh being such a foresighted Apostle of these parts did not mind sending his first and best priest thereto even in preference to the two Annang Priests Very Rev. Frs. Isidore Peter Umana (1973, the first to be ordained Deacon in the S.H Cathedral Calabar) and Emmanuel Afangide (1974), ordained at St. Joseph's pro-Cathedral Anua. I am saying this because in May1962 Cardinal Giovanni Battista Montini who became Pope Paul VI after the legendary Pp. John XXIII, accompanied by the Apostolic Delegate to Central and West Africa, His Excellency Archbishop Sergius Pignenodoli, came to Africa and Moynagh being no.1Bishop in Nigeria at the time brought him not to Calabar or Uyo central enough for Ogoja, Abakaliki, PH etc. but to Ifuho and all the people, both the Clergy, Religious and Catholic Faithful had to come thither as if to prophesy:"next year (May1963) you will be Bishop here in IK). I won't forget in a hurry that after the Apostolic Blessing, Bishop Moynagh signaled to me standing near him and instinctively I intoned "OBONG ANWAN ENYONG DARA" and this was during Easter time such that the whole Ifuho shook with the rhythm from the mammoth crowd which overflowed from the Cathedral into the palm branches sheds all over the compound and Ifuho football fields as there were no canopies then.

PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS OF BISHOP EKANDEM'S APOSTOLIC MINISTRY

A. THE INSTITUTION OF CATECHISTS IN IKOT EKPENE DIOCESE

On all accounts, Bishop Ekandem was determined to chart his own peculiar missionary Apostolate and make waves in his Evangelism and Catechesis. For while Bishop James Moynagh made effective use of Headmasters and seasoned experienced Part C teachers and even in some cases Grade III teachers as interpreters and Mission station Catechists, Bishop Ekandem went all out to train and establish a college of Station and Parish Catechists unheard of in the whole of the Onitsha Ecclesiastical Province. In fact when Pope Paul VI invited these Mission Catechists for an International Seminar in Rome, Bishop Ekandem sent the largest contingent of Catechists from Ikot Ekpene having equipped them with black suits with the Roman collar to match. It was a sort of "comedy of errors "on their arrival in Rome because they were mistaken for I PADRI (ie. ordained missionary priests). Later I was to learn that he actually had made contacts with Ireland for their remuneration grace a la SPS Fathers in the Diocese which cost about £200(two hundred pounds) to maintain 20 of them. It should also be recalled here that all the Mission schools and stations (village churches) had mud-built accommodation for all the teachers and Catechists, the schools being mostly Boys' schools. In the case of Convent schools, the Convent teachers – all single and unmarried - lived in a sort of boarding houses with the Headmistress as" mistress of the manor" since no co-educational institutions were permitted then and these Convents were almost always established around parishes to be overseen by the Fathers-in-Charge. Two good examples were Ndot in Eastern Annang/Ukanafun where St Alban's Parish Inen was established and also the newly established parish of Nko at Nto Ekpu Ikot in 1954, with my sister, late Princess (Lady) Theresa Edet LSM who died recently as first headmistress. Bishop Ekandem had his greatest support even from these Convent teachers and they served so well in the maintenance and care of the missions and the priests. By this Ikot Ekpene Diocese which before then had only 5/6 Parishes namely "almighty" Afaha Obong which covered almost the whole of Abak Division except Urua Inyang on account of the famous St. Augustine's Teachers' Training College established in 1944 to ease the sufferings of teacher trainees who previously studied at far away St. Thomas Ogoja established in 1937 which I also had attended with the same Very Rev Fr. P.J. Costello SPS, colleague of Bishop Moynagh as pioneer Principal of both before St Mary's TTC Ediene was established in 1952 for the same reason.

Someone had asked me to explain why Bishop Moynagh chose to bring to Annang country all the big Institutions like Holy Family College Abak(1943), St.Augustine's just mentioned, Holy Child H.E.C. Ifuho (1942) Queen of the Apostles Afaha Obong (1953) Loreto Girls Juniorate Eriam (1954) and later St Columbanus Ikwen, St Mary's Hospital Urua Akpan etc. as also the coming of the Vincentian Fathers (all in1962) into Annang country whereas apart from St. Patrick's (SPC), transferred from St. Joseph's College Calabar (1905) to its present site @ Ikot Ansa (1935) and Cornelia Connelly College Uyo a.k.a. CCC (1942) and whereas there was nothing in Calabar and the whole of the "MAINLAND" of Ibibio country: Uyo and Eket Provinces (Oron was under Eket until after the civil war)? Simple! Because of the reasons given for the creation of Ikot Ekpene Diocese as also the fear of what I said in the preamble about Annang country was the beginning of wisdom in opening up these areas to civilization and for God.

B. THE INSTITUTION OF THE CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE

Later metamorphosed into NKA ADIAHA OBONG and rechristened CWO by Vatican II, was another milestone in the pastoral Organization of Bishop Ekandem. On his arrival, he had established a strong and formidable Women's Organization which hitherto had been his brain child, an association he co-founded with Bishop Moynagh in 1954. I was in my final year ("Class Six") and can even recall when I rode my mother to the Inaugural Rally and Pontifical Mass at Anua with the Raleigh bicycle she and dad had bought for me in qualifying for the Cambridge Exam (CANTAB) in 1955. Bishop Ekandem so raised the status of Catholic women in Annang country to such great heights that they were always invited by the IK County Council Administration to participate at the Annual Independence Celebrations & Parade/March-Past in IK Stadium wearing their beautiful uniform and vests with caps to match. I can also recall on one occasion when Madam

Mary Nkoyo Mba (mother of Lady Bertha Okoro 1st H/Mistress with my late sister of Holy Child Nursery, School Cardinal Ekandem Ave) led the parade. Then the CWO reached its apogee when late Lady Philomena Ekanem (WUCCO International Officer) was at the helm of affairs as Woman Leader of the Organization in Ikot Ekpene Diocese and of the Calabar Province.

C. SODALITY OF THE SACRED/IMMACULATE HEART
D. LEGION OF MARY AND APOSTLESHIP OF PRAYER

Nobody who ever lived or worked in the Catholic Diocese of Ikot Ekpene before or even after the coming of Cardinal Ekandem could fail to have witnessed and to testify to the vitality and grandeur in the ways and doings of the members of 1st Friday/Saturday Devotion in honour of the Sacred of Jesus/ Immaculate Heart of Mary as also to the growth and progress of this singular Association except perhaps the Legion of Mary which need not be repeated here for obvious reasons. This Pious Association and Lay Apostolate till date still stands strong in the Catholic Diocese of Ikot Ekpene which incidentally is the acclaimed headquarters of the Legion of Mary in Nigeria. I had written a well researched paper and submitted to His Lordship Bishop C.A.EtukUdoh and published on the occasion of the 75th Jubilee & National Celebration (Sept 6-8, 2008) of the Foundation of the Legion of Mary in Ifuho in 1933 under the caption: VENERABLE MICHAEL STEPHEN EKENG – LIFE OF APOSTOLIC WITNESS vis-à-vis THE FOUNDATION OF THE LEGION OF MARY IN AFRICA & ASIA. It is hereby set forth below:

ORIGINS OF THE LEGION OF MARY IN AFRICA
THE HISTORY OF THE FOUNDATION OF THE LEGION OF MARY IN AFRICA
THE PLACE OF THE LEGION OF MARY IN THE CHURCH'S MISSION

The story of the foundation of the Legion of Mary is anchored on the auspicious and glorious occasion of the 75th Anniversary – grace á la the Diamond Jubilee of the Foundation of the Legion of Mary, the first in all of Africa in what is now the Metropolitan Ecclesiastical Province of Calabar by the legendary and charismatic Apostle, Servant of God, Bro Michael Stephen Ekeng under the indefatigable, visionary and legendary Missionary, the Rt. Rev. James Moynagh, SPS in 1933 at St Anne's Ifuho, now the Cathedral Church of the Catholic Diocese of Ikot Ekpene. It is also anchored in honour of Mary, the Queen and Mother of Jesus - She whom the Angels adore and whom the heavens magnify and glorify, as also her adorable Son, Jesus Christ the Redeemer. But why? Precisely because Mary is the one who gave birth to the Saviour of Mankind and through was brought to mankind the imminence and nearness of God's loving appearing among men to wit, the coming of the Messiah into the world scene as the Emmanuel: GOD - WITH - US! It is therefore one of great forebodings of joy whereby the Angels declared:

> "Behold I bring you tidings of great joy – which is for you and for all the people: for a Child is born for us – a Son is given to our race; and dominion is laid upon His shoulders. Oh, he is the Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Eternal Father, Prince of Peace! He is Christus Dominus"(Is. 9:5; Lk. 2:13)!

That is why the unique role and place of the Legion of Mary in the Church's Mission, is addressed to all and sundry, precisely on account of the special privilege and providential role of the Virgin Mary in the mystery of Christ and economy of Salvation of Mankind. For Mary is indeed after the pattern of her Divine Son, the Mediatrix of all Graces since we have received no Grace of Jesus Christ which has not passed through her hands. First as the new people of Israel, Christians are wont to rejoice at that proclamation of the prophet Micah – as the privileged powerful and royal class, "A holy nation – a people set apart" and as "God's own people, that you may declare his wonderful deeds – the MIRABILIA DEI of him Who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light. For once we were no people, now we are God's people! We had no mercy, now he has shown us mercy!" (1 Pet 19-10). Secondly, this history & place of the Legion of Mary in the Church's Mission captures the place of the BVM in Christ's salvific mission. For where Mary is – there is Jesus! And where Jesus is – there is salvation and life! "And when the Angels went away from them into Heaven, behold the shepherds said to one another, Let us go to Bethlehem and see this thing … And they went with haste and found Mary … and the Child Jesus" (Lk 2:15-16). To find Jesus is to find Mary and as the prayer goes, viz the Salve Regina: "Turn then thine eyes of mercy towards us. And after this our exile, show unto us the blessed fruit of thy womb Jesus." (Cf. Salve Regina) Therefore to find Jesus is to find God.

THE ROLE OF MARY VIS-A-VIS THE LEGION OF MARY IN THE CHURCH'S MISSION OF EVANGELIZATION

Every individual layman/woman nay the Legionary, must stand before the world as a witness to the Resurrection and life of the Lord Jesus and as a sign that God is alive in us. Thus the Christian legionary becomes to the world what the soul is to the body making him more and more effectively fulfill the Church's Mission for the life of the world (L G.37). Hence the Legion Charter of the CATENA LEGIONIS clearly enjoins the weekly performance of legionary work among the People of God and communities wherever the legionary finds him/herself viz. in home visitations, instructions (CCD) and other pious works of the Legionary Apostolate. "This is eternal life, your sanctification … that they may know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ Whom Your have sent" (Jn 17:3). For just as the Son was sent by the Father, so He too sent the Apostles saying: "As the Father sent me, even so I send you" (Jn 20:21). Again he said "Going therefore make disciples of all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you, and behold I am with you always even till the consummation of the world" (Mtt 28:18-20). This is the solemn mandate and mission of Christ, namely, the salvation of the whole human race. This is the goal of human history and economy of missionary enterprise: the TEACHING, SANCTIFYING and GOVERNING office of the Church. Every Christian faithful and by implication every legionary is called upon to effectively participate in this missionary effort of the Church and the legionary has to perform this most assiduously. CJC 204 captures this when it states among others that "the Christian Faithful, legionaries in particular, in as much as they have been incorporated in Christ through Baptism, and have been constituted as the people of God ….become sharers in Christ's priestly office": SANCTIFYING, TEACHING and GOVERNING epitomized in the priestly, prophetic and royal office of Christ himself which he transferred to the Church. The legionaries are also called upon to exercise the MISSION which God has entrusted to the Church to fulfill in the world. It therefore remains to be seen how legionaries in particular carry out this MISSION. But what better underscores the Role of the Legion of Mary in the Mission of the Church than the story of LEGIO MARIAE since its inception! What better captures the story of the Legion of Mary especially since its birth in Africa? Then what exemplifies it's almost miraculous expansion to the rest of the world and the birth of the Legion on the world scene than the story of the life and times of the legendary Michael Stephen Ekeng – the Apostle of the Legion of Mary in Africa which has so resonated to the ends of the earth? Hence to the History and times of Michael S. Ekeng vis-a-vis the history of the birth of one of the greatest of Lay Apostolates and Catholic Action in Christendom to wit, the legion of Mary, we must now turn, but first of all to the caveat and some preliminary remarks.

First, the story of the birth and built – up of the Legion in the whole Catholic world which started in Ireland in September 1921 is set forth in the Official Hand Book of the Legion of Mary, Copyright: Concilium Legionis, De Montfort House, Dublin, Secondly, and very coincidentally with such divine and mysterious providence and by God's inscrutable ways, the Birth of the Legion of Mary before the rest of the world after Dublin in Europe came about at St. Anne's Ifuho in 1933 in the then Prefecture Apostolic of Calabar, now the Ecclesiastical Metropolitan See of Calabar which then embraced to wit, Ebonyi, Rivers, Bayelsa, Cross River, Akwa Ibom states and parts of Abia State in now the Dioceses of Port Harcourt, Bomadi, Umuahia, Aba, Ogoja, Abakaliki, Ikot Ekpene, Uyo and Calabar. That was the very year when the Holy See with His Holiness

Pope Pius XI then gloriously reigning precisely also in the very month of September, gave official recognition and blessing to the Legion of Mary with Frank Duff as Founder and President of the Concilium Legionis, Ireland in these words: "We give a very special blessing to this beautiful and holy work - the Legion of Mary. Its name speaks for itself. The image of Mary immaculate on its Standard portrays high and holy things… the Blessed Virgin Mary as Mother of the Redeemer and of us all. She co-operates in our Redemption, for it was under the Cross that she became our Mother. This year we are celebrating the Centenary of that co-operation and that universal maternity of Mary." (Vatican 16th September, 1933) What more then do we need to say as proof that the Legion after a manner, emphatically illustrates the Mission of the Church in the Salvation of mankind through Mary!

THE STORY AND BIRTH PLACE OF THE LEGION OF MARY

The birth place of the Legion of May is Myer House, Francis Str. Dublin – Ireland. For it was here precisely at 8pm on that eventful day, 7th September 1921 on the eve of the Nativity of our Lady (8th September BVM's Birthday in our Liturgical Calendar) that a small group of pious lay – folks with Mr. Frank Duff as animator spontaneously assembled in prayer (probably this was his living room) after setting up a miniature altar the pattern of which has now become the standard of the Legion altar to wit; a small table, and standing on it the statue of the Immaculate Conception on a white table cloth flanked by two flower vases and two lit candle sticks. Under this setting on their knees they recited the age-old Rosary beginning with the invocation of the Holy Spirit – Spouse of the Blessed Mother of God. Then followed a discussion at length as to how best to serve God and neighbour- in what later permanently and officially became known as the ALLOCUTIO etc. Yes, for this was the inspired setting and humble birth of the Legion of Mary to the honour of the Most Immaculate Mother of God and to the glory of God the Father through the Son in the Holy Spirit. Glory be to Jesus! This is the story of the worldwide Movement, the army of Mary which providentially is the dramatic struggle between good and evil, between light and darkness (Gaudium et Spes, 11). This was to become an army organized after the model of the Roman military under the banner of Mary on the march and warfare to crush the head and power of Satan and win souls back to Her Divine Son. Since that first Meeting and enrolment, the Legion which was originally tagged "the Association of Our lady of Mercy" has like the biblical mustard seed sprouted and spread to the ends of the earth.

THE STORY OF THE LEGION OF MARY IN AFRICA SPOTLIGHT OF EVANGELICAL WITNESS – THE LEGION OF MARY LIFE AND TIMES OF BRO. MICHAEL STEPHEN EKENG (1886 - 1958) APOSTLE OF THE LEGION OF MARY IN AFRICA – THE MAKING OF A SAINT

THE MAN BRO. MICHAEL STEPHEN EKENG – SERVANT OF GOD

This is a story about the establishment of the legion of Mary in all of Africa - nay the rest of the world, for just as the inconspicuous and unspectacular forebodings of the Birth of the Legion in Ireland, the same can be said of its birth on the African soil. The Maria Legionis, an international Magazine and mouthpiece of the Legion published quarterly to the whole Catholic world and the Concilium Legionis since 1933 have carried quite some bagfuls of the mysterious but providential establishment of the Legion in Africa and its spread to all parts of the world through the instrumentality of a single inconsequential humble but charismatic figure, the Servant of God, Bro Michael Stephen Ekeng. We have the authenticity of this account from no other authority than then Prefect Apostolic of Calabar James Moynagh SPS, who became Bishop and also later, Father Thomas McGettrick SPS then Vicar of Anua which comprised the whole territory now Diocese of Ikot Ekpene and of course the whole territory of Uyo Diocese (1906 - 1941). In fact the Centenary account of 1985 puts Anua in terms of ratio ahead of the Onitsha Mission as a territory with regard to the Catholic population. Anua then had over a million population covering an area over 6,000 square kilometres with a Catholic population of over half a million consisting of 18,027pupils and 82, 557 adults excluding double this as Catechumens and those sympathetic to the Catholic Faith.

He later became the first Bishop of Ogoja and Abakaliki Dioceses (1942–1988). This is a story of a deputed young slave boy told by Mgr. T. McGettrick, though vehemently denied by his Efik kiths and kin and notably by the late Etubom Francis Efanga Archibong of the Sacred Heart Cathedral – former Secretary to the Military Government of South Eastern State (1968-75) who was a very outstanding Legionary of note who has also written the Memoirs and testimonies towards the canonization of Bro Ekeng. This is about the boy in the ignoble days of Slave Trade and inhuman traffic which still reigned supreme in West Africa with Calabar as Chief Slave port. This is about the boy who experienced in his young days and tasted the rigours of slavery as he was bought and sold, suffering unspeakable humiliation, physical and psychological agonies which formed an indelible mark on him. This is about one who later was to astound the whole world by preserving his interior liberty to find and reach God, first through Protestantism and then Catholicism to the extent that he attained such a high level of spirituality and holiness through the Legion of Mary both as Founder and President General of the Legion of Mary in Africa as well as the Marian Spirituality of St. Louis Maria de Montfort. Yes, for towards the end of the 19th century in a little hamlet in what is now Arochukwu, HQ of Ohafia - Bende in Abia State ie. "God's own land" (Arochukwu = God's people in Igbo tongue), was born this man of destiny, the legendary and charismatic Bro Michael Ekeng. Arochukwu is that infamous town dreaded for the LONG JUJU oracle – an idol and African device called IBRITAM INOKON of ancient Arochukwu. This was an intriguing device for tracking down for justice and verdict, people of various crimes and lawlessness, but was most conspicuously de facto, a stratagem for the capturing of slaves similar to another infamous subterfuge, the EKPE IKPA UKOT (man-leopard) of Abak and Ukanafun environs in what has now become Annang in Akwa Ibom State of Nigeria.

Precisely in 1886 was born into a peasant animist family of good repute a boy later to be named Ekeng in Efik nomenclature. He was very lovely, humble, energetic, docile and obedient to his parents. On one eventful day when he was then 6 years old, he and his elder brother Kalu (8) had gone to fetch water for their mother. They were suddenly waylaid and captured by some hefty slave marauders and dragged through the forest to the creeks. They were hidden there till the following day when their captors could board their urchin captives en route Cross river estuary in a canoe via Itu to Calabar, 100 miles away. Luckily on arrival, Ekeng was bought by a kind Calabar Presbyterian chieftain while Kalu was sold to a Lagos slave merchant. According to late Bishop McGettrick, the two brothers were re-united 45 years later precisely in 1939 when he, Ekeng had then become the Head Master and Catechist in the Calabar Prefecture as also the Comitium President General. Bro Ekeng, as he was popularly called had gone to Anua to relate this happy news to Bishop McGettrick, then Parish priest of Anua (Cf. Maria Legionis Quarterly 1941).

THE MAN LEOPARD SECRET SOCIETY a.k.a EKPE IKPA UKOT

In the course of this very chapter, specifically on Bro. Michael S. Ekeng, we have on several occasions made mention of the dreaded EKPE IKPA UKOT - MAN LEOPARD SECRET SOCIETY which menaced and brought about a reign of terror on the hapless citizens of the MAINLAND to wit, the Old Calabar Province in Eastern Nigeria in the late 1930s and early 1940s most especially in the Abak District. The Legion of Mary championed by Bro Ekeng together with magnificent and praiseworthy work of the IBIBIO STATE UNION were instrumental in the utter destruction of this nefarious cult. The man leapards were thought to be people – human beings, who had various grievances bordering on witchcraft, thefts, animosities and other recriminations and wranglings with their neighbours and perceived enemies. These people had with perfidy perfectly crafted and designed outfits of leopard skins to look like real wild leapards in the forest and donned these to transform themselves into wild leapards by wearing leopard claws and walking on all fours to terrorize people thereby giving the imprfession that their victims were casualties of wild leapards. Their victims were usually persons, men and women, against whom some of these men-leapards entertained animosity, rancour and hate bodering on vengeance. There were also recriminations concerning disputes over land, cases of adultery and EKPO ? KA OWO, divorce, non-payment of debts etc. that resulted in the reprisal or counter actions orchestrated by the Man-Leapard Cults. When probed to discover why such inequities had completely overwhelmed the populace without any reprieve, it was discovered that they were probably inveighing their anger against society and the authorities for failing to obtain appropriate redress to their grievances and from courts of justice in cases where their victims were usually involved. But this explanation seemed to fall flat on the face seeing that native courts were functioning optimally discharching their responsibilities expeditiously and more poignantly, the senior Expatriate British Administrative Officers, the District Officers, etc. were constantly on tour of their respective areas and were regularly exercising their statutory powers of reviewing judgments delivered by the various native courts. So what was the problem then? Nevertheless, the Colonial Administrative engaged in quasi-detective exercise by making discreet enquiries regarding the existence of such weird and unconscionable killers and abomination in the polity. But as it turned out, it was near impossible for the British Administrative Officers to penetrate the barricade of silence prevailing among the people as they went about their businesses with sealed lips though inwardly trembling in fear for their lives and loved ones. No one was willing to associate any names of known persons with the cultists resulting in whispering campaigns and gossips as the killing had a field day. What exactly was going on?

At the height of it Colonial Officers like Sir F. R. Kay, the British Expatriate Administrative Officer of Abak Division, Sir J. G. C. Allen, the Senior District Officer in-Charge of Opobo submitted to Government the prevalence of Man – Leopard menace in the Districts. At the same time the generalty of the populace felt grave concern about the prevalence of this menace and accordingly made representations to Government which had all along regarded the situation as grave enough to warrant a sledge-hammer action. In consequence of this, Authorities decided to establish the Headquarters of the Nigeria Police Force at Ikot Okoro the main centre of the Man-Leopard menace which had by then spread to parts of Abak, Ibekwe, Opobo, Ikot Okoro and Uyo Districts in the MAINLAND of Calabar Province in order to stem the tide. Information also was given to the effect that members of the highly respected Idiong Society of professional soothsayers were also invoved as those aiding and abetting the menace. They were seen as the chief architects who as soothsayers were supplying information on the movements of persons sought to be eliminated by the cultists specifically as to if such persons were likely to be found on lonely paths probably going or returning from their farms and other engagements.

Then the Government proptly embargoed the proliferation of the evil men and banned them as a terrorist group. That was not all, the Authorities put out a package deal declaring all those areas bordering Abak, Opobo, and parts of Uyo Districts of the Mainland as areas under the Law of Nigeria tantamount to a declaration of a state of emergency. Emergency measures characteristic of lightening speed were at once imposed. By Order under the provisions of the Crminal Code of Nigeria on ordeals, witchcraft, juju and criminal charms, the worship or invocation including the use and possession of drugs and articles associated with Idiong cult were prohibited. To cap it all, a curfew was also imposed in the affected areas between 5-30 pm and 6 am of the following day. The Government likewise posted 300 Police men scattered in camps staggered throughout the whole area with Mr. M. T. Williams the Senior Assistant Superintendent of Police in command. Then the Governor General, Sir Arthur Richards, G.C.M.G later Lord Milverton of Lagos and Bristol together with Sir Fr. Bernard Carr, then Chief Commissionr of the Eastern Provinces visited the area and addressed the Mbong Ikpa-Isong Traditional Rulers on the gravity of the situation indicating to them the determination of Govrnment to stamp out the menace. They appealed to them for cooperation to enable Government accomplish such an arduous task. Meanwhile the police officer in command engaged in investigating alleged cases of Man-Leopard killings so as to bring the suspects for prosecution in courts. To secure fairness, judges were empowered to assign lawyers at the expense of the court to defend accused persons. But all these did not seem to stem the tide of the menace and convictions even with orchestrated police hostilities to the public. This solution to the problem did seem to work and was considered counterproductive as it brought fear and intimidation not only on the punitive concept of deterrence considered as purely negative but also on a long term plan of finding a lasting solution to the menace because it was eating deep into the fabric of the national structure namely, Ibibio land.

OPERATIONS OF THE IBIBIO STATE UNION TO COUNTER THE SITUATION

Seeing that the measures taken by Government could not go far enough in stemming the menace and stamping out the operations of the nefarious cultists, Obong Ntuen Ibok, MBE, the acclaimed foremost Paramount Ruler in Ibibio land, of Nung Asang, Essene Town swung to action by inviting with the eyei, all the Mbong Ikpa-Isong of the land to a meeting at Ikot Akan in Ibekwe-Opobo District. Mr. Usen Udo Usen, the Secretary General of the UNION also made sure all the Officers and VIPs of the Union including those in the Diaspora were in attendance. With the eyei, everybody was called to order, and they came in the hundreds to answer the call of duty. By special Invitation Col F. A. W Schofield, the Senior District Officer of Opobo and Mr. P. P. Grey, the District Officer of Abak also attended the Conference accompanied by a Police detachment at Mr. M. T. William's command. All the Officers of the District Unions were also participants. The presence also of the Calabar UNION Branch with Mr. Paul B. Okon their President was significant as they were always accorded premier position in IBIBIO STATE UNION affairs. At the beginning of the Conference great sorrow and grief upon the people as some of their kith and kin were struck with the fear of imminent death, but there was only one thought in their minds; the complete extirpation of the Man-Leopard insurgency and how it could be done because the menace had proved still intractable and pernicious. On the hand, there was palpable fear of the Police who clearly demonstrated that the matter laid squarely in their hands especially as the revered Royal Fathers in attendance had laid emphasis on the proposal of conducting tours of the affected areas themselves and using traditional rituals except MBIAM which was considered intolerable and unacceptable to Christians.

On the other hand, there was also this fear and anguish felt everywhere in consequence of the shame and disgrace brought on Ibibio Peoples concerning this nefarious man-leopard menace with the resultant loss of innocent lives in the land, hence the great astonishment that overwhelmed and shrouded all and sundry.

As the tours went on nothing was left to chance, the team consisting wholly of dedicated Ibibio leaders also preached the doctrines of brotherly love, the sacredness and sanctity of human life by going to even the remotest and darkest corners of the affected areas in realization of the fact that isolation and ignorance would inevitably breed violence and prejudices among the illiterate pagan peoples. Government approval was sought for this but the Police proved a cog in the wheel of success because to them such tours would tantamount to admission of defeat on the part of the Police and regarding their work as ineffective. However, as a compromise they conceded that the tours be undertaken with their supervision and cooperation. But on the part of the people they felt themselves as a besieged and conquered people on account of the curfew imposed on their land the breaches of which were visited by the Police with heavy fines or sentences of imprisonment. Again, it was generally known that some members of the Police Force were veterans of the Second World War not long mobilized into the army who could carry out extra-judicial killings under the pretext of tracking down the men – leopards and arresting innocent citizens. As often happened when lorry loads of them were drafted into the area, they would demand "Information money" including being housed and fed in luxury camps and sumptuously fed at the expense of the local people. The Police Force or Army would never allow the so-called IBIBIO STATE UNION to "capture their fun" by an orchestrated "Fire Brigade" action in order to tidy up the problem at hand expeditiously and with dispatch thereby "taking the food from their mouth".

No, they would rather use delay tactics to make sure the problem lingers on for the perks of war with multiple inconvenience allowances in tow. While in such camps they would behave as if they are the constituted army of occupation in a conquered territory of tyrants in a Police State. They engage themselves in raiding and looting houses and compounds. They rape, terrorize and carry away anything of value including money, jewelry, fowls and goats. They would even break into farms and barns to harvest yams, cassava, cocoyam, kola nuts and coconuts in the bargain and would not mind detaining owners who protest and even ravish their wives and adolescent girls. The same thing always happens whenever and wherever there are hostilities and confrontations requiring military or police action as is playing out even today in the case of Boko Haram insurgency in the North East. Nobody wants it to end immediately and return the soldiers to their barracks. That was the same thing that played out in the context of the Biafran War. Whereas it was to be a Police action but it ended up in a full blown war lasting three years with over a million killed and ten million persons displaced in IDPs with the result that many of them were not happy as it soon ended. One can then understand why the Force persisted in their resistance to the well calculated tours by the Royal Fathers who knew through how to influence, persuade and assuage the people.

On March 20, 1947 the Resident of Calabar Province, Sir C. J. Mayne convened a Meeting of the IBIBIO STATE UNION at which he conveyed the message to the UNION of the long-awaited good tidings of the approval granted by the Colonial Government for the tours of the affected areas as proposed by the UNION. One of the programmes and modus operandi to be carried out by the Royal Fathers of the entire Ibibio country was the application of the customary rituals according to the representation by the UNION that was in regard "with the extirpation of epidemics" in the land but without the use of MBIAM cult or native juju. There was rejoicing throughout Ibibio land on learning about the granting of permission by Government as several congratulatory Telegrams and letters poured in from all parts of Nigeria to the UNION. The Union of course knew they were duty bound not only to assist in the extermination of the menace but also to investigate into the causes of the rare occurrence of such a horrific and weird phenomenon in Ibibio country. It was a shame short of trauma to the people.

THE COUNTER OPERATIONS IN PRACTICE

As noted above, the UNION had felt very strongly that the methods used by Government, especially with the operations of the Police Force employed to eliminate the operations of the Man-Leopard in the land would be counterproductive and they had expressed this in no uncertain terms. That is why they insisted on seeking the permission of Government to do it in the African traditional way when calamities like epidemics brought the land to its knees. It was not to be a jamboree, but a serious attempt that would make far reaching impact on the entire spectrum of the land and that is what happened. Come to think of it, first, the very impression of seeing the Royal Fathers they have been hearing about; these very important and revered personalities throughout Nigeria visiting their very homes as it were: this was bound to bring about maximum impact on the people. Secondly, the fact that the Chiefs of the different localities would be the very sponsors of the visits of the Royal Fathers meant that everybody would be present "to see and hear" for themselves. Thirdly, these chiefs were tax collectors from all males above 16 for Government in accordance with the Tax Act of those days and this meant that any male found absent would be regarded as a primary suspect of belonging to the weird cult. Fourthly, the very presence of peoples from all these parts was indicative that any possible suspect would be traced out and promptly charged to court to defend him/herself accordingly. Fifthly, the Rally often took the form of a religious programme or Sunday Service whereby prayers would be offered by the designated Priests, Pastors and Evangelists who would on behalf of Christians Church Leaders invoke the presence of God in the midst of His people and lead the whole concourse of people in fervent prayers as a means of warding off the evil ones in their midst and assuring the people of the continuous protection of God. Six, the accredited traditional leaders and priests viz. Mme Nkuku acknowledged to be versed in ritual religious observances as practised by the majority of the people in the areas involved would have the task of perform as Ibibio traditional Leaders and Priests – Mme Oku Ibom, the relevant ceremonial rituals and also offer incantations. Following that they would be expected to blow the customary elephant tusk symbolic of blowing away the evil menacing the lives of the people and from the land. Seven, eminent Customary Tribunal Judges were assigned the task of assuaging the menace posed by the extraordinary phenomenon by adjudicating in the traditional manner in the event of any dispute among the people of the areas. As preservers of peace and being empowered under the Native Authority Ordinance, they would also impose penalties on breaches of the peace. Finally eight, three Assistant Secretaries set up for the purpose together with the Secretary General of the UNION were assigned the special duty of arranging and assembling transport vehicles for the conveyance of the august visitors and touring team as also the delegates of the UNION who would also cover all the events in liaison with the Nigeria Police contingents. This was also with the view of coordinating all the activities and plans relevant to the tours. All told, tell me why all these measures taken could not work and bring the desired results! Yes, in the end the tours having gone full scale through all those areas yielded maximum fruit and together also with the work of Missionaries especially through the Legion of Mary, such that within the turn of the 1950s, Man-Leopard menace died out in the land.

BRO EKENG - THE FREE MAN OF GOD - BAPTIZED, CONVERTED via PROTESTANTISM TO CATHOLICISM AND H/M – CSM SCHOOLS

As the story of his life continues, Ekeng's slave master – a Presbyterian chieftain proved a kind, compassionate, caring and understanding master and so seeing in Ekeng a godlike disposition with high intelligence, industry, loyalty, docility and application of life to the tasks assigned him, admired these qualities and with a grain of kindness treated him with love and confidence. He allowed him to attend Sunday services, Choir, Catechism and Bible classes at Duke Town Presbyterian Church, Calabar. This eventually led to his Baptism with the name Stephen (though this is also disputed as in fact it was his Catholic Confirmation name - a name depicting that courageous, glorious and victorious proto-martyr, St. Stephen. But the name MICHAEL ("Who can prevail against God – Aniekan Abasi") was the name given to him at his Baptism in the Catholic Church. But later on, his master sent him to school thus dividing his duties between domestic work and school. Though now passed adolescence (a situation quite normal in those days as some primary school pupils then could be between fifteen and twenty years of age or above). Ekeng began with assiduity to read the bible which his master gladly lent to him. This was the first ever translated Vernacular Bible in the whole of Africa - a translation of King James Version by the Church of Scotland Mission in 1846. Ekeng gladly put his heart and soul into reading the Bible - a task which he combined when the domestic work was over. This made him thirst for the things of God with zest. He was thrilled by the stories in the Bible: of the goodness of God our Father, his kindness and providence, his compassionate love, etc. So he spent hours reading it every day and also learning to pray to God along the line. At school he showed remarkable intelligence, and soon was the best in class passing from class to class with Distinctions. But of very curious importance, noting his docility and intelligence, the CSM Director of Schools also saw in him the making of a future teacher.

Then when he obtained his First School Leaving Certificate (FSLC) an opportunity occurred to appoint him an assistant tutor with a small salary to the bargain. With a keen sense of responsibility, initiative and thrift, Ekeng was able to make savings and bought his liberty at £50:0:0. Sterling which was a whooping sum of money at the time. Later he entered the famous Hope Waddell Training Institute attended by the likes of the great Zik of Africa Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, Sir Francis Akanu Ibiam who was the first Governor of Eastern Region of Nigeria, Sir Festus Okotie Ebo, Minister of Finance in the 1st Republic, Chief Denis Osadebe, the first Governor of Mid-Western Nigeria, Prof Kalu Uka, HOD of Theatre Arts and the first Igbo to lecturer in the UK etc. Here too Bro Ekeng's brilliancy carried him through and he qualified after 5 years with the Senior Teachers' Certificate Grade 1. For 14 years Ekeng was to devote himself as a teacher in the service of the Scottish Mission and was well known especially as Head Master in many CSM schools for his attention not just to book knowledge but to the moral formation of both the pupils and teachers under him. Saddened by the low moral standards and behavior of those around him, he labored to inculcate into them by word and example which was irreproachable, a sense of honesty and integrity. He was shocked that most of his fellow teachers did not follow the teachings of the Bible for ostensibly they professed Christianity; they went to Church on Sundays but lived pagan lives at their homes during the days of the week.

BRO EKENG – FROM PROTESTANTISM TO CATHOLICISM AND H/M RCM SCHOOLS – CATECHIST AND PRESIDENT OF THE LEGION

When the Holy Ghost RCM missionaries came from Onitsha led by Mgr. Alexandre Lejeune, Rev. Fathers Patrick Mc Dermott and Leon Lena who was the Official RCM representative from Guinea – Gabon, he it was who also presided at that first Holy Mass on February 3,1903. They opened up the Catholic Mission at 19 Boco Street – Marina Calabar. They later then moved to the present site at the Sacred Heart Cathedral, Egerton Street, Calabar. This was during the tenure of His Excellency Sir Walter Egerton, Governor General of the Colony of Southern Nigeria with Calabar then as HQ of Nigeria. Thereafter he was transferred to Lagos in 1906 when Akitoye was the Oba of Lagos. This was before the Amalgamation by His Excellency Lord Frederick Laggard in 1914. Now during the coming years, Bro Ekeng was reading as many spiritual books as he could lay hands on both protestant and Catholic and comparing them one with another. But he soon came to notice as he made his conclusions from the comparisons he made to the effect that the Religious Doctrines of the CSM that he was commissioned with were not the same as the Catholic ones and more so were quite inadequate.

His restless mind and innate intelligence led him to question a number of things about the CSM especially the moral life of the CSM members/children when in Church and when outside the church. Whereas the RCM devotees seemed to practice what they learnt at Church and at home, the CSM members on the hand did not practise what they learnt outside the church. Fortunately, a Catholic friend lent him some books on the Catholic Church and the Blessed Eucharist. He began to read and examine all these in the light of the Bible. What he learnt before was that the Catholic Church was the Mother Church but fell into error hence the coming of the new Protestant Church(es) notably the CSM to correct those errors. Thence he hastened to study the ways and doings of Catholicism searching the Bible and the Doctrines of this new Religion especially the Doctrine on the Eucharist. He was wont to reason out: "But did not Christ say He would be with His Church till the end of time?" Then he would further ask himself: "Why then did the SCM say the 'Mother Church, the Catholic Church' fell into error?" Now convinced of the truths of Catholicism he made his decision. In 1925, then at 37 years of age he received conditional Baptism in the Catholic Church taking the name MICHAEL. Then at his Confirmation, he was given the name Stephen. With this change, and after making his irrevocable decision he had to leave the services of the CSM Mission having now seriously considered becoming a Catholic priest but later on finally decided to remain in the world and serve God as a layman in the Church.

BRO EKENG FROM H/M RCM SCHOOLS TO CATECHIST & LEGION PRESIDENT

At this time the Scottish Mission had a guaranteed salary structure for her teachers, but the Catholic Mission which had a great number of teachers could only pay them according to the small amounts contributed by the pupils week by week. Undaunted Bro Ekeng did not hesitate but promptly resigned to join the Catholic Mission Education Services. He soon became one of the most outstanding and trusted Head Masters in the RCM Teaching Service. Besides his official duties he also taught Catechism both to the pupils and adults alike. Bro Ekeng then was commissioned in the RCM Schools together with Etubom Thomas Effiom (who taught my father at Sacred Heart School, Calabar), Chief Joseph Nya including the late Etubom Maurice Archibong, all of whom had trained both at Christ the King College and the famous St. Charles Onitsha established by the legendary Bishop Josef Shanahan. These were the first Catholic Higher Institutes East of the Niger as also St, Joseph's College which he established where great Catholic teachers of note who piloted the work of evangelization of the Catholic Faith were trained in the 1910s -1920s. But with the arrival in 1930 of the All Hallows Fathers from Ireland ie. the forerunners of St. Patrick's Missionaries also called the Kiltegan Fathers, the College was transferred to the present site at Ikot Ansa in 1935. Bro Ekeng and these teachers were also given the responsibility for the training of Auxiliary teachers (Preliminary Young Teachers - PYT) for the over 200 schools and Catechetical Centres of the Calabar Mission. Later the St. Patrick's Fathers established the famous St. Thomas' TTC Ogoja in 1937, St. Augustine's TTC Urua Inyang, 1945 which Higher Elementary Section was later transferred to St. Mary's Ediene Abak in 1952 for the training of Senior Primary Catholic teachers. Meanwhile, the St. Patrick's Fathers had also established Cornelia Connelly College (CCC) Afaha Oku and Holy Family (HFC) Oku Abak as Grammar Schools in 1942.

But Bro Ekeng was noted for his great respect for missionary priests and the Rev Sisters. Seeing him as a seasoned, devout and docile teacher, the RCM Schools Authorities who had deployed him after his conversion posted him to St. Anne's Ifuho, Ikot Ekpene in 1932 as Headmaster. Here he became Bishop Moynagh's right hand man both as his catechist and interpreter. Ifuho before then was an out-station of Anua Mission but later became an autonomous parish comprising the whole of what is now Ikot Ekpene Diocese including the present St. Mary's Ikot Nseyen, St. James Ibam Edet, St. Anthony's Ikono, St Michael's Ediene, St Paul's Nung Ukim and St Michael's Uyo Road parishes. At this point in time too, there occurred one of the world's worst recessions – an event period spanning the 1930s, and Bishop Moynagh (then Fr. Moynagh) found himself without means to support his schools. In his discussion with Bro Ekeng, they decided to convene all the teachers to discuss the situation. The teachers were understanding despite their plight and declared their willingness to continue at their posts provided the villagers could assure their upkeep and their families since a majority of villages were without any Christian presence with large populations un-evangelized. Here in Ifuho Mission, many villages had no schools let alone Standard Six schools unlike those of the Anua mission like Ndon Ebom, Idu, Eman Uruan, Ibiono, Edem Ekpat, Mbak Etoi, Mbiakong, etc. had many schools with Standard Six.

Another great problem in Ifuho Mission to content with according to Fr. Kevin Longworth was militant paganism occasioned by the Cults of Ekpo Nyoho and Eka Ekong whose members wore grotesque masks and carried machetes while on parade to astound and intimidate Catholics attending Church services. These huge problems constituted a great worry for Moynagh and Ekeng and they decided to seek the intercession of Our Blessed Lady. It was no surprise that soon when Reverend Father Paeder Boylan arrived at Anua from Ireland and was later posted to Ifuho as his curate, he soon brought the idea of starting the Legion of Mary as a potent means of mobilizing Christians for the evangelization of their fellows. Having discussed the programmes of the Legion with Bishop Moynagh, Ekeng was brought into the show. Now Fr. Boylan had a sister back in Ireland – a very versatile and devout Legionary, versed in the mechanics and techniques of the Legion. Moynagh saw all these as the heavenly reply from the Blessed Virgin. He gathered the teachers and Catechists and discussed the idea with them. Ekeng set to work by reading and interpreting the Hand Book and other books about the Legion and soon began the training and instruction of the teachers and Catechists on the workings of the Legion. The overwhelming result was that precisely on 7th September 1933, the 12th Anniversary of the Foundation of the Legion in Ireland and in the world, the first ever Praesidium (or local group) in the whole of Africa was born at Ifuho in what was then known as the Anua Mission with Bro Ekeng and Bros Sebastian Nyoyoko, Joseph Udo Adadiaha, Gabriel Essien, Luke Udo Akpan, Emmanuel Afangide Essien (Blind Ete Emman) Catechist Domingo Inyang, Ete Joseph Una-Ama (from Nkap town of which location land is where St. Anne's Cathedral situates. I had the good fortune of interviewing this pioneer legionary who is still alive and ticking @110). Other pioneer members include Sisters Mary Ekanem Mba (mother of Bertha Okoro from Ifuho town sharing border with Nkap whom I also interviewed), Martina Utuk, and Felicia Otong all from Ifuho territory as foundation members. On the proposal by Moynagh, Michael Ekeng was unanimously appointed and he became the foundation President both of the first Praesidium and Curia in the entire African Continent.

In 1937, the first Comitium in Africa was commissioned with Ekeng as President and those Ifuho members including Bros Basil Udo Okure (father of four priests and three nuns), John O. Akrah, Catechist James A. Isua, Catechist Justin Williams, Bartholomew Ubeh, Mathew A. Udom, Thomas Okon Etim, Catechist Domingo Inyang, Brendan O. Akrah, Etubom Maurice Archibong, Sis Lucy Lawrence, Sr. Ignatia Williams (later Mother Ignatia), Agnes Etim, Mark Bassey (father of the Author) etc. as pioneer members. Writing on this Rev. Fr. Kelleher SPS, himself a product of this enterprise and one of those great St. Patrick's promoters of the Legion in Modern Africa (after the likes of his predecessors viz. Frs. Corney Plunkett (1st Superior General of SPS) P.J. Costelloe, T. Fitzgerald, M. McGrath, Tom Mulllally, J. McGuiness, T. Lucey, K. Longworth, Reginald Smyth, D. Dolan (a.k.a Akpan Uruan) with whom Ekeng last stayed at Ndon Ebom-Uruan, P. Moore, D. Prendergast. P. Kivlehan (a.k.a Udo Mary – Fr. Una-eka) P.F. Laffy, C. Creedon, P. Doyle, J. Dollard, M. Hayes, D. Hanify, Vincent Brady, Oliver O'Sullivan, S. Meehan, H. Bradley, J. Quilley, M. McManus, R. Doherty, P. O'Reilly, Joe Pettit, B. Hughes, M. Quickley, etc. etc.

Fr. Kevin Longworth has also corroborated that Bishop Moynagh as the Canonical founder with Fr. P. Boylan established Africa's first Praesidium. It is also worthy of note that there was no other Praesidium in the continent and the Americas besides this except those in Scotland and Great Britain which by 1928/29 beginning with London only came later. On authority, the Maria Legionis of 1936 wrote of the visit of Mgr. J. Riberi who was the Apostolic Delegate to Missionary Africa to Anua where he met Ekeng the great Apostle of the Legion in Africa. Then Papal Nuncios or Vatican Ambassadors to the nations were designated as Apostolic Delegates from the Vatican and the ministers over a number of countries together, eg. Mgr. Liberi was Papal Delegate to the entire Anglo West African countries and beyond. He had come to Anua in order to inspect and satisfy himself regarding the usefulness of the Legionary Apostolate in the Mission fields. The result of this visit was the historic letters he wrote to all the Bishops of Missionary Africa recommending the Legion heartily to them. Writing to the East African Bishops he is said to have mentioned the legendary Legionary Envoy Edel Quinn and asked them to contact Dublin for her to come and help them organize the movement in their Dioceses. A few years later it was gathered that the same Apostolic Delegate was posted as Papal Nuncio to China and he introduced the Legion there in the whole of Asia.

The same Maria Legionis continued: "He wrote from Hong Kong to Frank Duff… 'Yes, you ask me if I remember Michael Ekeng. I remember him very clearly. His work was the inspiring example which enabled me to write that letter to the Ordinaries of East Africa. Even here I like to tell of his (Ekeng's) magnificent work'… ". Thus beyond the borders of Nigeria, all Africa and China by divine providence were to benefit from the fine example of Michael Ekeng whose Postulation for his Beatification and Canonization I have by divine mercy the honour to have been appointed the Postulator for the Cause of his Beatification and to champion the proceedings, having known and seen this saintly legend as a future child of Mary. The story has it that when the Legion started in China it spread like wild fire with the arrival of Legion Envoys and extended to over 90 Dioceses of Asia and Oceania – Korea, the Philippines, Burma, India, Japan, Pakistan, Taiwan. About this time also it spread to the Americas and the rest of the world due mainly to this great Irish missionary movement of the time. In fact as Fr. J. Kelleher also corroborates; "There were very many Irish missionaries in all the above mentioned countries and continents. It spread to South America etc. per the instrumentality of the legion Envoys."

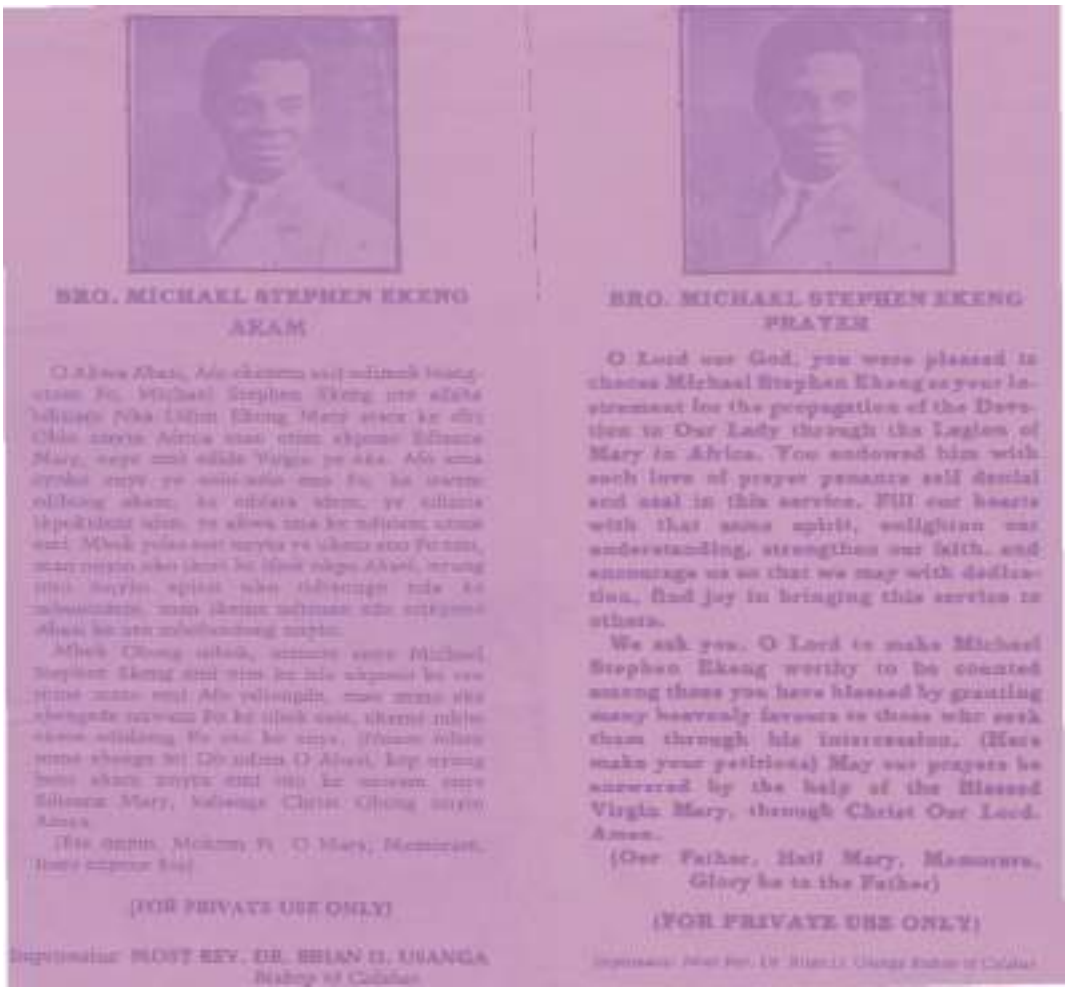
LEGION PIONEERS & PROMOTERS IN AFRICA vis-vis OLD CALABAR PREFECTURE

We cannot conclude this aspect of the Legion history and its expansion without mentioning even if cursorily, those teachers and Catechists who collaborated and promoted the work of Bro Ekeng. The Legion according to Fr. Kelleher got the real impetus from the time the Catholic Mission started her Teacher – Training Colleges whether as Practical Teaching Colleges (PTCs), or Grade III or Grade II Teachers Teaching Colleges (TTCs) popularly tagged "Lower/Higher Elementary Colleges". All her students were trained in the Legionary system. Every trained teacher was the equivalent of a new Praesidium of sorts. The list of Legion promoters and pioneers cannot be compiled without the likes of Dominic Cardinal Ekandem, Bishop Brian Usanga, Fr. Isidore P. Umana, Fr. Emmanuel Afangaide who though Seminarians in training at the time, were great Teacher-Catechists as well as Seminarians. Apart from the Irish Missionaries - the St. Patrick's Missionaries (S P S) in particular) in the promotion of the Legion, their counterparts viz. the Religious Congregations beginning with the Holy Child Sisters (SHCJ) and the Holy Rosary Sisters (HRC) whose Congregation was founded by Bishop Joseph Shanahan and functioned so prominently in Igbo land with the accession of Bishop Charles Heerey (CSSp), were also great Legionaries and promoters. Most of these were Irish, some English and others from the American Province. They more often than not were the companions of the Legionaries going about to evangelize people in their villages and hamlets.

One of the greatest unexpected results of their apostolate was the rescue of twins after the work of the legendary Mary Slessor (Afia Edidem-anwan Okoyong) of the Scottish Mission. Considered as bad luck, it was current in those dark days of pre-missionary era to forcefully remove twins from their mothers, dump and abandon them in the "evil forests" to die. Their mothers were ostracized from their villages. The Sisters of the Holy Child Jesus in particular who were working in the Calabar Mission and members of the Christian Family Association (another offshoot of St. Joseph's League) co-operated in rescuing and welcoming these rejected and abandoned babies and their mothers. The Sisters attended to and also taught catechism in the villages as well. The Medical Missionaries of Mary Sisters (MMMs) both the early and the last serving ones including St. Dr. Mc Sweeney, Sr. Dr. Anne Ward etc. were great legionaries to the core. As mentioned elsewhere, their Congregation started right here in Nigeria with Sr. Mary Martin their Foundress as first Postulant who received her veil (Hooding Rites) at St. Michael's church Nsukara in Anua in the 20s.

The Handmaids of the Holy Child Jesus (HHCJ) many of whom especially the early ones - Daughters of Mother M Magdalene (Charles Walker 1881 - 1939 of the Religious Sisters of Charity (RSC) who took over St. Joseph's Convent after the 2nd World War and introduced the Montessori method) to wit: Mother Mary Ignatia (Catherine Bassey) M. St. John (Lucy Williams) M. Aloysia (Janet Ugoaru) and M. Gertrude (Mary Agnes Nwaturuocha who became the 1st Superior General) were all professed at Anua in 1931. All these severally and collectively were outstanding Legionaries. To these must be included alive or dead, Mother M. Therese Akwe, Srs. Elizabeth Umoh, Angelica Ekong. M. Anne Iwo, Rev Sisters M. Stephen Inyang, Rita Ennang, Agnes Bassey, Immaculata Offiong etc. Their devotion and dedication to the promotion of the Legion far and near was phenomenal. Not to be forgotten were the great products of St. Charles Onitsha and St. Thomas Ogoja later St. Augustine's Urua Inyang before the transfer of locus to St. Mary's Ediene Abak – covering the period 1923 – 1949, most of whom have gone to the glory of Heaven and a few others still alive to continue the work. These include James A. Isua, Basil Okure, Joseph U. Adadiaha, Stephen Okono, Paul Bassey Otu, Moses Usen, Brendan O. Akrah, Bartholomew A Ubeh, Bernard E. Mbaba, Maurice O. Edet, George O. Bassey (perpendicular) Athanasius Okon, Thomas O Etim, Joseph Eyo-Ita, Francis Ellah, J. Ekechukwu, John Odey, Joseph Agba, Aloysius B. Usuah, Emmanuel Monjok, Paul Annang, N. Obasi, S. Nakanda, M. Nkuda, N.E. Ibuot, M. Williams, Domingo Inyang, Raphael E. Etong, Remigius A. Orok, Pius Udoh, Placid Okon, Clarence J. Umana, Dominic J. Usanga(a.k.a Principal) John B. Usanga-Nde, Killian E.E. Etim, Emmanuel E. Asuquo (1030), Christopher S. Ekong, Nicholas N. Udonkang, Mathias Inyang, Henry O. Inyang, Dominic Utuk, Paul O. Eyo, Raymond A. Umoh.

Others are Thomas Asuquo (Ekeng's house boy from Mbak Etoi who has written Ekeng's Memoir for Canonization), Emmanuel Afangaide, Blind Ete Emman Essien, (with whom I worked for the establishment of now Obot Akara parishes viz. St. Mary's Ikot Atasung, St. Theresa's Nko, St. Andrew's Nto Edino, Sacred Heart Parish Ikwen, etc.) Cosmas Ntekpere, Michael E. Eyo, Charles S. Umosen, Hugh. S. Essien, John N. Udoh, Benedict O. Essien, B.E. Mbang, Fidelis O. Bassey, Fabian E. Okon (a.k.a Supervisor), Leo E.



Essien(Anua), Edward E. Nyong, Leo U. Essien(Essene),Sylvester J. Una, Emmanuel Ansa, Peter A. Akpan & Maurice O. Akpan (Bros), Alban Uko, Paul J. Ekanem, Cletus O. Etim, Malachy P. essien, Fabian Essiet, C. Kaniko, William Bassey, (Cardinal Ekandem's teacher & father of Fr.W.W.Bassey) George Okon Bassey (a.k.a Perpendicular GOB), Raymond A. Orok, Christopher D. Ukpeh, Gabriel Koka, Casmir Edem, Damian Okori, Lawrence E. Mbat (my uncle), John O. Etim (Emman Kufre's father) Joseph E. Effiong, Eventus E. Sam, Anthony S. Edet, Bernard S. Umoh, Pius D. Obot, A. T. Beka, Cosmas Tombere, Pius B. Inyang (Author's brother and one time President of Regia Council), Agnes Paul Odey, Albert Nwaturuocha, Michael B. Okure (Regia President and brother of Monsignor Patrick Okure, Fr. Joseph Okure (SJ) Fr, Dominic Okure (OP) Sr. Mary Liguori Okure (HHCJ) and Sr. Theresa Okure (SHCJ) and others including the indefatigable chaplain – Rev. Fr. Francis Akpan of the Diocese of Ikot Ekpene and Chaplain the REGIA COUNCIL of the Calabar Ecclesiastical Province. And what of the WOMEN – the lady teachers and their collaborators – the forerunners of the CWO – "Iban Adiaha Obong" and Daughters of Dominic Cardinal Ekandem some of whom also are with Ekeng in the glory of heaven? To these should be added the likes of Nancy Ekpenyong, Theresa Uwa, Elizabeth Ene, Gertrude G. Nya, Patricia Etta Agim, Rosa G. Ekandem (Cardinal's sister), Theresa Ogey Ukpo (mother of Archbishop J. Ukpo), Anthonia Ekpo Esshiet (Author's Mum), Philomena Iba (Ekanem) Barbara Etim, Monica Obot, Louisa Ekpo, Theresa Itauma, Margaret M. Mordi, Pauline Inyang (P-Fine) Juliana Atim Joseph (a.k.a "Cardinal's mother") of course the great pioneer still alive Mary J. Edet (Adiaha Uruan) who also was in Rome with Bro Ekeng in 1950 and has also written his Memoir.

BRO EKENG'S PRAETORIAN MEMBERSHIP IN THE LEGION

Yes, as we continue the story of Bro Ekeng, it is clear that Ekeng must have chosen to remain celibate, hence his designation, "Brother Ekeng." Now both as teacher and Catechist, Brother Ekeng threw himself heart and soul into the work of building up the Legion in Ifuho and later throughout the entire Prefecture of Calabar and beyond. He was a great organist and choirmaster, eminently efficient in liturgical music and Latin hymns. He was very self effacing dedicated and full of zeal, practicing penance and self abnegation with all zest. With the growing evidence of the manifold graces from heaven through this apostolic involvement built on reliance on Mary, Ekeng decided to go further in his self sacrifice and surrender. He resigned from his position as Headmaster to devote himself completely to the work of the Legion without salary or allowance from the Catholic Mission. Even when he was hospitalized at Emekuku - Owerri, he used that as God's inscrutable design and began to speak to the teachers of the area about the benefits of the Legion and the Legion spread like wide fire throughout Igbo land. At this time, he applied for PRAETORIAN membership in the Legion.

This means that over and above his other daily actions, he would attend Mass daily and recite the Holy office like those in the clerical order. For him that was not even enough. According to Bishop McGettrick "His capacity for work was amazing especially in his long apostolic trips to establish the Legion far and near in Anua, Calabar, Oron, Essene, Arochukwu, Owerri, etc." He was once remarked when coming from Calabar to attend the Legion Meeting at Ifuho to have travelled by sea in a ferry, then on arrival at Oron rented a bicycle to travel to Ifuho, then attended the Mass scheduled before the Legion Meeting fasting all that time in order to receive Holy Communion at the Mass. The Eucharistic fast was total in those days. He was a man of prayer, indefatigable and dedicated to Our Lady and the Eucharist. He was imbued by the Legion Spirit: "Sanctify your work, sanctify yourself, and sanctify others by your work." His Legionary endeavours yielded a great crop of conversions: many couples received the Sacrament of Matrimony and many young boys and young girls became aspirants and entered the Seminary and the Convents. All these go to show such a degree of virtue as yet rare on the continent. In 1950, the Holy Year, Bishop Moynagh included him and Mary J. Edet among those to go to Rome on the Pilgrimage. From there he went to Ireland where he attended and addressed the Concilium in Dublin. Worn out by his apostolic labours after establishing the Legion of Mary everywhere, Brother Ekeng returned to Calabar where he spent his last days. He died on 2nd March 1958 and was honoured with a solemn funeral Mass. Frank Duff has rendered homage to this "diamond, rough-hewn and polished by a Christian life faithfully lived, which today adorns the crown of the Queen of heaven" – a live of total self-giving lived in the 'Totius tuus' of St. Louis Marie de Montfort. And may this truly Apostolic soul to whom the Legion of Mary in the whole of Africa and beyond owes its existence, reap the reward of being honoured among the Saints even in our time, to the greater Glory of God.

It is very painful to notice that the very centre and cradle of the Legion of Mary in the whole of Africa has been raised to the rank of REGIA COUNCIL only while other Dioceses like Enugu, Lagos etc. are of SENATUS status or is it the minority marginalization factor still playing out here even in the Catholic Church? In fact, concerning the Sacred Heart Devotion, the first comer to Ikot Ekpene would have concluded that the Diocese had replaced the canonical precept of Sunday Worship and attendance at Mass for the First Friday Devotion. While at Queen of Apostles Afaha Obong (1956), and later at St. Augustine's Urua Inyang (1959-61) both as Principal Tutor and House Master, I could vividly notice the custom there within the Diocese that the Christian Faithful would have to forego their market business even as important as URUA OBO ANNANG and ABALA in order to attend the First Friday Apostleship of Prayer and the Sacred Heart Sodality Devotion and Mass so as to receive the compulsory First Friday Holy Communion should it fall due on these Annang great market days. Many a Catholic Christian observed this to the letter as if under pain of sin as in the case of Sundays and Holy Days of Obligation. No need expatiating further because here at St. Joseph's Major Seminary Ikot Ekpene all the Catholic workers especially the women no matter from which Parish would endeavour to hurry and attend the First Friday Mass and Devotion at Ifuho first before attending to their specific duties of the day. No wonder I always observed the late indefatigable and saintly mother of the Bishop, Madam Agnes Raymond Umoh, who as Promoter of the Movement; would always ride on her bicycle from Okon in Central Annang to go attend the special "Third Friday" Diocesan Meeting and Devotion to the Sacred Heart at the St Anne's Cathedral, Ifuho. To this end she was one of the devotees awarded the Papal Medal some years ago from the Pope through the instrumentality of the Cardinal and Diocesan Award by Bishop Camillus A. Etokudoh, then Bishop of Ikot Ekpene.

Therefore those of the Faithful and any other person making devotion to and promoting the Cause of Beatification of this Servant of God, and wishing to make known graces and favours even miracles received through the recitation of the above prayer for his Canonization, are requested to contact or write by SMS +234 803 876 3656 (E-mail: akpainyanghouse.1937.uk@gmail.com) directly to:

THE SOLE PROMOTER OF POSTULATION, CAUSE OF BRO MICHAEL S. EKENG, SACRED HEART CATHEDRAL, PMB. 1044, CALABAR, CROSS RIVER STATE, NIGERIA.

E. THE LUX CATHOLICA OF NIGERIAN GRADUATE DIOCESAN CATHOLICS

This was an educational foundation co-founded by Bishops D. Ekandem and J. Moynagh for Catholic graduate teachers and professionals. This was another milestone in the pastoral organization of this erstwhile indigenous Bishop. To-date the Lay apostolate of Catholic Graduates as the Light of the Catholic Church in Annang country is waxing very strong under the leadership of Prof. J. U. Obot of St. Michael's Parish Midim currently in the Department of Geography and Regional Planning University of Calabar. This Organization was almost the replica of its forerunner the Calabar St. Joseph's League and Ibibio State Union whose sole raison d'être was to send out their sons and daughters for Overseas Studies in order to bring back the proverbial Golden Fleece. For, as in the latter case which had followed the example which brought about the training Overseas of the likes of Justice Ethbert Udo-Udoma, Bassey U. Attah the father of the erstwhile Governor Victor Attah etc. this Lux Catholica had also trained great legendaries like Prof. Sylvester Una of the UNICROSS fame, Leo U. Essien, the first ever African Supervisor of Schools and Colleges both in old Calabar, Uyo and Annang provinces, Simon Etim a.k.a. Akpan Annang, Malachy P. Essien brother of late Rev. Fr. John P. Essien, Fabian Essiet, father of Rev. Fr. DR. James F. Essiet of St. Joseph's Regional Major Seminary fame etc. all from Annang country. Currently the Association has flourished in many Dioceses of Nigeria under various titles as the Association of Catholic Professionals (Lagos Archdiocese) Catholic Professional League (Enugu Diocese), etc.

F. CREATION OF NEW PARISHES AND STATIONS

Take it or leave it, Bishop later Dominic Cardinal Ekandem who was given the Red Biretta in 1977 decided as his first assignment to stamp his feet in the pastoral administration of IKOT EKPENE DIOCECE. Whereas there were as I can still recollect only about five Canonical Parishes in the whole of Annang country and Ikono, viz. IKOT EKPENE DISTRICT: Ifuho (Fr. J. Moynagh 1930) then St Theresa's Nko for all of Obot Akara of Nto Edino, Ikwen etc, axis with Fr P. Doyle from Ifuho in 1951 as parish priest when Fr. T. Fitzgerald came into Ifuho from Anua. Then also through Fr. Fitzgerald, St Brigid's Urua Akpan 1952 with Fr. J. P. Byrne as parish priest for the whole of Central Annang. For the entire ABAK DISTRICT there were only two parishes which I would like to describe as the almighty St Patrick's Urua Inyang 1942, with Rev. Fr. Patrick O'Reilly as parish priest. This covered all of Northern and Eastern Annang and finally Immaculate Conception Afaha Obong Parish1945, with Frs. C. Cantwell, R. Mulllally, P. Walsh and J. Dollard almost acting as Metropolitan Arch-priests.

Abak and Manta up to Ibesit, Obio Akpa, Ibagwa and Ekparakwa were always administered as mission stations from Holy Family and later by the Rev. Fathers from the St. Mary's H.E.C. Ediene Abak. With only these five Parishes and two or three other central mission stations canonically erected, Bishop Ekandem in 1963 had to map out the erection of new Parishes. These included St. Vincent de Paul Ikot Obong Edong, St John's Abak, St Michael's Midim, St Michael's Ikot Etim -Ukanafun, St. Alban's Inen, St. Paul's Ekparakwa, St Joseph's Okon, St. Andrew's Nto Edino, Parishes of Assumption Ukana Iba and Ikot Eside, Ikpe Annang. Then with the consecration and appointment of Bishop Camillus Etokudoh, well over twenty new Parishes, quasi- and autonomous Parishes were created viz. Sacred Heart Ikwen, St Peter's Urua Edet Obo, St Joseph's Iwukem, Immaculate Conception Ikot Ekpene, St Joseph's Abiakpo Ntak Inyang, St Francis Ikot Osurua, etc. One can imagine how overjoyed I personally felt at seeing such far-reaching strides, progress-making efforts and milestones sprouting from only two Colonial Administrative Divisions of IKOT EKPENE and ABAK within the living memory of about sixty years. I have passingly mentioned my beloved, His Lordship, Camillus Etokudoh, whom I visited with late Fr. Fabian Essien at their Pontifical Institute for Diplomatic Studies in Rome (1984) and on completion of his studies, the Vatican assigned him to many countries with Prelatural rank before his appointment as Papal Ambassador to Costa Rica from where he was nominated and consecrated bishop in 1988 and successor to Dominic Cardinal Ekandem who was being re-assigned to the Capital and Metropolitan city of Abuja in 1990 as the first Cardinal Archbishop of the See.

G. ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW SCHOOLS, COLLEGES AND HOSPITALS, ETC.

Let me also in passing mention some of the many schools and Colleges/ Health centres which Cardinal Ekandem had established despite the embargo by the Alhaji Tafawa Balewa Administration on further establishment and founding of Schools and other educational Institutions in Nigeria in 1964. At this time one could recall that the Federal Government was not able to pay salaries to workers nationwide any longer. In fact, most Government School teachers especially those in the so-called Universal Primary Education Schools (UPE) were being owed months of salaries with no hope of arrears in the near future. I personally having been one of those involved could also reminisce that we, ie. Catholic Missions Schools Authorities, with the agreement of the teachers concerned were paying half salaries, hence that embargo. In fact, in Calabar in particular, we had acquired some of these UPE School on request both by their Authorities and the School Committees as they were called at the time because the RCM Schools Administration was functioning effectively being funded partly by the Holy See (Vatican, Rome) Grants-In-Aid/ Mission Subsidies. We had acquired Barrack's Primary School, Ballantyne Primary School, Edgerly, etc. all in Calabar, from the U.P.E. Administration which happened to be the County Councils recently introduced nationwide into the Federation by the Balewa Administration which now has become the forerunner of Local Government Authority in the country today as the third tier of Government. On this moot point, I had previously defiantly, as it were, and promptly established two Primary Schools viz. St. Peter's Akani Obio URUAN across the great AKWA AKPA URUAN a.k.a the Atlantic, for URUAN kingdom and SS. Peter and Paul, ABANA now Bakassi in Cameroun territory, for the EFIK kingdom. I also had opened St. Mary's Secondary Commercial College, Ikot Nseyen for Ibibio then in Annang country and Adiaha Obong Secondary Technical College, Ekpene Ukim for URUAN kingdom, both now in Akwa Ibom State. It will also be recalled that while Chief (Hon) Anthony George Umoh from Ibiono Ibom Clan in Ibibio country, the erstwhile Commissioner for Education in the newly created South Eastern State of Nigeria by the Gowon Military Government in 1967 looked the other way when he discovered that I had opened the schools despite the national embargo on opening of Schools which was still in force. Okuku Emmanuel Essien from Annang country who took over from him as Commissioner was furious but at the same time curious and concerned about what had happened. Incidentally, Hon A.G. Umoh was the School Head Master in my Town (1947-1951) before going into Politics (1952-1968) and we were very close. But scarcely had he taken over as Commissioner of Education than he Okuku Essien personally, and without escort privately visited the two colleges on his own to find out matters for himself. He discovered while interviewing the Chiefs of Ikono Clan and Ikot Nseyen where the school was established that I was the one who single-handedly drove the trucks which brought most of their people to safety and quartered them at the grounds of CKC Uyo and St. Andrew's Ndon Ebom respectively otherwise most of them would have died during the civil war and or risked being carried into Biafran territory. It will be recalled that while the war lasted the entire territory of Ikono Ibom South including the Headquarters ie. Ibiaku Ntok Okpo territory up to Nto Ndang in Annang country were firmly in Biafra till the end of the war.

Most of them died in their thousands. They had also explained to the Hon. Commissioner that I not only brought them to safety but got most of their Headmasters and teachers seconded to Schools around Uyo and URUAN kingdom which had the protection of the Biafran soldiers all over the length and breadth of the territory which was firmly in their hands before liberation by the Federal Army, and that I had also allowed some of their prominent teachers and civil servants to supervise the sharing of the Essencos to their fellow refugees in the IDP Camps which were brought by the International Aid Organizations whose Headquarters were located at the Catholic Education Office Uyo and the Lutheran, High School HQ. Obot Idim - Ibesikpo viz. MISSIO, MISERIOR, etc.

I was then the Education Secretary cum General Manager of RCM Schools for the entire territory of what is now Cross River and Akwa Ibom State except Northern Cross River which comprised Ogoja as also Abakaliki Province (now Ebonyi State) at the time. Ndon Ebom will not forget in a hurry one Mr. B.E. Ekpenyong of St. James Ibam Edet, a versatile and energetic school Head Master of repute, whom I seconded to St. Andrew's and after the hostilities was promptly confirmed Deputy Head Master straight away. He was an epitome of what a seasoned school teacher and a fortiori, School Head should be: one imbued with knowledge initiative and drives; gentle, docile, committed, virile and accommodating, kind and sociable industrious and inventive. You could use him to achieve anything; and the people of Ndon Ebom and indeed the entire URUAN South admired and liked him.

The people also informed the Commissioner that when their territory was "liberated" they had at their meeting decided to plead with me to use some of the TTC lkot Nseyen materials which I had rescued from the Biafrans and to establish a Secondary Commercial School for them. It will be recalled that Ikot Nseyen in Ikono Ibom was part of Annang country at the time and still remains in Ikot Ekpene Senatorial Constituency till today. I can also re-call that one morning ie. before 8am while I was still on the way returning from celebrating Holy Mass, people came to alert me that "one big man" had come to the Mission, ie. Catholic Mission Ndon Ebom to enquire about the College. I hurriedly returned thither only to discover that He was no other than the Honourable Commissioner Okuku Essien. But why so early in the morning and in a sort of secret manner as if to arrest some culprit. But the jolly fellow simply put me at ease and informed me that he had previously visited Ikot Nseyen and was convinced the Catholic Mission should have no fear embarking on this admirable venture and that he was very happy and satisfied with my effort so far. He then demanded for a writing pad and then wrote in his own hand that I should take the letter recommending the approval of the two Colleges and the Up-Grading of the schools to the Chief Inspector of Education at Calabar. This was an act of Divine Providence because at this time he had promoted Mr. A.T.U. Ekong no a nonsense Qua Iboe Church School Principal of great repute who was never in the Civil Service as the Cross River Chief of Education with immediate effect. It was rather a great co-incidence when I went to Calabar to meet the CIE and noticed he was the one on seat. After the usual pleasantries we settled down to business. Mr. A.T.U. was introduced to me by his QIC General Manager of Schools Mr. S.O. Ukpong whose Office was at QIC Head Quarters Aka Road. Before long we had become friends whereas before his time the fear of anything Qua Iboe was the beginning of Wisdom for Catholics. It was always like meeting a stone wall whenever there was any negotiation on the cards. But sheer Divine Providence brought the three of us together every time we had to meet at Enugu Regional Ministry of Education before the transfer to Calabar after the creation of South Eastern State. So it was a fait accompli as the man simply issued me with ATO for the two Colleges there and then and a letter to the Superintendent of Schools for the Inspection of the Primary Schools at Akani Obio URUAN and Abana for the purpose of Granting Standard Six to the two Schools. That is why I have mentioned elsewhere in this book that Head Masters were falling on top of each other to get transferred to the riverine schools.

To God be the Glory!

But I also recall with nostalgia, those Institutions like the Mercy Hospital Abak, Holy Child International Nursery/Primary School IK, St. Kizito's Comprehensive Secondary School Adiasim founded by Rev.Fr. Matthew Ekpo with his approval, Goretti Girls IK, Daughters of Charity Centre for the handicapped and physically challenged Ukana Iba, St. Louise Centre for the Deaf and Blind IK, Christ the Redeemer Cottage hospital Ibesit-Ukanafun, DD L Hospital Utu Etim Ekpo, St Anthony of Padua Spiritual Year, Nko, etc. He also single-handedly directed the establishment of an Education Office at Ediene Abak with late Fr. P.P. Essien as General Manager of Catholic Schools Annang Province, while I continued as Education Secretary @ Catholic Education Office Uyo for the entire OLD Calabar Province where central Examinations were organized for the Province. Not to be forgotten was the Catholic Teachers' Federation which also is becoming quasi-moribund. Here, I would urge Fr. Dr. J. B. Ekanem & co. to do well and see to its revival before it is too late, the IK Diocesan Education Board notwithstanding.

CONCLUSION (a) NECROLOGY: I cannot end this my random reminiscences about Annang country, our Nigerian ethnic nation of ancient dreams the geographical territory of which forms what is now known as the Catholic Diocese of Ikot Ekpene which is now making waves @ 50 of the Golden Jubilee of its erection without recalling with pain, sadness and grief of heart the eternal departures, but to Glory of so many of Christ's Faithful from us. They include most especially our beloved priests about twenty of them some of whom we pray, are in the bosom of Abraham. We mention most particularly the deaths of our first THREE as also our first indigenous Bishop viz. His Lordship, Bishop Ephraim S. Obot of Idah Diocese who died in 2009 @ 73. Those Rev. Fathers include among others Rev. Fr. John Paul Essien the first priest among us in living memory in the whole Ecclesiastical Province to die @ 29 in 1970 barely a year after his Ordination and Further Studies in Ireland; then following in that order, Fr. Emmanuel Afangide in 1983 at 62; Fr. Isidore P. Umana in 1990 at 63 at the time his services were most needed because his hands were full with a lot of Diocesan and Provincial responsibilities including the overseeing of the buildings and structures of the first ever Regional Seminary in our territory.

With my humble self as co-Chairman, Seminary Building Committee, we supervised in 1975-77 the construction of what was then Bigard Memorial Seminary, Ikot Ekpene Campus now St. Joseph's Major Seminary. He was residing with me at Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar and working in the Ministry of Education as the Chairman of the State Schools Board, Old Cross River State. Also with him we published the History of Ikot Ekpene Diocese for the 100 years (Centenary) Celebration of the Catholic Church in Eastern Nigeria (1885-1985), a Document the current Golden Jubilee History Committee should do well to consult. But this is not to talk of the others too sorrowful and pathetic to mention especially Rev. Fr. Gerald Etim then a Seminarian who with Rt. Msgr. S. U. Etok while at UNICROSS assisted me to publish the complete revised Edition of the Efik Hymnal published by the Cross River Newspaper Corporation in 1980. We remember as also Rev Fr. Michael Paul Ekanem whose father (Kgt) Ete Paul Ekanem, was as it were "the Diocesan Consultant" and right-hand man of Cardinal Ekandem. Let me on this account briefly commend Bishop Camillus Etokudoh for setting up a befitting cemetery as burying ground for the Rev. Fathers of the Diocese, and of course also the "okop-umehe Diocesan Choir" which he also founded. This was the first ever in the Region which is still active but quasi- moribund and a shadow of itself in recent times. Fr Drs. J.B. Ekanem, C.Usungurua and Gerald Umoren should do well and sit up to bring back the choir to its old glory.

(b) THE RELIGIOUS CONGREGATIONS AND THE APOSTOLATE IN IKOT EKPENE

I cannot fail to observe as I did while as a child, the lifestyles and ways of the Religious Congregations in the Diocese of Ikot Ekpene whether of the Holy Ghost Fathers (CSSp), the St. Patrick's Society (SPS), the Medical Missionaries of Mary (MMM), the Holy Child Sisters and Rev. Mothers (SHCJ) as they were then addressed and later our indigenous Congregation of the Handmaids of the Holy Child Jesus (HHCJ) the Daughters of Charity (DC), the Vincentians (CM), the Daughters of Divine Love (DDL) and recently, the Holy Family Sisters (MSHF), etc. They were so visible not just in their habits but also in their lifestyles and services to the community - to God and to humanity. Honestly, there is nothing to write home about nowadays about these Congregations in IK except during Celebrations when they appear in their numbers in gaudy vests and habits, but "the habit does not make the monk" as they say. In Calabar Archdiocese for example, the Faithful are very miffed, worried and almost angry because things are not what they were. The Religious - native or expatriate are much needed more than ever before in the post Vatican II Church because they are to bear witness to Christ in the Diocese through their life, ministry and apostolate. I see them as the war-front fighting soldiers and they must be there till the war is won, which for the Christian Church is "till the end of time".

Many people then even during the war never saw the fighting soldiers who liberated Annang country; they were not the same as those we saw after the war from March 1968 up till 1999 when Chief Matthew Olusegun Obasanjo took over as the civilian President of Nigeria. The fighting soldiers and by implication the Religious in the diocese should always be at the war front as the vanguard of evangelization and proselytization. Hence you may not see them, but their work can be quite formidable and visible because "by their works you will know them" and without them you cannot win the battle for Christ since they are the "primary fighters" as Evangelizers (male and female) in the Diocese. Ikot Ekpene Diocese has trained so many priests on further studies which is "1st Class" in the zone. This is very commendable, but it will not avail much without the effective presence of Vatican II Religious Congregations being accepted, encouraged and empowered to do the needful in what they should be doing. So I would recommend that Ikot Ekpene Catholic Faithful, Head and members - the Clergy and the laity- do well to work out both in their Pastoral/Laity Councils of the Diocese and especially the Committees overseeing the pastoral/liturgical aspects of the Jubilee and work out what Vatican II says about the presence of the Religious in the Diocese and what should be done. We reject them at our own peril even with the over 200 native priests and Religious in the Catholic Diocese of Ikot Ekpene as at now.

(c) FINAL REMARKS & RECOMMENDATIONS

As I indicated above, this is neither by any standard the History of Annang nation nor Ikot Ekpene Diocese as this was never intended, but rather my random recollections of what used to be and should continue to happen as I observed them in Annang Catholic country over sixty years ago. I am neither competent nor qualified since I am certain there is a Committee on it for the matter at hand ie. the Golden Jubilee close at hand. With a Governor of Annang extraction, Chief (DR) Godswill Akpabio who at best is married to a Catholic, and who is ever ready and willing to be identified as a true citizen of Annang in whatever is good and noble, whatever is lovely and honourable, whatever is worthy of praise and uplifting on our side, Ikot Ekpene Diocese can be blessed, and blessed we are! But I make bold to recommend that those of the Catholic Faithful whether as Knights, members of the CWO, CMO, Catechists, Rev Sisters, Rev. Fathers and Monsignors who are now 60 and above should be consulted in matters pertaining to the progress and wellbeing of Annang Diocese. People like Sir A.T. Beka (Abak) Ete Joseph Una-Ama(Ifuho) Kgt. B.S.Umoh (Inen) HRH Cosmas O.Akpan of Essien Udim LGA who was my student/College Prefect at the T.T.C. Urua Inyang, G. Tombere (Okon) Madam Collette Etuk a.k.a Mmama Sancta and premier CWO President 1963, Mrs. Barbara Edet/Ifuho/Midim), Mrs. Bertha Okoro (Ifuho) Mrs. Elizabeth Ekong (Ikot Obong Edong) Lady Magdalene N.Inyang (Ukana)) Prof J.U.Obot (Midim) Kgt. Dr. Clarence Eyara (Urua Inyang) Kgt. G.L. Udoh (Okon) Fidelis Mary Akpan (Blue Army) etc. But let all the aforementioned and others continue to stand up to be counted and to uphold the dignity of the Catholic Christian both in the Church and in the world as also of womanhood and motherhood. Let them never relent in speaking out to correct obscene abuses that debase Christian living and womanhood in the false pretext of liberalization, civilization, urbanization, women liberation, modernity and fashion. Let them go to schools, colleges Polytechnics and Universities to refute unchristian principles. My witnessing on Oct 9, 2010 of the Episcopal Consecration of the reigning Bishop, His Lordship Camillus Raymond Umoh, formerly Professor of Sacred Scripture at the Pontifical Institute of West Africa (CIWA) Port Harcourt, and also his first starting in the ordination of 8 at a go; what a promise of fruitful and rich apostolate which further gladdens my heart to warrant me to say my " Nunc Dimittiis" from this Diocese of Promise with three indigenous Bishops to boast of from this blessed Diocese in Annang country where I have spent the best of my years on earth to wit: Holy Family College (student1950-55) Queen of Apostles Seminary (Tutor 1955-56) St Augustine's HEC Urua Inyang (Snr Tutor & House Master 1959-61) Senior Seminarian (1961-63) and lately coming to St Joseph's Major Seminary IK 1996; 2004 to-date) as if I am coming for my last days here to roost: TO GOD BE THE GLORY!

ORIGINS OF URUAN IN THE DIASPORA: THE MODERN AKWA IBOM CONNECTION THE GREAT IRREVERSIBLE MIGRATIONS

DREAMS OF LANDS FLOWING WITH MILK AND HONEY

URUAN/EFIK emigration as also many other nations and groups because of the specificity of their missions fall under those intimate and felt needs technically speaking arising either from considerations of politics, economics, social, family squabbles, or simply from adventure. Corroborating this assertion A. M. Rose opines that in their economic as well as love of adventure most European citizens have migrated from their city states to other parts of Europe with so many socio-political and political problems of adjustment (Rose A. M.7). The question now is: What are the antecedents to their departure, how did they leave and specifically, how did they fare on arrival at their present locations in general? It appears however that these related and other lines to secure sustainable life of ease, comfort, economic independence and a rich and stable existence as well as the pushed dreams and hopes to be realized in their sojourning for security and freedom motivated and prompted these great and hazardous migrations. Indeed, these two factors more than any other have eclipsed the accompanying social stress inherent in those places they finally found abode. But the good news was that with little luck part of their initial dreams were often realized. Yet the prelude to the anonymous liminality of ancient URUAN migrants to their present locations was the destruction of the preconceived flamboyant fantasies about life and opportunities thereto. Van Gennep and Victor Turner who respectively developed the concept of liminality in their study of the Rites of Passage opine that the liminal is that second stage of transition rites accompanying any change of state or social position or even from a certain point of age and in this case, it refers to the social passage from URUAN ancestral settlements to their new places in the Diaspora. (Van Gennep 116; 231).

GROUPS AND UNITS OF MIGRATING TRIBES/CLANS AROCHUKWU – THE AROS STILL RESIDING AT ANCIENT IBOM TERRITORY

ORIGIN OF THE GREAT AROS: NOMENCLATURE AND DESIGNATION

We do not have the quantum of authority which the IBIBIO had on the ownership of IBRITAM oracle, when that nomenclature evolved, but we have it on authority that what became of IBRITAM INOKON or THE LONG JUJU oracle, or whatever name called was crafted through the wisdom, foresight and sagacity of the great ancient URUAN/EFIK peoples and this became usefully employed as a sure means for determining the cause of human maladies, socio-political and economic problems in the land. It was the institution and device for detecting crimes as also offering prescribed solutions for whatever problems and maladies afflicting human kind. It was meant to provide direction on those occasions of great difficulty. It is therefore reasonable that we start our discourse on the AROS from there. For these were indeed the proud ancient URUAN/EFIK descendants of the remnants and renegades who stayed put to control the IBRITAM oracle later christened the 'Long Juju' which was crafted through URUAN wisdom, sagacity and ingenuity for foretelling events and proffering solutions to the myriads of problems so revealed or discovered through NDOMO, the great oracle as it was then called by URUAN. It also served as the institution for the detection of crimes and culprits. Furthermore, it served as IDIONG, an Ibibio/Annang acronym for soothsaying and such-like devices for describing past happenings and foretelling future events. It was also meant for detecting culprits, prescribing cures for metaphysical and unknown ailments and also for sundry other usages as described above. At the height of it all and at the time of the arrival of the European slave merchants in the 17th century, these URUAN/EFIK "anawim" of sorts, the Aros, became masters of the LONG JUJU being the true descendants of URUAN. They were the proud and indigenous bona fide owners and custodians of IBRITAM as we have seen already. For just like the Jews of old in the days of King Zedekiah of Judah, the holy Prophets Jeremiah, Baruch, Daniel etc. when these Israelites were taken into exile in Babylon by King Nebuchadnezzar (587 BC. cf. Jer. 42-44), these men of God agonized by trying to persuade the people of Israel to remain law-abiding and to be and let be. These were the so-called anawim in recorded Eastern Near East and World history.

First of all, IBRITAM is coined from two words – "verb" and "noun" IBRE and ITAM: Literally translated it means, "let us play/act with the hat", hence, I B R I T A M. Tradition has it that the earliest crafting of this wonderful, witty and sagacious manipulation of the hat woven with ikan/ kukip material which was also used in making sleeping mats, was always accompanied with the xylophone in what has become known as the "IKON", ie. the "sol-fa" d - t - l - s notation sounds, which the people heard and regarded as the voice of the spirits talking to and through the magician or diviner. The oracle and the whole system of the IKON in the xylophone was never to be exposed or be seen by the people because it was meant to signify the voice of the ancestors residing within the oracle. It was therefore the medium used in order to provide the voice, as it were, with which the oracle operator or diviner announced to the clients the messages and information which these seekers had come to find out in the first place. Later on also, an "AKPASA"- basket made in the form of a hat was used. It was meant to cover all the symbols by which the messages from the oracle were disclosed to the clients who had come to enquire concerning whatever were their problems and needs. Then they built a gigantic grotesque structure in the form of a pyramid as long as the eye could go to designate the IBRITAM or LONG JUJU oracle figure. It was by means of this monumental structure that they were able to connive and capture people who came to consult the oracle which attracted people from far near to have their problems solved. In modern times basins are being used for the same purpose and the voice-less symbols are the k?i ebi? ie. Quills of the porcupine which are made to "stand up" in all directions and angles when acted upon by the adroit positioning of the basin. Just because the shape of a basket or basin looks like "ITAM" – hat it was used for covering the symbols as noted above, hence the use of the device "ITAM" as one of the instruments in "IBRITAM". Usually seven of these are used and the number of quills as also their positioning and the angles at which they stand together with the sounds from the xylophone determine the messages to be interpreted from the spirits to the clients. Thus this seemingly complicated oracle was the beginning of "NDOMO" device for detecting and proffering solutions to problems and enquiries brought by clients far and near. For the ancients, the more complicated and perhaps confusing a device was, the more potent, efficacious and credible it was meant to be; at least as adjudged by those who needed the information or those who had problems.

This was the original title of the oracle device and the entire institution then became known as

IBRITAM or LONG JUJU, but this as noted in this work is an Ibibio nomenclature which came much later on after all the URUAN peoples in their kindreds had departed from the scene of IBOM country, the cradle land of all those who now occupy parts of the Cross River State and the entire Akwa Ibom State of Nigeria today. The Ibibios had come up with this designation because those ancient URUAN remnants now turned ARO IGBOS who had stayed put at IBOM were often derogatorily addressed by the Ibibios as "IN? IKON" meaning "thieves of the xylophone; hence the designation: "I B R I T A M I N O K O N". The Ibibios and Annangs always call the Aros and others from Arochukwu who later immigrated to now Akwa Ibom State "Inokon people" till this day. This was also in consequence of their monopoly of the oracle which by this time had acquired the new acronym of the dreaded L O N G J U J U of AROCHUKWU a.k.a IBRITAM INOKON. It was also by coincidence in consequence of their being able to speak to now be "speaking in tongues" in URUAN/EFIK and Igbo languages at the same time. By acquiring the Igbo language and becoming bilingual overnight, the Aros were then seen as very crafty "wayo and wuru-wuru" people who could speak in tongues. It was this sort of craftiness and sagacity that angered the IBIBIOS and that made them come up with that soubriquet: IBRITAM INOKON = "thieves of the oracle". When confronted the Aros would retort: "Anyi bu diala n'ebe a. Amuru anyi n'ebe a; obobo a bukwa ebe-obibi anyi. Onweghi mgbe anyi bu ndi mbiara-mbiara ma obu ndi oghu n'ebe a!'Anyi bu ARO CHUKWU': meaning*:* We are the aborigines of this place. We were born here and have always been living in this town. We are neither strangers nor slaves here. "We are 'a r o c h u k w u' = "the children/people of God", hence the nomenclature AROS or AROCHUKWU up till today. That is URUAN sagacity and idiosyncrasies (Cf. Interviews with Chris Obasi, Madam Uloma Okoro, etc. 2013).

In 2003 on the solemn Centenary Celebration of SACRED HEART DAY at Calabar, I had been directed to invite all the Dioceses, parishes, station missions and churches hitherto in those territories that formerly formed the Prefecture Apostolic of Calabar. They comprised of all the Ogoni parishes in former Opobo including Western Obolo which belonged to SS Peter and Paul Deanery Essene, now IKOT ABASI; the parishes in the whole of Ebonyi State now in Abakaliki Diocese; those of Northern Cross River, now in Ogoja Diocese and also of former St. Paul's UTUTU with Headquarters at AROCHUKWU now in Umuahia Diocese. Both kindergarten pupils, students etc. from the parishes of AROCHUKWU had turned up for the grand finale. Then lo and behold, the Holy Child Nursery School team in Arochukwu which had also turned up for the occasion won the giant Cup trophy, having sung the opening welcome song and folk lores in Uruan-Efik language. Can you beat that! On a visit to AROCHUKWU today, one cannot fail to notice the amalgam of names of all the nationalities of the South South and South East especially URUAN/ EFIK names like Bassey, Archibong, Orok, Efanga, Ekeng, Eneyo, Effiom, Asari, Ene, Ansa etc. What do all these imply? It is also the same situation one gets to notice among the so-called "INOKON settlers" in some parts of Akwa Ibom like Ifuho, Abiakpo Ntak Inyang, Obio Akpa, Ikot Ibritam and Ekpemiong just to mention a few today.

THE LONG JUJU AND THE AROS OF AROCHUKWU

As for the LONG JUJU, it has never been envisioned as part of this project as it would require another volume if not volumes like this work to scrape just the surface of it. But suffice to admit that it was the sagacity, craftiness, native superior skill and ingenuity of the African at work that had masterminded the use of IKON oracle, which at the height of it all was to capture slaves for the Calabar and IDU a.k.a Nwaniba sea ports when Slave Trade was rife on the African continent. As to why most of the slaves captured were Igbos, the answer is not far to seek. Prof. Adiele E. Afigbo himself an Igbo, has given several reasons why this was so. Because IBOM had become the melting pot of almost all the nationalities of especially of the South South and South East of Nigeria, most of them Igbos, wanted to benefit from that booming slave trade by actively partaking in it. The Igbos teamed up with these ancient URUAN descendants now metamorphosed into the "Aros of Arochukwu" who at the time were the chief architects of the Long Juju to maximize the quantity of slaves brought into the bargain. Afigbo even concluded that with such a situation the Igbos would gladly capitalize on this to lead in the capture of slaves by preying on their fellows most of whom were their stubborn sons and unmarriageable daughters for the trade (Cf Afigbo A.E. 267-280). It was therefore obvious that the Igbos must have come from far and near not only to consult the IBRITAM oracle but also to profit by the booming trade and this became the symbol of unity and integration for the Igbo confederacy thus making Arochukwu the cradle of Igbo civilization till today. It was this sort of situation that made the so-called Aros bilingual. Who then are these Igbos of Nigeria?

WHO ARE THE IGBOS - UNEGHE?

Most of what we now come to know about the Igbos are taken from the accounts of some anthropologists, linguists, historians and ethnographers notably G. P Murdock, Chinua Achebe, A. Greenberg, K. O. Dike, John Adams, Amaury Talbot, Daryll Forde, John Eberegbunam Njoku, Simon Ottenberg, Benneth Opara, A. E Afigbo, George Thomas Basden, Edmund Ilogu, Elizabeth, Isichei, Vernantius Emeka Ndukaihe, etc. All these have come to describe the Igbos as autochthonous. The Igbos a.k.a "UNEGHE" in URUAN/EFIK, ostensibly noted for their ever ubiquitous nature as also tantalizing and mesmerizing dancing steps (unek) with also their altogether inexplicable but admirable sometimes grotesque qualities, mannerisms, artifacts and ways have inexorably made URUAN/EFIK to give them that name. Some of them claim their origin from the Orient – Palestine as also URUAN/EFIK, but say that they are descendants of one of the lost tribes of Israel, hence their empathy for the Jews. Therefore, they trace their ancestry from the Jewish stock especially on account of their supposed persecution even here in their own country Nigeria. Just as the Jews vanquished their oppressors notably the Europeans, so Igbos identify with Jewish success hoping they would one day triumph over all comers who persecute them, because they are God's chosen people. Just think of their euphoria calling Abia State "God's country" and ancient Ibom of URUAN/EFIK peoples as the town of "God's people or Arochukwu"! Perhaps this is the most powerful tonic for their survival and a great foundation for their success everywhere and in almost everything whether in education, business especially commerce or even in politics.

The Igbos occupy a part of the south eastern flank of Nigeria while the greater part is inhabited by the Ibibio, Annang, Efik, Eastern and Western Obolo peoples as also the people from Northern Cross River who speak a variety of semi-Bantu dialects some of which altogether unintelligible to their fellow Cross Riverians. Igbo land is bounded on the north by part of the North Eastern States viz. Benue State and also part of the North Central of Kogi State; on the south by the same southern territory described above ie. Akwa Ibom and southern Cross River – Efik and Ejagham speaking territories, on the east by Northern Cross River, and on the west by parts of South South of Delta and Rivers States respectively. There are Igbo speaking elements both in Rivers State and Delta – the Ika Igbos; Bonny, Kalabari, Okrika, Ikwerre, Eche, the Andoni, etc. They can also be found as the Igbo peoples of Asaba, Isele -Uku, Ogwashi-Uku, Agbor, Obiaruku, Abraka etc. in Delta State. But these aforementioned have quite distinctive behaviour patterns which separate them from the mainstream Igbos of South Eastern Nigeria. Among the Ikwerres, Okrikas etc. in Rivers State, Chieftaincy practices tend to veer towards the Kalabari, Ijaw etc. and more towards the same pattern as URUAN/EFIK because the Kalabari are in fact the descendants of ancient Calabar. As noticed already, it was the Portuguese who first gave that designation Kalabros ie. "Land of mangroves" in the first place. This included the entire territory extending up to and as far as the Bight of Bonny.

In Delta and Edo States, their Igbo cousins have a chieftaincy profile more like the Binis of Edo than the acephalous Igbo systems viz. their "Ndichie" and "Age-Grade" Systems. In the same way in fact, this also goes to strengthen the Yoruba claim that the Asagba of Asaba, the Obi of Onitsha and the Olu of Warri were grandsons of Oduduwa while the Edo on the other hand counter claim that the Oduduwa indeed was a son of the Oba of Benin, hence the Yorubas are Edolites. But that is not the issue here. What may interest us is that there is a definite relationship between the Benin Kingship and the Yoruba Kingships including that of the Itsekeri, the Badagry and Lagos Kingships. The Urhobo, Isoko and even the Benin Republic Kingships are all similarly inter-related. But the relationship is not necessarily one of subjugation but of affinity. We can also infer from the familial relationships between the kings of Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy, and Holland, Austria etc. many of which kings in the olden days could not even speak English although nowadays they do.

As a child and over fifty years ago and beyond, I noticed that the Igbos were the ubiquitous traders found everywhere in my place of URUAN/EFIK and resident at Idu and Calabar; some were to be found in other parts of Nigeria especially in the North and Lagos. In fact, as one can see, the Igbos seem to be the most travelled ethnic group in Nigeria. They are virtually everywhere, every time. At the time, they were mostly traders in textiles viz. those from Abriba and Ohafia as discussed already. Aba and Onitsha markets always brimmed with textile goods and people from all over Nigeria and beyond used to come and buy even till today. But in recent times, these itinerant Abriba textile merchants have practically disappeared from the scene in the local towns and villages all over the nation. Nnewi in Anambra State has turned the manufacturing capital of Nigeria, even Africa with several manufacturing factories, breweries, soft drinks, bottled water, food processing plants, motor vehicle assembly plants including generators. Nnewi has almost overtaken Ikeja as the industrial hub of Nigeria. Onitsha market remains the largest market in Africa selling practically everything on earth with Indian, Chinese and Vietnamese traders competing for space. The banks there are something else, carrying probably the largest bulk of cash. With political will and patriotism, the Federal Government of Nigeria should deem it fit and profitable for all Nigerians to complete the second Niger bridge and construct ten lanes of asphalt highways spanning Onitsha, Nnewi and Awka the State capital and also spanning Asaba axis. Then this bit of territory would be comparable to New York and New Jersey and would give the biggest financial fillip to Nigeria, nay Africa.

In Lagos metropolis especially along Broad Street at a point in time, Igbos had no competitors except probably only the Syrians a.k.a Lebanese. In fact, there seems to be no other ethnic group comparable and so armed for struggle of efficient development than the Igbo. The slave trade often referred to in this book which affected West Africa soon made them either procurers or middlemen and many of those sold off were their own people of Igbo captured from the many slave raids they struck all over Igbo land. Their major slave trading ports were Calabar, Esuk Mbehe IDU which I have agonized here imploring the Federal Government to see wisdom and promptly develop, and Bonny on account of their deep water shores which made it unnecessary for European slave ships to venture into the interior. With the establishment of the Long Juju ostensibly for the capture of slaves then mannered by the Aros, no wonder Arochukwu became the melting pot of that inglorious trade. Such business required trust worthy lieutenants; and trust the Igbos, they were handy and capable. With the abolition of slave trade, the Igbos in Calabar, now freed men and women intermarried and greatly increased Efik populations - ifun Efik. Religiously too, their congregation at Arochukwu greatly influenced the core of their religious beliefs maintained through their itinerant mystics /spiritualists, the Aros. But closely allied to this is the source of all Igbo culturalism, ideology and spirituality which the Igbos trace from the village called Nri as their place of origin as we are going to see. In fact, Nri is to the Igbos what Ile Ife is to the Yorubas.

SOME KEY PERSONALITIES OF SOUTH-EASTERN NIGERIA ANCIENT & MODERN

NIGERIA: Uruan-Efik Essien Duopeba & Origins/Pre-History and Heritage of the Other Ethnic Nationalities

IGBO CONFEDERACY: IGBOS (UNEGHE) IN PARTICULAR ANCIENT IGBO COUNTRY BEFORE AND AFTER INDEPENDENCE IGBO ETHNIC ORIGINS: A BRIEF HISTORY AND EVOLUTION

Ancient Igbo land ie. Igbo country before the British colonials came calling to Nigeria was populated by people who were politically a fragmented group because there were so many variations in their cultures such as in art styles, dress codes and attires, religious practices, even dialects. As in the case of most ethnic groups, Igbos are an ethnic group of Southeastern Nigeria, which is inhabited mostly by the Igbo speaking peoples. Igbo land is one of the most densely populated area in Nigeria, and possibly also one of the largest ethnic groups in Africa. They speak Igbo, which includes various lineages and dialects. According to Dr. Benjamin Nnamdi Azikiwe, the Owelle of Onitsha, the first Governor General and President of Nigeria in the first Republic, there are more than twenty dialectical groups in Igbo land and some of these dialects can be quite unintelligible to most Igbos because Mbamili, Aniocha, Anidinma, Ukwani, Nsukka, Udi, Agwu, Awka, Onitsha, Ogbaru, Abakaliki, Afikpo, Okigwe, Orlu, Owerri, Mbaise, Ngwa, Bende, Abriba, Ohafia, Abam and Etche are from a dialect of groups of Igbo nationalities but who nevertheless regard themselves as one people, from one stock – the Ibo race. There are Igbo speaking elements both in Rivers State and Delta – the Bonny, Kalabari, Okrika, Ikwerre, Andoni, etc. as also the people from Asaba, Isele -Uku, Ogwashi-Uku, Agbor, Obiaruku, Abraka etc. in Delta State. But these other Igbos seem to have quite distinctive behaviour patterns which separate them from the mainstream the Igbos of South Eastern Nigeria. As noticed already elsewhere it was the pioneer European navigators, the Portuguese like Vasco da Gama who gave them this designation in the first place, including the entire territory extending up to and as far as the Bight of Bonny just as they gave the designation Kalabros, meaning the land of mangroves to the ancestral land of ancient URUAN-EFIK which extends as far as the west Atlantic coast.

Most of these ethnicities that also inhabit south eastern Nigeria now designated "South South", such as the URUAN/EFIK and Ibibio peoples, are so closely related to the Igbos such that sometimes they are also being regarded as Igbos by other Nigerians and ethnographers who are not well informed about the south east. The Northerners of Nigeria even call them by the Igbo soubriquet "nyamiri". Perhaps it was because of the fact that those early speaking Igbo strangers who went to this dry and hot northern part of Nigeria for the first time, and as they were dying of thirst were wont to request for a sip of water saying "nye'm miri", meaning "please give me water", hence the designation of those Igbo strangers by northerners as: "nyam-miri" peoples till today. Then the Northerners also applied the same soubriquet to all Nationalities of the South East and South South. During the civil war, they were always regarding the people of Biafra which at the time of the war was the defunct territory then known as Eastern Nigeria as "nyam miri". Due to the effects of migration and the Atlantic slave trade, there are also descendant ethnic Igbo populations in countries such as Cameroon and Equatorial Guinea, as well as outside Africa. Many African Americans and Afro Caribbeans are believed to be partially of Igbo descent. That transatlantic slave trade, which took place between the 16th and late 19th centuries, had a huge effect on the Igbo because so many young people were taken as slaves. Then and especially when the internecine and slave-raiding wars increased, quite a large number of them were taken captives for the slave trade. Most Igbo slaves were taken from the Bight of Biafara now called the Bight of Bonny ie. the entire territory bordering Bayelsa, the Rivers, Akwa Ibom and Cross River States of Nigeria on the Atlantic coast. Nowadays this area has come to include modern day South South, South Eastern Nigeria, Western Cameroon, and parts of Northern Gabon. The major trading ports for goods and slaves in the area at the time were Bonny, Calabar and IDU / NWABIBA sea port. A large number of slaves from the Bight of Biafara would have been Igbo as mentioned above.

Slaves were usually sold to Europeans by the Aro Confederacy, who kidnapped or bought slaves from Igbo villages in the hinterland. Most of the Igbo slaves were not victims of slave-raiding wars or expeditions, but were sometimes debtors and people who committed what their communities considered to be abominations and other inhuman crimes. Before this time ancient Igbo used to throw away such useless people into their so-called "evil forests" to rut and die. Igbo slaves were known to the British colonialists as being rebellious and having a high rate of suicide to escape slavery. For still unknown reasons, there is evidence that the slave traders also sought for Igbo women as slaves. Genetic studies have shown the Igbos to be a cluster of peoples most closely related to the other Niger-Congo-speaking peoples. Nowadays with modern technology, genealogy tracing devices and the DNA means of testing, it has become possible to trace the roots of many Africans in the Diaspora as being descendants of the victims of the Atlantic slave trade. Many of these are still researching for their family history. In the 2003 PBS programme, "African American Lives", Bishop T.D. Jakes who analyzed his DNA testified that his "Y chromosome" showed that he was descended from the Igbo. American actors such as Forest Whitaker, Paul Robenson and Blair Underwood have also traced their genealogy back to the Igbos. Their exact population outside Africa is unknown, but today many African Americans and Afro Caribbeans say they are of Igbo descent. According to some Liberian historians, the fifth president of Liberia, Edward James Royce was said to be of Igbo descent.

TRADITIONAL IGBO POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

Before this time, there were only a few centralized mostly hereditary chiefdoms in the whole of Igbo land. Aristocratic or kingship customs were the order of the day except in kingdoms such as those of Arochukwu, Agbor and Onitsha. Traditional Igbo political organization was based on a quasi-democratic republican system of government. In tight knit communities, this system guaranteed its citizens equality, as opposed to the feudalist system in the North with the Emir ruling over all the subjects of the territory. This system of government was witnessed by the Portuguese who first arrived and met with the Igbo people in the 15th century. With the exception of a few notable Igbo towns such as Onitsha, which had high chiefs called "Obi", and places like the Nri Kingdom and Arochukwu where their chiefs are called "Eze", they also had priest-kings. Igbo communities and area governments were overwhelmingly ruled by solely a republican consultative assembly of the common people. Communities were usually governed and administered by a council of Elders, the NDICHE.

In rural Nigeria today, Igbo people work mostly as craftsmen, farmers and traders. Their most important crop is the yam that is why they have so many celebrations and Yam Festivals which take place annually almost everywhere in Nigeria and in the Diaspora to celebrate its harvesting. Other staple crops include cassava and taro. Igbos did not have full exposure to other neighbouring ethnic groups in the past, neither did they have a strong identity as one people except perhaps the Aros and those from Ohafia, Abriba, etc. because these were indeed communities of ancient URUAN/EFIK as we have seen. Traditional Igbo political organizations were based on a quasi-democratic republican system of government. In fact, the Igbos of today see themselves as strong republicans. But they have tight knit communities with the result that their system guarantees every citizen a sort of equality, as opposed to the feudalist system with high chiefs whether of Obas or Emirs ruling over the subjects. This system of governance was witnessed in the 15th century by the Portuguese when they first arrived and met with these Igbo people. During the colonial era many of them became Christians while others became syncretic with a mixture of indigenous Igbo religion and belief systems. "Ndi Igbo" ie. the pan-Igbo nationals who now find themselves in such organizations like Ohanaeze Ndigbo have come to form the various subgroups which were hitherto organized by clan lineages, village affiliations and dialects.

ORIGIN AND PURPOSE OF OHANAEZE - THE WAY FORWARD

Concerning "OHANAEZE NDIGBO" some people understand it whether in terms of an organization of some top Igbo leaders or even chiefs/monarchs as an umbrella for galvanizing Igbo interests and their general welfare. Some see it as an organization to put paid to a grudgingly amorphous Igbo elite who find the Ohanaeze group entirely irrelevant and alien to Igbo culture and tradition and wish it dead on starting. But some well-minded Igbos see it as something worthwhile which can bring about together in the long run, all the Igbos including those in the Diaspora to a sort of town hall meeting to chart a common goal and even fight a common enemy which seems be the Nigerian State which has failed to do justice to the Igbo nation as a people since the introduction of the 3Rs of Reconciliation, Rehabilitation and Reconstruction mantra which Chief (DR) Gowon proposed to a bewildered Nigerian state soon after the civil war. To many discerning minds, this has never been fully implemented till today. Some have come to argue that despite whatever else might have been left undone, if Chief (DR) Matthew Olusegun Obasanjo had not allowed himself to be used by his military constituency to snatch the Presidential ticket from Chief (DR) Alex Ekweme in 1999, this would have been something which would have healed the wounds of the civil war absolutely and forever. This singular option would have fully integrated the Igbos into the federal Republic of Nigeria, and they would never have arisen a cause for the "peoples' Republic of Biafra or something like MASSOP or IPOB (Cf. Dele Sobowale in Vanguard March 5, 2017, 28). When in January 2017, this apex Igbo Organization elected Chief (Dr) John Nnia Nwodo, a pioneer member of this organization, not a few Igbos breathed a sigh of relief because he seemed to be a round peg in a round hole. According to Dr. Obi Nwakamma of UNN, this Ohanaeze was largely inactive between 1979 and 1983 and in the late 1900s it was practically a political fulcrum of Igbo political negotiations in the absence of any other viable political conduits.

One of the myriad problems of Ohanaeze over the years was its seeming distance from the people whom it purported to represent and serve. It had nothing to do with "Oha" ie. "the Igbo public" which ought to be the bastion of its power, but largely and in a sense, it represented elite interests. People like Governor Chief (DR) Sam Mbakwe rejected it as being too tepid and compromising by its political affiliations and actions because it had failed to fully integrate Igbo City Town Unions across Nigeria even West Africa and beyond. In the same vein, General Emeka Odumegwu Ojukwu had also lampooned Ohanaeze for its inconsistencies arguing that it was a mere "socio-cultural group" which had nothing to do with him in the face of the political realities confronting the Igbos in Nigeria. Ohanaeze's raison d' ìtre should have been its connect with the Igbo public but it failed to provide true leadership subjecting itself to many failed opportunities which has led to the rise of contending organizations like MASSOP and IPOB. But it was people like Eze (DR.) Francis Akanu Ibiam, himself an Elder Statesman and Paramount Ruler cum Royal father of Unwana - Ebony State with others like Dr. Echeruo Okeke and of course the new President Chief John Nwodo who formed the Organization as a Political Action in preparation for Gowon's political transition in the 1970s. This came about when some Igbo political leaders mostly former Ministers of the Federal Republic of Nigeria including Dr. Ibiam, John Nnia Nwodo etc. first met at the home of Dr. J.M. Echeruo at Enugu to brainstorm with British Prime Minister Lord Carrington on the strategic reconstruction of the Eastern Region after the devastations of the civil war and plans for full re-integration of the people. By 1974 they had agreed to take on the role of Community leadership and became "Ezes" – a designation Dr. Ibiam denied as necessarily meaning "KING". Then they also agreed to start "OHANAEZE" as a political Action group with Dr. Ibiam as its first President. From the mouth of Dr. John Nwodo himself, Igbos as a way forward must stop talking about "Igbo marginalization "and get on to business because this has not earned them anything. Ndigbo must rise and develop a new political programme and situate itself in the minds and hearts of the people to acquire power and mandate and reach out to others as Nwodo is doing already meeting with South South, Afenifere, the Middle Belt etc. in order to build bridges across the nation. It should garner the best brains and talents of Ndi Igbo and these are abundant everywhere to build up the Organization. Now with Nwodo as "Father of Ndi Igbo" and at the helm of affairs, it is hoped that Ohanaeze Ndi Igbo will re-position itself in order to bring about the needed rallying force to lead the Igbos to the great Igbo renaissance and negotiate Igbos' future political, economic position in contemporary Nigeria.

IGBO ORIGINS - THE IGBO CREATION MYTH OF NRI/ERI

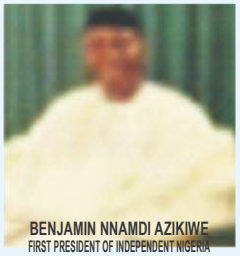
The Igbos have a peculiar creation myth around the NRI. This is one of the many creation myths that exist in various parts of Igbo land. To this end, many Igbos have traced their ancestry to the Nri and Aguleri whose people inhabit the territory of the Umueri clan. These people in turn trace their lineages back to the patriarchal king-figure called Eri. Many educated Igbos are confused about the Eri's origins which has been described as a "sky being" sent by Chukwu (God). This king-figure is linked with the societal order of the people of Anambra. According to Elizabeth Allo Isichei, one of Igbo historians, Nri and Aguleri and part of the Umueri clan are a cluster of Igbo village groups which trace their origins to a sky being called Eri (Elizabeth Allo Isichei, 12-13). The Kingdom of Nri was a religious polity, a sort of state that developed in the central heartland of the Igbo region. This Nri was said to have had seven types of taboos which included those about human beings such as the birth of twins; concerning animals, such as the killing or eating of pythons; about objects, temporal, behavioral, speech and place taboos. The rules regarding these taboos were used to educate and govern Nri's subjects. This meant that, while certain Igbos may have lived under different formal administrations, all followers of the Igbo religion had to abide by the rules of the faith and obey its representative on earth, the Eze Nri.

The traditions of the Umueri clan have as their source the Anambra valley as the cradle of Igbo land. In the 1970s the Owerri, Okigwe, Orlu, Agwu, Udi and Awka divisions were determined to constitute "an Igbo heartland" from the linguistic and cultural evidence. Archaeological evidence suggests that Nri hegemony in Igbo land goes back as far as the 9th century AD, and royal burials have been unearthed dating at least to the 10th century AD. Eri, the god-like founder of Nri, is believed to have settled in the region around 948 AD. The first Eze Nri was Eze Ìfikuánim who followed directly after him. According to an Igbo oral tradition, his reign started in 1043 AD. But at least one historian has put Ìfikuánim's reign much later, around 1225 AD. But some earlier historians have discovered a pottery artwork dating to around 2500 BC showing similarities with later Igbo art works found at Nsukka along with potteries and tools at nearby Ibagwa. With these they have come to the conclusion that Igbos of ancient stock must have lived around 2500 BC.

IGBOS IN THE DIASPORA - IGBO AFRO-AMERICANS

Some others have also ventured into concluding that there was a system of indentured servitude which must have existed among the Igbo before and after the coming of the early Europeans. Indentured servitude in Igbo land was described by Olaudah Equiano in his Memoirs. Here he described the conditions of the slaves in his community of Essaka, and pointed out the differences in the treatment of slaves under the Igbo in Essaka, and those in the custody of Europeans in West Indies. In the ancient system of servitude, the slaves did not do more work than other members of the community except that they were not permitted to eat with the free-born. There was scarcely any other difference between them. Some of these slaves even had their own slaves under them as their own property for their own use. Contrary to common belief, European slave traders were fairly well informed about various African ethnicities. That enabled the Europeans to target certain ethnic groups which their plantation owners preferred. Particularly preferred Igbo ethnic groups consequently became concentrated in certain parts of the Americas. The Igbo slaves were dispersed in colonies such as Jamaica, Cuba, Saint-Domingue, Barbados, the United States, Belize, Trinidad and Tobago, among others. The Niger coast was the area of contact between African and European slave traders in the 1400s–1800s AD. The Portuguese were the first traders after them the Dutch and finally came the British. Prior to European contact, Igbo trade routes stretched as far as Mecca, Medina and Jeddah on the continent. Elements of Igbo culture can still be found in these places. For example, in Jamaican Patois, the Igbo word unu, meaning “you” plural, is still used. “Red Ibo” (or “red eboe”) describes a black person with fair or “yellowish” skin. This term had originated from the reported prevalence of these skin tones among the Igbo but eastern Nigerian influences may not be strictly Igbo. The word Bim, a colloquial term for Barbados, was commonly used among enslaved or Bajans. This word is said to have been derived from bém in the Igbo language meaning 'my place or people'. There are many other origins about the derivatives. A section of Belize City was named Eboe Town after its Igbo inhabitants. In the United States, the Igbos were shipped mostly into the Chesapeake Bay colonies and the States of Maryland and Virginia where they now constitute the largest group of Igbo Afro-Americans and Afro Caribbeans. Since the late 20th century, a wave of Nigerian immigrants, mostly English and Igbo-speaking, have settled in Maryland being attracted to its strong professional job market.

INTRODUCTION OF INDIRECT RULE AND EZE KINGSHIP IN IGBO LAND



Though the Igbos before the British Rule seemingly were a politically fragmented group, their political system has changed so significantly since the late 20th century that they have almost overshadowed the Arewa and Oduduwa dynasties. In the early 20th century, Frederick Lugard then reigning as the Governor General of Nigeria introduced the Ezeship as a sort of Kingship system of local governance under the rule of Ezes known as “Warrant Chiefs. “ Not long this system flourished in most local communities in Igbo land. The 19th-century British colonization effort in present-day Nigeria and increased encounters between the Igbo and other ethnicities near the Niger River has led to deepening the sense of a distinct Igbo ethnic identity. This Eze kingship institution was introduced into most of the local communities with the appointment of “Warrant Chiefs” and it so made it easily adaptable to this type of re-arrangement. It was possible and more so especially as the Igbos became overwhelmingly Christian under colonization. Things

Fall Apart, one of Chinua Achebe's most popular novels has captured this ancient Igbo culture and changes under colonialism. Thus the Igbos proved to be decisive and enthusiastic in their embrace of Christianity and Western education. But due to the incompatibility of the Igbo decentralized style of governance and the new centralized system including the appointment of warrant chiefs required for British indirect rule, this British colonial rule became marked with open conflicts and tension. Under British colonial rule, the diversity within each of Nigeria's major ethnic groups slowly decreased and distinctions between the Igbo and other large ethnic groups, such as the Hausa and the Yoruba, became sharper. But in their socio-cultural and political system the Igbos still continued to maintain their Council of Elders who work with their EZE kings while the youths tried to operate a mitigated system of policing which was introduced under Indirect Rule.

Nowadays the Igbos have come to claim to be acephalous thus implying that they are genetically democratic and republican. Their age-grade system seems to account for this nature of things. They pay great attention and due respect to their Councils of Elders - the Ezes. Originally, there were so many variations in their language and culture especially in village/clan administration and governance such as in art styles, attires and religious practices. Various sub-groups were organized by clan, village, lineage affiliations and dialects because they were never known to have centralized chiefdoms/kingdoms. Hereditary aristocracy and kingship customs were few and far between except perhaps in kingdoms such as those of the so-called Nri. Although titled chiefs, Chieftaincy holders and "red capped chiefs" were respected because of their accomplishments and capabilities, they were never revered as kings, but most often they could perform special functions and whatever given to them by assemblies such as the Umunna and now the Ohanaeze Ndigbo etc. could authorize. The Umunna were a form of patrilineage assemblies maintained by the lineages in Igbo land. Every promulgated law started with the Umunna which consisted of a line of male descent from a founding ancestor whom the line was sometimes named after, including other groups of compounds containing closely related families headed by the eldest male member. The Umunna was to be seen as the most important pillar of Igbo society. Trust the Igbos in their syncretic and eclectic culture, because they have gradually streamlined and almost overtaken those ancient tribes and cultures with the Eze kingship and traditional royalty institutions such as URUAN/EFIK kingdoms, Edo - the Binis, for the Yorubas ie. the Oba Kingship, Hausa-Fulanis, ie. the Emir Kingship as also other Nigerian and African Chieftaincy organizations. They were constituted most importantly for the promotion of a central and unified Igbo language and culture known as "The Society for Promoting Igbo Language and Culture (SPILC)". This was founded in 1949 by Frederick Chidozie Ogbalu, and has since created a standard dialect for Igbos.

The Mainline Igbos in Nigeria are found in Abia, Anambra, Imo, Ebonyi, and Enugu States but many of them are to be found in Edo, Delta, Rivers States as discussed already and even in most parts of the Northern States especially Benue and Plateau. The Igbo language is predominant throughout these areas, although English, the Nigerian national language is spoken as well. Prominent towns and cities in Igbo land include Aba with Enugu considered as the 'Igbo capital'; Owerri, Nnewi, Awka, Okigwe, Orlu among others. A significant number of Igbo people have migrated to other parts of Nigeria, such as the cities of Lagos, Abuja, and Kano.

IGBO CULTURE: TRAITS OF INTELLIGENCE AND INDUSTRY IGBO ECONOMIC EXPERTISE AND EXCELLENCE

Igbo culture includes the various customs, practices and traditions of the people. It comprises archaic practices as well as new concepts added into the Igbo culture either through evolution or outside influences. These customs and traditions include the Igbos visual arts, use of language, religion, music, artifacts, especially dance forms, as well as their attire, cuisine and dialects. Because of their various subgroups, the varieties of their culture are further heightened. At the early stage, the colonial authorities employed mostly the Onitsha Igbos in the civil service leading to their dominance in the professions, the judiciary, politics, etc. But the Igbos "who would never say die", use their innate intelligence to upstage all this.

The Igbos are a very clever and sagacious people such that the more they are nearer or closer to people of other or similar cultures, the more they become bigger and more modernized and urbanized. This is not far to seek. In fact, the Igbos as also the Yorubas are the two modernized Nations on the African continent. They are given to promoting modernization, education, progress and other good things more than any other nationality in this country. It is a pity that they are in this one and same country, yet they are seen to be fighting one another. The earlier they come together to respect and liberate themselves to kick-start the mantra of the "Handshake across the Niger" for the proper and authentic restructuring of the Federal Republic of Nigeria which the military had destroyed, the better for themselves, for Nigeria and for Africa. They took very early to missionary education and other aspects of Westernization.

The Onitsha Igbos – made up of ethnic groups of Igalas who journeyed downstream the River Niger from Lokoja to Onitsha, the Edos from Benin, and villages surrounding Onitsha, Obosi and environs form the core of ancient Onitsha people. Their contact with the early Europeans both at Onitsha and Calabar enabled many of Onitsha children to go to school and this itself galvanized their monopoly in politics, education and commerce. Some of those who benefitted from the opening of missionary schools Catholic and Protestant like the famous Dennis Memorial Grammar School, St Charles College, Christ the King and Holy Rosary Colleges Onitsha, Hope Waddell Training Institute, St Patrick's College etc. were instrumental in reproducing the Igbo doctors, lawyers and professors. It was therefore no accident that these produced such great Onitsha personalities like Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, Justice Anyeagbunam, Chuba Ikpeazu, Dr. Ofodile, Prof. Chike Obi, Mazi Aje Asika, Sir Louis Mbanefo, just to mention a few. Aspects of Igbo culture such as construction of houses, education and religion changed all that following colonialism. The tradition of building houses out of mud walls and thatched roofs ended as the people shifted to materials such as cement blocks for building houses and zinc roofs. Many asphalt roads were built for vehicular movements. Buildings such as hospitals and schools were erected in many parts of Igbo land. Along with these changes, electricity and running water were installed as far back as the early 20th century. With the introduction of electricity, new technology such as radios and televisions were adopted, and have become commonplace in most Igbo households.

THE IGBO APPRENTICE SYSTEM AND MENTORSHIP

The Igbos have capitalized upon the apprentice system which they perfected, and eventually masterminded. It was a novel entrepreneurial system they employed which also enabled their Igbo youths to soon become entrepreneurs and masters of their preferred trades and professions overnight. It soon became a common phenomenon in Igbo land to find successful car dealers, motor spare parts merchants, motor mechanic masters or traders in electronics, drugs-medicines and other pharmaceutical goods, transport owners etc. having to employ little boys even as young as ten years of age. These boys abandoned school to become apprenticed to some of these car spare parts dealers, textile traders, patent medicine shop owners, stock keepers, transporters and what have you. Soon it was common almost all over Igbo land and even nowadays still to see these youngsters abandon their education and come to live with "their masters" as apprentices. After working for the agreed number of years, their masters will either give them a substantial amount of money to start off their own business also in spare parts, electronics, medicines etc. Some masters are known to hand over or even build another shops or a new centres for them such that the young apprentices now turn into another billionaires and "masters" or factory owners overnight. There is another classical way the Igbos do business which makes them easily able to beat any competitors because they know their onions and can easily acquire better and superior products since they have the accessibility and a burning desire to succeed quickly (Cf. Patrick Dele Cole in Sunday Vanguard). They easily know where to go and how to get these things because of their esprit de corps and readiness to welcome and assist their fellows who are novices in the business – "the di anyi factor", so to speak. Everywhere there is a virtual Igbo monopoly of every venture in spare parts trade, mechanics, textile dealers, automobile tycoons.

Very usually these are Nnewi people, the Igbo industrial moguls who are these building materials monopolists, motor spare parts, local pharmaceuticals and so on. Similarly, one notices that the young boy who once was an apprentice or bus attendant has so soon grown up to own a fleet of buses which will need spare parts; and all these with a multiplier effect in tow. In Lagos in particular, the Igbos are the owners of 70% business in electronics, and Alaba has become the greatest electronic market in Africa owned by Igbos and in tow other ancillary electronic appliances and supporting businesses viz. television sets, radios, washing machines, refrigerators, freezers, microwaves appliances and what have you. Given the chance, the Igbo man has an incredible drive to make a success of any venture worldwide.

By the mid-20th century, the Igbos indeed developed a strong sense of ethnic identity. They are very proud of their culture, but are willing to participate in other peoples' cultures and more importantly to adapt foreign cultures to their own. Many Igbo billionaires are self-educated. More Igbo girls are now attending school than their male counterparts hence the preponderance of girls in schools and they far outnumber the boys in both secondary and universities. This has made the bride price very expensive in Igbo land. But the girls do fear about this high price as it can scare away suitors thereby leaving many of them unmarried. The marriage custom in Igbo land is similar to that of many other ethnic groups especially that of URUAN/EFIK who regard marriage not just a union between individuals, but as one between families who are in fact the initiators and match-makers of marriages. The Igbos regard marriage more seriously than probably other ethnic groups that is why some non-Igbo girls want to marry Igbo men assuming that they know how well to manage their wives. In fact, it is common to see semi-literate Igbo billionaires marrying graduates and most Igbos end up giving their children the best education which they themselves had missed. The kola nut is a central feature of the Igbo culture even though most other tribes including URUAN/EFIK also accept the position of the kola nut in their customs and heritage. It is effectively used during marriage ceremonials. But for the Igbo, this seems to be the symbol of their unity. It appeals to the individual soul, to the collective soul and even to the unseen spirits that capriciously rule or ruin them. It is a symbol of eschatological experience.

The Igbos live in a family homesteads surrounded by family farms whether large or small. These are usually near streams for easy access to water. They have many markets where goods and services are exchanged as merchandise and life hood needs. Whereas URUAN/EFIK has an eight-days market week, Igbos have a four-days markets week viz. EKE, ORIE, AFOR and NKWO. In fact, in ancient Igbo land children were named after these market days on which they were born eg. a child born on an Afor market day was wont to be named Okafor, the one born on Eke market day would bear the name Okeke, similarly Nwankwo for those born on Nkwo days and Okorie for those born on Orie days. Now and before, Onitsha market seems to be their largest and the most important in Igbo land. Igbos also used to have large village squares for meetings, announcements and entertainments just as in URUAN/ EFIK though these are fast disappearing due to land speculation and sales of patrimonial land holdings which I have agonized and descried in this book. Mathematics aside, indigenous Igbo society is evident in their calendar, banking system and strategic betting game called "Okwe". In their indigenous calendar, a week has four days, a month consists of seven weeks and 13 months make up a year. In the ancient days, an extra day was added in the last month to make it a "big or leap year or "Afo Ukwu", a.k.a. "ISUA ND? K" in URUAN/EFIK. This calendar is still used in indigenous Igbo villages and towns to determine market days. Most communities settle law matters via mediators, and the Igbo banking system for loans and savings, called Isusu or Osusu in URUAN/EFIK, is still very much in vogue.

IGBO MUSIC, DANCES AND ARTIFACTS

The Igbo people have a musical style into which they incorporate various percussion instruments: the udu, which is essentially designed from a clay jug; an ekwe, which is formed from a hollowed log; and the ogene. Their hand bells are designed from forged iron. Other instruments include opi, a wind instrument similar to the flute, igba, and ichaka. I have gone to this extent of mentioning all these musical artifacts because just like in URUAN/EFIK, these musical instruments have come to connote the wharf and woof of Igbo culture, and it is these instruments especially the "IGBA" that mastermind and colour their dancing steps "UNEK", hence the Efik name "UNEGHE" for Igbos. The "High Life" music is the most popular musical form among the Igbo. This widely popular musical genre in West Africa Highlife is a fusion of jazz and traditional music. The modern Igbo highlife is seen in the works of Dr (Sir) Warrior Oliver De Coque, Bright Chimezie and Chief Osita Osadebe, who were among the most popular Igbo highlife musicians of the 20th century. Masking is one of the most common art styles in Igbo land and is linked strongly with Igbo traditional music. A mask can be made of wood or fabric, along with other materials including iron and vegetation. Masks have a variety of uses, mainly in social satires, religious rituals, secret society initiations such as the Ekpe society as in URUAN/EFIK and in other public festivals, which now include Christmas celebrations. Some of the best known include the Agbogho Mmuo ie. Maiden spirit masks of the Northern Igbo which represent the spirits of deceased maidens and their mothers with masks symbolizing "Ijele" beauty and life. Other impressive masks include Northern Igbo ie. Ijele masks. At 12 feet (3.7 m) high, Ijele masks consist of platforms of 6 feet (1.8 m) in diameter, supporting figures made of coloured cloth and representing everyday scenes with objects such as leopards. Ijele masks are used for honouring the dead and to ensure the continuity and well-being of the community. They are seen on rare occasions only such as during the funeral rites of prominent figures in the community. There are many Igbo dance styles, but perhaps, the best Igbo dance most known for its artistry and drumming is the Atilogwu dance. In fact during the Cultural night the Archdiocese of Calabar put up for the entertainment of the visiting contingents and delegates from all over the dioceses of Nigeria which came to Calabar for the 1989 Catholic Laity Council of Nigeria Conference/ Congress Week, it was the Atilogwu dance troops I organized within the Igbo community residing thereat which ostensibly was the one that captured the admiration of the visitors and URUAN/EFIK. This was to further confirm their name tag of "UNEGHE". The performances include acrobatic stunts such as high kicks and - "obio-Okpo" in URUAN/EFIK, with each rhythm from the indigenous instruments indicating the dancer's movements.

Regarding Igbo architecture, arts and artifacts, there is such a variety among Igbo groups such that it is not possible to define a general Igbo art style. Igbo art is known for its various types of masquerades, masks and outfits symbolizing people, animals or abstract concepts. Bronze castings found in the town of Igbo Ukwu from the 9th century constitute the earliest sculptures discovered in Igbo land. Here, the grave of a well-established man of distinction and a ritual store, dating back to the 9th century AD contained both chased copper objects and elaborate castings in lead and bronze. Along with these bronzes were well over 165,000 glass beads said to have originated from Egypt, Venice and India. Some popular Igbo art styles include Uli designs. The majority of Igbos carve and use masks, although their functions vary from community to community. Igbo art is noted for Mbari architecture. Mbari houses of the Owerri-Igbo are large open-sided squares and paneled shelters. They house many life-sized painted figures usually sculpted in mud to appease the Alusi deity and Ala, with other deities of thunder and water. Other sculptures are for officials, craftsmen, foreigners (mainly Europeans), animals, legendary creatures and ancestors. Mbari houses take years to build. They regard this as a sacred process. When new ones are constructed, old ones are left to decay. In ancient times the common houses were made of mud and thatched roofs with bare earth floors and carved design doors. It was the same in URUA/EFIK though with large compound structures. Some houses had elaborate designs both in the interior and exterior. These designs included Uli art designed usually by the women.

The Nsude Pyramids at Nsude town is one of the unique structures of Igbo culture. Others are situated at Abaja in northern Igbo land where up to ten pyramidal structures were built of clay/mud. The first base section was 60 ft. in circumference and 3 ft. in height. The next stack was 45 ft. in circumference. Circular stacks continued to spiral up till it reached the top. These structures were temples for the god Ala/Uto who was believed to reside at its top. A stick was placed at the top to represent the god's residence. The structures were laid in groups of five parallel to each other. Because it was built of clay/mud like the Deffufa of Nubia, the longtime has taken its toll and therefore would necessitate periodic reconstruction.

IGBO TRADITIONAL RELIGION AND ORGANIZATIONS

Igbo ancient traditional religion and traditions are known as Odinani. In Igbo religion the supreme God is called Chukwu, the "great spirit". It was this Chukwu who created the world and everything in it. That is why he is associated with all things on Earth. To the ancients the Cosmos was divided into four complex parts of creation, known as Okike. The supernatural forces or deities were called Alusi; Mmuo, meaning spirits or Uwa meaning the world. In Odinani Chukwu is regarded as the supreme deity just as he is the creator, and the Igbos also believe that all things come from him and that everything on earth including heaven and the rest of the spiritual world is under his control. Linguistic studies of the Igbo language suggest that the name Chukwu is a compound word made up of the Igbo words "Chi" meaning spiritual being and Ukwu meaning great/big. They therefore see God as the highest BEING. Alusi, otherwise known as Arusi or Arushi depending on the dialect is the High God. There are minor deities that are worshiped and served in Odinani. There are also many different Alusis, each with its own raison d'être and purpose. When an individual deity is no longer needed, or becomes too violent, it is discarded. But today since the majority of Igbos are Christians, well over half of whom are Roman Catholics these beliefs are discarded. There is a small population though of Igbo Jews, who claim descent from ancient Jewish traders who had married their women. I have alluded elsewhere to Igbos' empathy for the Jews and even their claims to be of the Jewish stock. Igbos traditionally believed in reincarnation and people were believed to reincarnate into families that they were part of while alive. Before a relative dies, it is said that many a time while still in his sick bed, the anticipated soon to be deceased relative sometimes gave some clues as to who or who he would like to reincarnate into in the family. Then once a child was born, he or she was believed to give signs of who he/she reincarnated from. This could be through his/her behavior, physical traits and statements. A diviner often could help in detecting who the child had reincarnated from. It was considered an insult should a male be said to have reincarnated as a female. Igbos do not allow children to call elders by their names without using an honorific title even till today because this is considered disrespectful. As a sign of respect, children are required to greet elders when seeing them for the first time in the day. Children usually add the Igbo honorifics "Mazi" or "Dede"* which is also used in Annang land, before an elder's name when addressing him.

The Igbos also have a peculiar tradition in their burials. After death, the body of a prominent member of the community is placed on a stool in a sitting posture and is clothed in the deceased's finest regal garments. In ancient times animal sacrifices could be offered and the dead person was well perfumed. Burial usually followed within 24 hours of death ditto in URUAN/EFIK. But nowadays burials could be delayed indefinitely especially for the mighty and the rich until everything is ready for high profile, expensive and "eye catching" and befitting funerals and ceremonials even in the Churches. However, the Hierarchies especially in the Catholic Church in the different Ecclesiastical Sees in Nigeria have fixed the maximum number of days within which the dead irrespective of status must be buried. In Calabar Ecclesiastical Province, not weeks or months not to talk of years within which the dead in these dioceses must be buried but it must be within a fortnight only. This must have been decided following the burial of Dominic Cardinal Ekanem in 1996 who in his will had expressed in clear terms that he should be buried within two weeks of his demise. This was followed to the letter in 1996. Also in this 21st century, the head of a home is usually buried within the compound of his residence. In Igbo land different types of deaths warranted different types of burials. This was determined by an individual's age, gender and status in the society. For example, children were buried in hiding and out of sight; their burials usually took place in the very early mornings or late at nights ditto in URUAN/EFIK. A simple untitled man was usually buried in front of his house and a simple single woman or mother is buried in her place of origin. The burial ground was a garden or a farm-area belonging to her father. But nowadays the majority of Igbos bury their dead in the western way in the cemeteries, although it is not uncommon to find burials still practiced in the traditional Igbo custom and ways. Regarding marriage custom and tradition even today, the process of marriage in Igbo land usually involves asking the young woman's consent, introducing the woman to the man's family and the same for the man by introducing him to the woman's family. Then followed the testing of the bride's character, checking the woman's family background, and paying the brides' wealth "or dowry". Marriage was sometimes arranged from birth through negotiations by both families, ditto URUAN/EFIK.

As already mentioned above, the yam is a very important item to the Igbo as the staple crop. There are celebrations such as the New Yam - Iwaji Festival which is held for the harvesting of the yam. During the festival, yam is eaten throughout Igbo communities and in the Diaspora. It is taken as celebration. It is common to find big time farmers exhibiting thousands of yam tubers to "show off" as a sign of success and wealth. In some tribes like Ikom, Mbembe (Obubra) Boki, Yala etc. in Cross River and ancient URUAN/EFIK, big time yam farmers acquire titles like Lolo, Etubom, etc. whereby they can "show off" and display stags of at least 1,000 yam stands. However, in recent times rice has replaced the yam for many ceremonial occasions even in Igbo land. Other indigenous Igbo foods include cassava, garri, maize and plantains. Soups or stews are included in a typical meal, prepared with vegetables such as bitter leaf, egusi, okro, etc. of which word derived from the Igbo language is Okwuru. To the soup are added some pieces of fish, chicken, beef, or "ewu "goat meat. Jollof rice is popular throughout West Africa ditto Igbo land and palm wine is a traditional Igbo beverage especially the brewed species kai-kai.

Organizations: The 1930s saw the rise of Igbo unions in the cities of Lagos and Port Harcourt. Later, the Ibo Federal Union renamed in 1948 as the Ibo State Union to reckon with the Ibibio State Union treated above. It emerged as an umbrella of Ndi-Igbo pan-ethnic organization. Headed by Nnamdi Azikiwe, it was closely associated with the then National Council of Nigeria and the Cameroons NCNC, which was founded by the legendary Herbert Macaulay. The aim of the organization was the improvement and advancement of Igbos especially in the field of education as well as their native Igbo land. This later included an Igbo "national anthem" with a plan for an Igbo bank which practicalized into the African Continental Bank – ACB in the early 1960s. In 1978 during General Olusegun Obasanjo 's military regime as Military Head of State the ban on independent political activities was lifted and this led to the formation of the Ohanaeze Ndi Igbo organization. This is the elite umbrella organization which speaks on behalf of Igbo people. Its main concerns include what the Igbos call "the marginalization of the Igbo people in Nigerian politics and the neglect of indigenous Igbo territory in social amenities and development of infrastructure." Other groups which protest the perceived marginalization of the Igbo people are the Igbo People's Congress (IPC). Even before the 20th century there were numerous Igbo unions and organizations existing around the world, such as the Igbo Union in Bathurst Banjul" Gambia in 1842, founded by a prominent Igbo trader and ex-soldier named Thomas Refell. Another was the union founded in 1860 by the Igbo community in Freetown in Sierra Leone, of which Africanus Horton, a surgeon, scientist and soldier, was an active member.

THE NIGERIAN - BIAFRA WAR a.k.a CIVIL WAR WAR LORDS & MILITARY COMMANDERS OF THE BIAFRAN WAR THE TROUBLE WITH NIGERIA: THE UNITY OF NIGERIA NOT NEGOTIABLE

It is impossible to conclude any write-up about the Igbos in the present dispensation of Nigeria vis-à-vis URUAN/EFIK and other ethnic nationalities in Nigeria without mentioning the Nigeria-Biafra war a.k.a the Nigerian civil war which has been thoroughly documented before now especially what might have brought it about. More so, because this has nothing to do with tribalism but everything to do with the truth and at times when lies seem to litter the streets and the tendency to think that those lies are truths and facts. If truth be told, many of them are presented in a half-baked and highly selective manner against all natural laws of judgment to cleverly avoid what is already in the public domain. Although the AMALGAMATION of Nigeria was done with colonial fiat as neither the over 300 Nigerian ethnic Nationalities were consulted not their consensus, permission and consent obtained, but there were always the promptings for "DE-AMALGAMATION" renting the air right before Independence to the effect that speaking on behalf of Northern Protectorate in 1944, Sir Ahmadu Bello had described the Amalgamation as "The mistake of 1914 which if allowed will ultimately lead to unstoppable bloodshed and a failed country. That was said just 30 years after the "EVENT". Then Chief Obafemi Awolowo as if speaking on behalf of the Yorubas and Western ethnic minorities echoed similarly, by describing Nigeria "as a mere geographical expression" not qualified to be called a country let alone a nation, which I have quoted many times in the course of this Book. Thereafter Chief Awolowo went on to suggest that if the Amalgamation could not be reversed, then Nigeria should be structured as a strictly FEDERAL STATE so as to enable each tribe enjoy autonomy and freedom from being dominated by any one single tribe. But it was Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, speaking for the Igbos who denounced Awolowo and Ahmadu Bello and termed them as "ethnic champions". He even went on to accuse them of nursing a sectional Agenda against the Unity of Nigeria. He declared further that "THE UNITY OF NIGERIA WAS NON-NEGOTIABLE". This was good talk, because he never ABSOLUTLELY wanted to champion the disintegration of Nigeria.

Later on in 1953, Chief Anthony Enahoro moving the motion for Independence, proposed that a 'secession clause' should be inserted into the future Constitution of Nigeria so as to give legal backing for any tribe to peacefully exit the forced union if it feels marginalized in future. In fact, and according to Chief Enahoro, such provision in the Constitution would instill in all Nigeria's future Leaders the fear of the consequences of misgovernance. On that occasion Dr. Zik was seen to have risen against Enahoro and labeled him as an agent of disunity and enemy of Nigeria. Yes, even before Independence, Sir Tafawa Balewa too had in a public speech described Nigeria as "a British experiment" seeing Nigeria's unity as the British intention which Nigerians themselves don't believe in. But Dr. Zik kicked against it and demonized him too. However, one moot point to be noted here and if anyone is in doubt, here is a link of one of the numerous instances when Dr. Zik fought against the disintegration of Nigeria by any name called…secession, self-determination, and what have you; not a single Igbo National or Official on those occasions – and there were many of them as MRAs and MHAs at Lagos and Enugu at this point in time in the Parliaments when these issues were raised – none of them raised a hand or rose against Dr. Azikiwe or condemned him. Everybody knows that till date, the Igbos regard themselves as champions of ONE NIGERIA and the only tribe that has held this country together. The Igbos never initially wanted to hear anything like secession in Nigeria because they so much believed and prided themselves as contributing the most both economically, politically, educationally etc. towards the progress and stability of Nigeria. Ndigbo have further asserted that they have sacrificed too much and paid a hefty price with their blood and possessions for the maintenance of ONE NIGERIA far more than all the ethnic groups in the country combined. Yet why after General Ironsi and Lt. Col Odumegwu Ojukwu had successfully crushed Isaac Boro's purported Niger Delta Republic and handed him the death sentence by hanging for purportedly committing treason and thereafter acquiesced to the Ahiara Declaration and declared the Republic of Biafra which had resulted in the fratricidal 1967 – 1970 civil war, the monumental consequences of which has kept Nigeria prostrate till this day.……? So who is telling the truth and breaking accords?

It should not be forgotten that together with Col Ojukwu in his capacity as Military Governor of Eastern Nigeria had after the Isaac Boro episode promulgated the Anti-Secession Decree which made the mere mention of secession from Nigeria punishable with death by hanging. And why did the Igbos even today so frequently make reference to the Aburi - Ghana January 4, 1967 Accord and "ON ABURI WE STAND", ostensibly to create the impression that the rest of Nigerian tribes do not honour agreements and Accords? All these are documented facts that can be cross-checked for authenticity! Everybody knows the National Archives have the complete and unedited history of Nigeria regarding the political events beginning way back from even 1914. The Aburi Accord was a non-issue standing the TRUTH on its head. From all indications where on earth did soldiers promulgate laws for their countries? In the philosophy of Democracy, the world over, the only universally acceptable way of making Laws is through duly elected Representatives of the people. At Aburi who were the accredited representatives of Nigerians except a few self-made Khaki boys of the military, which thus rendered Aburi an illegality on all counts. Therefore, the Aburi Accord was only treated exactly the same way as Igbos with contempt and ignominy treated the Authentic Independence Constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. Then discerning readers of this book can now question WHO and WHAT are "THE TROUBLE WITH NIGERA".

…. But in continuation of our discourse and in the mid-1900s, the Igbos began to develop strong sense of nationalist identity as observed earlier.

Later into the 1960s certain conflicts with other Nigerian ethnicities led to Igbos determining to opt out of the Nigerian Federation and create their own independent state, BIAFRA. The events especially in Northern Nigeria between 1966 and 1967 also brought about a series of ethnic clashes between Northern Muslims and Igbos together with other ethnic groups of the Eastern and Western Regions of Nigeria including the Mid-Western Region living in Northern Nigeria. By this time General Ironsi had emerged as the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces of Nigeria. Precisely on 15th January 1966 and sequel to the Nigeria - Biafra war, a.k.a the Nigerian civil war, Nigeria's first military putsch led by Major Chukwuma Kaduna Nzegwu took place and overthrew the Federal Government then headed by Hon Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe who was the Governor General of the Federal Republic of Nigeria with Alhaji Tafewa Balewa as then Prime Minister and Head of Government of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. That putsch also led to the overthrow of the Northern, Western, Eastern and Mid-Western Regional Governments with the Premiers of the Western and Northern Regions, the late Chief Samuel Ladoke Akintola and the late Sir Ahmadu Bello respectively losing their lives.

It was then followed by the assassination of the Nigerian Military Head of State, General Johnson Aguiyi-Ironsi together with his friend and host, Lieutenant Colonel Francis Adekunle Fajuyi, then Military Governor of now defunct Western Region of Nigeria by some northern elements in the Nigerian army, precisely on 29th July, 1966. As the peace negotiations between the Military Government of Nigeria after General Aguiji-Ironsi's demise and the Regional Government of Eastern Nigeria at the Aburi Talks in Ghana in 1967 failed, this specific impasse led to the regional Council of the Peoples of Eastern Nigeria deciding that the region should secede and proclaim the Republic of Biafra as a sovereign nation on May 30, 1967. It was Lt Colonel afterwards as General Emeka Odumegwu-Ojukwu then Military Governor of the Region who made this declaration. There and then he became the Head of State of the new Republic of Biafra. The resultant war, which ensued, became known as the "Nigerian Civil War or the "Nigerian-Biafran War"- a war which lasted from July 6, 1967 until January 15, 1970.

At the end of the war the Federal Government of Nigeria re-absorbed Biafra into Nigeria in what the then Nigerian Head of State General Yakubu Gowon declared as a "no victor, no anguished" war. Thereafter General Olusegun Obasanjo, Commander of the Nigerian Armed Forces who had received the Biafran Flag of surrender from Major General Philip Effiong, the Commander of the Biafran Armed Forces signaled the end of the war and the Republic of Biafra once again became part and parcel of the Federal Republic of Nigeria to the greater Glory of God and the wellbeing of a new Nigeria for all Nigerians. That war of course affected the Igbos as it did other Nigerians everywhere as in that war, it was estimated that several million on both sides of the divide died. In the 1966 ethnic clashes mentioned above, between 10,000 to 30,000 Southern Nigerians

East and West and mostly of Igbo stock, of what the Biafrans termed as pogrom were killed. But in what was termed "their struggle for self-determination" the Igbos then had tagged themselves "People of Biafra or simply BIAFRANS" and haves since then earned the respect of their generation till today.

What exactly happened? In July 1967, the former President of the Biafran Armed Forces, General Emeka Odumegwu, then Col Odumegwu Ojukwu, Governor of the defunct Eastern Region of Nigeria was renewing calls for the secession of the region to become the independent State of Biafra and a sovereign entity. By so doing he thus declared that the only alternative was for the Igbos to forge a separate existence since according to him the Igbos were not as equally Nigerians as the other citizens of the country. The war started that same July with the first gun shots of war at a town called Gagem in modern Cross River State. That war which began as a "police Action" against the Eastern Region by the Federal Armed Forces in order to call them to order - that "police action" later turned into a full-fledged civil war towards the early months of 1968 and lasted till January 1970. The aftermath of that war left Igbo land devastated as the fighting had completely destroyed many of the hospitals, schools, and homes in the entire Igbo land except what was then known as Orlu sector of Imo State because according to an URUAN-EFIK proverb, "ek? isimaha ofri udim=war cannot consume everybody and everything". In addition to the loss of their savings, many Igbos complained of discrimination from other ethnic groups who had also suffered untold hardship, destruction and deprivations during the war. Of course this always happens to either party in a war situation worldwide. Some Igbo sub-groups which the Igbos claimed were their kiths and kins and therefore part and parcel of Biafra such as the Ikwerre and Eche in Rivers State and the so-called Ika Igbos in Delta State started disassociating themselves from this larger Igbo population before and after the war. Many Igbos had trouble finding employment during the early 1970s. Many Igbos became almost the poorest of the ethnic groups in Nigeria as it were. As a result many Igbos emigrated out of their indigenous Igbo homeland in Southeastern Nigeria after the Nigerian-Biafran War due to lack of jobs coupled with poor infrastructure and lack of medical services. But most of them had no choice but to go back especially to the Nigerian cities both Lagos, Kano, Jos and Kaduna. Lately they have settled at Abuja as also other countries such as Gabon, Ghana, Japan, China, Canada, Jamaica, the United Kingdom and the American cities like Houston, Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Seattle, Atlanta and Washington, D.C. in the United States of America. Some have gone even to the ends of the earth to wit, Alaska and Siberia and everywhere.

Decades after the Nigerian-Biafran war, a secessionist group - a non-violent struggle organization for an independent Igbo State - the "Movement for the Actualization of the Sovereign State of Biafra (MASSOB)" has emerged. It was founded in September 1999 by Chief Ralph Uwazurike who was residing in Lagos then. Since its creation, there have been several conflicts between its members and the Nigerian Government resulting in the death of some members. Today a secessionist leader, Mr. Uchenna Madu has taken over as he authentic leader of the Movement stating that Biafra agitation was only a reaction of the many injustices, exclusion, second class citizenship, born to rule philosophy, marginalization and other forms of inequality that characterize the Nigerian state. This has soon been followed by another crop of secessionist agitators known as the Indigenous People of Biafra (IPOB). They are using the most prominent vocal group for the agitation and the creation of an independent state of Biafra through a radio station named "Radio Biafra" and powered in the UK. The IPOB leader and Director of the notorious RADIO BIAFRA is Mazi Nnamdi Kanu, a secessionist young Igbo/British citizen residing in the United Kingdom. Due to the effects of the war as also the Atlantic slave trade mentioned earlier, many Igbo people have moved in large numbers to many Nigerian cities including Lagos and Abuja and other African countries such as Ghana, the Cameroon, Gabon Equatorial Guinea, South Africa, etc. as well as outside Africa. They are the people giving fillip and teeth to the movement. Their exact population outside Africa is breathtaking. Today there are many Igbo populations travelling to and settling permanently in countries such as the United Kingdom, the United States of America and South America especially among Afro-Caribbean countries. Prominent Igbo communities in other cities of the world outside Africa include those of London in the United Kingdom and Houston, Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Seattle, Atlanta and Washington, D.C. in the United States. Some numbers live in China and Japan thus making up the majority of the Nigerian immigrant population based in Tokyo. Other Igbo immigrants are to be found in Canada, Jamaica and elsewhere. These are where the support for the secessionist fever is coming from. A large concentration of the African population of Guangdong, China, are Igbo speaking and are business men with the majority trading between factories in China and southeastern Nigeria, particularly Enugu which is the headquarters of the movement.

But Igbo land has since then been gradually rebuilt by the citizens and some contributions also come from the Federal Government of Nigeria over a period of years now. The economy has prospered again due to the rise of the petroleum industry in the adjacent Niger Delta region. This has also led to the establishment of new factories in Southeastern Nigeria. Many Igbos eventually have gone into big-time government positions having joined the popular and mainstream government party of the People's Democratic Party, PDP. Almost all the states in the whole Igbo land except Anambra State which supports the indigenous "All Peoples Grand Alliance", APGA and recently, Imo which also supports the Ruling All Progressive Congress are PDP strongholds. However, very many Igbo men, women and youths are now engaged in private enterprises and the arts – music, modeling, fashion and dance. Igbos still constitute the bulk of both Nigerian commercial and informal economy.

Nevertheless, some Igbos still have mixed feelings about the Nigeria-Biafran war especially after the 3 Rs Mantra of Reconciliation, Rehabilitation and Reconstruction and the so-called "no victor, no vanquished" slogan propounded by General (DR) Gowon which was an advocacy to bring about the immediate healing and re-integration of the Igbos does not seem to translate into anything meaningful. The Igbos maintain everything in terms of the prosperity and general welfare of their citizens is due to their sweat and hard work. Again as yet, the Igbos genuinely believe it is now their turn to rule Nigeria and develop the Nation in order to evolve a new Nigeria. According Dr. Dozie Ikedife, a former President-General of Ohanaeze Ndigbo, all hope is not lost even though Ndigbo hardly speak with one voice. In fact, they need not because they pride themselves as being republican by nature. However, as the most travelled ethnic group in Nigeria, they believe in uniform development involving everybody. They seem to be fair-minded and would want not only that water flows in Enugu but make sure that it runs in every part of the country – "in Bayelsa, in Abeokuta, in Maiduguri and also in Kaduna." But Nigerians doubt this; it remains to be seen. Similarly given anything to share, they would think to "make sure that every corner of Nigeria gets a fair share". Then of course it has ended with a bomb-shell to the effect that if "the Southeast of the country provides the president for the country, this would be the beginning of a real forward movement for Nigeria". Well then and so be it! But it remains to be seen because there are always antecedents and this is precisely my idea and prayer for the evolution of Nigeria as a "modern Nation State in Africa" as captured in this book.

So Nigerians know what an Igbo Presidency is all about vis - a - vis MASOB, IPOB, etc. But it should not be forgotten that Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as the GREAT ZIK OF AFRICA had in 1945 declared among other things that "from all indications, the god of us Igbos have destined us to rule the whole of Africa". Well then and so be it! As evidence of Igbo domination Agenda and their initial resistance to the idea of secession from Nigeria as discussed above, it is getting clearer by the day that the fruition of that Agenda is just a matter of time. Every discerning Reader of this Book knows therefore that if … and should the Presidency not be granted them on a platter, THEN, they would consider themselves as not wanted in the Geographical Expression. THEN, evidently they would have no other choice than to seek their self-determination. But it remains to be seen, because there may not be permanent disagreements and confrontations, but there are always permanent issues and Agenda. However, there are always antecedents and this is precisely my idea and prayer for the evolution of Nigeria as a true "modern Nation State in Africa" as captured in this book.

URUAN/EFIK AND NATION BUILDING vis-à-vis THE NIGERIAN NATION

But then as for this project on nation building that is to bring about a new beginning and nation, especially as in the case of a nation state like Nigeria, it would require a disciplined and educated energetic and visionary leadership, a leadership that is responsible and prudent, a leadership founded on integrity, fairness, patriotism, skillful management of available resources and zero tolerance to corruption and impunity – a leadership that is not mediocre and incompetent, a leadership that is not partisan, clannish, myopically conservative with authoritarian mentality and poor economic management skills, etc. Nigeria today needs a leadership that must subscribe to the libertarian ethos of equity, justice, fair-play and unity of purpose to work out the emergence of the new nation of NIGERIA. When we consider Northern Nigeria even till date for example, we notice that the leaders hid their aversion for such important ingredients of development as mentioned above.

That is why URUAN-EFIK, nay all Nigerians and men and women of goodwill must rise without delay to terminate the coming on board of such leaders and terminate the futile repetitive emergence o and recycling of failed leaders because the Nigeria of today seems to be a theatre of the absurd. From hindsight we can even adduce that the conservative first generation of Northern elites were only interested in the preservation of the status quo ante, viz. the North for the North. Part of this involved the super-imposition of their will not only against other parts of Nigeria since they regarded themselves as the largest and the most populous in Nigeria, but also on the enclaves and their vassal communities inside the Northern Region. In fact, it was also this sort of mentality of subjugation and lies in the Nigerian history concerning the censuses and exaggerated figures between the Northern and Southern populations. It is only in Nigeria that costal peoples like those of URUAN/EFIK are found to be less in their populations than those not only of the North but of other parts of Nigeria who inhabit the semi-desert regions. How come that URUAN in particular, a region lying wholly in the tropics and mostly Riverine has such miserable census figures and with only one LGA to show. Whereas this is a community spanning north, south and central with an area overlaying more than one third of the entire Niger Delta coast? Check anywhere else in the world viz. Hamburg, New York, Genoa, Liverpool, Lagos, Accra, etc. whether there is such a ridiculous situation and come to IDU to verify and see. This also captures the mind-set and subjugation of a people who have become the catalyst for their innate and inordinate ambition that catapulted the first Republic of Nigeria and set the scene for the not-to-be-forgotten infamous civil war of 1967-1970. For having failed to impose their will on the entire nation under a democratic dispensation, the Northern Project opted for the use of force via military dictatorship. This dubious and crude resort to militarism was then justified by them and their collaborators on account of the role the military played and have continued to play in crushing struggles for self-determination like the one embarked upon by the Eastern Region in the ill-fated Biafran project. But even now some are defending this situation that just as we have a Northern Hausa/Fulani Project, there are also the Yoruba (Western) Igbo (Eastern) and by implication this URUAN.EFIK (South-South) or any other regional or tribal project for that matter including the ethnic, regional selfish interests and preferred prejudices.

As we shall soon see, the point to be made here is that this project on hand has no such ulterior vision in amalgamating the so-called URUAN/EFIK in the Diaspora for a determined pan-URUAN/EFIK project. Anybody who understands and keys into the aim in view will simply dismiss such an impression. Rather in a democratic set-up, such as we now find ourselves, any PAN-URUAN/EFIK vestiges in the call-up to URUAN/EFIK citizens who are nostalgic about and understand their heritage will be drawn to support the more serious call for a greater PAN-NIGERIA instead, and that exactly should be the case. All this could imply that what has happened is the same as was the case between URUAN/EFIK and the IBIBIOs centuries before the Christian era, and later on between the IBIBIOs and URUAN remnants now turned into the AROS of modern Arochukwu. This is because it was that sort of situation that led to the so called 'the "Ibibio war" when they were all at IBOM a.k.a modern Arochukwu as seen already.

IKONO IBOM – THE THREE IKONO DISTRICTS/LGAs ORIGINS - NOMENCLATURE, EMIGRATIONS AND LOCATION

PREAMBLE: The history of the world has shown that whenever and wherever any group of people is conquered, dominated upon or absorbed and also if the people have voluntarily or by reason of circumstances beyond their control emigrated to their present location among other groups of people and have now identified themselves with that group, their surnames, word roots of their previous language, their religious and Chieftaincy institutions will no more bear testimony of their original homes. When we consider the peoples treated above viz. URUAN/EFIK, QUAS, The EFUTS, the AROS, IGBOS etc. there is no such evidence to show that there was any other original home of URUAN/EFIK because we do not find any connection to support that they came from Igbo country or Edo or Yoruba outside their original home. For example, we can discover that the Obiship of the Benin kingdom in EDO state seems to have a connection with the Obiship of Onitsha kingdom at least in name, similarly the Muriship of the Efuts in Calabar is found only in this region as also in Western Cameroun from where they emigrated. We are trying to predicate IKONO as also other URUAN Clans in the Diaspora that will be treated here in consequence of the fact that URUAN/EFIK cradle land has always been traced back to USAHAEDET near Idombi (BAROMBI) in modern Cameroun Republic while the centre of dispersal was around the Central Benue valley as observed already. But regarding the settlement of IKONO in present day Akwa Ibom State where they find themselves, the evidence points overwhelmingly to the fact that certain IKONO villages being part and parcel of URUAN, the other emigrating clans from the parent stock of IKONO kingdom and by implication the IKONO groups in the three Local Government Areas now forming part of the Ibibio nation in Akwa Ibom State should be traced to her parent stock and primary first settlement in USAHAEDET from where ancient URUAN emigrated. This point must be well understood because as it has seemed, the imperatives of modern IKONO do not and should not detract from the fact that modern IKONO people in their religious and customary institutions as well as their language patterns are a far cry from the surnames, traits and customs of their ancient URUAN founding Fathers and which have made them almost completely obliterated in favour of Ibibio culture and traditions among whom they now live. But the truth of the matter is that despite what have been observed already, the evidence points overwhelmingly to the fact that they are of URUAN stock in the Diaspora despite the current local arguments to the contrary.

The arguments which point to this our stand are mainly geographical as also cultural. We notice that the geographical distribution of the entire three IKONOs forming the present AKWA or AKPAKUB IKONO IBOM are made up of three contiguous Local Government Areas viz. INI a.k.a Eastern Ibibio Ikono with Headquarters at Odoro Ikpe, Ikono Ibom LGA with Headquarters at Ibiaku Ntok Okpo and Ikono group of villages in Uyo Municipal Government Area formerly Uyo Federated with Headquarters at UYO. The first point to be noted is that IKONO area and groups of villages which form part of Uyo Municipality barely six kilometres away stretches from the west of the city of Uyo and meanders cutting across some parts of Offot, Itam in ITU Local Government Area. Second, the next Local Government Area of IKONO cuts across other groups of IKONO villages then into the borders of Ibiono in IBIONO IBOM LGA, then Itak and continues from there to join up with the other part of Ibiono otherwise known as Ibiono No.2 towards its headquarters at OKO ITA LGA, and from there it meanders again through IKOT EKPENE to the Headquarters at the earlier mentioned IBIAKU NTOK OKPO which stretches further into OBOT AKARA LGA from where it joins INI LGA to terminate within the ancient IBOM territory, now AROCHUKWU LGA, the land of primary settlement of all URUAN peoples. It is of course at IBOM as discussed earlier that all the dispersals and emigrations took place.

This entire territory in question IKONO, is therefore bounded on the north by Ikwano and Arochukwu LGAs ail in Abia State as also Obot Akara LGA, on the South by Uyo Municipality and Itu LGA, on the East by Ibiono Ibom and on the West by Ikpe Clan in Esien Udim and Ikot Ekpene LGAs. We shall henceforth refer to this territory as AKWA IKONO and it is very large and extensive with a land mass of more than 400 sq. KM and only next to her neighbour IBIONO IBOM in the distribution of groups of villages with about 200 autonomous communities or villages thus making her one of the largest compact territories second to URUAN and AKPAKIP ARO in the present Akwa Ibom State. One remarkable aspect in the distribution and organization of groups of villages and clans is that there are some groups of villages within IKONO territory which belong to another ethnic stock altogether like Itak communities, the same also applies to certain groups of village all over the land with completely different sets of cultures and traditions like Ikoneto which forms part of Okoyong territory but belongs to a different clan altogether in EFIK kingdom ditto Adiabo groups of villages in EFIK Kingdom, but belongs to Odukpani Local Government Area and territory. Another important aspect and fact peculiar to AKWA IKONO is the distribution of the clans some of which groups of villages must have emigrated further eastwards and now belong to IKOT ABASI and MKPAT ENIN LGA tagged IKPA IKONO groups of villages and clans which now form another IKONO ethnic entity. But ancient URUAN does not recognize them as belonging to what is AKWA IKONO as such but as part of the other URUAN clans in the Diaspora viz. EKIM and IKPA clans as we shall see. It is therefore plausible and this is what ancient URUAN has always held, that IKONO among other groups of villages and clans were among the earliest groups which migrated to their present locations after the bulk of URUAN had securely settled at AKWA AKPA URUAN years before the Christian era. This position has been very well articulated and corroborated by all the ancient historians and biographers of URUAN ethnographic history and this should not detain us here. [Cf. Ekeruke Mkpanam and Okon Ekpenyong Ekanem, 17-18]

A. THE MOVEMENT OF IKONO URUAN TO THE NEW IKONO DISTRICTS

The movement of IKONO URUAN genre from the location of primary settlement to a faraway location where they now find themselves has affected though very minimally those identical systems of governance, traditions and mores of ancient URUAN and this is what always happens when people move from a common centre. There are popular folk tales and folklores which seem to highlight and articulate IKONO origins from URUAN ancestry. For example, whenever and wherever a child is sent on an errand but most especially as it often happened to go "fetch" fire with a special nsara ika fire torch in the neighbourhood, then should the child delay longer than expected; on his/her return the usual URUAN rebuke mantra from the sender who could be the mother or an elderly sister, was: "nte afo akaka IKONO", implying that his/her staying and keeping so late seemed like if the child was going far away to fetch the fire at IKONO territory deputed as another URUAN country side that is so far away. Or better still, the vituperation and upbraiding could also end like this: Ndi afo akaka ?n? IKONO? Did you go over to IKONO side or have you turned round to stay at IKONO side"? The implications in all these should not be lost to any discerning reader because it all amounted to someone who must have lost focus and forgotten his/her bearing and now was settling down as it were, and enjoying him/herself back in his/her former terrain. IKONO is very much present in URUAN even today and has from time immemorial been reckoned as one of the largest clans in ancient URUAN. IKONO is well stocked in her NDEM deity of ETEFIA IKONO till today. One of the Ekpo masquerade seasons in URUAN today is Ekpo Ikono which season always occurs around October. No citizen of URUAN has ever denied that IKONO has not been part of URUAN because there is IKONO clan among the modern designations of URUAN clans and groups of villages as we shall see in Chapter eight.

B. IKONO CLANSHIP AND ORGANIZATION

With their well-knit communities ancient IKONO people have formed both a political and governmental administration as well as a socio-economic organization to help them keep law and order. As they increased in population they expanded to various areas they now occupy carrying with them their system of government which was tied up with their social organization as also their economic and religious institutions including Ekpo, Ek? and other cult societies till today. A.E. Udo who has documented much of ancient URUAN ethnographic history also agreed that it was in fact such groups of villages like Ikot Ofon, Ikot Ebo, Nung Assang, Minya, Ikot Nsung Anan in ancient IKONO Clan, then in URUAN which held the Obongship of most of the cult Organizations like Ekpe. Groups of villages like Ikot Oku Ikono, Ikot Ayan, Ikot Ekpeyak, Iton etc. were deputed to have been the depositories of an Idiong cult of ancient URUAN and also Ikon artifacts which have now gone to Annang country notably Ikot Esede in modern Ika Local Government Area. Similarly, other groups now in modern AKWA IKONO such as Mbiabong, Ikot Obio Mkpong, Ikot Eboro, Nung Ukim etc. because of the peculiar ancient URUAN distribution of Clans have now found themselves in ITU, IKOT ABASI (former OPOBO) and UYO divisions. That is why modern IKONO seems to lack a cohesive political organization to power the three IKONOs together. Sometimes people begin to wonder whether we are talking of totally different ethnic communities and groups here, whereas besides the cult of ETEFIA, the deputed NDEM and spirit worshipped by the entire IKONO nation, there is only one IKONO which though in the spirit world everybody seems to consider the three IKONOs as separate geographical groups, but in fact they can only constitute a homogenous group which stretches from the border of ancient IBOM country in modern AROCHUKWU down to UYO metropolis (Cf. Udo E. A. 113, 135 -140). That is why when matters came to a head; the foreign colonial British administrators unable to grapple with the size, distribution and all these idiosyncrasies often asked whenever matters cropped up about the IKONO like this IKONO what? The British were often unable and could not understand certain matters concerning ancient URUAN and by implication IKONO: so they asked as if to say: what and what Ikono, and this sounded to the semi-illiterate ears like "UNW? K" instead of "WHAT", hence the often homely and innocent acronym for matters concerning IKONO: "IKONO U W? K?". But having located so far away from their URUAN parent stock, they gradually imbibed other Ibibio institutions and structures and the aftermath was their eventual loss of most of URUAN institutions like Ekpe, ? b?n, Ek?mbi etc. altogether. The impinging of the British colonial legal codes and structures on the other hand also compounded their indigenous social structures as a juggernaut which also crippled whatever large scale machinery of socio-political organizations they had and in consequence of this were engrafted as it were on those colonial systems like the Institution of Warrant Chiefs with the eventual collapse of their indigenous Obongship. In fact, with this turn of affairs, their new ethical impulse was completely disorganized which startled and disrupted the popular consciousness since it led to the introduction of a totally new order of things which were alien ideas of impartiality and inhumanity. Of late IKONO seems to have woken up to the realities of what is happening now everywhere, viz. the re-organization of their towns and clans and this also has affected even the Church.

The new distribution of modern towns and clans in the establishment of new parishes and church headquarters and units along clan basis is a welcome idea. Meanwhile moves have been made to establish a parish centre at Okopedi Ibianang for Nquot clan. New establishments for example, Nung Ukim Parish at Nung Ukim and State College of Arts and Science at Ibakachi for Nung Ukim clan, Archibong Memorial Secondary School Ukpom in Ukpom, a greater bulk of which had broken away and migrated to form the greater Ukpom clan including Ukpom in Minya clan now in Mkpat Enin and Ikot Abasi Local Government Areas. There is also the Community Secondary School at Ikot Ayan formerly St. Michael's Primary school for Ediene Clan, St. Anthony's Parish as also Community Secondary School Ibiaku Ntok Okpo, and the Headquarters of the entire IKONO IBOM LGA – another break-away group from the ancient parent IBIAKU clan in URUAN. Similarly, St. Joseph's Parish at Etip Ediene in Nquot clan, St James Parish Ibam Edet with Ikpe Community Secondary School, etc. whereas in Ikono Federated under Uyo Municipality there are also a number of Parishes and Mission Headquarters eg. Community Secondary School Ikot Ekpeyak, etc. All these are innovations that cannot fail to bring development and a sense of belonging to both the groups and the entire IKONO country.

C. IKPA IBOM/IKONO II IN IKOT ABASI/MKPAT ENIN LGAs ORIGINS, NOMENCLATURE, EMIGRATION AND LOCATIONS

Ancient URUAN tradition history has it on authority which has also been corroborated by the Diaspora peoples themselves, that they are bona fide descendants of ancient URUAN stock now in the Diaspora so to speak. They are those who migrated from ancient IBOM and who had joined their counterparts in the great scramble for expansive lands in present day Akwa Ibom state. Almost whole tribes, clans and kindreds had migrated with their kith and kin together with biological members of their families, but in their own case to quite designated areas of Akwa Ibom to form their own clans and look after their own destinies, but never of course forgetting their parent stock, URUAN. In an interview and collaborative discussion with His Honour Etinnyin Patrick Ekpo Otu then former Deputy Governor of Akwa Ibom State on the occasion of the Annual Celebration of Arts and Culture Week here, he spoke glowingly with nostalgia and concern about the lack of co-ordination between URUAN and Nung Assang from where he hails. These categories of URUAN descendants and citizens in the Diaspora form the bulk of what are now Ikot Abasi and Mkpat Enin Local Government Areas of Akwa Ibom State. We can simply do justice to the article by listing out those clans, towns and villages which constitute this category of URUAN in the Diaspora and who are always keen in joining whatever UNION, institutions or programmes proffered for the benefit of ancient URUAN citizens and descendants. In Ikot Abasi LGA, there are groups of villages in Nung Assang Clan which form the core of this group viz. Essene Town, Ikot Imo, Ikot Ubo Akama etc. In Mkpat Enin Local Government Area, the entire IKPA tribe which accounts for about seven Clans make up what has now come to be known as IKPA IBOM with an Obong Ikpa Isong as Paramount Ruler, the Royal Stool of which is occupied by His Royal Highness Okuku Pius J. Udoh. Ekim pronounced differently from URUAN is the Headquarters of the Clan. Many towns and villages in the main URUAN kingdom including Ekim Town in IDU URUAN HQ belong to the original ancient EKIM tribe in URUAN. Ukpom Clan and Minya Clans which extend as far as Ikot Unya in Ibekwe Clan are also part and parcel of ancient EKIM. Most of these Clans and villages also have links with IKONO IBOM discussed above. What now remains is to set up UNION Committees whose tasks will include among others the much sought PAN – URUAN CONGRESS to spear hear the formation of URUAN/EFIK NATIONAL UNION in the near future, God willing. This is my prayer and hope for the nation and for NIGERIA at large.

ORON NATION /AKPAKIP ARO IN AKWA IBOM STATE ORIGINS - NOMENCLATURE, EMIGRATION AND LOCATIONS

PREAMBLE: Both the name/s and origin/s of ORON hitherto ORON UKPABANG occurring especially in the last 19th/20th century of our Christian era, just barely a hundred years, two hundred year ago are very interesting apart from being intriguing, grotesque and at best enigmatic. But why? Because here and concerning URUAN, we are dealing with the history of a people ten thousand years ago, which cannot and should not admit of any comparisons whatsoever? We are dealing here with ORON as URUAN knows them not vice versa.

NAME, LOCATION, EVOLUTION & ORIGINS OF ORON PEOPLES: AKPAKIP ARO

According, to one of the eminent ORON sons, a traditional ruler at that, Chief Anwana Mba Esu Mba a.k.a A.M.E., who has documented a brief sketch of ORON in his Memoir, (Anwana Mba Esu Mba, 4) he opines that there is a close link between the Cameroun Republic and ORON. He went further to trace a very plausible history of the name and origin of ORON. He wrote among other things that the island of Uko Ofoho in Oruko, a border island town located between Ofi Uda and Udesi was once occupied by

Usakedi ie. USAHAEDET about 1800 AD. When one mentions Usahaedet, the cradle island of our ancestors, the next word is Ekpe Confraternity which I have discussed at length in Chapter III and that puts a seal on anything that is to be said about URUAN, because URUAN is no other than Ekpe and Ekpe is URUAN as the ancients used to say. As Chief Mba's story goes, there was a quarrel and because of this quarrel between Usahaedet and the Uko Ofoho people, Usahaedet migrated from the island to the Cameroun with their ITIAT Ekpe in 1895. Very plausible, isn't it, where did USAHAEDET come from to inhabit Uko Ofoho in the first place? Well, well, well," quarrel", and this is often the beginning of "the telltale "notably in these parts – every incident is always prefaced on some quarrel which brought about this and that…! But as we know in URUAN/EFIK the chief in Ekpe hierarchy is Ekpe Nyamkpe and Iboku whereas among the ORON, it is called Nyamkpe Usakedi/USAHAEDET, and this really seems to prove without any reasonable doubt that we can safely trace the origin of ORON from USAHAEDET, which is going to be my point of departure here. ORON nation also as observed elsewhere concerning EKPE URUAN is the tribe accredited in URUAN as the sole trustee and custodian of Ekpe OBON. Other Clans and Villages in URUAN kingdom which had problems concerning Ekpe OBON were always directed to the ORON tribe. They also had authority to "sell Ekpe OBON' to other tribes or clans which never possessed OBON; but this was before and even after their settlement in their present location of abode. Till today, the ORON nation is the custodian of Ekpe OBON URUAN. Until recently, no kindred, town or clan was permitted to purchase Ekpe without recourse to ORON tribe as all such actions would be regarded as ultra vires and Ekpe OBON purchased or organized in domains which did not fulfill this condition, their Ekpe OBON would not be recognized or given due respect and authority throughout URUAN/EFIK kingdoms. Even though there is no space to go into all the contributions both from the early European historians and biographers including even those by Oron citizens themselves, which are simply legends if not myths, and this should not bother or detain us, but we can still, just for an up-date, briefly review some of the important documentaries both to entertain as also to provide materials for those who wish to immerse themselves in historical research, and perhaps to provide a diversion for those who just merely want something to read as well as for those who enjoy committing things like this to memory and this can even be a profit for each and for all those who may happen to read the book. In fact, a popular Ekpe song among us which is deputed to be the mourning and complaining of a weeping ORON widow to the effect that her husband had gone out with the Ekpe Usahaedet but never came back:

Usahaedet en? mmi ebe mmi-o! Ebe mmi akasa a ye mbufo aka Ekpe iny? ke idi –o! Usahaedet en? mmi ebe mi o! Although what Chief Mba's story underscores seems to run counter to every reasonable historical narrative, which unfortunately is the reverse as rather ORON nation has always traced her origins to Usahaedet in the Cameroun Republic.

ETHNIC ORIGINS AND PRE - HISTORY OF AKPAKIP ARO

The first to write about ORON nation was Knight Paul E. B. Inyang, my Standard III teacher at IDU in 1947. He lived there with my uncle Chief Iyak Akpa. On his return from his studies Overseas, he was appointed the first Librarian of the recently established University of Nigeria, Nsukka which was founded by the legendary Dr. Benjamin Nnamdi Azikiwe, the Zik of Africa, who before then was currently the Premier of the Eastern Region of Nigeria, ostensibly to mark the Nigerian Independence Celebration with his humble self as the 1st Governor General of the Federal Republic of Nigeria in1960. Inyang later on married his beautiful wife, Lady Angela Asuquo from Ekpene Ukim URUAN whom he had previously met while yet a pupil at our Convent School. After the civil war and with the establishment of the UNN Campus at Calabar, he transferred his services to the new University which later metamorphosed into the Federal University of Calabar with his humble self as H.O.D of the Department of Geography and Regional Planning. In December 1972 while presenting a Paper at the Institute of African Studies, UNN, he had written about the Peoples of South Eastern Nigeria including ORON (Cf. Inyang, P.E.B. 5-8). He traced the origin of ORON to Bakweri and Bakoko in the Cameroun near the popular IDOMBI - BARUMBI. The Bakweri are the coastal dwellers in the present Western Cameroun which is of the Bantu stock. The word Bakweri itself means the people whose country is Bakweri, ditto

Bakoko with Buea as the capital city. Still in tracing the origin of ORON Ukpabang, we are constrained to ask: If Ukpabang is the progenitor where did the ORON UKPABANG come from to live in their present location? Is it not rather the same old story, that just as the EFIK EBURUTU derived their ancestry from the corrupted rendering of the word HEBREW which seems to sound in the ear like EBURUTU as earlier discussed, the ORON some of whom pride themselves as coming from a mixed ancestry with the EFIK, would also come up with the mythical name of UKPABANG, the story of which is tied up with the legend by Dr. E. N. Amaku to the effect that the ancestors of both had as their father and mother an Igbo husband named Okarafor and an Ibibio wife, Atong Ama, both of whom had lived at Ikot Ntung four miles away from Eket in present day Akwa Ibom State?

Their marriage of course was said to have produced many children among whom were EBURUTU the progenitor of the EFIK, EBUGHU the progenitor of Ebughu and UKPABANG, the progenitor of ORON. But if we are going by the word UKPABANG, where do we go from there? UKPABANG is no other than a corrupted form of the words Akpan Mbang or Akpan Abang, an URUAN name meaning the first son of Mbang/Abang which takes us further afield to no man's island! When dealing with linguistics, we can only come to the scientific analysis and conclusion that this is another concocted myth to avoid perhaps the unpalatable (to the ORON/EFIK) but incontrovertible fact that ORON means no other thing than the corrupted version of the word URUAN by the ORON themselves when they overstayed and even continued to stay put at USAHAEDET and consequently acquired a bit of the laha - laha and l?h? - l?h? USAHAEDET tongue while the rest of URUAN nation had moved on and emigrated to IBOM as we have shown already. UKPABANG just like EBURUTU for the EFIK is the legendary figure on which the whole AKPAKIP ORO/ARO kingdom is built even till today. Everybody accepts this fact on their terms as a singular recognition of her raison d'être as a nation seeking relevance, just as any other gentry would, and there are no bones about that. Neither is that our pre-occupation here. What matters is that we are relying on certain scientific modern methodology to arrive at the truth which deals on facts, and as the ancient civilized Greco-Romans in their proverbs say: "Contra factum, nulla argumentum" to which URUAN/EFIK in corroboration in their proverb also adds: "Idi? Nnu Es?; omokut ke enyin, omokop ke ut? " which when both the LATIN and EFIK are translated mean the same thing to the effect that :there should be no argument against facts which we can see with our eyes and hear with our ears."

For what is there to argue about rather than that all of the semi-Bantoid races and tribes as surmised even by the early European anthropologists and historians some of whom we have named in this book did say so, viz. that most of the entire South Southern Nigeria are of semi- Bantu stock and they emigrated to their present locations from the Cameroun highlands - a fact which stands the position of all those denying URUAN as the progenitors of ORON and others on the head? What is fairly clear here is that a great proportion of AKPAKIP ARO ie. ORON regard themselves as ARO UKPABANG, (Cf. Oron Re-awakening - Ukpabang Youth Association, Occasional Bulletin, No.1, 1962).ie. as the descendants of their progenitor Ukpabang, but where the Ukpabang came from apart from Amaku's story is still left unanswered. Another version of ORON origins is that based on Palestine. This should not occupy our time because it is all about the similarities between ORON and the biblical names about which E. A. Udoh has so copiously and decisively dealt with in his book: WHO ARE THE IBIBIOs? Here Udo goes on to deal with the comparison and corruption of certain Biblical names which many ORON citizens bear eg. SAMUEL/Sam, ZEDEKIAH/Zedeke, MAGDALENE/Makini, etc. just as Dr. O.E. Akak did in the case of the Palestinian origins of the EFIK with Aphek.

ATTEMPT AT A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF AKPAKIP ARO This is the most recent and comprehensive History of ORON nation which has continued to make waves and is the Ethnographic History of ORON written by no other than the cerebral Ambassador (Prof) Okon Edet Uya, a colleague and my mentor. But I first came in contact with Prof Uya just before his failed marriage with a beautiful Briton whom he had married while abroad and also had a beautiful daughter from that marriage. They had come back together and both were employed at the newly opened UNN

Calabar Campus where we met then. But when he decided to marry the beautiful Udunwan (Margaret) Louis Orok Edet, her father Louis, being the first ever Nigerian Indigenous Inspector General of Police, (IGP) a Catholic from Sacred Heart Cathedral Calabar, our paths crossed in many ways because Margaret and sister were very close to us. In fact, with her sister, she had before this negotiated the handing over of one of their family lodges which was very close to the Cathedral along Bonny street to the Catholic Mission. Before then, Sir Louis Edet was a regular visitor to the Cathedral whenever he visited Calabar and we became so close too. That was why together with His Grace Archbishop Brian D. Usanga, I officiated at the Matrimonial Ceremonies of Uya and Margaret and co-signed the Marriage Register. So I knew Prof. Uya very well even before I joined the UNN Campus of the University of Calabar in late 1975.With him and of course with my close association with Sir O.A. Ufot the Registrar who already had known about and approved my credentials, I had no problem getting the ticket as lecturer in the University as he warmly and introduced me to the erudite icon and Vice Chancellor, Prof. Emmanuel, Ayandele of the "Atomistic Society mantra fame". He had nodded after my introduction; yes, this is the type of lecturer we want, perhaps ostensibly because he knew about my Universities abroad but most especially on account of Prof. and later Archbishop S. Ezeanya of the U.N.N fame. In 1984 Uya had published the first ever comprehensive Ethnographical History of ORON which changed the nomenclature of ORON to ARO and this has remained the popular tag today. I had personally printed and publish the First Edition under the title: A History of ORON People of the Lower Cross River Basin in our MARIANA Publishing Company LTD while acting as the Supervising General Manager of St. Theresa's Press because I had previously studied Printing and Journalism in France at the famous University of Lyons. This was a very popular Catholic Press which came into being in 1937.

The Press published among other things THE CATHOLIC LIFE Magazine, a universal publication Magazine comparable to those in Lagos and others which published the likes of Nigerian Pilot of Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, etc. It was the only Catholic Press in Nigeria then which held sway until the INDEPENDENT Press by the Marist Brothers in Ibadan in the 1950s as also the LEADER published by the Assumpta Press at Owerri in the 1960s. Uya's book chronicled the history of origins of ARO UKPABANG from USAHAEDET as also the politics, governance and the socio-economic profile of the great ORON peoples. But as with others which set out very ostensibly and conspicuously to establish their hegemony and superiority over others, the book failed in its primary purpose, viz. to establish the unity of the human race and mankind by pursuing an authentic profile of a people seeking relevance, but in a holistic manner. It failed to establish USAHAEDET as the cradle land of all semi-Bantoid peoples including ORON. For although Uya correctly established the emigration of AKPAKIP ARO from USAHAEDET he never went the whole hog to show from where exactly and how they came by USAHAEDET including other nationalities if any, which they had met in the course of their evolution and whether or if they had ever interacted with these peoples including those they must have met on ground. "Vivre pour outré" Adolf Comte, a French socialist philosopher, would say, because there is no authentic history of mankind without association of peoples and "we live for the sake of one another." No, you cannot talk about USAHAEDET without URUAN. The very fact that ORON and URUAN/EFIK share common territorial borders and speak the same dialect should even lead any rational and inquisitive investigator/enquirer to draw his/her conclusions to the effect that at least most probably, they are one and the same people. Because if ORON came from Usahaedet, why should they come down to share borders with URUAN/EFIK if they have nothing in common, surely there are many other nationalities who also admit they came from Usahaedet? You can now draw your conclusions.

ORON CLANS AND RE-ORGANIZATION INTO LGAs IN AKS

Up till and into the 1980s what we have now as AKPAKIP ARO ie. the entire ORON kingdom was under Eket Division in the old colonial and post independent era. Eket which should be pronounced as E K I T or Ekid/Ek?d really means in IBIBIO ammö ekit = they see because Eket people and the rest of the Ibibio call them EKIT, but was anglicized to EKET by the early European merchants just as in the case of Itung Mbang in URUAN now anglicized to Ituk Mbang, Eto obodom in Eastern Nsit – Nsit Atai to Eto Obolom, and these names have come to stay. The name Eket came about because when the entire immigrants from IBOM country of origin arrived in the area they heard for the first time the ocean breakers on the shores of what later came to be known as IBENO, a coastal town in former Eket Division. With the ascendancy of ORON high profile nationals, politicians, academicians and entrepreneurs, business tycoons, lawyers etc. in the likes of Justice Esin, Senator Victor Akan, Prof. E. Enyenighi, Ambassador (Prof) Okon E. Uya, Dr. Effiong Edunam. I.U. Iyanam just to mention a few including notable women in politics, Church and social affairs, Oron which was destined to come on board as a significant group in the country. In the early 1980s she was excised from Eket and soon came the creation of several Local Government Areas by the Governor Clement Isong Administration (1979-1983). By this ORON catapulted with the creation of five additional LGAs viz. OKOBO, URUE OFFONG/ORUKO (EYUBIA), UDUNG UKO, ENWANG and MBO.

This re-organization and arrangement went a long way towards making AKPAKIP ARO a kingdom to be reckoned with in recent years. This has also re-conditioned the great Oron peoples despite the harshness of the environmental factors and the consequent - inward looking attitudes and habits of ORON UKPABANG of the past. In fact, apart from Akani Obio, Ebughu and Efiat which were great trading coastal centres of yester years nobody even in what is now AKWA IBOM and by implication IBIBIO-ANNANG had any contacts with ORON, pronounced ODON by URUAN EFIK. For then, the letter D was anglicized to ORON, such that words and terminologies like "eyen ed? " were pronounced "eyen er? "; similarly, " kp? odo" = " kp? oro". The entire ORON is now divided into several clans some of which have become autonomous LGAs eg. Udung Uko, Enwang, Ediko, Oruko, Eyubia, Efiat, Mbo, Okobo, Etak Oron etc. But the colonial administrative centres still retain their kindred structures viz. Oruko, Uda, Efiat – Tom Shott, Etak Oron, Uya Oron and Ibaka. Many of the olden Clan headquarters in ORON like Urua Eye, Edok Oruko, Udung Uko, and Ebughu still have ATAKPO NDEM INYANG as their main deity and continue to defer to ISO ATAKPO. Their surviving cultural traits of URUAN/EFIK such as linguistic terminologies, word roots, customs, religion, kinship -UF? K/ORUK, cults, beliefs and patterns of governance, chieftaincy affairs, and marriage pattern, myths, music, drumming and dance, burial rituals and inheritance traditions, will always remain a constant reminder of identity and a location of their shared affinities and brotherhood. For it is clear that apart from the Igbo of the Western Sudanic stock, the Ibibio, URUAN/EFIK, Ibuno, Eket, Annang and Eastern Andoni who have always traced their cradle of origin from the Central Benue Valley and as coming from the same stock until proved otherwise, ORON nation cannot therefore be the exception.

The slight differences in dress and certain names are only due to geographical factors especially distance, because in every ethnic group or groups there are always to be found varied dialects at the boundary and periphery on account of differences in exposure to external influences. Such external influences, contacts and exposures often meant wealth, education, knowledge of Western politics and diplomacy. Knowledge and wealth bring pride which in turn brings looking down upon and sometimes hating their neighbours with attendant discrimination and contempt. Of those who do not have such opportunities. In the 1940s -60s The Onitsha Igbos intoxicated with a bit of Western Education, because when DR. Nnamdi Azikiwe came back in the late 1930s, he made sure many of his people went out for the proverbial Western Golden Fleece; hence they looked down on other Igbos. Similarly, the Owerri Igbos and those from Umuahia treated their unfortunate Ngwa and Abriba Igbos the same way. This can also explain why in the ensuing 1950s - 60s the dominant Igbo majority in the Eastern Regional Government (1953-1967) looked down on the Cross River and Rivers peoples as the minorities with contempt, and as a consequence, the divisions among them intensified further in the rough and tumble of election politics which has become basically tribally oriented till today. It is situation like this that inflamed the EFIK even ORON elites later to make claims of different ethnic cradles of origin from the Igbo, Jews, Ghanaians etc.

and not from URUAN such that their next strategy was to whip up these sentiments among the masses of their citizenry against URUAN and therefore to be of a superior breed while others are only fit to be slaves fit as house girls and house boys to their superior masters and mistresses. This superior identity status has even heightened to become the order of the day such that except for one's tribe, all the other tribes in Nigeria are stupid, ignorant and unfit to run a civilized government effectively. The end result is their denial of amenities and services like pipe borne water, roads health centres, electricity. No Government ever brought electricity to most parts of URUAN; it was the people who taxed themselves. I led the delegation to Lagos in the early 1980s and we paid and got the 33KVA High Tension stepped down for Idu metropolis, ditto Ibiaku Uruan-Utit, Ibiaku Issiet Ndon Ebom, and Adadia-Issiet and Ekpene Ukim groups of villages which also organized theirs.

But since ORON ancient customs and traditions including Ekpe Confraternity are by and large the same as those in URUAN/EFIK, it is hoped that the new impetus towards re-alignments and initiatives will curtail tribal politics and spirit of exclusivism and bring about the desired understanding, support and drives towards unification and good will and thereby dispel old ingrained prejudices, pride and indifferentism to usher in new social attitudes and habits in this year of Nigeria's Amalgamation anniversary. No nation can ever be built nor structured under these false premises. From time immemorial to build and improve a nation the first thing that must be done is to organize the people into a dynamic force and unity so that they can speak with one voice and act in unison and this is the principle that has distinguished the Igbos with their OHANAEZE especially the Yorubas with their YORUBA FEDERATION - EGBO ODUDUWA to aspire to cultural and material advancement. Today the Ibibio with their AKWA ESOP IMAISONG IBIBIO, the Annang with their ATE/AFE ANNANG, the ORON with their ORON UNION to galvanize AKWA IBOM socio-political order for the year 2020, what then is holding URUAN/EFIK from rising to this modern challenge and advancement? Global experience today also shows that development can most effectively be engaged through –co-operation and partnerships, and can also be best executed under the management of credible institutions which support developmental actions through painstaking effort to nurture and their credibility. For URUAN/EFIK, this can only be through our traditional institutions for now because they have endured over the centuries and have offered a great advantage and relevance towards economic development.

INOKON TOWNS ANDVILAGES AS URUAN/AROS REMNANTS RESIDING IN AKWA IBOM STATE

INOKON: ORIGINS - NOMENCLATURE, EMIGRATIONS AND LOCATIONS

We cannot end this article on URUAN in the Diaspora without mentioning some of the Clans, towns and villages now scattered all over the length and breadth of what became populated by these emigrants from ancient IBOM and who now find themselves in parts of Akwa Ibom State and perhaps beyond. These groups of villages the nomenclatures of which were certainly names of those who were either progenitors or heads of kindreds who emigrated from their parent kindreds and families were those retained as names of towns/villages under the euphemistic tag INOKON towns/villages, residents or simply non-aborigines of wherever they were found or settled. I have certain good examples on authority as I happen to come from one of these parent kindreds under discussion. Personally, I come from Ikot Osurua Town, one of the groups of towns and villages in IDU URUAN, the headquarters of URUAN nation. Right now I am staying in a village called Ikot Osurua in Ikot Ekpene Local Government in ANNANG country of Akwa Ibom State. Here is located the famous St. Joseph's Regional Major Seminary of the Catholic Church which has the largest concentration of nationalities from the six geo-political Regions of Nigeria as candidates. Opposite the Seminary is located the Akwa Ibom State Polytechnic, an Institution which was transferred to this location as the shared property of the Federal Polytechnic Calabar in 1987 when AKWA IBOM STATE was carved out from the former South Eastern State and renamed Cross River State by the Muritala Muhammed Military Government in 1976 to be precise. It was formerly the Government Teachers' Training College – H.E.T.C. A few poles away is Inyang Udo Nwankwo River, a tributary of the Cross River which terminates IDU river Town a.k.a Nwaniba, mentioned above. It is therefore obvious that one in the kindred must have sailed and discovered this land mass and moved with his family or brother/s to fish here and sail back, then in time must have decided to settle and make his abode here. A few years ago this village was populated by just farmers and fishermen, and now it has become a very big town almost stretching as far as Ikot Ekpene metropolis. During the not-to-be-forgotten civil war (1967-70) IDU town was burnt down at the heat of the hostilities and the Paramount Ruler at the time HRH Etinnyin Uwa Usanga Umoh gave an order that every family should send at least one virile and energetic young man to be recruited in the Federal Army while all the others were to join in the militia and also ordered there would be no military post a.k.a. Check – point throughout IDU territory Biafran or Nigerian and all IDU citizens made sure that was the order because when as a Chaplain at the Biafran National Military Training centre Owerri Nkuorgi in present ORLU LGA, I once visited home and discovered that there were no army check-points to be found anywhere from Uyo to Ifiayong except where the Biafran Army and Navy were quartered and were operating as their base along Ifiayong-Nwaniba axis. Even young women were also recruited for the Militia-Vigilante exercise as they were all over the place while the rest of mankind in the other towns and villages had disappeared into the forests. Small wonder then that most of the inhabitants of Annang country trying to pass through Uyo to ORON or Calabar were thoroughly searched since they were allegedly regarded as saboteurs and indifferent to the war effort Biafran or Federal. My informants here including Mrs. Regina S. Akpan from Ikpe Annang but married to an indigene of Ikot Osurua - a member of Staff at the AKWA POLY as also Sir Vianney Ennang, a retired School Principal all testified to the effect that those from the so-called authentic Annang villages passing through were detained for interrogation by the Vigilante while those others from Ifuho, Ikot Osurua etc. who are Inokon people were waved on. (23/7/2012) Others like Obong Joseph Una Ama (104 years old) Madam Mary Nko Mba Ekanem (Mba M. aged 92, Interviewed 6/9/1996) and her daughter Bertha Okoro (83) both from Nkap and Ifuho towns respectively had all testified that as youngsters they were often discriminated against by their colleagues as Inokon people. They were stigmatized as it were and mocked at being regarded as the so-called "non-indigenes or stranger elements from INOKON transformed from ancient URUAN who have now become residents in Annang country".

ORIGIN OF IFUHO, IKOT OSURUA, ABIAKPO, AFAHA VILLAGES ETC.

When we come to think of it, one also notices that all these villages are along Inyang Udo Nwankwo River axis which branches into and meanders to most of the Afaha villages and towns especially in Essien Udom LGA. This river is but a tributary of the Cross River part of which branches from Idu Uruan, hence Ikot Osurua town in IDU, the Headquarters of URUAN. Others are still along this same Cross River which also branches into Obio Akpa, Ikot Ibritam etc. all in Oruk Anam LGA in Annang country and many of the Afaha villages in Essien Udim LGA. This is another case in point. The Kwa River which terminates in Imo River can be traced to the Cross River and then to Arochukwu which terminates on the Upper Cross River. Kinsmen must have sailed up to this place and later settled there in Ikot Ibritam. This is a very big town in Oruk Anam today. Most of these towns and villages must have come to be in their present locations as described above. But one feature common to all of them is that they are often stigmatized and discriminated upon. They are derogatorily described as INOKON people ie. those coming from ancient IBOM now Arochukwu by other neighbouring towns. Sometimes it is the tradition of some of these towns and villages to attend important functions and festivals organized within their parent kindreds as a mark of solidarity. Recently I can recall that when my elder sister died a few years ago, many Christians from "Ikot Osurua" Abiakpo Ntak Inyang, Ifuho, Nkap, etc. which are now located in Annang country attended the funeral ceremonies and even made generous contributions towards the funeral. This same sister of mine had told us a story of how she recognized a person at the Uwa market when she was a pupil teacher in 1948 at Nto Nsek Holy Child Convent School nearby. The person was either from Ifuho or Ikot Osurua but lived across the river which one had to cross to Uwa. This was a very famous Annang market in those days and people used to come from all parts of Cross River and Ibibio country to the Uwa market nearby. It was this person who narrated the story of how their ancestors came to live in Annang country from Ikot Osurua Idu. He narrated that hundreds of years back people used to come from Ikot Osurua in IDU and other URUAN towns and villages to the market. They used to row back a little from the market environs and built their water fronts to stay there till the following market day because they were always afraid of the Uwa and other Annangs when they were benighted. As time went on, they noticed that nobody used to come through the thick forest lying before them. Then they decided to explore the territory and discovered that there were no people living around as far as Ikot Ekpene. Then they decided to deforest the land and settle there permanently till this. That is why all these villages have come to be regarded as aliens from Inokon. Some of these towns and villages can be enumerated and identified as follows: Ifuho, Nkap, and Abiakpo Ntak Inyang, all in Ikot Ekpene Local Government Area. Others are Ikot Ibritam, Obio Akpa, Ibesit Ebong, Ikot Etina, Ikot Essien in Ikot Esenam, etc. all in Oruk Anam Local Government Area.

There also the so-called INOKON people who now in habit the towns and villages on the frontiers of ancient IBOM some of which have a common border with IKONO viz. Nkari groups of Villages, Ikpe Ikot Nkon, Usakka, Itu Mbon Uso a.k.a Itu Mbonuzo/Itu mba-uzo all in Obot Akara Local Government Area. Already there is a split between the aborigines of Itu-Mbon-Uso Ibibio speaking peoples and those now regarding themselves as original descendants of the Aro-Igbo speaking, to wit Itu-Mba-uzo. The former are the original descendants of ancient craftsmen artists, who as painters, sculptors, architects etc. produced articles and house-hold goods in bronze, woodwork and ceramics. They were those who originally had links with ancient ITU traders and men of commerce and craft hence the soubriquet ITU-MBON-USO. Other villages include Ikporom, Nchana-Ebua, Ebo, Ananammong, Oguando other minor groups of villages including Ikot Essien, Mkpu, Ikot Enim, Obot Ndom, Okopedi, Mbukwa, Ubibia, etc. while those others like Mbuyat are Ndiwo descendants ie. descendants of ndi-Igbo, thus regarding themselves as Igbos. Not to be excluded is the lone town of Ekpemiong in Ibiono LGA which was sacked by their Use Abat and Asanting neighbours during the civil war as not coming from the tribe and clan. They were stigmatized and discriminated upon as INOKON people. All these and others form the targeted towns and villages envisaged in the proposed URUAN/EFIK NATIONAL UNION which is being advocated and contemplated in this venture, God willing. Similarly, the Nkari groups of Villages consisting of Ifa, Ibono Usuk, Ikot Uko, Ibono Okporo, Ikot Offrong, Mbente, Anwafia, Obbrong, Ikot Akpan and Ubiekene also constitute the Ibibio cum Nkari speaking peoples of ancient IBOM country residing in Akwa Ibom State. But we should not forget that just as in the case of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, there are millions of persons living in the Diaspora who are bona fide Nigerian citizen whose progenitors left this blessed country in Africa as slaves and are now happily integrated as bona fide citizens of North and South America including Canada. There are also many others living across the shores of other continents of the world who are also being regarded as Nigerian citizens in the Diaspora. So also does URUAN/EFIK include those who have traced their birth place in Africa and Nigeria to URUAN. These have even expressed nostalgia and indicated their readiness and willingness to join and promote aims and objectives for the inauguration of such a UNION for a better and greater tomorrow in URUAN/EFIK, nay NIGERIA and AFRICA, now that the Amalgamation is on course.

SUMMARY REVIEW

We can therefore summarize the story of the evolution of the URUAN/EFIK country as follows: Many years before the beginning of the Christian era, and prior to the introduction of agriculture, the present Semi-Bantoid province was occupied by Negroid peoples who must have been still at the hunting and gathering level of economic development. These Negroes almost certainly spoke languages of the Central Sudanic stock, for Sudanic agriculture diffusing southwards and eastwards from the Ethiopian highlands must have displaced their gathering and hunting economy, language and culture patterns. Later, just before the first century of the Christian era, a horde of Bantu Peoples who descended from what is now the Nigerian/Plateau and the Cameroun Highlands after they had acquired the Malaysian complex from the East penetrated the Equatorial Rain forest and with their more advanced agriculture and economy multiplied in number, dominated and almost completely replaced both the aborigines and their Sudanic cultigens. In time this early agricultural civilization gradually diffused eastwards across the entire breadth of the Sudan to the Nile valley. In consequence, this introduction and diffusion of the Malaysian complex by the Eastern Nigritic and Bantoid Peoples led to the diffusion of languages and cultures with the result that the "Yam Belt" Peoples came to speak languages and cultures midway between Sudanic and Bantoid in the Nigritic stock – which has now come to be known simply as "Semi-Bantoid". Just as in any other consideration, linguistic relationship has led us to reconstruct with absolute probability the culture history of the Bantoid sub-family of the Nigritic stock. Those of the main stock are the so-called "Macro Bantu" which extends from the borders of the Nigerian Plateau to Kenya and southwards to Natal, viz. those of East and Central Africa who speak Swahili etc. and those from the West from the Congo to the Guinea Coast. These are those who later on migrated to the borders of East Cameroun and inhabited for a very long time what came to be known as USAHAEDET IDOMBI or Barombi.

SUMMARY, CRITIQUE AND EVALUATION

This reconstruction of URUAN/EFIK culture history should by no means be discounted as entirely speculative since I have employed a certain methodology viz. DIDACTION, which can be seen to be adequately reliable and in commensurate with scientific patterns of empirical test, vis-à-vis the validity of historical anthropology. First, I have employed the direct testimony of contemporary written records which are seen to be invaluable to the authenticity of modern scientific research, and most importantly, to the reconstruction of a history such as that envisaged herein. Second, I have referred at least indirectly to the testimony of the materials of archaeology, in which case, I have only relied on inferences and interpretations which archaeologists have drawn from their findings. Third, my references relate to objective evidences from Botany and from the distribution of cultivated plants which I have made mention of several times especially with regard to the Sudanic and Malaysian complex and these have enabled us to determine very succinctly favourable conclusions for our stand. Fourth, Linguistic evidences employed herein have so clearly indicated the possible regions of origin and their distribution. Fifth, Ethnographical and distributional analysis which I have exhibited with regard to the examination of cultural patterns and their distribution do help us to such an extent that we are able to distinguish the tribes one from the other. Sixth, I have tried to draw positive conclusions on a solid induction from independent historical sources on a solid historical fact by comparing and contrasting certain data ie. through the method of "Controlled Comparisons". Seventh, and finally I have taken account of the testimony from oral traditions and patterns or otherwise, for although there may seem to be irregularities and conflicting accounts regarding places and directions of origins, I consider that indigenous oral traditions still have a great value especially to the African research scholars who have to grapple with this first-hand synthesis of their local and traditional history. Written records have explicit and authentic value, but most of the history we know and probably will ever know, has come down to us in many cases through oral tradition especially where this appears to be consistent with traditional structures and values still current. These methodologies as observed in the Introduction, present us with the mosaic of a picture beamed from the light of oral traditions, writings of both expatriate and indigenous historians, religionists and anthropologists whose evidences are eminently water proof. For only tradition dominated by a quest for truth can put us on the road in search of the truth, the testimonies of modern scientific and technological methodology notwithstanding.

N O T E S

1. In fact the introduction of the Malaysian plants into Africa raises the question of whether they might not have been brought by some other Asian merchants from India or even Indonesia. Evidence of independent kinds: historical, linguistic and ethnological point to something affirmative and this has accounted for the interchange of other roster of plants. Such cultivated plants include beans, pears, oranges gourds, breadfruit, coconut, palm, sugar cane, bananas, coco-yam, yam and rice.
2. For reasons of brevity, I have considered it appropriate to designate all the East Asian emigrants like Indians, Indonesians, Malaysians, Ceylonese(Sly-Lankans), Sumatrans, Javanese, etc as lineages of the Polynesian Stock. Madagascar whose peoples for long speak Malayo-Polynesian languages seems to be their first place of call. Other ethnographic evidences also indicate that the Malaysian Peoples reached the East Coast of Continental Africa through Madagascar. The coconut traffic is another testimony as far as East Asian cultigens in this area are concerned.
3. Archaeological evidence has demonstrated that the basin of the White and Blue Nile Rivers south of Khartoum together with the adjacent slopes of the Ethiopian Plateau to the east and probably also a section of the western highlands seems to have been occupied at the end of the Paleolithic period by the northerly hunters of the East African Highlands. The evidence of this is based on the discovery of the Bushmanoid skull. The Bushmen were the ancestors of the present day Ethiopians. The Igbos, notably the Aros are world class in their industry, ingenuity and indefatigable tenacity when it comes to the use of their hands, ditto in Agriculture, they being noted as the food basket of Igbo land.
4. The Cameroon Highlands especially belong to the Bantoid sub-family of the Nigritic Linguistic stock and appears to have constituted the original homeland of the Bantu which they occupied until the advent of the Malaysian crops. This made it possible for their Eastern Nigritic neighbours to penetrate the Tropical Rain Forest to the South, which as we have shown, was previously inhabited by Pygmoid hunters and gatherers.
5. Here above all as in any other consideration, linguistic relationship has led us to reconstruct with absolute probability the culture history of the Bantoid sub-family of the Nigritic stock. Those of the main stock are the so-called "Macro Bantu" which extends from the borders of the Nigerian Plateau to Kenya and southwards to Natal and from the west from the Congo to the Guinea Coast.
6. This case was duly reported to Lt. Col. YAKUBU GOWON, Commander In-Chief of the Nigeria Armed Forces by the new S. E. State Administrator, Etubom Michael Ani at Dodan Barracks Lagos, in the presence of His Excellency, Alhaji Ahhijio, President of the Cameroun Republic. That problem later led to arbitration between the two countries at the World Court at The Hague leading to the Green Tree Resolution of 2005 and the ceding of the Bakassi LGA to the Cameroun Republic.
7. The Culture History of the ADADIA clan is another interesting story in the Annals of URUAN and dates back to the 16th century of the Christian era. For full details see the Disputes in the OBONGSHIP OF CALABAR, Enugu, 1951.This event in URUAN History has also been corroborated by the present Muri of Okoyong Etinnyin (Cf. Interview by Very Rev Fr. (Dr.) Israel Ekpo, formerly Parish Priest of St John's - Ifako Okoyong.
8. This is a technical URUAN expression typifying a large mass of arable land beyond compare and this is the present location of Aro Chukwu. IBOM designates large, expansive, mighty hence AKWA ABASI IBOM, who is God Almighty; Akwa Ibom State, which is one of the largest States in South Southern Nigeria; INYA IBOM which means a large expanse of water like the Atlantic Ocean; IFAIBOM ie. IFABOM means a giant of a man and as powerful as Goliath; IFABOM ie. the young men who were URUAN mighty warriors of yore and AKA-IBOM ie. AKABOM = a name given at birth to a baby who weighs and measures more than the normal size. Today Arochukwu covers such a large area that it has become a LGA with many groups of villages as also the Headquarters thereof.
9. URUAN people were popularly regarded as great sea-farers and were known as URUAN INYANG ATAKPOR on account of their great exploits in sea adventurers. They sailed through the Atlantic to places in the now Republics of Cameroon and Equatorial Guinea like Buea, Mamfe, Douala, Ikang, Yaoundé e, Upenekang, Abana (now Bakassi), etc.
10. Many Ibibio people in Nigeria's political arrangement in the geo-political constriction called AKWA IBOM STATE were originally known as AFAHA PEOPLE and their common place of origin is traced to USAHAEDET also in the present Republic of Cameroun. Cf. M.E. Noah, (5) also Proceedings of the Ibibio Union, (1928-1938) in the UNIVERSITY OF UYO LIBRARY.

11. But the correct version according to M.D.Jeffreys seemed to be that this IDIONG oracle, a secret Cult for that matter was originally owned by URUAN. Cf. J. S. B.Ikpe: A History of Ibibio union MSS 1932. See also P. Amaury Talbot; Peoples of Sothern Nigeria London, 1928; P J. Shankland; Intelligence Report on the Aros; 1898; A. 12. The Igbos, notably the Aros are world class in their industry, ingenuity and indefatigable tenacity when it comes to the use of the hands, ditto in Agriculture, they being noted as the food basket of Igbo land.
13. URUAN people were popularly regarded as great sea-farers and were known as URUAN INYANG ATAKPOR on account of their great exploits in sea adventurers. They sailed through the Atlantic to places in the now Republics of Cameroon and Equatorial Guinea like Buea, Mamfe, Douala, Ikang, Yaoundé e, Upenekang, Abana (now Bakassi), etc.
14. IBOM was the name they gave to this extensive arable territory beyond compare. They were delighted; they were excited and ecstatic; so much so that they named every great and powerful thing whether in the heavens above or on the earth below after it. Thus the Almighty God and Creator of Heaven and Earth they named and called Him AKWA ABASI IBOM; the great seas and oceans, INYANG IBOM; tall, robust, dynamic, versatile and powerful young men, IFA IBOM or (IFABOM, for short) etc.
15. Concerning the rites, celebrations and offerings made to the deities and supernatural beings, URUAN pays homage especially to their deity, ATAKPOR NDEM URUAN by using special vessels like EKETE (baskets woven from tender palm fronds) NSEI ie. powders of assorted colours placed in USAN ABASI (ceramic bowls into which they often put this special coloured NSEI clay) etc.Often they used to make their offerings and sacrifices at the ISO ATAKPOR. Similarly, once anew king (EDIDEM) has been elected and unanimously accepted, he MUST come in a boat/canoe rowed by two EKPE ADEPTS to pay his respects wearing UKARA loin cloth and donning UDAK (a special attire woven from palm fronds to ISO ATAKPOR before he is deemed accepted by the ancestor. Without doing this he cannot begin to prepare for coronation. In fact his election is even considered null and void.
16. Here I would exhort that it is incumbent on every bona fide and blue-blooded URUAN/EFIK , nay all IBIBIO speaking peoples of South South Nigerian should consult the Hon Nyong Essien Library donated to UNIYO for a comprehensive study of: The proceedings of Ibibio State Union, the story of Ibibio Union by DR (Justice Udo Udoma, and the two publications of late Prof. Monday Effiong Noah of UNICAL viz The Ibibio Pioneers in modern Nigerian History & A history of the Ibibio People.
17. The Igbos, notably the Aros are world class in their industry, ingenuity and indefatigable tenacity when it comes to the use of the their hands, ditto in Agriculture, they being noted as the food basket of Igbo land.
18. Who are the Aros? And who were they b/4 IBOM at the time? There is no other true culture history of the Aros except the concocted, fabricated and distorted one going around today. But everybody knows it is the same old story repeating itself here but now the EFIK had better start telling it as it is. They are the same people of URUAN stock including all those who now people parts of EBONYI and ABIA STATES viz, Afikpo, Edda, Uzuakoli, Bende, Ohafia, Abriba who previously peopled IBOM/INOKON now Arochukwu and, who also had read the EFIK PRIMERS, UD? BARA IKA? etc. in schools referred to above. One has only to shake up oneself and wake up from sleep. One should therefore shine and open one's eyes and read for oneself the well documented history of the Aros at the dawn of recorded history since the 18th century AD. Let them go to their Elders still alive and ask for the TRUTH. The story of the life and times of Bro Michael Stephen Ekeng,(aka KALU) THE APOSTLE OF THE LEGION OF MARY, the de facto FOUNDER OF THE LEGION OF MARY491 in the whole of AFRICA even ASIA& AUSTRALIA is our witness. Go to Arochukwu or Ireland and enquire.
19. Even other IBIBIO groups viz ORON, IBUNO, ANNANG in their recent claims of separate ethnic identities will be found enlightening and completely counteracted and contradicted by the MINUTES OF IBIBIO STATE UNION to be treated hereafter.
20. Amaku writes: "Unehe mbon nyom ik?…, Idut emi efikde owo enyu etukdetuk owo. mbon iseri ye mbon nta -idem; mm? emi ekutde idem mm? ekan nte mm? ekutde mbon efen, idut emi emade nyom-ik? ye ut?k. (Cf E.N.Amaku II, 2) Till tomorrow no true blooded/URUAN EFIK will accept the tag IBIBIO after his name even if he/she speaks IBIBIO dialect or Annang more fluently than the Ibibios or the Annangs themselves, the recriminations and pleas of the ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF THE (URUAN)/EFIK LANGUAGE, LITERATURE AND CULTURE, CALABAR (APELLAC)not-withstanding. Whereas this author has been agonizing to get our generation to endeavour to love and promote: "URUAN/EFIK language, culture and traditions koro mm? ITOHO MBONEDEM OKO

(IGBO), ITOHO IBIBIO… man IKO OKURE" (Cf E.N. Amaku II,)

21. Most of the accounts related here and others were garnered from the MSS, literature and books of the period not excluding my face to face encounter and words from the mouth of the man who was destined to be and always referred to as THE LEADER of IBIBIO UNION to wit , the Hon (Etubom) Nyong Essien, the Nsomm of URUAN who was crowned in 1945 after the demise of my grandfather HRH, Edidem Atakpor EKARIKA EKPO before my very eyes, though as then only a kid of 6; and I can still recollect that I poured the last NSEI on his grave before the sounding of EKPE DRUM and the roaring of EKPE MBOKO for the king's interment. These are land marks that could not be lost to children of my class as I can never forget all these happenings having been initiated as into EKPE URUAN at the age of three or so since my father was the IYAMBA. But the whole History of IBIBIO STATE UNION formerly in the oft-talked-about and famously treasured library of the ELDER was however, even before his departure to Glory, handed over to the Library of the Advanced Teachers Training College ATTC Uyo which later metamorphosed into the University of Cross River State (and now the Federal University of Uyo) under Prof. Donald Ekong as Vice Chancellor.
22. It will be noticed that these Efik Primers were used in Elementary schools throughout the length and breadth of Cross River areas, viz Arochukwu, Afikpo, Edda, Itigidi, Adim, Yakkur, Obubra,Ikom,Kakwagom, etc.
23. Here I would exhort that it is incumbent on every bona fide and blue-blooded URUAN/EFIK , nay all IBIBIO speaking peoples of South South Nigerian should consult the Hon Nyong Essien Library donated to UNIYO for a comprehensive study of: The proceedings of Ibibio State Union, the story of Ibibio Union by DR (Justice Udo Udoma, and the two publications of late Prof. Monday Effiong Noah of UNICAL viz The Ibibio Pioneers in modern Nigerian History & A history of the Ibibio People.

26. Most of the accounts related here and others were garnered from the MSS, literature and books of the period not excluding my face to face encounter and words from the mouth of the man who was destined to be and always referred to as THE LEADER of IBIBIO UNION to wit , the Hon (Etubom) Nyong Essien, the Nsomm of URUAN who was crowned in 1945 after the demise of my grandfather HRH, Edidem Atakpor EKARIKA EKPO before my very eyes, though as then only a kid of 6; and I can still recollect that I poured the last NSEI on his grave before the sounding of EKPE DRUM and the roaring of EKPE MBOKO for the king's interment. These are land marks that could not be lost to children of my class as I can never forget all these happenings having been initiated into EKPE URUAN at the age of three or so since my father was the IYAMBA. But the whole History of IBIBIO STATE UNION formerly in the oft-talked-about and famously treasured library of the ELDER was however, even before his departure to Glory, handed over to the Library of the Advanced Teachers Training College ATTC Uyo which later metamorphosed into the University of Cross River State (and now the Federal University of Uyo) under Prof. Donald Ekong as Vice Chancellor.

CHAPTER II

TRADITIONAL POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS AND STRUCTURES
THE TRIBE AND POLITICAL ORGANIZATON
DEMOGRAPHICAL – TRIBAL AND SUB-TRIBAL GROUPINGS

THE TRIBES: Now that we have established the origin and location of URUAN/EFIK together with Ibibio speaking peoples, it remains for us to delineate the different groups into which these people are organized. The Ibibio/Annang together with URUAN/EFIK speaking peoples whose total population is estimated at over seven and half million (2005/6 Census), are as noted already the fourth largest linguistic unit in Nigeria and the second in the South South and South Eastern zones, viz. the Rivers, the Ijaw and the Igbos in the former Eastern Region of Nigeria. As Daryll Forde and George I. Jones, Anthropologists of the Institute for British Colonial Social Sciences Research Council in 1945 had so ably drawn up in their Ethnographic Survey of the area, six main sub-divisions or tribes can be conveniently distinguished:

TRIBAL GROUPINGS & LOCATIONS OF ADMINISTRATION

S/N	MAIN TRIBAL GROUPINGS	LOCATION BY ADMINISTRATIVE DIVISION	APPROX POPULATION
1	Western or Annang	ABAK or IKOT EKPENE (Annang and Ika Trib	1,175,004
2	Eastern or Ibibio proper	UYO and ETINAN (Ibibio, Nsit, Ubom Tribes)	1,164,329,
3	Northern or Enyong	ITU/ENYONG (Ibiono, Itam, Eastern Ibibio/Iko	1,006,486
4	Southern or Eket	EKET and ORON (Eket, Okobo, Oron and Efiat Tribes)	1,370,554
5	DELTA	MKPAT ENIN/IKOT ABASI and EKET NORTH. (Ibekwe, Asang, Umani(Andoni) Ibuno)	1,592,343
6	RIVERINE URUAN/ EFIK EKOI/EJAGHAM	CALABAR/ODUKPANI and AKAMKPA/BIASE (Uruan/Efik, Efut, Qua/Abakpa, Mbiabo, Ekoi/Ejagham, Odukpan	1,648,091
	APPROXIMATE	TOTAL POPULATION	7,936,807

A. PHYSICAL ENVIRONMENT AND ECONOMY
PHYSICAL ENVIRONMENT AND LOCATION OF URUAN/EFIK

URUAN/EFIK country is situated in a rather very low-lying area; the highest point is hardly a hundred metres above sea-level. Most of the land is gently undulating, gradually rising northwards and extending to the savanna of Benue Plateau and eastwards towards the Cameroon mountains. (2) The land` is composed of friable sands, the soil is stoneless except in places where there are occasional out-crop of quartzite especially along the banks of the Cross River. This river which rises from the Cameroun mountains flows through the entire length of the State and is navigable up to the Cameroun border at Mamfe, about 500 Km. generally three main vegetation zones can be distinguished: (a) A coastal belt of mangrove swamps over 2,400 square Km in extent. (c) Cultivated riverian lands very heavily forested stretching along the west bank of the Cross River and extending well beyond 100 Km, of the northern borders. Most of these areas supply the rest of the tribes with the necessary vegetables during the dry season. There is also an extensive agricultural riverian area on the eastern banks covering well over 7,000 square Km. of which about 4,000 square Km. are periodically cultivated. (c) A high Rain Forest, mostly with palm bush over considerable areas. Of the extent of this, popular opinion looms large, but is the geographical reason for the proverbial wealth of the people - in wild and cultivated palm trees and the exceptional role that pastoral and agricultural activities play in the economies of the indigenous peoples. Of recent, the discovery of comparable richness in mineral oil along the Delta zone in Ibuno explains the great economic position it has given to the rest of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. The native GIN UF? F? P/KAI-KAI (3) or simply MIN MBAKARA, compares favourably with the imported BRANDY, SCHNAPPS and other brands and has been actually converted with the use of certain chemicals and ingredients into Brandy. Up till 1972, I was one of the most prohibited contraband products (simply because it was brewed in Nigeria and therefore shouldn't compete with British colonial imports). Anyone caught in possession of even half a litre bottle ie. EKPEME IKA? not to talk of a 20 litre bottle – EKPEME IKAT, could be prosecuted and fined up £500 or even £1000 or given prison sentences ranging from six months to one year with hard labour and or with / without option of fine; but thanks to the Nigerian civil war of 1967-1970, because in BIAFRA, it was publicly bought and sold without much ado. Since then the Federal Government has even promulgated a Decree towards the promotion of Research and improvements in the brewing and distillation Industry of what hitherto was tagged ILLICIT WINE or GI, to the relieve and jubilation of all Nigerian citizens especially the chief producers of the South South and South East regions of Nigeria.

AGRICULTURE AND THE ECONOMY

Various lines of evidence indicate that the exceptional intensive agriculture as practiced by the tribes of this cluster arose as a result of the introduction of the Malaysian plants through the East African groups of the Bantoid Nigritic and Sudanic Peoples from whose stock they derive. The crops which are cultivated in the area are by far the most insignificant impact in their ancient link with the merchants of the Far East. This must have wrought an explosive transformation in their economy with the result that their populations catapulted prodigiously with this introduction of new and abundant foods, so much so that today the population in this region is remarkably denser in some parts than any other parts of Africa. Areas like Afaha Obong, Adiasim and others of Western Ibibio or New Annang Province/country, have densities averaging between1000 and 2000 per square Kilo-metre. (DaryllForde,68) Rice, yams (4) cocoyams (Taro) and most importantly cassava, which have proved particularly well adapted to the local conditions, are today the outstanding staple foods in the majority of tribes. At its introduction, many communities in URUAN/EFIK, notably in Northern URUANA are eg. Mbiaya could not eat it until later on in the 1920s. Also, the introduction of American cultivated plants from Brazil and the West Indies in the early 16th century through the agency of the European slave merchants gave a new boast to the economy. Agriculture then is and has been the primary economic pre-occupation of the people and is fairly rewarding. Unfortunately, in the overpopulated areas mentioned above, on account of their distance from the coast and the poorness of the soil, agriculture is mainly for subsistence. However, the Annang Peoples derive the bulk of their wealth from exports of oil palm products, distributive trading (Osusu) among themselves and the wage-labour of those employed outside their tribe.

Cultivation is through a standard rotation of between a five-year cycle in the northerly zone and seven-nine-year cycles in the southerly tropical forest and coastal zoned of the Ekoi-Ejagham, Uruan and Eket Peoples. Plantains, bananas, sweet potatoes, peppers (chilies), maize, beans, groundnuts, pumpkins and pine-apples are now ranking among the mainstay of the economy. Cocoa and rubber are also great economic crops both in the private and public sectors. There are numerous plantations in every part nowadays, but on account of the low prices, many private farmers are getting discouraged from planting in large quantities. Some are still holding on to their palm produce. Most of the tribes keep goats, sheep and dogs, and poultry farming are generally practised, especially for home consumption and for sacrifices. Some also keep cattle, pigs, ducks, and guinea fowls. Fishing which adds an important ingredient to food supply in most tribes like the Efik, Oron, Uruan, Eket and Umani peoples provide the primary basis of subsistence. In fact, some of the richer families combine fishing, farming and palm wine tapping especially if they produce wine in quantities copious enough for distillation into native Gin. (5)

URUAN/EFIK COMMERCE AND INDUSTRIES

At present there are four major industries under Government Control, viz. the Calabar Cement Factory, the Calabar Veneer and Plywood Factory, the Opobo Boat Yards and the Cocoa Wine Factory in Ikom, Ogoja and Akamkpa. There are numerous communities, Private and other Joint industries for timber, textiles and shoes, wine, pottery, etc. The Government is taking measures to boost the economy in all sectors. Marketing Cooperative Association Limited (SEAMCA) have also been set up; the former for the sale of local food stuff like rice, beans and imported items like milk, flour, building materials, etc. and the latter for the buying of produce in order to make money available to farmers. There is also Government owned Supermarkets e.g. (CROSSTRADE) in all the LGAs with headquarters in Lagos, in order to make goods available in large-scale quantities for the consuming population and at reasonable prices.

KINDRED CLASSIFICATION AND VALUES TRADITIONAL FAMILY PATTERNS IN URUAN/EFIK

As in most traditional African societies, the smallest social unit in URUAN/EFIK is the domestic family which may occupy part or all of a single continuous compound. This is generally designated "UFOK" (Household) indicating the patriarchal type which in many cases implies a joint family, vertical or horizontal and consists of a man, his wife/wives, his unmarried children and any other person(s) who are in some way related to him by birth, marriage or adoption – as also his mother, grandmother, and his younger relations, and also frequently the domestic servants who form a basic part of his economic unit. All these in one way or another contribute in satisfying the basic needs of family life: the arrangement of sex relations, the birth and care of children born into the family, the socialization, development and indoctrination of its members through the patterned and organized system of education of the tribe; the organization and distribution of the material and physical goods and services needed to sustain the life of the individual members, the development and preservation of behaviour patterns which they share in common, and above all, the mutual affection of the members; all these devolve on the Pater familias.

THE FAMILY: TRADITIONAL FAMILY PATTERNS

To delineate more succinctly, the following family types can be recognized in URUAN/EFIK:

1. THE NUCLEAR (COMPOUND) FAMILY ("UF? K" or "IDIBI KIET" (6) consisting of a man and his wife or wives and their children who may occupy a household or an allocation of rooms in the house of the man's father or elder brother.

2. THE (MICRO EXTENDED) or JOINT-FAMILY-OKURE/OTU? (7) or ESIT UF? K: with two or more adjacent households also designated compound and consisting of an elderly man with his wife/wives and his unmarred children together with one or more of his junior brothers with their wives and children. These stay under the authority of the elder or senior brother who is accredited the head of the entire compound or "micro-family".

3. THE ("MACRO") EXTENDED or WARD FAMILY "UBON/NUNG/UF? K": The Ward Family similarly and for the most part, patrilinially related, also designates a Compound which consists of several, usually neighboring houses inhabited by an elderly man, his wife or wives and children, the sons and the unmarried daughters of his deceased elder brother(s) with the latter's wives and children, and his deceased father's wives, his father's younger brothers (ie. the uncles) their sons and daughters together with their wives and children. Also included in these groupings are the divorced and widowed mothers, sisters and daughters of the male, sometimes of the female relations of the man; similarly, all the other categories of the kins and affine viz. the in-laws and servants, the man having at least in this case, the moral authority over the lineage which may include persons from two or more generations. In the strict URUAN/EFIK terminology, UBON applies to the nuclear family by the genitor and loosely to this type of extended family: while UF? K is used to designate this loose lineage of extended family through the PATER FAMILIAS. UBON also refers to a single ancestor or "ELDER", but UF? K may refer to all members of the lineage through their generations: UF? K EKARIKA, UF? K MKPI? -NYE? E, UF? K DUKE or simply THE ARCHIBONGS, THE MBANGS, THE MBAT-ESOHS FAMILY etc. The EFIK generally prefer the designation "HOUSE" eg. OKU HOUSE, NTIERO HOUSE. The numerical size of such a compound may average between 30 and 100 members. It then falls to the head to perform rituals on their behalf and to administer the patrimonial legacy. In fact, the head has numerous ritual, moral, and legal rights and obligations. He offers sacrifice for the welfare of the family; mobilizes, organizes and directs, dictates the exploitation of family land; assigns kitchen-garden plots "NDON" to wives and rations supplies in times of need and distress; helps members of the family who have got into difficulties, and bears a large part of marriage, funeral, and hospitality expenses of members. If the wife of any member of the household bears a child, the head of the household is expected to present her with new clothes and food, and to provide a goat for the naming feast. He himself as patter familias confers the name. Cf. My native name at birth is EKARIKA and was given to me by H.R.M Edidem Ekarika Ekpo because at the time I was born he was the Pater familias of our UF? K/HOUSE and being my step grandfather was the inheritor and successor to my biological grandfather H.R.M Edidem Edet Isim Akpa-Inyang. In short, the head of the household is the material and spiritual guardian of the group, and in as far as is reasonable, he can assume responsibility for all in external matters (Ottenberg S. 197). It becomes obvious then, that the rule of descent is patrilinial although there may be exceptions. Children are affiliated to the father's lineage from which they inherit both his property and title; in which case agnation determines the line of inheritance and succession. Cases and instances abound whereby children are named after their mothers or grandmothers as the case may be viz. AFIONG NWA ISUANA, IKOP UMOH ODIONG, ADIAHA IMAIKOP, ASARI ITAM, AKO MAYEN, etc. Nevertheless, strong ties of affection may so exist between a person and his maternal uncle as to warrant some lineage of hereditary privilege in the avunculate system as it is called; in which case, the man would naturally turn to his maternal kin (EDEM-EKA) for help and support should his agnates fail him; and he could even decide to leave his father's village and join or seek a home in his mother's village.(Levi Strauss,C.39-40) In such cases too, the incest taboo so strong and zealously guarded among many tribes, becomes abrogated should he and his sons elect to marry from his mother's lineage.

KINDRED AND LINEAGE ORGANIZATIONS

Whatever we have said so far has got to do with relationships of blood or consanguinity: IMAN/FRIENDSHIP OR CLANISH RELATIONS. They also involve relationships brought about by marriage UKOT/AFFINES. It is only in this context of the categories of relationships with their associated rights and obligations that we talk of KINSHIP, because in URUAN/EFIK society everybody regards himself as related by kinship or affinity to everyone else, tracing his/her lineage or descendants coming from the same ancestors. But where there has been a clear case of fission or migration, everybody including women after they are married, continues to claim the support and control of the lineage head who in turn exercises moral authority and ritual obligations for them as did the patriarchs of old. It is therefore in this context that we can understand the URUAN/EFIK idea of family and its relationships especially in regard to its religious and moral solidarity.

THE WARD - IK? T/EKPUK/UF? K

After the family, the next smallest social unit in this kindred grouping is the WARD. This consists of a cluster of several closely and for the most part, patrilinially related families which constitutes the Lineage and with a common ancestor. This is different from the political designation of the term which to all intent and purposes refers to the number of persons ie. as calculated in figures of the population constituting a constituency for the purpose of electing a representative for the Local Government Administration. The Councilors that constitute the Local Government Administration and Government are usually elected from the calculation of a total number of inhabitants of the area – a calculated figure large enough to constitute a WARD and this is calculated according to the population required to constitute a WARD, which can include number of villages whether thinly/thickly populated and towns taken together. This also differs depending on the category of the WARD. A WARD constituted in Lagos State is different from that constituted in Calabar Metropolis in Cross River State, and certainly different from the WARD constituted in Boki Local Government Area of the same Cross River State. But that is not our designation here. Here the WARD denotes the number of kiths and kins constituting the families which make up the 'lineage' as we have seen, and with a common ancestor. It forms part of a wider settlement known as 'Hamlet' EFAK/NDON/OBIO, and occupies all or part of a unit of adjacent dwellings already described as 'Households', which may be at some distance from one another due to uneven growth and expansion of such units. Such a group includes most of the following units:

(a) All those included in 3/ above; i.e. the members of the patri-kin or macro-extended family from which the kin or lineage is established, and in so far as there exists a Leader or Head.

ETUBOM OR IBUOT UF? K/ETE EBIET/OTUNG.

(b) The descendants of the patri-kin viz. all the other households who form the sub-units of the ancestral lineage but who now have so expanded that they form their own distinct patriliniages or separate units: EFAK, IK? T, or simply as in EFIK kingdom, HOUSE constitute the complete extended family with the over-all head as the ETUBOM/ETE EKPUK/UF? K of the kindred as we are going to see in the next categorization.

(c) All the Cognatic and other non-agnatic members who may even be "strangers"(7) including in-laws, servants, special attendants, trustees, and beneficiaries with their wives and children, but who must be attached in some way to a particular household as the family socio-economic unit. The average numerical size of this unit may range from 50 to 200. Such was the case in most of the URUAN/EFIK traditional households before the arrival of the early Europeans and at the time of the Slave Trade. King Eyo Honesty was deputed to have had not less than 500 persons in his household. The oldest male of the ward excluding of course the strangers is usually recognized as the head (IBUOT UF? K"/ ETE EKPUK or ETE IDUNG). It falls on him to administer justice, preside over and settle all cases in the family or ward. Of course when there are serious issues connected with the men, he has to consult the other Elders (i.e. heads of the micro-extended families) and the senior wives with regard to women's affairs. His other responsibilities include the arrangement and allocation of communal or ancestral cultivable lands -IK? T UF? K/IK? T EKPUK and also most importantly, the ordering of ritual worship and sacrifices. Tributes, dues and levies for the community welfare and taxes for the Government through the Local or Development Council Administration are collected through him, and it is also his honoured duty to assign functions when communal labour is involved. Citizens often renege and even frown at paying community dues and levies, every citizen of a progressive community must Willy nilly be compelled to pay his/her allotted dues and impositions and should not be reactionary or refractory because it is for the common good in order to provide everybody with goods and services accruing there from. That is where the private sector and the rich come in. They should be made to pay more because nobody can say he manufactured the land or the resources thereof through his industry The idea is to provide public infrastructure and utilities for both the poor and the rich themselves because the community must support the poor. But she must take from the rich in order to provide that support. URUAN/EFIK Constitution makes this imperative. Also on his part, certain rights and privileges which are his prerogative include free service from the young men and women on his farms and in others, gifts especially of farm produce from the other members, and a portion thereof usually the leg of every domestic animal or the head of a cow slaughtered during a feast, celebration or sacrifice.

THE HIERARCHICAL RELATIONSHIP AND LINEAGE

Nevertheless, there is a certain hierarchical system in the ordering of seniority status or rank within each of the categories and this is more often determined by the person's affiliations, dynasty, marriage etc., rather than by age, and the advancement of a man to the rank of headship depends (apart from his age) on his attainment of an accepted seniority status in the family-ward. (8) Generally such a leader may be clearly distinct from the ritual head of the patrilineage such that both the lineage head and the head of the family ward cannot act in isolation or independently; both must act through mutual agreement because the authority, at least moral, of each lineage of whatever scale is recognized in the kinship system. In fact, he is the one who has the sole responsibility of arbitration in the internal disputes within the lineage as also the sole authority of representation in the external matters that need the representation of other families or groups. He alone can intercede or efficaciously plead at the shrine before the ancestors or elders in matters requiring arbitration. Among other co-residents, he alone can intervene on behalf of those of his lineage; but for other matters involving the larger groups, the head of the joint-family or that of the senior branch of the lineage has to adjudicate. Nevertheless, the general signification of all these terms is simply that of headship, leadership or chieftaincy. It will be clear from the above delineation then, that each of the types of family is a quasi-political unit since its members are under the immediate authority of the leader in their family group, and for specific purposes he alone exercises full control over them and can even apply sanctions against them. This has even greater repercussions on the entire lineage system since" the rights and obligations consequent upon common membership of the domestic and family groupings are conceived in terms of a 'master-servant' relationship." But it must be noted that this 'master-servant' relationship is not that of servitude or even of paternalism, but rather that of love, of service and of community consciousness since every member of the agnatic and in some cases of the cognatic lineage forms part and parcel of the economic and quasi socio-political unit. They are expected to contribute their quota of services under the authority and guardianship of the respective family head. Even though it is common to employ terms of dependency which at the same time may seem to carry an overtone of subservience, this is merely to emphasize the dependence of a member upon the head of his lineage which in URUAN is designated ETUBOM, whereas in EFIK kingdom it has a wider connotation through the generations. Thus in each household, family, or ward there is a series of hierarchies or patriarchates/ matriarchates which determine the moral rights and duties of the members towards one another. In effect these cover all those kiths and kins under the authority of the lineage head with the impression that the children are thought of as the servants of their father, wives as servants of their husbands, younger brothers of their seniors, the younger and youngest of the women of their most senior of the women, etc. hence the designations: "AMASI MMI" (my Master / Father) or "OWO MMI" (Mein mann as in German). Thus servants may address their masters as "ETE UFIN MMI" or simply ETINNYIN (The Master of my serfdom/ selfhood). Since therefore the head of the nuclear or compound family or even of the joint-family in turn may be subject to the head of the family ward, the three kinds of family form a real hierarchy and this makes it possible for such a head or patriarch to have an effective voice in the village council as we are going to see.

D. THE TRIBE AND POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

1. THE VILLAGE: As we have already seen, the localized patrilineages can occupy a single homestead, the size of the group varying according to the context from a small unit of male siblings and their wives and children, and thus constituting a compound or household group (i.e. as a nuclear or extended family), or to wider and larger groups often embracing several such units of patrilinial relations – (kindred or ward), even component minor lineages or sub – divisions of the major lineage which we have designated as "MICRO – EXTENDED" or joint family. In URUAN/EFIK then, there is no absolute segmentation in the lineage structure, it all depends on a number of factors according to the social situation, and varies from one clan/tribe to another. In fact, here we can even come across a group of lineages occupying a cluster of hamlets but which may or may not claim common decent to any ultimate degree, the basis of solidarity may arise only from the fact of neighbourhood and the contiguity of farmlands which the various lineages or their sub-divisions have. Such a localization of lineages may constitute wards too large to come under the control and authority of one recognized head. This localized community of dispersed lineages comprising a number of wards and sharing a common meeting place ("EFE"), which is the traditional centre of local control through a recognized leader elected from among the heads of the various lineages constitutes a territorial organization known as "OBIO/IDUNG or IS? ? " (Village). The village then is the basic political unit of the URUAN/EFIK government.

As a matter of fact, it is the widest unit for "? KA" (Age-grade) organization, the minimal land –holding unit, with an "ANDIDA UB? ? " (i.e. Obong who is the secular leadership of chieftaincy or kingdom) which in some areas especially in EFIK land, may be hereditary, and which also is the co-operative unit for house building and other projects. Each village is a compact settlement though the ward(s) may be separated from each other by small patches of bush. In some villages the wards consist of a cluster of houses around the village square. In some others, the houses are arranged along both sides of the streets just as in towns. As explained before, each ward consists of a number of extended families living in close proximity and recognizing the authority of the elder, but in some villages the wards themselves may be so large as to take on some of the features typical of a village itself, with the result that their organization tends to be submerged in the life of the village community as a whole, and corporate activity almost practically disappears. Still the order of precedence and seniority between wards is determined on the basis of the seniority of the leaders the dignity of the particular lineage and other political and social factors. The villages are held together principally by common traditions, customs and interests, and reinforced by common rituals since they generally unite in the worship of a common deity ("NDEM)" to whom they ascribe their origin, whether as founder or protector or both. Matters affecting the village are handled by a Council of Elders – the ward head and presided over by the "? B? ? OBIO/IKPA IS? ? " (Village Head) together with the selected members from the senior age grades.

2. THE DISTRICT KINSHIP GROUPINGS & STRUCTURES

For reasons of further kinship delineation, it would seem advantageous to analyze here other categories of the wider lineage system. These deal mainly with political affairs by which the smaller groups are found too insignificant to handle since they require corporate as well as leadership controls in their systems of administration. But to ensure any amount of solidarity, the kinship factor has to be the determining factor, since people would normally co-operate in their unit as one of intimate and lineage formation.

After the village, the next logical socio- political unit is the District or groups village constitution the ESSIEN/Group or CLAN as it is popularly known ie. IKPA IS? ? (IBIBIO) which comprises the autonomous villages having a tradition of common ancestor within the group and which is associated with one another through some form of rituals, the leader being usually designated the ? B? ? /EDIDEM-OKUKU or ? B? ? IKPA IS? ? (Ibibio) Ritual or Traditional Ruler. In recent times such a secular leader is known as the Group Head. But formal political organization and administration is exercised by the District Officer or COUNCIL CHAIRMAN of a Local Government Authority/Area in case of Urban Groups and by the Development Officer in the Rural Village Group. The political assembly ESOP NDIT? URUAN/EFIK – ESOP IKPA IS? ? is called the District or Development Council whose members are made up of the representatives of the Village Councils, the base of the system, as we have already shown. A Development Council, subject to the limitations and those imposed by the extent of Government assistance undertakes a number of functions for the benefit of the citizens, providing services for the improvement of Agriculture, husbandry, building and sanitation including the establishing of schools, health centres, postal Agencies and markets through communal effort as also providing and backing up worthwhile projects in both public and private sectors.

TRIBE/ SUB-TRIBE ADMINISTRATION - THE NATION-ORUK/ IMAN

This is the widest group in the descent system and comprises a confederation of all the village lineages which admit and submit to a common name, dialect and ancestry. There is a general uniformity of custom and tradition; the basic rule of inter-clan linkage being spatial proximity with regard to putative genealogical connexions (9). Kinship and economic ties form the basis linking together all the village lineages in the various local communities. The cult of the Tribal tutelary nature spirit-NDEM, the observance of food ban or taboo, and abstinence from particular animals, eg. monkeys for ITAM clan, kites for URUAN tribe, sweet yam-ENEM for Afaha Obong etc. become totems (10) which are considered sacred to the tribe as well as the execution of common rituals to help to reinforce the lineage confederations.

RITUAL SOLIDARITY IN CLAN GROUPINGS

Most of the tribes and sub-tribes of URUAN/EFIK as also Ibibio belong to this designation. But some tribes like Efik and sub-tribes like Oron, Eket constitute the entire political administrative unit (DIVISION) and the traditional Ruler, the Clan Head is only a figure head, except perhaps in ritual matters when he acts as intermediary with the ancestors and as custodian and administrator of clan customs and traditions. He is also the arbitrator in Village disputes. His decision is not arbitrary but of consultation with Village and Lineage Heads supported by ritual sanctions. In the political organization, most of the administration is performed nowadays by an external political Officer, the Development / District or more correctly the Council Chairman, who is responsible only to the Cabinet Office of the State. The Clan therefore functions within the administration of the District or Development Council as explained above.

POLITICAL AUTHORITY AND CONTROL THE STATE AND POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

First of all, we have to state quite unequivocally, that prior to British Administration of Calabar, there had never been any effective organization or Government which exercised full control of all the URUAN/EFIK groups as a single unit or state. Nevertheless, in cases of necessity there generally arose a united front of the maximal lineages within the local community or area and this was usually sufficient to deal with any such crisis. Most present day tribal councils are vestiges of such emergency lineages. The pattern of government falls into only clans or regional groups and lineage chiefdoms, and there are basic similarities among the varieties. Also the basic features of the social structure, particularly the tribal organizations of semi-autonomous and corporate lineages are much the same. Even certain features of this local administration have been redesigned to prevent high ranking and titled lineage heads who have allowed themselves to be exploited as agents of the politicians, from acquiring too much power, and so establish private domains or absolute authority over the others. Hence most of the day to day administration is conducted through consultation among the chiefs and elders as well as the lineage heads. For the most important matters like the promulgation of tribal laws, the fixing of dates and arrangements of festivals, the raising of special funds or the taking of ritual measures eg. To prevent epidemics and other catastrophes, a full state (tribal) council "ESOP ESSIEN URUAN/EFIK" which comprises all the clans is generally called.

Still in some communities, notably among the EFIK, the local communities have been so politically organized that the authority of the head – ETUBOM is recognized. Some local heads and titled Rulers have even assumed the title of Edidem-King (10) and the office of the king though an alien institution has come to be regarded as distinctive and is normally conferred through an election. Similarly, in Ibibio land, the office of ? B? ? (Chief/Ruler) has been recognized for each of the divisions, and the Etubom (Headmen) of the maximal lineages are eligible for election to this office. But the degree of political authority as possessed by the kings and Chiefs depends very largely on their titles, wealth, tribe and other social factors. Nevertheless this authority is ineffective without the support of other men of wealth and social standing even if they are not of agnatic nobility and social standing his position in society was and till to a large extent continues to be determined not by wealth in money and goods or even by the status and dignity of profession, but primarily by the lineage, i.e. by the number of people depending on him, because in the sight of every URAN/EFIK, "man is wealth", (owo edi inyene).(11) What this comes to is that a man finds it quite advantageous to arrange and distribute part of his wealth even outside his household in order to attract a large following of dependents unto himself for his economic and political prestige, power and authority but this should never be construed a Feudal dependency.

2. TRIBAL AND PARTISAN POLITICAL CONTROLS

But as stated above, authority and power may not extend beyond the local communities, for individuals no matter how wealthy or important they may be, they are never allowed to set up themselves as their superiors and to divide the local community into rival feudal factions. No council of maximal lineage heads which now corresponds to the Parliament and House of Assembly/Representatives which are made up of political party members, ever exercised authority over the local community. That is why government by partisan Politics has come to be regarded by many a traditional Chief as a "Dirty Game", which has been brought by the colonial administrators to upset the traditional rule of law and order in the country. It is true that nowadays it has become the ambition of every freeborn youth to rise to the rank and position even of a Chief or Minister/Commissioner in the Federal/State Cabinet in the present democratic dispensation whereby the highest honours are open to every freeborn equally. Small wonder then that the whole system of Chieftaincy and kingship owing to the wholesale and indiscriminate marketing of titles to any youth who can afford the entry fees, is breaking down, and its dignity, authority and honours dwindling and falling into disrepute. However, traditional administration still has a value in the numerous cult and titled associations and in the administration of justice as we shall see in the following chapter.

III. BACKGROUND SETTING TO SOCIO-MORAL & RELIGIOUS TRENDS

A. SOCIAL VALUES AND ATTITUDES

Like the Tivs of Northern Nigeria, URUAN/EFIK could be considered a highly egalitarian people, but their preference for equality seems to be less a product of the ideal equality in its own right than envy or fear those who have risen in importance. This is quite unlike the Igbos of South Eastern Nigeria who place strong emphasis on a man's ability to make his own way in the world. For here the society is so organized that it is possible for a man to make his own way and become rich, attain prestige influence and respect through clientage, assumption of titles, personal resources, etc. (Calston, 210-212). In URUAN/EFIK, it is quite the contrary, for in fact it is thought that individuals who rise above the general level of the group from humble situations could not have achieved power and importance without the help of magical or metaphysical forces to promote their advancements. Only perhaps persons of the aristocratic class or royal ancestry can ever hope to climb to the highest rung of the ladder in society. Often such people are referred to as being what they are through inheritance or having initiated in Freemasonry. (11) The emergence of an individual from humble situations above the general level of the society is sometimes viewed with envy, fear and malice. He may die prematurely for his achievement is regarded as unnatural and extraordinary and as often realized through witchcraft, supernatural forces or by foul means. (12) But to achieve recognition and approval he must have to develop in addition to his wealth political and social status and skills, organizational ability, oratorical capacity, act and persuasiveness. As he begins to accumulate wealth through industry, sagacity and skill use of farming or fishing acumen or whatever resources of craftsmanship, he gets help from his peers and relations through trading, loans, OSUSU, etc as well as use these gains for the general benefit of the community as well. Thus he learns to acquire moral and social influence, prestige, power and also supporters, admirers and clients with the generality of the nation appreciating. Selfish but shrewd individuals who achieve prosperity and greatness are often contemptuously referred to as agents in witchcraft and freemasonry such as "UNAM-OKUK" (Money power or god of money), "EKPIN? I," etc.(13)There is a proverb ("EKWADO") in URUAN/EFIK to describe this attitude of jealousy: "? kp? nte uf?k-eny??, ubuene ik? ke: ?k?? ama akpa ?kp??, sia oto ke ukwa usu /ub?k utom", which may be translated to mean "Even a thing like a storeyed house the poor cannot build, because he is destined to die prematurely, for his wealth/work is from/by foul means." and nobody would be encouraging him as he climbs the ladder to greatness. Thus the attainment of prosperity, both for the individual and society depends upon the interpretation and support of the community. Nevertheless, success and prosperity are recognized as values accruing from sincere, humble and honest perspectives in the diligent application of one's resources and hard work. A person therefore has a number of paths open to him to achieve success in life. He can put himself up the ladder by becoming a wealthy farmer, trader, fisherman, teacher, doctor, etc. Precious values are therefore, property, land, money acquired through honesty, industry, humility, generosity and loyalty among the kinfolk. Emphasis is placed on the equality of the members on account of the great solidarity among the lineage groups, for no one is to leave one's "brother" behind, everybody must be helped to greatness for "we all are our brothers' keepers". The maxim of St. Paul thus becomes a useful directive in this direction: "Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep "(Rom.12:15). Perhaps it is in this sense that the selfish individual who climbs to greatness is held with suspicion and jealousy. In this age of individualism and indifference, it is well to remind ourselves that it is through promoting community values as the only means we can ever hope to achieve personal fulfillment. NKUH? is declining because family solidarity is being ignored, and being such a costly enterprise, small wonder why families find it difficult to support.

B. PROPERTY: MOVEABLE/IMMOVEABLE AND LAND TENURE

In a system such as we have described small wonder that collective control is exercised over property and land. Land especially "IK? T UF? K/EKPUK" (Lineage Land) is held by patrilineages whose members have inherited the usufruct of particular plots of land, and collective control is exercised by their heads who apportion plots according to need. Community leaders are therefore the guardians of community interests and have the right to allocate the land and to arbitrate in boundary disputes. They are entitled to gifts, and all members of the community are obliged to contribute voluntary services and supplies for practical needs and ceremonial observances to them. As a result, most of the land holdings are named after the ancient holders with the names of successive generations down to the present, such that land is occupied as a privilege of family membership and rights are exercised in a spirit of equity rather than on formal terms. Every piece of land is thought of as property belonging to the original settlers whether still living or long dead, and ancestral land is therefore to be always held as sacred in their memory. For this reason, no adult member of the community whether male or female is ever left without a piece of land, but occupants may not alienate any of their portions to anybody whether on sale or by mortgage without the prior approval and consent of the group, because the transfer of title to land to non-kins is a taboo and generally frowned at since in principle land may not be disposed of as a personal property. Land is always to be regarded as the heritage from ancestors, and no individual then may claim absolute control of ownership. But the land holder of course has exclusive rights of use and may make a present of a portion of his land to his friend, pawn crops eg. palm trees, oranges, cocoa or even transfer them even if only temporarily as IK? T UBI? to non-members of the lineage.

Land holdings cannot normally be put for outright sale or sold on pawn or seized for debts, but may only be pawned or pledged. The idea is to preserve the usufruct and right to collect fruits from permanent economic crops like palms and also to protect other productive trees and those for timber. Once a piece of land - IK? T UBI? ? has been pledged it can later be redeemed either by the original debtor or by any member of his kith and kin or even by the whole lineage who may contribute by their shares and levies towards their redemption. Hence, the fright of redemption can be hereditary. But in some areas however, alienation is common, in which case transfer of land generally takes place on oath in the presence of witnesses before the Elders and heads of the lineage. A situation that is now brewing and enveloping URUAN/EFIK through unbridled sale of land holdings is a matter of great concern which the lineage Chieftains and leaders should do well to arrest, and that as soon as can urgently be handled otherwise posterity and generations to come will Nilly Willy become tenants in their own native land. This is a very serious alarm and warning that I am raising here. In urban areas and with the increase in commercial agriculture, land has become to have a monetary value and the influence of British Law has prevailed over Native Custom with the result that many individuals these days, in practical, do alienate their land without impunity.
